Thus viewing man by the light of that word the entrance of which giveth light, we can only see man as he is, and is to be. Apart from the oracles of the living God, we have no knowledge of man's nature and destiny. We may speculate and talk very philosophically about immortal soul, deathless spirit, undying worm, God like nature, etc., etc., etc., and after all find that we are as far off in arriving at a true conclusion as when we started on this sea of speculation; and the reason is, that we start wrong, and of necessity bring ourselves back to where we started, with nothing gained, but much lost. It does appear that there is no vagary so great but that man will take hold of it, and seemingly prefer it to the great question "what shall a man give in exchange for his soul"—or life. Is there anything in creation that a man will give in exchange for his present life? Tell me, does a man freely give up his life for his country? Does patriotism, that altar upon which he professedly lays his life, cause him thus to do? Here let us pause and ask—Is there not another motive impelling men thus to act? If I were assured that any man entered the field of battle thinking other than that all who with him encounter their enemy would die before him, I might grant the conclusion, that a man would give his life unreservedly for his country; but knowing the bull-dog character of man, his readiness to avenge himself of his opponent, at any time, in any place, and under any circumstances, I beg to differ with those who call that patriotism which is simply the boiling over of indignation and thirst for revenge.

I may further ask—and this brings the subject home—who of us know any for whom we would voluntarily yield our life. Peter said, "though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee." What does the sequel of Peter's life show? I am of course prepared to admit that many have laid down their life, but it has been for the hope they had of having it returned them. Abstractly considered, no man, or very few, if any, ever laid down their life for their friends, let alone their enemies—Jesus excepted.

What then can a man give or receive in exchange for his present life? The offer of untold wealth can by no possible means save him in the hour of death;—by no means by mortal man devisable can he deliver himself or his brother from the cold embraces of death. Here man wholly fails. Here, if never before, he must admit of incapacity. Here, a limit is put upon his boasted and self-confident abilities, and how wisely put!

What, and where is a remedy? If the scriptures of truth did not avail us here, vain is the help of man; for we are well assured, by the contradictory notions men set forth, that they are incompetent to the task. Men, civilized and uncivilized, are equally at loss to determine the question. When compared to the wisdom of God, the wisdom of this world is foolishness. By man's wisdom we never could find out God. It's all very well to talk about "first cause causes," "primaries," and the like; they are vain and empty sounds,—no significance in them, when you come to try to find out God by them; for by such words you can as well determine, (if determine you can,) the existence of a multitude of gods as one God. Ah! the Oracles come to our aid here,—here we find wisdom, and it is justified of her children. Comparatively, God's foolishness is greater than the combined wisdom of men, and his weakness is stronger than the strongest of men. By His word he changes the course of nature; he can say "thus far, and no farther"; he can break up the channels of the mighty deep, and cause them to overflow the earth;—in the language of Job, "Behold, he taketh away; who can hinder him? who will say unto him, What doest thou?" If God is not made known through the scriptures, I fear man will fail, search as he may to find them out.

Well, if by natural wisdom we cannot find out God, what is left us? It is that wisdom which comes from above, presented to us for our acceptance, that we may become wise unto salvation, unto life eternal. This eternal life, then, is a gift—a gratuity. It is is from God, through Jesus, to MORTAL man. It is a gift worthy our acceptance. It is from God, and that makes it worthy. To him and the Lamb will, in the ages to come, be ascribed all the glory by that great multitude whom no man can number—those who are gathered out of all nations, languages and tongues—those who shall stand purified because they have been tried and made white by the blood of the Lamb. They shall sing a song of deliverance, and cry salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

To what a destiny is man invited! The invitation is to all people, and yet, comparatively, how few will stand in "that day." Eternal life! Who of us us by experience know what it is? The very thought strikes wonder to our limited conception of so vast a subject. And this eternal life is offered to us as the free gift of God, if we by patient continuance in well doing seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness; by a faithful attention to the pre-requisites as belief of the gospel—such belief as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the ancient worthies of old possessed; and by obeying the all things commanded, and walking worthily of Him who has called us with this heavenly calling. The promise of eternal life is sure, for God that cannot lie has promised it. On this I rest all assurance: if I only know in whom I have believed, I also know that that which I have committed to Him he will keep (because able) against "that day." The exhortation is: "Hold fast the form of sound words, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus."
G. W. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Love of God.

The love of God divine—what does it purpose to do for us? Eternity can alone reveal; nay, not eternity, for that has no end;—thus unfathomed all and all unfathomable it must ever remain, while ages to ages succeed, and these to ages still of unending bliss! What a thought, that the Eternal One should condescend to be our physician, and bring the healing of his love to us in our lost condition, and thus prepare us for that future of which even our faint conceptions are overwhelming! And we so weak, so low, so erring in our natures! Wonderful power of love! It finds us polluted, and cleanses; low, degraded, sensual, and purifies, elevates and refines; with clouded and unbalanced reason, and clothes us in our right mind; giveth wisdom to the foolish, and to those who have no strength, it increaseth might. From the height of his dwelling-place in heaven he extends the arm of his salvation, the Incarnate God; and we, looking up by repentance and faith, find in Him sanctification, righteousness, and everlasting redemption.

What wonder that angels sang, "Glory to God in the highest," in view! while man, blind man, so slow to recognize the unpriced blessings of immortality. When the day of final adjudication shall have at length come, and we with faculties fully equal to the great change upon which we enter, scan the unending future on the one hand, and the cutting off of all existence on the other, who then shall say that there is no punishment to the wicked! Say also, (O insult to Deity!) no reward to the righteous! for until that reward can be measured, must the dread punishment of the wicked remain all unexpressed! O for the voice, the powers of Him, who, flying through mid heavens, proclaims the fullness of glad tidings to all mankind, that they may be induced to flee from the wrath to come, and find everlasting refuge under the protecting wings of the Almighty.

South Sodus. CAROLINE.

For the Crisis.

A Good Report.—Heb. 11: 2.

Serving God causes reproach often times. Men suffer shame for his name. They become the filth of the world and the offscouring of all things. But as persecutions pass, and persecuted and persecutors die, time works changes in the reputation of the steadfast and the true. The man who serves God will come right at last, even in the estimation of the multitude. They will honor the prophet whom their fathers persecuted and stoned. So we read that "by faith the elders were well reported of." The elders, or ancient men, are all those of whom Paul speaks in this chapter. The "good report" they obtained was that lasting memorial of their faith and love and zeal which serves as an example to all subsequent ages. By faith they made their mark in the world, and left their names amid the noble host who have fought the good fight and overcome the world. Of them it is said, and all these, whom God had named in the eleventh of Hebrews, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise—God having provided some better things for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. Their reproach is turned away. They bear the world's scorn no more. Their names are "as ointment poured forth." They are more widely known than Alexander, or Cæsar, or Napoleon. The millions around them who were faithless seekers after fame are perished from history and memory, but these have obtained "a good report through faith," and are honored through all ages, and all lands, and among all nations. Yet they have not received the promised inheritance; they are not yet made perfect. They await the fullness of God's grace in the glory of the ages to come.

We may share that blessedness with them. We may, in spite of scorn and reproach, "obtain a good report through faith." We may so trust God in hours of darkness and trial, that he shall put upon us the honors which the faithful share. Let others seek in vanity and sin the applause of the worldly and profane. Let warriors struggle on fields of carnage for laurels wet with tears and red with gore; be it ours to cherish that faith by which the elders, the saints of old, obtained a good report. God hath said, "Them that honor me will I honor." Let us believe him and dare to honor him in all we do and say.
H. L. H.

June 14, 1861.

For the Crisis.

From Philadelphia.

BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN CHRIST:—Having been sorely tried lately by the adversary, and having not resisted as firmly as I ought, I have experienced much loss of spirituality. I humbly but earnestly ask an interest in your prayers. I feel as desirous as ever—indeed now even more so—to spread the truths of the Bible, and to preach a soon coming Messiah; but there seems to be no way open at present. If any of the brethren are acquainted with any position that I could fill to earn a livelihood, and give as much time as possible to the performance of a work which is dear to my heart, I should rejoice to know it. It may appear novel, and to some unwise, if not presumption, to thus publicly request an interest in the prayers of the people of God; but feeling as I do deeply my own weakness, and the many evil influences surrounding me, and the work of the ministry unperformed for want of means and opportunities, and secular employment failing. I am constrained to seek for sympathy amongst those who are looking for deliverance likewise. Feeling grateful to God for deliverance from the snares of the wicked one, I am encouraged to persevere, and forgetting the things that are behind, I look forward to that which is before, being anxious to obtain immortality when Jesus comes. Our Master has gone away to prepare us a home, and he declares he will come again, that where he is, we may be also. We cannot go where he is, but he will come to us when all is ready. Let us be patient unto his coming. The paeparatory work is being rapidly accomplished. Brethren, pray for us. Yours in love and humility, THOS. W. SMITH.

Philadelphia, Aug. 5th, 1851.

Selections.

Unhallowed Prayer.

"What is the hope of the hypocrite? Will God hear his cry?"—Job 27: 8, 9.

An impenitent sinner never prays. In an inquiry after the causes of joylessness in the forms of prayer, the very first which meets us, in some instances, is the absence of piety. It is useless to search behind or beneath such a cause as this for a more recondite explanation of the evil. This is, doubtless, often all the interpretation that can be honestly given to a man's experience in addressing God. Other reasons for the lifelessness of his soul in prayer are rooted in this,—that he is not a christian.

If the heart is not right with God, enjoyment of communion with God is impossible. That communion itself is impossible. I repeat, an impenitent sinner never prays, Impenitence involves not one of the elements of a spirit of prayer. Holy desire, holy love, holy fear, holy trust—not one of these can the sinner find within himself. He has, therefore, none of that artless spontaneity, in calling upon God, which David exhibited when he said, "Thy servant hath found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee." An impenitent sinner finds no such thing in his heart. He finds there no intelligent wish to enjoy God's friendship. The whole atmosphere of prayer, therefore, is foreign to his tastes. If he drives himself into it for a time, by forcing upon his soul the forms of devotion, he cannot stay there. He is like one gasping in a vacuum.

One of the most impressive mysteries of the condition of man on this earth, is his deprivation of all visible and audible representations of God. We seem to be living in a state of seclusion from the rest of the universe, and from that peculiar presence of God in which angels dwell, and in which departed saints serve* him day and night. We do not see him in the fire; we do not hear him in the wind; we do not feel him in the darkness. But a more awful concealment of God from the unregenerate soul exists by the law of an unregenerate state. The eye of such a soul is closed even upon the spiritual manifestations of God, in all but their retributive aspects. These are all that it feels. These are all the thoughts of God which it has faith in. Such a soul does not enjoy God, for it does not see God with an eye of faith—that is, as a living God, living close to itself, and in vital relations to its own destiny—except as a retributive Power.

The only thing that forbids life, in any of its experiences, to be a life of retribution to an impenitent sinner, is a dead sleep of moral sensibility. And this sleep cannot be disturbed while he remains impenitent, otherwise than by disclosures of God as a consuming fire. His experience, therefore, in the forms of devotion, while he abides in impenitence, can only vibrate between the extremes of weariness and of terror. Quell his fear of God, and prayer becomes irksome; stimulate his indifference to God, and prayer becomes a torment.

The notes of a flute are sometimes a torture to the ears of idiots, like the blare of a trumpet. The reason has been conjectured to be, that melodious sound unlocks the tomb of the idiotic mind by the suggestion of conceptions, dim, but startling, like a revelation of a higher life, with which that mind has certain crushed affinities, but with which it feels no sympathy; so that its own degradation, disclosed to it by the contrast, is seated upon the consciousness of idiocy like a nightmare. Such a stimulant only to suffering, may the form of prayer be in the experience of sin. Impenitent prayer can only grovel in stagnant sensibility, or agonize in remorseful torture, or oscillate from one to the other. There is no point of joy between, to which it can gravitate, and there rest.

It is not wise that even we, who profess to be followers of Christ, should close our eyes to this truth, that the uniform absence of joy in prayer is one of the threatening signs in respect to our religious state. It is one of the legitimate intimations of that estrangement from God, which sin induces in one who has not experienced God's renewing grace. A searching of ourselves with an honest desire to know the truth, and the whole of it, may disclose to us other kindred facts, with which this feature of our condition becomes reasonable evidence, which it will be the loss of our souls to neglect, that we are self-deluded in our christian hope. An apostle might number us among the "many," of whom he would say, "I now tell you, even weeping, that they are enemies of the cross of Christ.—"The Still Hour," by Pro. Phelps.

* The Bible tells us that "the dead praise not the Lord," and we hence conclude that "departed saints" will not "serve" God until they rise from the dead.—Ed. Crisis.

Cannibalism in Africa.

The problem of practical cannibalism is definitely set at rest by Du Chaillu's sojourn among the Fans. His first intimation of the prevalence of the horrid practice, beyond the report of tribes nearer the sea coast, was almost simultaneous with his arrival in a Fan village.

"On going out the next morning, I saw a pile of ribs, leg and arm bones, and skulls, (human) piled up at the back of my house, which looked horrid enough to me. In fact, symptoms of cannibalism stare me in the face wherever I go, and I can no longer doubt.

"Eating the bodies of persons who have died of sickness, is a form of cannibalism of which I had never heard among any people; so that I determined to inquire if it were indeed a general custom among the Fans, or merely an exceptional freak. They spoke without embarassment about the whole matter, and I was informed that they constantly buy the dead of the Osheba tribe, who, in return, buy theirs. They also buy the dead of other families in their own tribes, and beside this, get the bodies of a great many slaves from the Mbichos and Mbondemos, for which they readily give ivory, at the rate of a small tusk for a body. Until to-day I never could believe two stories—both well authenticated, but seeming quite impossible to any one unacquainted with this people—which are told of them on the Gaboon. A party of Fans who came down to the sea shore once actually stole a fresh buried body from the cemetery, and cooked it and ate it among them; and at another time, a party conveyed a body into the woods, cut it up, and smoked the flesh, which they carried away with them. The circumstances made a great fuss among the Mpongwe, and even the missionaries heard of it, for it happened at a village not far from the missionary grounds; but I never credited the stories till now, though the facts were were well authenticated by witnesses. In fact, the Fans seem ghouls, only they practice their horrid custom unblushingly and in open day, and have no shame about it. I have seen here knives covered with human skin, which their owners valued very highly. To-day the Queen brought me some boiled plantain, which looked very nice; but the fear that she should have cooked it in some pot where a man had been cooked before—which was most likely the case—made me unable to eat it. On these journeys I have fortunately taken with me sufficient pots to do my own cooking. They are the finest, bravest looking set of negroes I have seen in the interior, and eating human flesh seems to agree with them, though I afterwards saw other Fan tribes whose members had not that fine air of these mountaineers. As everywhere else, location seems to have much to do with it. These were living among the mountains, and had all the appearance of hardy mountaineers."

The Blind Mother's Last Look at her Babe.

On the last Sabbath of 1860, when the cold winds of December were wailing the dirge song for the departing year, we met at the funeral of an infant. Not two summers had blessed the child. Disease came early, and quickly performed its fatal work.

Sweet words of Scripture were read, a short exhortation made, an earnest prayer offered, the benediction pronounced; and then, after a moment's silence, the friends were invited to "take the last look at the deceased." One and another came, and gazed with peculiar interest upon that little form, which seemed as if it were only sleeping.

But now all others step aside, for the mother approaches. She is blind—has never seen the child she loves, and now has lost. Forward she leans; her form almost covers the little coffin. She seems straining her sightless eyes to catch a glimpse of the loved one, before it is taken from her forever. But, as if convinced that this may not be, while the tears flow down her cheeks apace, she puts her fingers upon the face of the child. Every feature is carefully felt—the forehead, eyes, nose, chin. Gently she passes both hands over the entire body within her reach. She grasps tenderly and tightly the little hands which lie clasped upon the breast of the babe. Kiss after kiss she imprints upon those cold lips which she had so often kissed before, when they were warm with life; and then the mother, trembling, weeping, turns away. She has looked at her offspring as the blind only may. It was the last look, until the morning of the resurrection shall recall the dead to life again, and the omnipotent touch of God shall unseal the sightless orbs of his benighted children. Then we may hope that the mother, redeemed by grace, will behold her angel babe beside the Savior, and in that realm where darkness and death may never reign, will join with the sweet child in songs of everlasting praise!—Christian Intelligencer.

Little Cross Bearers.

The little girls laughed merrily, and, hurrying home, packed their dinner baskets in such haste, that Carrie and Jenny Bell had hardly finished their breakfasts, when the whole eager party arrived at the garden gate.

"Why, girls," cried Susy Wright, "not ready yet? Do hurry, for it is a long walk, and we want to get into the woods before it grows much warmer."

"It won't take me two minutes," cried Carrie, but Jenny stood irresolute.

"I'm afraid we oughtn't to go."

"Why not, pray?" cried Carrie, sharply.

"Why, you know mother has one of her bad headaches coming on, and there's Walter and Fred to be taken care of."

"Well, and there's Sally to do it," said Carrie.

"But you know Sally's sister is very sick, and mother has given her leave to go home to-day."

"How provoking," said Carrie, fretfully. Then she added, after a pause, "But I don't believe mother's head is very bad, and I'm sure Fred will be good, and Walter would help amuse him."

"Walter is almost a baby himself," said Jenny, "and Fred frets almost all the time since he's been getting his teeth, poor little fellow!"

"Fred will be good enough if you are not here to spoil him," cried Carrie, "and I'll just go and ask mother if she can't get along without us. It would be too bad to keep in such a lovely day."

Carrie was back in a few minutes, with a radiant face. "Mother says we may go. She can spare us if we are going to enjoy ourselves so much."

Jenny hesitated. The woods in the distance looked so misty and pleasant, and Fred's fretful little cry jarred upon her ear, while she thought how hard it would be to amuse him, and keep Walter quiet and happy through all that warm day. But would it be any easier for her mother, left all alone with her aching head? "No," thought Jenny, "I cannot be so selfish. I should not enjoy myself at all."

"What are you thinking about so long?" asked Carrie, impatiently. "Come, let's get our baskets ready."

"I believe I won't go," faltered Jenny.

"Why not?" cried two or three disappointed voices.

"I can't bear to leave mother so sick."

"What a mean girl you are, Jenny Bell," whispered Carrie, angrily, "You want to make all the girls think you are such a saint, and I am so selfish. That's all you're doing it for—just to show off."

"No, indeed! Carrie," said Jenny, coloring deeply; and turning to the girls she added,

"One of us can go just as well as not, and, of course, as Carrie is the oldest, she has the best right, and, indeed, I do not believe I care half as much about it as she does, for she has been talking about it all the week."

No persuasions could move Jenny, who only shook her head cheerfully, and insisted that she did not feel badly at all, and at last the impatient little party moved on.

After watching them down the road, with glistening eyes, for it was really a very great trial to be left behind, Jenny went back to the nursery, where her mother sat bathing her head with camphor, and trying to amuse the little complaining Fred with some pictures. A look of glad surprise came over her flushed face, as she heard Jenny's step.

"I thought you were gone to the woods."

"No, mother," said Jenny, trying to speak carelessly. "I thought I would like to play housekeeper to-day, and first I am going to put you to bed with your dreadful headache, and then Walter and Fred and I are going to have a nice time out in the arbor."

The happy tears came in Mrs. Bell's eyes as her kind daughter arranged the pillows under her throbbing head, and darkening the room, stole softly out with Fred and Walter.

But it was no small task that Jenny had undertaken. Poor baby Fred bit his fingers with his hot, swollen gums, but as that did not make matters any better, he threw away, one after another, flowers, books and playthings, which patient Jenny brought and was quite determined to be a very unhappy little baby. Then Walter was full of mischief, and could be only kept still with stories, which poor Jenny told industriously, walking up and down the garden walk, carrying baby Fred till she thought her arms would drop off.

Once in awhile a vision crossed her of the happy party seated in the shady woods, making crowns, and eating wild strawberries, but she pushed it bravely aside, and kept on her tiresome walk, only thinking to herself that if mother was having a nice rest, she could bear it a little longer.

The sun grew very hot, but little tyrant Fred would not be carried into the house, and as poor Jenny, turning in the path, was just beginning her seventh story, she saw a gentleman at the garden-gate.

"Could you give me a drink of water, little lady?" said he, pleasantly, and Jenny incumbered by the clinging Fred, soon brought a cool, brimming goblet.

"You look tired," said the gentleman, kindly, as he thanked her, and before she knew it—drawn on by his sympathizing questions—she had told him all the story of the morning's trials and disappointments, though, for some reason, she hardly understood herself, she never told him she had a sister Carrie, who had gone to the woods. They had quite a pleasant talk, together, and at last, when the gentleman went his way, he said,

"I like you so much little Jenny, that I don't want you to forget me," and drawing from his pocket a small book, he begged her to keep it in memory of his visit, and with a bright, kind smile, he was gone.

The day wore on. At noon Jenny made a nice cup of tea for mother, and after feeding baby his bread and milk, and giving busy Walter his dinner, to her great joy, both children—overcome with fatigue and heat—fell fast asleep.

Now she had time to examine her little book, which she found very strange and interesting. It told about some pilgrims, going on a long journey, with heavy crosses on their backs. They had a great many trials, and often their way lay through hot, sandy deserts, so that some of them grew very tired and sad, and some tried to throw away their crosses, but others went on very patiently, always looking as if they saw something so beautiful just a little way before them, that they forgot all present sorrow and trouble. So the story went on, till the pilgrims all came to a very dark valley, through which they must pass. Then some of them trembled, and grew pale, but others went in singing, and some of the words of their song were, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me," and suddenly, while they were singing, the heavy crosses fell from their backs, and in their stead, angels brought them shining crowns. And there came a voice, "Father, I will that these whom Thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory." Then the whole valley was filled with light, the angels shouted, "They shall see the King in his beauty," and the happy pilgrims passed through the everlasting gates into the golden city.

Jenny's tears fell fast as she finished the strange little book, which she could not quite understand.

"My sweet little daughter," said a voice, and looking up, she saw her mother coming in at the door, and knew from her eyes that the bad headache was quite gone. "You have made me very happy," continued Mrs. Bell, kissing Jenny's round cheeks. "You have been so self-sacrificing and patient to-day, that I am sure my prayers have been heard, and that one of my little daughters is learning to take up her cross daily, and follow Christ."

"Mother, said Jenny, eagerly, "do you mean that I am a cross-bearer?"

"You certainly have been to-day," said her mother, with an affectionate smile.

Jenny burst into tears, and held out her little book. They read it over together, and Jenny's mother explained it.

"And will all that ever happen to me?" said Jenny.

"Yes, if you take up your cross daily, and bear it patiently, you, too, shall see the King in his beauty."

Carrie came home very cross that night. She knew she had been selfish, and nothing had gone right all day, while there sat Jenny, looking so wonderfully happy. What could be the reason? Was she doing it just to be provoking?

The little party, stopping at the gate, were very voluble, telling Jenny of the pleasures of the day. They never before had such a splendid time, and had never seen the woods so beautiful, and so full of birds and flowers. But not one of the party was as happy as the patient little cross-bearer, for the angels were singing, "She shall see the King in his beauty, and the land that is very far off."—M. L. P. in the Congregationalist.

I Can't.

Now that is a mighty small word, yet it is bigger than a mountain, in the way of a great many folks. Why don't you do something? Oh, I can't! Why not? I can't. Now, you poor mortal, the great giant of a "Can't" isn't much after all. He looks now higher than Haman's gallows, and bigger than ten Goliaths; but then come to face him with a little sling and a smooth stone, called "I will" and he drops headlong on the ground. And as you come up where is, he grows small until he isn't bigger than Tom Thumb. O, you poor faint-hearted soul, just kick that miserable little sneaking contemptible "can't" out of door. Then keep that good fellow "I can" in his place and another little fellow "Try" to help him, and you'll get along finely. Come, hustle him out of doors. He's a moth and a curse worse than a drone bee. A good-for-nothing lazy little vagabond. He makes you feel like a sneak, mope like a dunce, and act like a fool. "I can't," "I can't," out with you, you whining, canting little reptile, and make room for your betters. Come in "Try," "Will," make yourselves at home and help this poor soul along.—H. L. H.—Christian Messenger.

"He that oppresseth the poor shall surely come to want."—Prov. 22 : 16.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year..........$2.00
For a single copy 6 months..........1.00
For a single copy 3 months..........50
Five copies to one address for 6 months....4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months.....8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months....14.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months....22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within reach of their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications, [illegible] state distinctly the Post Office, County and State to which they wish to be addressed, and [illegible] direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, is 13 cents a year to any part of the United States. [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 309. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1861. VOL. XIII. NO. 24.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Lines,

Suggested by hearing a sermon from the text,—"And now men see not the bright light which is in the clouds."—Job 37: 21.

[Sent in a private letter to L. A. M. and forwarded to the Crisis by permission of the writer.]

I saw a cloud arising
Upon the eastern sky,
And knew by its apprising
The thunder storm was nigh.

I heard the peals of thunder,
I saw the lightnings flash,
And soon against my window
I heard the rain drops dash.

Wildly the winds were blowing,
I heard its fearful roar,
And darker grew the storm-cloud,
While fast the rain did pour.

No sun shone on my dwelling,
To scatter light around,
But all seemed dark and dreary
Amid the gloom profound.

But yet the sun was shining,
Although I could not see,
And gave a "silver lining,"
The cloud so dark to me.

The tempest passed onward
Toward the eastern sky,
And lo! by sunbeam painted,
A rainbow bright on high.

It was the bow of promise
God gave to faithful Noah,
To all a faithful token
A flood should come no more.

Now if there came no tempest,
With flash and thunder peal,
There ne'er would come the rainbow,
God's promise to reveal.

And so those trials often
That fill our hearts with fear,
Do only make the Savior
Unto our hearts more dear.

Before the skilled Refiner
The molten silver lies,
Until the perfect image
He thereupon descries.

Afflictions are the furnace
In which our hearts are tried,
Until from earth quite sundered
And fully purified.

O may our faith ne'er waver,
Nor heart be filled with dread,
Although the storm-cloud gather
With blackness o'er our head.

MARY D. WELLCOME.

For the Crisis.

The Great Restoration.

BY P. E. ARMSTRONG.

"And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come and restore all things."—Matt. 17: 11.

In the examination of this subject I am aware of the unpopularity of the affirmative position I have undertaken to defend. Any new or resurrected truth, no matter how strong or conclusive the testimony is that is adduced to sustain it, has not only the unfavorable prejudice of the masses to meet, (who naturally follow the teachings of the great and learned, and are not willing to admit a new truth until they find it accredited by the great orthodox commentators of the day), but also a class of opposers who profess to be teachers in Israel—who, although they may be impressed by the force of, to them, a new truth, still suffer themselves to reject it because a selfish pride will not allow them to admit to the flocks in their charge that so important a theological truth should have escaped till now their surveillance, and, like the Pharisees of old, scorn to receive any advancement in knowledge from an unlearned or humble source.

Seeing that this is the state of the great professing church of the present day, it is only under the extreme sense of duty I have, with much weakness, but relying on heavenly wisdom, attempted to disseminate through the advent press that which I have conceived to be important truth, and which should comfort and edify the waiting and faithful little flock to whom our Lord hath assured shall be given the kingdom.

We will first briefly examine our text, with its immediate connections, and then those scriptures relating to and corroborating the affirmative wording of the text, (which, standing alone, is a positive thus saith the Lord of a future forerunner independent of John the Baptist); and lastly, attempt to show the nature of the restoration to be effected to fulfill the broad and ultimate design of prophecy. The chapter from which our subject is chosen, begins with the transfiguration on the mount, where our Lord separated himself with three chosen disciples apart from the rest, and was pleased to exhibit to them an embryotic vision of his glorious visible kingdom, which he would assuredly set up on the earth at some definite period, (not then made known), which would succeed and overturn all past kingdoms, and fulfill to the letter the word of God, and verify the promises made to the suffering seed of faith in all ages. There appeared with our Lord, in glorified form, Moses and Elias; and, (without entering the argument whether they were real or visionary), their presence with him for that particular purpose has a significance we will here notice, although we anticipate, by so doing, the result of the argument. The plain and obvious reason for the appearing of Moses and Elijah was to represent the heirs of the kingdom—both the resurrected dead and the living waiting Bride; and while Moses represents the sleeping but resurrected dead, Elias represents the living remnant of faith, who, transformed by their descending King, sing a new song, which the sleeping dead can never learn. That song of praise is sung by the train of Elias, over whom the gates of death have not prevailed, to the Lamb of God, who, by his coming, averts the monster's sting, having died for them in every sense of the word, and rescues them from a temporal as well as an eternal death, and consequently may justly expect from them the loudest praise. And the moment the Jews severed the head of John, his mission to them as a restoring Elias was ended and annulled; for he who scripturally fulfills the mission of Elias, must not only restore, but, like the ascending prophet, live triumphant over death, to bring in the living subjects of his restoration to the kingdom of God. 9th verse,—"And after they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, tell the vision to no man until the Son of Man be risen again from the dead." 10th verse,—"And his disciples asked him, saying, why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?" Then comes the answer of our Lord in the words of the text. The disciples had seen Elias, and were forbid revealing the vision, and they could not understand why this injunction, since the scribes expected the literal appear ing of Elias; and our Lord answers them truthfully, though in the verse following he obviously designed to throw ambiguity over his assertion, as it was not necessary for the early christian church to expect a forerunner aside from John; it being with definite time closed up and sealed, to be understood only at the time of the end, when the preparation of the waiting Bride made it expedient and necessary. At the time our Lord uttered the words of the text, John had appeared without effecting a scriptural restoration; and hence he adds, "But I say unto you that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise also shall the Son of man suffer of them." Here he connects his rejection and death with John, showing there was no restoration because of unbelief; and, so far from John effecting a scriptural restoration, he was a stumbling block to the Jews—a powerless reed before the wind of their pride and covetousness, and yet fulfilling a design in the purpose of God, which condemned them as a nation by their rejecting the light of their coming Messiah, which he, by precept and example, caused to shine in their midst.

John was by lineage a priest, and had just right to expect that they would gladly receive his proclamation of the kingdom at hand; and many of the poor and common people did, but by their subsequent actions we have good reasons to doubt their sincerity. The reason the common people heard him gladly, while those in place and power looked on him as a fanatical imposter, and scornfully rejected him, was because as a nation they were proud and covetous, while the doctrine of John struck at the root of both these sins, and taught a common interest, or levelling down of wealth and distinction, among the heirs of the kingdom. While this accorded well with the feelings of the covetous poor, and made him hosts of friends, it brought upon him the sarcasm and malignity of the rich, who finally accomplished his destruction; and we have no account of any scriptural restoration effected by John to the Jews, much less to the Gentiles, (who are, in many senses, their antitypes in prophecy,) except indeed so far as his teachings of love, humility and equality corroborate the nature of the mission of Him who is the forerunner of the final advent, and in establishing a precedent, that Elijah in prophecy refers not necessarily to the person of Elijah, but a restorer having the spirit and power of a prophet—one jealous for the honor and true worship of his God, who carries out and fulfills the great prophetic restoration.

That John did prepare the hearts of a multitude to listen to the teachings of our Lord is fully admitted, but that they were far from being his steadfast followers is equally plain. We have a good description of [illegible] in the 6th chapter of John, where the multitude, for covetous ends, would gladly have made him king, yet they were [illegible] uttered, bigoted as they were by Jewish tradition, and strangers at heart to the law of love, which is the embodiment of restoration, and which alone can prepare a people to meet the embodiment of love in person, the glorious King of Israel. God always requires a previous conformity of his people to the nature of his manifestations. When he was about to descend on Mount Sinai he required a three days' purification in the camp of Israel; and when our Lord was about to appear in his humility, John appears not in gorgeous synagogues, but in the wilderness of Judea, preaching repentance and humility to suit the occasion; and when he comes again to clothe his waiting Bride in the garments of nuptial love, it is highly important for those who live to inherit this first-born glory, that they purify themselves from all covetousness and inequality, and form a unit to greet him who is chief among ten thousands and altogether lovely, and thus show to the unbelieving world that they dare trust his living word.

We will next turn to the prophecies which speak of the mission of a forerunner, and see if there is not something yet to be accomplished. Let us first notice Isa. 40th chapter. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make stright in the desert a highway for our God. Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain. And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." The preceding chapter foretells the Babylonish captivity, while this seemed primarily to refer to the return of the Jews therefrom, and it was no doubt to them words of much encouragement, as they pursued their tedious and toilsome journey through wilderness and desert back to the desolate ruins of Jerusalem, to restore again the temple service of their God. It is said it was common for eastern monarchs, when starting on expeditions through desert countries, to send Harbingers before them to prepare the way in removing obstructions, to dig down hills and fill up ravines, and thus announce their coming. And the prophet seems to have used the practice of the times to illustrate not only the return of the Jews from Babylon, (which John in Revelation makes a typical identity with the great restoration), but also a two-fold coming of the Lord. The prophecy is much too expanding and rich to have had its fulfillment at the first advent; and surely if a forerunner was prophetical and necessary, then it is no less so now, when we are nearing the second glorious advent of our Lord; and we contend, if this prophecy covered and illustrated both the advents of the Messiah, as it undoubtedly does, a forerunner is full more necessary and prophetical in the last than in the first advent; and the mission of John, instead of fulfilling absolutely this glorious, expanding prophecy, rather showed and confirmed the nature of the final restoration to be brought about by the least one in the kingdom, spoken of by the Savior, who should be greater than he.

Let us next turn to Isa. 57: 14. "And (he) shall say, Cast ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way, take up the stumbling block out of the way of my people. For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place; with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones. For I will not contend forever, neither will I be always wroth: for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls which I have made. For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth, and smote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. I have seen his ways and will heal him: I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him and to his mourners. I create the fruit of the lips; peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord; and I will heal him." Here the same restorer and forerunner is brought to view, and there is nothing in the history of the exiles returning from Babylon, or John's abortive restoration, approaches it further than in shadow. Let our readers compare the 18th and 19th verses with the 2d and 14th chapters of Hosea, and they will see that both the restorer and restoration here spoken of pertains to the house of Ephraim, who represents Christian Israel, (as I have heretofore shown in subjects headed, "The birthright of Joseph," and "Harmony of Prophecy,") [illegible] a "new name" to the extending dominions of Judah and Israel's king, while Judah, or literal Israel, is last to acknowledge the true heir of David's throne.

Again,—Isa. 62d chapter is but a repetition of the foregoing restoration. It is said, at the 10th verse and onward, "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people. Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, (not to Jerusalem in particular), say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him. And they shall call them, the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord: and thou shalt be called, sought out, a city not forsaken." As literal Israel was first offered the kingdom, it was but proper to associate the blessings here of restoration with the names of Old Zion and Jerusalem; but, as before remarked, the prophecy is exceeding rich and ambiguous, and may more fully apply to a city sought out in the great western world, the counterpart of Zion at Jerusalem, and where our Lord will first descend to meet a remnant of faith, who gather together in a restoration of love and unity to await his coming.

We will now pass on to notice Mal. 3: 1. "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of Hosts." Here again is a prophecy which, in a limited sense, was applicable to the first advent, and was primarily addressed to Judah and Jerusalem; for Ephraim and his followers at this time had been cast off for conspiring against the house of David, and was lost among and identified with the heathen customs of the Gentiles. But the prophecy will admit of quite as enlarged and ambiguous construction as those of Isaiah; and Ephraim, who God declares is still his firstborn, has full more claim to a restoring Elijah than the literal house of Judah, who rejected and put to death both him who should have been their Elias, and committed the greater sin than Ephraim, by destroying, (as they supposed,) the rightful heir to David's throne, because the laws of his kingdom struck at the root of their pride and covetousness. Therefore we have good reason to believe our Lord understood full well what he said when he declared, "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things"; (and may endeavor to show in a future article that the 144,000 of Rev. 7th chapter are the subjects of this restoration); and hence John's appearing as a reed shaken with the wind, in his attempt to restore harmony and love to the bickering and covetous Jews, falls as far short of the second and more glorious coming of the king of Israel.

(Concluded next week.)

For the Crisis.

What is Truth?

"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5: 28, 29.

The text above quoted is a plain, simple statement of fact—an event yet in the future, but to be fulfilled according to the definite language in which it is expressed. A harmony of Bible language demands this, as will be seen by the context. Jesus was instructing the Jews on an important subject, when he made use of the words; a subject on which they were in total darkness, groping in blindness and ignorance. He had been giving them one of his kindest lessons, as may be seen by reading the four preceding verses. He did not intend leading them astray, nor into grosser darkness, but into light, by making known to them the glorious plan of redemption through him, by a resurrection from the dead. Hence, after having said to them, "the Son can do nothing of himself but what he seeth the Father do,"—and that what the Father did the Son would also do, assigning his reason, viz., "for the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself (the Father) doeth,"—and that, "as the Father raised up the dead and quickened them, even so the Son quickeneth whom he will,"—instructing them, also, that the Father would not judge men, but had committed all judgment to the Son; and that, for this cause, all men should honor the Son, even as they did the Father; and as they honored the one, even so did they honor the other; as they dishonored one, even so the other,—also that he that heareth my words and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, (in him—Christ,) and shall not come into condemnation, [illegible] of living, by faith in the Son of God etc.,—he goes on, lest the Jews should marvel at his teaching, and more fully details the mystery of the resurrection, by using the language of the text. As the whole lesson is found given in the most simple language, the text being a part of it, we understand Jesus to mean just what he says, and not something that he does not even hint at, viz., a thousand years between the resurrection of the just and unjust: but that there was a time coming, (which he called an hour,) in which all the dead should come forth from the grave; and that such as had heard his word and believed on the Father who sent Him, should have eternal life, while the other class should come forth to condemnation, or destruction.

The ultimate end of man was plainly set forth in the lesson, and the means by which their final destinies were to be accomplished, viz., the resurrection—of the righteous to life eternal, of the wicked to damnation. The language of Daniel, Matthew, Paul, and John the Revelator, fully justifies us in looking for a resurrection of both classes, according to the plain language of the text. Dan. 12: 1, 2, speaking of the deliverance of God's people, says, "And at that time the people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." It is evident the term many, in this text, is indefinite, and covers both classes; and the term "some," as used in describing both classes alike, includes the whole of each. In the first verse, in describing the number of his people delivered, he says "every one of them"; and in the second verse, in describing the same class, and the same number, he uses the term "some"; and the words "every one of them" in the 1st verse, qualify the number covered by the term "some" in the 2d verse. The language of Gabriel to Daniel conveys no idea of a thousand years between the resurrection of the righteous and the wicked, but rather confirms the language of the text to be a full, plain statement of fact, meaning just what it says.

Again, the declaration of Christ to the high priest, (see Matt. 26: 64) "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven," agrees with the other witnesses. Suppose Christ should appear in the clouds of heaven any time prior to 1868? Could the high priest see him without a resurrection? Surely not. Suppose he is not raised till after the Day of the Lord, which is the "day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men"? Could he see Jesus sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven? Surely not. The high priest is now in bondage to death, and without a timely resurrection, can never see Jesus coming in the clouds of heaven. Jesus says he shall see him coming, not after he has been here one thousand years. Again,—He that is called Alpha and Omega said to John, (Rev. 1: 7,) "Behold he (Jesus) cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him; they also which pierced him." When will these Roman soldiers see him? When he comes in the clouds of heaven. Not one thousand years after.

Now, beloved brethren, these are a few of the plain Bible testimonies on this subject, and they are but the smallest number that might be produced from the sacred volume. And what is the argument, and where is it to be found, that will outweigh the words of the angel Gabriel, Alpha and Omega, and the plain words of Jesus Christ? I ask, where? Do you refer me to a single doubtful text found among the figurative expressions of the Revelator? (Rev. 20: 5.) This is but a feather in the opposite scale, and yet this is your only text. To give this its common construction, like the first three verses of the same chapter, involves the church in darkness, clouds, and gross errors, such as it has been groping in for centuries past; without relief, and seemingly desiring none. And more than this; it involves a series of contradictory statements in the word of God, setting prophets, apostles, and Jesus Christ in battle array. The foregoing scriptures are plain comprehensive statements concerning the resurrection that is to take place at Christ's coming. Let us believe them; and hereafter endeavor so to understand the figurative language of the Revelator, as to make a harmony with the first and great teacher, Jesus Christ.

But it may not be out of place for me to continue a little further my objections to the theory of the thousand years between the resurrections. To do so, we must consider Rev. 20: 1–3. This would require a large space and much time, yet I would [illegible] position, more especially that of the popular theories of the day. We will look at it briefly. Question—When is Satan bound? Theory says, when Christ comes. How long is he bound? John says, a thousand years. Where is he confined? In the bottomless pit. What kingdom exists, and who reigns during this one thousand years. Daniel and John say, Christ's kingdom—and John says he reigns a thousand years. When does his reign commence? Theory says, with the binding of Satan. They run parallel then, a thousand years. When is Satan loosed out of his prison? Theory says, a little before the thousand years are fulfilled; just time enough to deceive the nations and gather them to the great battle. John says, after the thousand years are finished he must be loosed a little season. What kingdom succeeds Christ's one thousand years' reign? God's everlasting kingdom. Theory says, the devil is let loose, and goes out to the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them to battle, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. Now which is right—theory, or the sure word of prophecy? If Satan is not bound till Christ's second advent, and Christ reigns a thousand years, surely no part of that time belongs to the devil. It belongs to Christ; and if, when Christ's time is fulfilled, he delivers up the kingdom to God the Father, as Paul says, (1 Cor. 15: 24, 25,)—the dragon, when he comes up from the bottomless pit, finds himself—where? In the everlasting age! These are facts that cannot be avoided on the premises that Satan is not bound till Christ's second advent.

And again, Christ's reign covers the day of the Lord, which is the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men; and Satan, being bound during the time, he is destroyed with the beast and false prophets ere that day closes. Peter settles this question. He says, "the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which (not after) the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also; and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Pet. 3: 10. Now, brethren, where is the dragon to be found after Peter's day of destruction, in the which God will accomplish his great work of destruction,—the new heavens appear, and the earth be restored to its Eden loveliness, in which he will not admit the old serpent to tramp up and down among the blood-washed throng of Paradise restored?—"But the rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection." On the reading of this text, which is acknowledged by learned men to be a very doubtful one, is predicated the theory of a thousand years between the resurrection of the just and unjust. Can this inferential testimony, derived from a doubtful passage, outweigh the plainest most simple word of God? Would it not protract our article quite too long, I should be glad to pursue the subject to its full length, but circumstances will not permit at this time.

A variety of questions is involved in the text, which must be settled before we can come to a just conclusion of the whole matter, a few of which, and only a few, I can now present. Firstly, who are the "rest of the dead?" Secondly, what death, or kind of death is referred to? Thirdly, to what life do they live again? And fourthly, when do they live again, or when does the first resurrection occur,—before the period of Satan's bondage, or not till after the one thousand years are finished? If the righteous are raised at Christ's second advent, then the first resurrection is prior to the time declared by John, if so be the old theory be true that Satan is bound when Christ comes. But if it be false, and the truth is that the dragon was bound in (about) A. D. 755, when I am quite sure he was, by treaty between two contending powers, viz., Pagan and Papal Rome, his term of bondage expired about the time of the French Revolution. Then the time is past, and we may now look for the second coming of Christ and the first resurrection. There being no resurrection in the past, as taught by the Sadducees, whose teaching overthrew the faith of some, may it not be that the Revelator designed to correct an error prevalent at that day, and to some extent at the present, that the resurrection was past.

John saw in vision down the stream of time, where Pagan Rome would be overruled by Papal Rome, and treat with that mighty angel, and finally give up his seat, (capital) and power and great authority to the (papal) beast for a thousand years. All this must precede the resurrection, hence he said the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished, and that, after they were finished, he (Satan) should be loosed for a little season [illegible] from the bottom-less pit (of papacy,) and is now exerting all his power in deceiving and gathering the nations to the great battle of God Almighty. The dragon is marked by infidelity, and infidel France will yet prove herself to be the anti-Christ of the last days.

Permit me to say the one thousand years of Satan's bondage and the day of the Lord are two distinct periods of time,—the former in the past, the latter yet future, and will be introduced by Christ's second advent, when he will take to himself his great power and reign, until he has, by the Father, put all his enemies under his feet. 1 Cor. 15: 24.

But the question, who are the rest of the dead? is not yet settled, neither shall I attempt to reconcile the apparent difficulty surrounding this and its associate texts. But some will answer, there is no difficulty in understanding this language; to which I assent, on the assumption that it is right to be governed by our own imaginations, or the theories of men. But, when we make every word of God our rule of judgment in reconciling one portion with all other portions on the same subject, we find a difficulty in the passage above, not easily explained to the satisfaction of many of our brethren. When we have proved a fact by plain, simple Bible language, the same cannot be dis-proved, though all the inferential and metaphoric testimony the Bible contains be brought to bear upon it. In whatever way we explain the book of Revelation, we must reconcile it with the plain statement of facts, and never once attempt to make the plain, simple language yield to a figure of speech. Hence, as there is not (to my knowledge) a single plain, declarative text in the Bible to corroborate the theory of a thousand years between the resurrection of the righteous and wicked, I fall back on the foundation Christ has laid for our hope, our rule of faith and practice, in John 5: 28, 29.

But again, the 18th chapter of Revelation presents to our view things that are to transpire on the earth before Christ's second coming. Please read it. The 19th chapter down to the 10th verse, presents the marriage of the Lamb, and the 11th verse shows the opening heavens and the second advent of Christ, clothed in power and majesty, to execute the judgments written. Read it carefully, for in these eleven verses you learn that at Christ's coming the execution of the judgments commences, and they are carried on until even the remnant of all nations is destroyed.

But again, admit, if you please, that all of Rev. 20th is to have a subsequent fulfillment, yet by no Bible authority can you extend the fulfillment of one event of the chapter beyond the day of the Lord, or one thousand years of Christ's reign. Every event brought to view in those two chapters have their fulfillment within the one thousand years of Christ's reign; and the 21st chapter presents the new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, and not Satan mustering his hosts to battle. No, never! but when the enemies of Christ are put under his feet, Satan is not exempt; no, he is not excused, but shares the same punishment—eternal destruction. A complete work will the King of kings and Lord of lords make on the earth during his reign. Hence, no mustering of armies, no gathering of nations after the thousand years' reign; but the new heavens and new earth at once appear, and God becomes all and in all. Amen.

E. B. SOUTHWICK.
Granville, Licking Co., Ohio.

For the Crisis.

The Attractions of the Closet.

Beauty is fading, health and friends uncertain, wealth precarious, and all things else of an earthly character stamped with blight and decay. But amidst all the wreck of our earthly hopes, the disappointment of our dearest and most fondly cherished prospects, one pearl of infinitely great price has been spared to cheer the gloom of our earthly journey; and this is the closet; the sacredness and solitude of its quiet retreat has comforted and made happy the pathway of millions upon millions, in their onward march through the wilderness of this world. All are strangers to real and true happiness who have not felt the power of its attractions. Nothing, however great in value, brilliant in its magnificence, or dazzling in its splendor, can form a substitute, [illegible]

For the Crisis.

This World is Growing Old!

This world is growing old! and passing swift away,
Like summer in its season, and each succeeding day.
This world is growing old, where sin and death is rife,
And naught can we behold but carnage, blood and strife.

This world is growing old! all nature seems to say;
Its hist'ry must yet be told at the judgment day!
This world is growing old, its beauty must decline—
Yet oh! it will soon be changed by a hand divine.

This world is growing old! ere long 'twill pass from sight,
Like kings from earthly thrones, when God maintains his right.
This world is growing old, and soon must flee away,
Like chaff before the wind, to that eventful day!

This world is growing old! tempest-tossed and driv'n—
That world which "is to come" will be the promised heav'n.
This world is growing old, but should not cost a tear,
Since toward "that world" we're borne by every rolling year.

This world is growing old! soon, alas! it will shake,
When Christ from heav'n descends, and dust from dust shall wake;
Then new forms, unnumbered, shall in triumph proclaim,
Jesus, our King! thou hast to earth returned to reign!

This world is growing old! and sad are parting hours,
But we will meet again in Eden's lovely bowers.
"That world" will ne'er grow old, nor fade through ages giv'n,
When saints shall be one fold, and reign with Christ in heav'n.

A. F. S.

For the Crisis.

The Hope of the Church.—No. 7.

We have given more attention to the "house of Jacob" over which Christ is to reign "forever," than we have or shall to other portions of the prophecies respecting the kingdom, for two reasons. 1. Other writers on this subject have passed over this point altogether, or else touched lightly upon it, without examining it closely in connection with other scriptures, to show who are meant by the "house of Jacob," and the circumstances attendant upon this reign. There has been too much amalgamation of the Israelite and the Gentile, as though because the middle wall of separation has been thrown down, admitting the believing Gentile to the same blessings, therefore they were now the chosen people above all others, and there was no more to be any identity recognized of the Jew as a nation—all distinction was removed forever at Christ's advent; all were on a level, and there were no specific promises made to a descendant of Jacob, more than to Gentiles. All were restored alike in the gospel dispensation, and whoever of Jew or Gentile embraced Christ by faith, were counted for the seed, to whom the promises of an eternal inheritance belong. Now this last is true; all who are of faith, in every nation, shall be blessed with faithful Abraham, but that the Jewish nation has ceased to be a nation—that they are not recognized in a different light from other nations—that there are not promises made to them as descendants of Jacob, and that this nationality will not exist during the reign of Christ, we do not believe. Both the Old and the New Testament recognize a distinction. Let any one take the Concordance and examine the passages respecting the "house of Jacob" or "Israel, (for they are the same, as Jacob and Israel were one person,) and see if, in every instance, they do not have reference to the descendants of Israel who came forth from Egypt, and possessed Canaan. And see also if it is not the "scattered" who are "gathered"—if it is not those who have been driven out of their own land who are to "return"—if it is not those who "rebelled" and polluted themselves with idols among the Gentiles who are to be cleansed, not on the condition of their repentance, and faith, "for the gifts and calling of God" touching this people "are without repentance." They are beloved for the fathers' sake, not their own.

Do you doubt this application? Turn to the 11th of Romans, and read it carefully. The apostle argues that a partial blindness hath happened to Israel—how long? "Till the fullness of the Gentiles be come in." What then? "There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Has he made a promise to that effect? Yes; and the apostle cites you to it by quoting a part of it. Turn to Jer. 31: 31, and read the covenant he has promised to make with Israel, when he takes away their sins. Read also Ezek. 36: 2–33, and you will find that God has promised after that they are gathered from among the nations, and brought into their own land, he will cleanse them from all their sins and cause them to be ashamed for their evil ways, and from thence to obey him. These gifts of God to them are without repentance as a condition. As it respects the gospel, they are enemies for what? For the sake of the Gentiles, that through their unbelief and rejection of the gospel, salvation might come to them. How is it as it respects the "election?" "They are beloved for the fathers' sake." Then comes in the passage given as a reason why they are beloved for the fathers' sake. "For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." Some understand the repentance to refer to God. If so, it changes not the question at [illegible]. It would then mean, that the election [illegible] of God, touching this people, as embraced in the covenant made with the fathers, are without repentance—his purposes remain unchanged—they are elect still, beloved still, and as through their unbelief the Gentiles have obtained mercy, so likewise will the Gentiles be instrumental in their deliverance.

Now if the fall of them be the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fulness! Then they did not slumber that they should fall eternally, but only that a door might be thereby opened to the heathen. When the fullness of the Gentiles has come in, their time will have been accomplished, and then comes the time again for downtrodden Jerusalem to be exalted—the cast-off Israelite to be received—the blinding vail to be removed, and Christ accepted as David's son and rightful King; and seated on David's throne at Mt. Zion, he will "reign over the house of Jacob forever."

M. D. W.

For the Crisis.

"Eternal Life."

"All that a man hath will he give for his life" Yes, for the few short fleeting years of this life of vanity and vexation of spirit, a man is ready to give all that he hath. And to observe the eagerness with which men cling to life, it makes the scripture true, that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth"; for in the day of death a man hath not power over the spirit, or breath to retain it. He holds the present life at the mercy of Him in whose hands is the breath of the spirit of all flesh—men and beast alike; and if God be pleased to "gather unto himself his (man's) spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust." Man's habitation is the dust; from it he came, by it he lives, and to it is he ever tending until death, and in death a man hath no pre-eminence over a beast, for they all have one spirit or breath; one thing befalleth them; as dieth the one, so dieth the other; all go to one place; (the state of death;) all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again.

Thus viewing man by the light of that word the entrance of which giveth light, we can only see man as he is, and is to be. Apart from the oracles of the living God, we have no knowledge of man's nature and destiny. We may speculate and talk very philosophically about immortal soul, deathless spirit, undying worm, God like nature, etc., etc., etc., and after all find that we are as far off in arriving at a true conclusion as when we started on this sea of speculation; and the reason is, that we start wrong, and of necessity bring ourselves back to where we started, with nothing gained, but much lost. It does appear that there is no vagary so great but that man will take hold of it, and seemingly prefer it to the great question "what shall a man give in exchange for his soul"—or life. Is there anything in creation that a man will give in exchange for his present life? Tell me, does a man freely give up his life for his country? Does patriotism, that altar upon which he professedly lays his life, cause him thus to do? Here let us pause and ask—Is there not another motive impelling men thus to act? If I were assured that any man entered the field of battle thinking other than that all who with him encounter their enemy would die before him, I might grant the conclusion, that a man would give his life unreservedly for his country; but knowing the bull-dog character of man, his readiness to avenge himself of his opponent, at any time, in any place, and under any circumstances, I beg to differ with those who call that patriotism which is simply the boiling over of indignation and thirst for revenge.

I may further ask—and this brings the subject home—who of us know any for whom we would voluntarily yield our life. Peter said, "though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee." What does the sequel of Peter's life show? I am of course prepared to admit that many have laid down their life, but it has been for the hope they had of having it returned them. Abstractly considered, no man, or very few, if any, ever laid down their life for their friends, let alone their enemies—Jesus excepted.

What then can a man give or receive in exchange for his present life? The offer of untold wealth can by no possible means save him in the hour of death;—by no means by mortal man devisable can he deliver himself or his brother from the cold embraces of death. Here man wholly fails. Here, if never before, he must admit of incapacity. Here, a limit is put upon his boasted and self-confident abilities, and how wisely put!

What, and where is a remedy? If the scriptures of truth did not avail us here, vain is the help of man; for we are well assured, by the contradictory notions men set forth, that they are incompetent to the task. Men, civilized and uncivilized, are equally at loss to determine the question. When compared to the wisdom of God, the wisdom of this world is foolishness. By man's wisdom we never could find out God. It's all very well to talk about "first cause causes," "primaries," and the like; they are vain and empty sounds,—no significance in them when you come to try to find out God by them; for by such words you can as well determine, (if determine you can,) the existence of a multitude of gods as one God. Ah! the Oracles come to our aid here,—here we find wisdom, and it is justified of her children. Comparatively, God's foolishness is greater than the combined wisdom of men, and his weakness is stronger than the strongest of men. By His word he changes the course of nature; he can say "thus far, and no farther"; he can break up the channels of the mighty deep, and cause them to overflow the earth;—in the language of Job, "Behold, he taketh away; who can hinder him? who will say unto him, What doest thou?" If God is not made known through the scriptures, I fear man will fail, search as he may to find them out.

Well, if by natural wisdom we cannot find out God, what is left us? It is that wisdom which comes from above, presented to us for our acceptance, that we may become wise unto salvation, unto life eternal. This eternal life, then, is a gift—a gratuity. It is is from God, through Jesus, to MORTAL man. It is a gift worthy our acceptance. It is from God, and that makes it worthy. To him and the Lamb will, in the ages to come, be ascribed all the glory by that great multitude whom no man can number—those who are gathered out of all nations, languages and tongues—those who shall stand purified because they have been tried and made white by the blood of the Lamb. They shall sing a song of deliverance, and cry salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

To what a destiny is man invited! The invitation is to all people, and yet, comparatively, how few will stand in "that day." Eternal life! Who of us us by experience know what it is? The very thought strikes wonder to our limited conception of so vast a subject. And this eternal life is offered to us as the free gift of God, if we by patient continuance in well doing seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness; by a faithful attention to the pre-requisites as belief of the gospel—such belief as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the ancient worthies of old possessed; and by obeying the all things commanded, and walking worthily of Him who has called us with this heavenly calling. The promise of eternal life is sure, for God that cannot lie has promised it. On this I rest all assurance: if I only know in whom I have believed, I also know that that which I have committed to Him he will keep (because able) against "that day." The exhortation is: "Hold fast the form of sound words, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus."

G. W. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Love of God.

The love of God divine—what does it purpose to do for us? Eternity can alone reveal; nay, not eternity, for that has no end;—thus unfathomed all and all unfathomable it must ever remain, while ages to ages succeed, and these to ages still of unending bliss! What a thought, that the Eternal One should condescend to be our physician, and bring the healing of his love to us in our lost condition, and thus prepare us for that future of which even our faint conceptions are overwhelming! And we so weak, so low, so erring in our natures! Wonderful power of love! It finds us polluted, and cleanses; low, degraded, sensual, and purifies, elevates and refines; with clouded and unbalanced reason, and clothes us in our right mind; giveth wisdom to the foolish, and to those who have no strength, it increaseth might. From the height of his dwelling-place in heaven he extends the arm of his salvation, the Incarnate God; and we, looking up by repentance and faith, find in Him sanctification, righteousness, and everlasting redemption.

What wonder that angels sang, "Glory to God in the highest," in view! while man, blind man, so slow to recognize the unpriced blessings of immortality. When the day of final adjudication shall have at length come, and we with faculties fully equal to the great change upon which we enter, scan the unending future on the one hand, and the cutting off of all existence on the other, who then shall say that there is no punishment to the wicked! Say also, (O insult to Deity!) no reward to the righteous! for until that reward can be measured, must the dread punishment of the wicked remain all unexpressed! O for the voice, the powers of Him, who, flying through mid heavens, proclaims the fullness of glad tidings to all mankind, that they may be induced to flee from the wrath to come, and find everlasting refuge under the protecting wings of the Almighty.

South Sodus. CAROLINE.

For the Crisis.

A Good Report.—Heb. 11: 2.

Serving God causes reproach often times. Men suffer shame for his name. They become the filth of the world and the offscouring of all things. But as persecutions pass, and persecuted and persecutors die, time works changes in the reputation of the steadfast and the true. The man who serves God will come right at last, even in the estimation of the multitude. They will honor the prophet whom their fathers persecuted and stoned. So we read that "by faith the elders were well reported of." The elders, or ancient men, are all those of whom Paul speaks in this chapter. The "good report" they obtained was that lasting memorial of their faith and love and zeal which serves as an example to all subsequent ages. By faith they made their mark in the world, and left their names amid the noble host who have fought the good fight and overcome the world. Of them it is said, and all these, whom God had named in the eleventh of Hebrews, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise—God having provided some better things for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. Their reproach is turned away. They bear the world's scorn no more. Their names are "as ointment poured forth." They are more widely known than Alexander, or Cæsar, or Napoleon. The millions around them who were faithless seekers after fame are perished from history and memory, but these have obtained "a good report through faith," and are honored through all ages, and all lands, and among all nations. Yet they have not received the promised inheritance; they are not yet made perfect. They await the fullness of God's grace in the glory of the ages to come.

We may share that blessedness with them. We may, in spite of scorn and reproach, "obtain a good report through faith." We may so trust God in hours of darkness and trial, that he shall put upon us the honors which the faithful share. Let others seek in vanity and sin the applause of the worldly and profane. Let warriors struggle on fields of carnage for laurels wet with tears and red with gore; be it ours to cherish that faith by which the elders, the saints of old, obtained a good report. God hath said, "Them that honor me will I honor." Let us believe him and dare to honor him in all we do and say.

H. L. H.

June 14, 1861.

For the Crisis.

From Philadelphia.

BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN CHRIST:—Having been sorely tried lately by the adversary, and having not resisted as firmly as I ought, I have experienced much loss of spirituality. I humbly but earnestly ask an interest in your prayers. I feel as desirous as ever—indeed now even more so—to spread the truths of the Bible, and to preach a soon coming Messiah; but there seems to be no way open at present. If any of the brethren are acquainted with any position that I could fill to earn a livelihood, and give as much time as possible to the performance of a work which is dear to my heart, I should rejoice to know it. It may appear novel, and to some unwise, if not presumption, to thus publicly request an interest in the prayers of the people of God; but feeling as I do deeply my own weakness, and the many evil influences surrounding me, and the work of the ministry unperformed for want of means and opportunities, and secular employment failing. I am constrained to seek for sympathy amongst those who are looking for deliverance likewise. Feeling grateful to God for deliverance from the snares of the wicked one, I am encouraged to persevere, and forgetting the things that are behind, I look forward to that which is before, being anxious to obtain immortality when Jesus comes. Our Master has gone away to prepare us a home, and he declares he will come again, that where he is, we may be also. We cannot go where he is, but he will come to us when all is ready. Let us be patient unto his coming. The paeparatory work is being rapidly accomplished. Brethren, pray for us. Yours in love and humility, THOS. W. SMITH.

Philadelphia, Aug. 5th, 1851.

Selections.

Unhallowed Prayer.

"What is the hope of the hypocrite? Will God hear his cry?"—Job 27: 8, 9.

An impenitent sinner never prays. In an inquiry after the causes of joylessness in the forms of prayer, the very first which meets us, in some instances, is the absence of piety. It is useless to search behind or beneath such a cause as this for a more recondite explanation of the evil. This is, doubtless, often all the interpretation that can be honestly given to a man's experience in addressing God. Other reasons for the lifelessness of his soul in prayer are rooted in this,—that he is not a christian.

If the heart is not right with God, enjoyment of communion with God is impossible. That communion itself is impossible. I repeat, an impenitent sinner never prays. Impenitence involves not one of the elements of a spirit of prayer. Holy desire, holy love, holy fear, holy trust—not one of these can the sinner find within himself. He has, therefore, none of that artless spontaneity, in calling upon God, which David exhibited when he said, "Thy servant hath found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee." An impenitent sinner finds no such thing in his heart. He finds there no intelligent wish to enjoy God's friendship. The whole atmosphere of prayer, therefore, is foreign to his tastes. If he drives himself into it for a time, by forcing upon his soul the forms of devotion, he cannot stay there. He is like one gasping in a vacuum.

One of the most impressive mysteries of the condition of man on this earth, is his deprivation of all visible and audible representations of God. We seem to be living in a state of seclusion from the rest of the universe, and from that peculiar presence of God in which angels dwell, and in which departed saints serve* him day and night. We do not see him in the fire; we do not hear him in the wind; we do not feel him in the darkness. But a more awful concealment of God from the unregenerate soul exists by the law of an unregenerate state. The eye of such a soul is closed even upon the spiritual manifestations of God, in all but their retributive aspects. These are all that it feels. These are all the thoughts of God which it has faith in. Such a soul does not enjoy God, for it does not see God with an eye of faith—that is, as a living God, living close to itself, and in vital relations to its own destiny—except as a retributive Power.

The only thing that forbids life, in any of its experiences, to be a life of retribution to an impenitent sinner, is a dead sleep of moral sensibility. And this sleep cannot be disturbed while he remains impenitent, otherwise than by disclosures of God as a consuming fire. His experience, therefore, in the forms of devotion, while he abides in impenitence, can only vibrate between the extremes of weariness and of terror. Quell his fear of God, and prayer becomes irksome; stimulate his indifference to God, and prayer becomes a torment.

The notes of a flute are sometimes a torture to the ears of idiots, like the blare of a trumpet. The reason has been conjectured to be, that melodious sound unlocks the tomb of the idiotic mind by the suggestion of conceptions, dim, but startling, like a revelation of a higher life, with which that mind has certain crushed affinities, but with which it feels no sympathy; so that its own degradation, disclosed to it by the contrast, is seated upon the consciousness of idiocy like a nightmare. Such a stimulant only to suffering, may the form of prayer be in the experience of sin. Impenitent prayer can only grovel in stagnant sensibility, or agonize in remorseful torture, or oscillate from one to the other. There is no point of joy between, to which it can gravitate, and there rest.

It is not wise that even we, who profess to be followers of Christ, should close our eyes to this truth, that the uniform absence of joy in prayer is one of the threatening signs in respect to our religious state. It is one of the legitimate intimations of that estrangement from God, which sin induces in one who has not experienced God's renewing grace. A searching of ourselves with an honest desire to know the truth, and the whole of it, may disclose to us other kindred facts, with which this feature of our condition becomes reasonable evidence, which it will be the loss of our souls to neglect, that we are self-deluded in our christian hope. An apostle might number us among the "many," of whom he would say, "I now tell you, even weeping, that they are enemies of the cross of Christ.—"The Still Hour," by Pro. Phelps.

* The Bible tells us that "the dead praise not the Lord," and we hence conclude that "departed saints" will not "serve" God until they rise from the dead.—Ed. Crisis.

Cannibalism in Africa.

The problem of practical cannibalism is definitely set at rest by Du Chaillu's sojourn among the Fans. His first intimation of the prevalence of the horrid practice, beyond the report of tribes nearer the sea coast, was almost simultaneous with his arrival in a Fan village.

"On going out the next morning, I saw a pile of ribs, leg and arm bones, and skulls, (human) piled up at the back of my house, which looked horrid enough to me. In fact, symptoms of cannibalism stare me in the face wherever I go, and I can no longer doubt.

"Eating the bodies of persons who have died of sickness, is a form of cannibalism of which I had never heard among any people; so that I determined to inquire if it were indeed a general custom among the Fans, or merely an exceptional freak. They spoke without embarassment about the whole matter, and I was informed that they constantly buy the dead of the Osheba tribe, who, in return, buy theirs. They also buy the dead of other families in their own tribes, and beside this, get the bodies of a great many slaves from the Mbichos and Mbondemos, for which they readily give ivory, at the rate of a small tusk for a body. Until to-day I never could believe two stories—both well authenticated, but seeming quite impossible to any one unacquainted with this people—which are told of them on the Gaboon. A party of Fans who came down to the sea shore once actually stole a fresh buried body from the cemetery, and cooked it and ate it among them; and at another time, a party conveyed a body into the woods, cut it up, and smoked the flesh, which they carried away with them. The circumstances made a great fuss among the Mpongwe, and even the missionaries heard of it, for it happened at a village not far from the missionary grounds; but I never credited the stories till now, though the facts were were well authenticated by witnesses. In fact, the Fans seem ghouls, only they practice their horrid custom unblushingly and in open day, and have no shame about it. I have seen here knives covered with human skin, which their owners valued very highly. To-day the Queen brought me some boiled plantain, which looked very nice; but the fear that she should have cooked it in some pot where a man had been cooked before—which was most likely the case—made me unable to eat it. On these journeys I have fortunately taken with me sufficient pots to do my own cooking. They are the finest, bravest looking set of negroes I have seen in the interior, and eating human flesh seems to agree with them, though I afterwards saw other Fan tribes whose members had not that fine air of these mountaineers. As everywhere else, location seems to have much to do with it. These were living among the mountains, and had all the appearance of hardy mountaineers."

The Blind Mother's Last Look at her Babe.

On the last Sabbath of 1860, when the cold winds of December were wailing the dirge song for the departing year, we met at the funeral of an infant. Not two summers had blessed the child. Disease came early, and quickly performed its fatal work.

Sweet words of Scripture were read, a short exhortation made, an earnest prayer offered, the benediction pronounced; and then, after a moment's silence, the friends were invited to "take the last look at the deceased." One and another came, and gazed with peculiar interest upon that little form, which seemed as if it were only sleeping.

But now all others step aside, for the mother approaches. She is blind—has never seen the child she loves, and now has lost. Forward she leans; her form almost covers the little coffin. She seems straining her sightless eyes to catch a glimpse of the loved one, before it is taken from her forever. But, as if convinced that this may not be, while the tears flow down her cheeks apace, she puts her fingers upon the face of the child. Every feature is carefully felt—the forehead, eyes, nose, chin. Gently she passes both hands over the entire body within her reach. She grasps tenderly and tightly the little hands which lie clasped upon the breast of the babe. Kiss after kiss she imprints upon those cold lips which she had so often kissed before, when they were warm with life; and then the mother, trembling, weeping, turns away. She has looked at her offspring as the blind only may. It was the last look, until the morning of the resurrection shall recall the dead to life again, and the omnipotent touch of God shall unseal the sightless orbs of his benighted children. Then we may hope that the mother, redeemed by grace, will behold her angel babe beside the Savior, and in that realm where darkness and death may never reign, will join with the sweet child in songs of everlasting praise!—Christian Intelligencer.

Little Cross Bearers.

The little girls laughed merrily, and, hurrying home, packed their dinner baskets in such haste, that Carrie and Jenny Bell had hardly finished their breakfasts, when the whole eager party arrived at the garden gate.

"Why, girls," cried Susy Wright, "not ready yet? Do hurry, for it is a long walk, and we want to get into the woods before it grows much warmer."

"It won't take me two minutes," cried Carrie, but Jenny stood irresolute.

"I'm afraid we oughtn't to go."

"Why not, pray?" cried Carrie, sharply.

"Why, you know mother has one of her bad headaches coming on, and there's Walter and Fred to be taken care of."

"Well, and there's Sally to do it," said Carrie.

"But you know Sally's sister is very sick, and mother has given her leave to go home to-day."

"How provoking," said Carrie, fretfully. Then she added, after a pause, "But I don't believe mother's head is very bad, and I'm sure Fred will be good, and Walter would help amuse him."

"Walter is almost a baby himself," said Jenny, "and Fred frets almost all the time since he's been getting his teeth, poor little fellow!"

"Fred will be good enough if you are not here to spoil him," cried Carrie, "and I'll just go and ask mother if she can't get along without us. It would be too bad to keep in such a lovely day."

Carrie was back in a few minutes, with a radiant face. "Mother says we may go. She can spare us if we are going to enjoy ourselves so much."

Jenny hesitated. The woods in the distance looked so misty and pleasant, and Fred's fretful little cry jarred upon her ear, while she thought how hard it would be to amuse him, and keep Walter quiet and happy through all that warm day. But would it be any easier for her mother, left all alone with her aching head? "No," thought Jenny, "I cannot be so selfish. I should not enjoy myself at all."

"What are you thinking about so long?" asked Carrie, impatiently. "Come, let's get our baskets ready."

"I believe I won't go," faltered Jenny.

"Why not?" cried two or three disappointed voices.

"I can't bear to leave mother so sick."

"What a mean girl you are, Jenny Bell," whispered Carrie, angrily, "You want to make all the girls think you are such a saint, and I am so selfish. That's all you're doing it for—just to show off."

"No, indeed! Carrie," said Jenny, coloring deeply; and turning to the girls she added,

"One of us can go just as well as not, and, of course, as Carrie is the oldest, she has the best right, and, indeed, I do not believe I care half as much about it as she does, for she has been talking about it all the week."

No persuasions could move Jenny, who only shook her head cheerfully, and insisted that she did not feel badly at all, and at last the impatient little party moved on.

After watching them down the road, with glistening eyes, for it was really a very great trial to be left behind, Jenny went back to the nursery, where her mother sat bathing her head with camphor, and trying to amuse the little complaining Fred with some pictures. A look of glad surprise came over her flushed face, as she heard Jenny's step.

"I thought you were gone to the woods."

"No, mother," said Jenny, trying to speak carelessly. "I thought I would like to play housekeeper to-day, and first I am going to put you to bed with your dreadful headache, and then Walter and Fred and I are going to have a nice time out in the arbor."

The happy tears came in Mrs. Bell's eyes as her kind daughter arranged the pillows under her throbbing head, and darkening the room, stole softly out with Fred and Walter.

But it was no small task that Jenny had undertaken. Poor baby Fred bit his fingers with his hot, swollen gums, but as that did not make matters any better, he threw away, one after another, flowers, books and playthings, which patient Jenny brought and was quite determined to be a very unhappy little baby. Then Walter was full of mischief, and could be only kept still with stories, which poor Jenny told industriously, walking up and down the garden walk, carrying baby Fred till she thought her arms would drop off.

Once in awhile a vision crossed her of the happy party seated in the shady woods, making crowns, and eating wild strawberries, but she pushed it bravely aside, and kept on her tiresome walk, only thinking to herself that if mother was having a nice rest, she could bear it a little longer.

The sun grew very hot, but little tyrant Fred would not be carried into the house, and as poor Jenny, turning in the path, was just beginning her seventh story, she saw a gentleman at the garden-gate.

"Could you give me a drink of water, little lady?" said he, pleasantly, and Jenny incumbered by the clinging Fred, soon brought a cool, brimming goblet.

"You look tired," said the gentleman, kindly, as he thanked her, and before she knew it—drawn on by his sympathizing questions—she had told him all the story of the morning's trials and disappointments, though, for some reason, she hardly understood herself, she never told him she had a sister Carrie, who had gone to the woods. They had quite a pleasant talk together, and at last, when the gentleman went his way, he said,

"I like you so much little Jenny, that I don't want you to forget me," and drawing from his pocket a small book, he begged her to keep it in memory of his visit, and with a bright, kind smile, he was gone.

The day wore on. At noon Jenny made a nice cup of tea for mother, and after feeding baby his bread and milk, and giving busy Walter his dinner, to her great joy, both children—overcome with fatigue and heat—fell fast asleep.

Now she had time to examine her little book, which she found very strange and interesting. It told about some pilgrims, going on a long journey, with heavy crosses on their backs. They had a great many trials, and often their way lay through hot, sandy deserts, so that some of them grew very tired and sad, and some tried to throw away their crosses, but others went on very patiently, always looking as if they saw something so beautiful just a little way before them, that they forgot all present sorrow and trouble. So the story went on, till the pilgrims all came to a very dark valley, through which they must pass. Then some of them trembled, and grew pale, but others went in singing, and some of the words of their song were, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me," and suddenly, while they were singing, the heavy crosses fell from their backs, and in their stead, angels brought them shining crowns. And there came a voice, "Father, I will that these whom Thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory." Then the whole valley was filled with light, the angels shouted, "They shall see the King in his beauty," and the happy pilgrims passed through the evererlasting gates into the golden city.

Jenny's tears fell fast as she finished the strange little book, which she could not quite understand.

"My sweet little daughter," said a voice, and looking up, she saw her mother coming in at the door, and knew from her eyes that the bad headache was quite gone. "You have made me very happy," continued Mrs. Bell, kissing Jenny's round cheeks. "You have been so self-sacrificing and patient to-day, that I am sure my prayers have been heard, and that one of my little daughters is learning to take up her cross daily, and follow Christ."

"Mother, said Jenny, eagerly, "do you mean that I am a cross-bearer?"

"You certainly have been to-day," said her mother, with an affectionate smile.

Jenny burst into tears, and held out her little book. They read it over together, and Jenny's mother explained it.

"And will all that ever happen to me?" said Jenny.

"Yes, if you take up your cross daily, and bear it patiently, you, too, shall see the King in his beauty."

Carrie came home very cross that night. She knew she had been selfish, and nothing had gone right all day, while there sat Jenny, looking so wonderfully happy. What could be the reason? Was she doing it just to be provoking?

The little party, stopping at the gate, were very voluble, telling Jenny of the pleasures of the day. They never before had such a splendid time, and had never seen the woods so beautiful, and so full of birds and flowers. But not one of the party was as happy as the patient little cross-bearer, for the angels were singing, "She shall see the King in his beauty, and the land that is very far off."—M. L. P. in the Congregationalist.

I Can't.

Now that is a mighty small word, yet it is bigger than a mountain, in the way of a great many folks. Why don't you do something? Oh, I can't! Why not? I can't. Now, you poor mortal, the great giant of a "Can't" isn't much after all. He looks now higher than Haman's gallows, and bigger than ten Goliaths; but then come to face him with a little sling and a smooth stone, called "I will" and he drops headlong on the ground. And as you come up where is, he grows small until he isn't bigger than Tom Thumb. O, you poor faint-hearted soul, just kick that miserable little sneaking contemptible "can't" out of door, Then keep that good fellow "I can" in his place and another little fellow "Try" to help him, and you"ll get along finely. Come, hustle him out of doors. He's a moth and a curse worse than a drone bee. A good-for-nothing lazy little vagabond. He makes you feel like a sneak, mope like a dunce, and act like a fool. "I can't," "I can't," out with you, you whining, canting little reptile, and make room for your betters. Come in "Try," "Will," make yourselves at home and help this poor soul along.—H. L. H.—Christian Messenger.

"He that oppresseth the poor shall surely come to want."—Prov. 22: 16.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications on sale at this office, should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, BOSTON, MASS.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 309. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1861. VOL. XIII. NO. 24.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Lines,

Suggested by hearing a sermon from the text,—"And now men see not the bright light which is in the clouds."—Job 37: 21.

[Sent in a private letter to L. A. M. and forwarded to the Crisis by permission of the writer.]

I saw a cloud arising
Upon the eastern sky,
And knew by its apprising
The thunder storm was nigh.

I heard the peals of thunder,
I saw the lightnings flash,
And soon against my window
I heard the rain drops dash.

Wildly the winds were blowing,
I heard its fearful roar,
And darker grew the storm-cloud,
While fast the rain did pour.

No sun shone on my dwelling,
To scatter light around,
But all seemed dark and dreary
Amid the gloom profound.

But yet the sun was shining,
Although I could not see,
And gave a "silver lining,"
The cloud so dark to me.

The tempest passed onward
Toward the eastern sky,
And lo! by sunbeam painted,
A rainbow bright on high.

It was the bow of promise
God gave to faithful Noah,
To all a faithful token
A flood should come no more.

Now if there came no tempest,
With flash and thunder peal,
There ne'er would come the rainbow,
God's promise to reveal.

And so those trials often
That fill our hearts with fear,
Do only make the Savior
Unto our hearts more dear.

Before the skilled Refiner
The molten silver lies,
Until the perfect image
He thereupon descries.

Afflictions are the furnace
In which our hearts are tried,
Until from earth quite sundered
And fully purified.

O may our faith ne'er waver,
Nor heart be filled with dread,
Although the storm-cloud gather
With blackness o'er our head.

MARY D. WELLCOME.

For the Crisis.

The Great Restoration.

BY P. E. ARMSTRONG.

"And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come and restore all things."—Matt. 17: 11.

In the examination of this subject I am aware of the unpopularity of the affirmative position I have undertaken to defend. Any new or resurrected truth, no matter how strong or conclusive the testimony is that is adduced to sustain it, has not only the unfavorable prejudice of the masses to meet, (who naturally follow the teachings of the great and learned, and are not willing to admit a new truth until they find it accredited by the great orthodox commentators of the day), but also a class of opposers who profess to be teachers in Israel—who, although they may be impressed by the force of, to them, a new truth, still suffer themselves to reject it because a selfish pride will not allow them to admit to the flocks in their charge that so important a theological truth should have escaped till now their surveillance, and, like the Pharisees of old, scorn to receive any advancement in knowledge from an unlearned or humble source.

Seeing that this is the state of the great professing church of the present day, it is only under the extreme sense of duty I have, with much weakness, but relying on heavenly wisdom, attempted to disseminate through the advent press that which I have conceived to be important truth, and which should comfort and edify the waiting and faithful little flock to whom our Lord hath assured shall be given the kingdom.

We will first briefly examine our text, with its immediate connections, and then those scriptures relating to and corroborating the affirmative wording of the text, (which, standing alone, is a positive thus saith the Lord of a future forerunner independent of John the Baptist); and lastly, attempt to show the nature of the restoration to be effected to fulfill the broad and ultimate design of prophecy. The chapter from which our subject is chosen, begins with the transfiguration on the mount, where our Lord separated himself with three chosen disciples apart from the rest, and was pleased to exhibit to them an embryotic vision of his glorious visible kingdom, which he would [illegible] fulfill to the letter the word of God, and verify the promises made to the suffering seed of faith in all ages. There appeared with our Lord, in glorified form, Moses and Elias; and, (without entering the argument whether they were real or visionary), their presence with him for that particular purpose has a significance we will here notice, although we anticipate, by so doing, the result of the argument. The plain and obvious reason for the appearing of Moses and Elijah was to represent the heirs of the kingdom—both the resurrected dead and the living waiting Bride; and while Moses represents the sleeping but resurrected dead, Elias represents the living remnant of faith, who, transformed by their descending King, sing a new song, which the sleeping dead can never learn. That song of praise is sung by the train of Elias, over whom the gates of death have not prevailed, to the Lamb of God, who, by his coming, averts the monster's sting, having died for them in every sense of the word, and rescues them from a temporal as well as an eternal death, and consequently may justly expect from them the loudest praise. And the moment the Jews severed the head of John, his mission to them as a restoring Elias was ended and annulled; for he who scripturally fulfills the mission of Elias, must not only restore, but, like the ascending prophet, live triumphant over death, to bring in the living subjects of his restoration to the kingdom of God. 9th verse,—"And after they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, tell the vision to no man until the Son of Man be risen again from the dead." 10th verse,—"And his disciples asked him, saying, why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?" Then comes the answer of our Lord in the words of the text. The disciples had seen Elias, and were forbid revealing the vision, and they could not understand why this injunction, since the scribes expected the literal appear ing of Elias; and our Lord answers them truthfully, though in the verse following he obviously designed to throw ambiguity over his assertion, as it was not necessary for the early christian church to expect a forerunner aside from John; it being with definite time closed up and sealed, to be understood only at the time of the end, when the preparation of the waiting Bride made it expedient and necessary. At the time our Lord uttered the words of the text, John had appeared without effecting a scriptural restoration; and hence he adds, "But I say unto you that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise also shall the Son of man suffer of them." Here he connects his rejection and death with John, showing there was no restoration because of unbelief; and, so far from John effecting a scriptural restoration, he was a stumbling block to the Jews—a powerless reed before the wind of their pride and covetousness, and yet fulfilling a design in the purpose of God, which condemned them as a nation by their rejecting the light of their coming Messiah, which he, by precept and example, caused to shine in their midst.

John was by lineage a priest, and had just right to expect that they would gladly receive his proclamation of the kingdom at hand; and many of the poor and common people did, but by their subsequent actions we have good reasons to doubt their sincerity. The reason the common people heard him gladly, while those in place and power looked on him as a fanatical imposter, and scornfully rejected him, was because as a nation they were proud and covetous, while the doctrine of John struck at the root of both these sins, and taught a common interest, or levelling down of wealth and distinction, among the heirs of the kingdom. While this accorded well with the feelings of the covetous poor, and made him hosts of friends, it brought upon him the sarcasm and malignity of the rich, who finally accomplished his destruction; and we have no account of any scriptural restoration effected by John to the Jews, much less to the Gentiles, (who are, in many senses, their antitypes in prophecy,) except indeed so far as his teachings of love, humility and equality corroborate the nature of the mission of Him who is the forerunner of the final advent, and in establishing a precedent, that Elijah in prophecy refers not necessarily to the person of Elijah, but a restorer having the spirit and power of a prophet—one jealous for the honor and true worship of his God, who carries out and fulfills the great prophetic restoration.

That John did prepare the hearts of a multitude to listen to the teachings of our Lord is fully admitted, but that they were far from being his steadfast followers is equally plain. We have a good description of them in the 6th chapter of John, where the multitude, for covetous ends, would gladly have made him king, yet they were offended at every spiritual truth he uttered, bigoted as they were by Jewish tradition, and strangers at heart to the law of love, which is the embodiment of restoration, and which alone can prepare a people to meet the embodiment of love in person, the glorious King of Israel. God always requires a previous conformity of his people to the nature of his manifestations. When he was about to descend on Mount Sinai he required a three days' purification in the camp of Israel; and when our Lord was about to appear in his humility, John appears not in gorgeous synagogues, but in the wilderness of Judea, preaching repentance and humility to suit the occasion; and when he comes again to clothe his waiting Bride in the garments of nuptial love, it is highly important for those who live to inherit this first-born glory, that they purify themselves from all covetousness and inequality, and form a unit to greet him who is chief among ten thousands and altogether lovely, and thus show to the unbelieving world that they dare trust his living word.

We will next turn to the prophecies which speak of the mission of a forerunner, and see if there is not something yet to be accomplished. Let us first notice Isa. 40th chapter. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make stright in the desert a highway for our God. Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain. And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." The preceding chapter foretells the Babylonish captivity, while this seemed primarily to refer to the return of the Jews therefrom, and it was no doubt to them words of much encouragement, as they pursued their tedious and toilsome journey through wilderness and desert back to the desolate ruins of Jerusalem, to restore again the temple service of their God. It is said it was common for eastern monarchs, when starting on expeditions through desert countries, to send Harbingers before them to prepare the way in removing obstructions, to dig down hills and fill up ravines, and thus announce their coming. And the prophet seems to have used the practice of the times to illustrate not only the return of the Jews from Babylon, (which John in Revelation makes a typical identity with the great restoration), but also a two-fold coming of the Lord. The prophecy is much too expanding and rich to have had its fulfillment at the first advent; and surely if a forerunner was prophetical and necessary, then it is no less so now, when we are nearing the second glorious advent of our Lord; and we contend, if this prophecy covered and illustrated both the advents of the Messiah, as it undoubtedly does, a forerunner is full more necessary and prophetical in the last than in the first advent; and the mission of John, instead of fulfilling absolutely this glorious, expanding prophecy, rather showed and confirmed the nature of the final restoration to be brought about by the least one in the kingdom, spoken of by the Savior, who should be greater than he.

Let us next turn to Isa. 57: 14. "And (he) shall say, Cast ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way, take up the stumbling block out of the way of my people. For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place; with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones. For I will not contend forever, neither will I be always wroth: for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls which I have made. For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth, and smote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. I have seen his ways and will heal him: I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him and to his mourners. I create the fruit of the lips; peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord; and I will heal him." Here the same restorer and forerunner is brought to view, and there is nothing in the history of the exiles returning from Babylon, or John's abortive restoration, approaches it further than in shadow. Let our readers compare the 18th and 19th verses with the 2d and 14th chapters of Hosea, and they will see that both the restorer and restoration here spoken of pertains to the house of Ephraim, who represents Christian Israel, (as I have heretofore shown in subjects headed, "The birthright of Joseph," and "Harmony of Prophecy"), and who establishes and gives in marriage a Zion having a "new name" to the extending dominions of Judah and Israel's king, while Judah, or literal Israel, is last to acknowledge the true heir of David's throne.

Again,—Isa. 62d chapter is but a repetition of the foregoing restoration. It is said, at the 10th verse and onward, "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people. Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, (not to Jerusalem in particular), say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him. And they shall call them, the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord: and thou shalt be called, sought out, a city not forsaken." As literal Israel was first offered the kingdom, it was but proper to associate the blessings here of restoration with the names of Old Zion and Jerusalem; but, as before remarked, the prophecy is exceeding rich and ambiguous, and may more fully apply to a city sought out in the great western world, the counterpart of Zion at Jerusalem, and where our Lord will first descend to meet a remnant of faith, who gather together in a restoration of love and unity to await his coming.

We will now pass on to notice Mal. 3: 1. "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of Hosts." Here again is a prophecy which, in a limited sense, was applicable to the first advent, and was primarily addressed to Judah and Jerusalem; for Ephraim and his followers at this time had been cast off for conspiring against the house of David, and was lost among and identified with the heathen customs of the Gentiles. But the prophecy will admit of quite as enlarged and ambiguous construction as those of Isaiah; and Ephraim, who God declares is still his firstborn, has full more claim to a restoring Elijah than the literal house of Judah, who rejected and put to death both him who should have been their Elias, and committed the greater sin than Ephraim, by destroying, (as they supposed,) the rightful heir to David's throne, because the laws of his kingdom struck at the root of their pride and covetousness. Therefore we have good reason to believe our Lord understood full well what he said when he declared, "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things"; (and may endeavor to show in a future article that the 144,000 of Rev. 7th chapter are the subjects of this restoration); and hence John's appearing as a reed shaken with the wind, in his attempt to restore harmony and love to the bickering and covetous Jews, falls as far short of the second and more glorious coming of the king of Israel.

(Concluded next week.)

For the Crisis.

What is Truth?

"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5: 28, 29.

The text above quoted is a plain, simple statement of fact—an event yet in the future, but to be fulfilled according to the definite language in which it is expressed. A harmony of Bible language demands this, as will be seen by the context. Jesus was instructing the Jews on an important subject, when he made use of the words; a subject on which they were in total darkness, groping in blindness and ignorance. He had been giving them one of his kindest lessons, as may be seen by reading the four preceding verses. He did not intend leading them astray, nor into grosser darkness, but into light, by making known to them the glorious plan of redemption through him, by a resurrection from the dead. Hence, after having said to them, "the Son can do nothing of himself but what he seeth the Father do,"—and that what the Father did the Son would also do, assigning his reason, viz., "for the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself (the Father) doeth,"—and that, "as the Father raised up the dead and quickened them, even so the Son quickeneth whom he will,"—instructing them, also, that the Father would not judge men, but had committed all judgment to the Son; and that, for this cause, all men should honor the Son, even as they did the Father; and as they honored the one, even so did they honor the other; as they dishonored one, even so the other,—also that he that heareth my words and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, (in him—Christ,) and shall not come into condemnation, but rather that all such as thus obeyed would have passed from death unto life, or from a state of dead works unto a state of living, by faith in the Son of God, etc.,—he goes on, lest the Jews should marvel at his teaching, and more fully details the mystery of the resurrection, by using the language of the text. As the whole lesson is found given in the most simple language, the text being a part of it, we understand Jesus to mean just what he says, and not something that he does not even hint at, viz., a thousand years between the resurrection of the just and unjust: but that there was a time coming, (which he called an hour,) in which all the dead should come forth from the grave; and that such as had heard his word and believed on the Father who sent Him, should have eternal life, while the other class should come forth to condemnation, or destruction.

The ultimate end of man was plainly set forth in the lesson, and the means by which their final destinies were to be accomplished, viz., the resurrection—of the righteous to life eternal, of the wicked to damnation. The language of Daniel, Matthew, Paul, and John the Revelator, fully justifies us in looking for a resurrection of both classes, according to the plain language of the text. Dan. 12: 1, 2, speaking of the deliverance of God's people, says, "And at that time the people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." It is evident the term many, in this text, is indefinite, and covers both classes; and the term "some," as used in describing both classes alike, includes the whole of each. In the first verse, in describing the number of his people delivered, he says "every one of them"; and in the second verse, in describing the same class, and the same number, he uses the term "some"; and the words "every one of them" in the 1st verse, qualify the number covered by the term "some" in the 2d verse. The language of Gabriel to Daniel conveys no idea of a thousand years between the resurrection of the righteous and the wicked, but rather confirms the language of the text to be a full, plain statement of fact, meaning just what it says.

Again, the declaration of Christ to the high priest, (see Matt. 26: 64) "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven," agrees with the other witnesses. Suppose Christ should appear in the clouds of heaven any time prior to 1868? Could the high priest see him without a resurrection? Surely not. Suppose he is not raised till after the Day of the Lord, which is the "day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men"? Could he see Jesus sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven? Surely not. The high priest is now in bondage to death, and without a timely resurrection, can never see Jesus coming in the clouds of heaven. Jesus says he shall see him coming, not after he has been here one thousand years. Again,—He that is called Alpha and Omega said to John, (Rev. 1: 7,) "Behold he (Jesus) cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him; they also which pierced him." When will these Roman soldiers see him? When he comes in the clouds of heaven. Not one thousand years after.

Now, beloved brethren, these are a few of the plain Bible testimonies on this subject, and they are but the smallest number that might be produced from the sacred volume. And what is the argument, and where is it to be found, that will outweigh the words of the angel Gabriel, Alpha and Omega, and the plain words of Jesus Christ? I ask, where? Do you refer me to a single doubtful text found among the figurative expressions of the Revelator? (Rev. 20: 5.) This is but a feather in the opposite scale, and yet this is your only text. To give this its common construction, like the first three verses of the same chapter, involves the church in darkness, clouds, and gross errors, such as it has been groping in for centuries past; without relief, and seemingly desiring none. And more than this; it involves a series of contradictory statements in the word of God, setting prophets, apostles, and Jesus Christ in battle array. The foregoing scriptures are plain comprehensive statements concerning the resurrection that is to take place at Christ's coming. Let us believe them; and hereafter endeavor so to understand the figurative language of the Revelator, as to make a harmony with the first and great teacher, Jesus Christ.

But it may not be out of place for me to continue a little further my objections to the theory of the thousand years between the resurrections. To do so, we must consider Rev. 20: 1–3. This would require a large space and much time, yet I would gladly consume the time and space, were it possible for me to do so. Suffice it to say, these verses cannot have a literal exposition, more especially that of the popular theories of the day. We will look at it briefly. Question—When is Satan bound? Theory says, when Christ comes. How long is he bound? John says, a thousand years. Where is he confined? In the bottomless pit. What kingdom exists, and who reigns during this one thousand years. Daniel and John say, Christ's kingdom—and John says he reigns a thousand years. When does his reign commence? Theory says, with the binding of Satan. They run parallel then, a thousand years. When is Satan loosed out of his prison? Theory says, a little before the thousand years are fulfilled; just time enough to deceive the nations and gather them to the great battle. John says, after the thousand years are finished he must be loosed a little season. What kingdom succeeds Christ's one thousand years' reign? God's everlasting kingdom. Theory says, the devil is let loose, and goes out to the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them to battle, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. Now which is right—theory, or the sure word of prophecy? If Satan is not bound till Christ's second advent, and Christ reigns a thousand years, surely no part of that time belongs to the devil. It belongs to Christ; and if, when Christ's time is fulfilled, he delivers up the kingdom to God the Father, as Paul says, (1 Cor. 15: 24, 25,)—the dragon, when he comes up from the bottomless pit, finds himself—where? In the everlasting age! These are facts that cannot be avoided on the premises that Satan is not bound till Christ's second advent.

And again, Christ's reign covers the day of the Lord, which is the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men; and Satan, being bound during the time, he is destroyed with the beast and false prophets ere that day closes. Peter settles this question. He says, "the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which (not after) the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also; and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Pet. 3: 10. Now, brethren, where is the dragon to be found after Peter's day of destruction, in the which God will accomplish his great work of destruction,—the new heavens appear, and the earth be restored to its Eden loveliness, in which he will not admit the old serpent to tramp up and down among the blood-washed throng of Paradise restored?—"But the rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection." On the reading of this text, which is acknowledged by learned men to be a very doubtful one, is predicated the theory of a thousand years between the resurrection of the just and unjust. Can this inferential testimony, derived from a doubtful passage, outweigh the plainest most simple word of God? Would it not protract our article quite too long, I should be glad to pursue the subject to its full length, but circumstances will not permit at this time.

A variety of questions is involved in the text, which must be settled before we can come to a just conclusion of the whole matter, a few of which, and only a few, I can now present. Firstly, who are the "rest of the dead?" Secondly, what death, or kind of death is referred to? Thirdly, to what life do they live again? And fourthly, when do they live again, or when does the first resurrection occur,—before the period of Satan's bondage, or not till after the one thousand years are finished? If the righteous are raised at Christ's second advent, then the first resurrection is prior to the time declared by John, if so be the old theory be true that Satan is bound when Christ comes. But if it be false, and the truth is that the dragon was bound in (about) A. D. 755, when I am quite sure he was, by treaty between two contending powers, viz., Pagan and Papal Rome, his term of bondage expired about the time of the French Revolution. Then the time is past, and we may now look for the second coming of Christ and the first resurrection. There being no resurrection in the past, as taught by the Sadducees, whose teaching overthrew the faith of some, may it not be that the Revelator designed to correct an error prevalent at that day, and to some extent at the present, that the resurrection was past.

John saw in vision down the stream of time, where Pagan Rome would be overruled by Papal Rome, and treat with that mighty angel, and finally give up his seat, (capital) and power and great authority to the (papal) beast for a thousand years. All this must precede the resurrection; hence he said the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished, and that, after they were fulfilled, he (Satan) should be loosed for a little season, just as he was, at the expiration of the treaty he ascended from the bottomless pit (of papacy,) and is now exerting all his power in deceiving and gathering the nations to the great battle of God Almighty. The dragon is marked by infidelity, and infidel France will yet prove herself to be the anti-Christ of the last days.

Permit me to say the one thousand years of Satan's bondage and the day of the Lord are two distinct periods of time,—the former in the past, the latter yet future, and will be introduced by Christ's second advent, when he will take to himself his great power and reign, until he has, by the Father, put all his enemies under his feet. 1 Cor. 15: 24.

But the question, who are the rest of the dead? is not yet settled, neither shall I attempt to reconcile the apparent difficulty surrounding this and its associate texts. But some will answer, there is no difficulty in understanding this language; to which I assent, on the assumption that it is right to be governed by our own imaginations, or the theories of men. But, when we make every word of God our rule of judgment in reconciling one portion with all other portions on the same subject, we find a difficulty in the passage above, not easily explained to the satisfaction of many of our brethren. When we have proved a fact by plain, simple Bible language, the same cannot be dis-proved, though all the inferential and metaphoric testimony the Bible contains be brought to bear upon it. In whatever way we explain the book of Revelation, we must reconcile it with the plain statement of facts, and never once attempt to make the plain, simple language yield to a figure of speech. Hence, as there is not (to my knowledge) a single plain, declarative text in the Bible to corroborate the theory of a thousand years between the resurrection of the righteous and wicked, I fall back on the foundation Christ has laid for our hope, our rule of faith and practice, in John 5: 28, 29.

But again, the 18th chapter of Revelation presents to our view things that are to transpire on the earth before Christ's second coming. Please read it. The 19th chapter down to the 10th verse, presents the marriage of the Lamb, and the 11th verse shows the opening heavens and the second advent of Christ, clothed in power and majesty, to execute the judgments written. Read it carefully, for in these eleven verses you learn that at Christ's coming the execution of the judgments commences, and they are carried on until even the remnant of all nations is destroyed.

But again, admit, if you please, that all of Rev. 20th is to have a subsequent fulfillment, yet by no Bible authority can you extend the fulfillment of one event of the chapter beyond the day of the Lord, or one thousand years of Christ's reign. Every event brought to view in those two chapters have their fulfillment within the one thousand years of Christ's reign; and the 21st chapter presents the new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, and not Satan mustering his hosts to battle. No, never! but when the enemies of Christ are put under his feet, Satan is not exempt; no, he is not excused, but shares the same punishment—eternal destruction. A complete work will the King of kings and Lord of lords make on the earth during his reign. Hence, no mustering of armies, no gathering of nations after the thousand years' reign; but the new heavens and new earth at once appear, and God becomes all and in all. Amen.

E. R. Sowerwine.

Granville, Licking Co., Ohio.

For the Crisis.

The Attractions of the Closet.

Beauty is fading, health and friends uncertain, wealth precarious, and all things else of an earthly character stamped with blight and decay. But amidst all the wreck of our earthly hopes, the disappointment of our dearest and most fondly cherished prospects, one pearl of infinitely great price has been spared to cheer the gloom of our earthly journey; and this is the closet; the sacredness and solitude of its quiet retreat has comforted and made happy the pathway of millions upon millions, in their onward march through the wilderness of this world. All are strangers to real and true happiness who have not learned the power of its attractions. Nothing, however great in value, brilliant in its magnificence, or dazzling in its splendor, can form a substitute, or approach to an equivalent, for the joy and peace found in the sacred enclosure of the closet. It was the delight of the ancient worthies since the world began. Isaac of old, in whom and all the world should be blest, in the quiet of eventide sought the open field [illegible] could [illegible]

and he was able to inscribe on the place the house of God and the gate of heaven, in remembrance of the bethel he there enjoyed. Abraham, under the wide-spreading oaks, which he had planted at Beer-sheba, called upon the name of the Lord. Peter, the humbled and courageous disciple, knelt upon the airy roof of his sea-side lodging to hold noon-day communion with his blessed Redeemer, where the messengers of Cornelius found him. The hill-side, with the stars above in their shining canopy, and the shadowy world below—the fragrant stillness of the garden, when evening had dismissed its humble laborers, were the places where the Man of sorrows loved to pray. There he wrestled, prayed and agonized all night in prayer to God, that he might be strengthened to bear the sins of a guilty world in his own body on the tree of the cross. Nor were his prayers in vain, as are not the prayers of all his truly sincere followers; for in that dread hour, when his weakness seemed too much for his human nature to bear alone, angels were sent to minister to him and strengthen him for the great conflict before him, and he was enabled to say, "Thy will, not mine, be done." And this being the highest point of christian excellence, his prayer was heard, the struggle endured, and the victory won.

What an example for imitation left behind for every true disciple to follow. No matter how severe our conflicts, how dreadful our tribulations, the battle is not won nor the victory obtained until we are able to say with our blessed Lord and Master, thy will be done. And this will always be the result of continued faithful and fervent prayer. Then shall we not more than ever adore the name of our blessed Lord and Savior for the privilege of the closet—of being permitted access to the mercy-seat, where we may almost face to face talk with the precious Redeemer? Where is the child of sorrow whose heart has not been made to radiate with joy and gladness, as he has made a deposit of his heavy and bitter load at the throne of grace? The prison has lost its gloom, the sick bed its weariness and distress; indigence, want and misery all have at times changed their laggard dress for the bright robe of hope and cheerful submission, under the ponderous weight of life's chequered pathway. And this gracious privilege of prayer is one, among the prominent blessings of the christian, that will accompany him all through the variety of his life-journey; and, as he comes in contact with the messenger death, will hold up his fainting head, and cheer his drooping heart, with the blessed assurance that strength will be given him equal to the conflict before him. Then may we, as christians, and particularly the young, who know but little as yet of the power of darkness and temptation, be often found bowed in humble prayer, within the sacred folds of the closet; and then, when done with the sorrows and increasing tempests of life, if faithful unto death, we shall be welcomed by our coming Lord into the mansions of bliss which he has gone to prepare, where faith will be exchanged for sight, prayer for praise, and hope for glad and full fruition.

MARY A. TIBBETS.

Lancaster, Ind., July 25, 1861.

For the Crisis.

BRO. WENDELL:—Enclosed I send a short piece, taken from the New York Daily News of Aug. 9th, 1861, thinking it might be read with interest by the readers of the Crisis, as showing that those who are engaged wholly in the political world cannot fail to discover that we are truly realizing distress of nations, and men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking at those things that are coming on the earth. And surely it becomes us to watch and pray always, that we may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that are coming to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man. Luke 21: 25–37. May the Lord help all the dear brethren to endure to the end, is the prayer of your brother, looking for a glorious deliverance when our Life shall appear.

O. D. WOODRUFF.

Southington, Aug. 16, '61.

A World in Trouble.

The world is in trouble. Nations are convulsed; thrones are trembling; Governments are agitated; people are excited, and the whole social organization of civilization appears to be sensitively influenced by some strange influence premoniotry of a great change. Let us take a glance at the facts:

Despite all rumors to the contrary, Pope Pius IX is really dying. A sleep is overcoming him from which nothing will probably awaken him except the trumpet of eternity. Count Cavour, his arch-antagonist, has just gone before him. The Sultan of Turkey has also passed away. The Chinese Emperor is admitted to be on his death-bed, and the rebel army at the gates of Pekin. Louis Napoleon has been attacked by disease. The Queen of Austria has been given up as beyond the reach of medicine. The Empress of France is ill. The Queen of Great Britain, it is positively asserted in private circles, is exhibiting traces of that mental aberration which is hereditary in her family.

Let us now add to this catalogue of sceptered ills that the Papal States, at the demise of Pio Nono, will probably be handed over to Victor Emanuel, King of Italy. That Francis, late Dictator of Naples, [illegible] the event to foment a [illegible] to independence. That Hungary is equally on the eve of a revolution, and Poland following its example. That Spain is again menacing Morocco. That France and Austria are preparing for another conflict, as a sequel to the treaty of Villafranca. That England, France, and Spain are now threatening Mexico. That one portion of St. Domingo has already lost its freedom, and that the other bids fair to follow. That the petty States of South America are nearly all engaged in civil war, and that the great North American Republic of the United States is absolutely struggling for life, a prey to domestic discord of the most serious proportions.

What is this but a picture of a world in disorder—a world preparing itself, as it were, for some gigantic and social metamorphosis which no man may comprehend and which the visionary resort to prophesy to interpret? It may be the prelude, a few may say, to that overwhelming orgasm which is to introduce the millenium. It may be, alas! the handwriting upon the wall which betokens the downfall of free institutions throughout the globe. It may be, let us rather hope, a token of that coup de grace to despotism which events are about to precipitate, in order to give the spirit of human liberty one more chance to fold its weary wings over all mankind.

For the Crisis.

Michigan Camp Meeting.

To the brethren of Northern Michigan, and all who love the appearing of Jesus and his kingdom. To redeem a former pledge, and from a sense of duty to the cause of God at this time, I write to call attention once more to this gathering of God's waiting children. The notice of this meeting, given by Bro. Seymour, in behalf of the saints at large, being full and explicit and persuasive, even beyond our our ability to have done, yet expressive of our heart's desire, would seem to set aside the necessity of any further effort to induce our fellow men, especially the household of faith, to leave their respective farms, shops, and various occupations, and come aside for a few days to engage in the work of saving souls. But, knowing that temptations surround us, and that to many a camp life, even for a short time, will seem impracticable, I hope to be able, in presenting a few facts, to turn the scale with such as may have had alternate hopes and fears of the result of our anticipated gathering in Holly.

You will call to mind, brethren, the many times you have wished, in seeing notices of camp meetings in other portions of the country, that it was in your power to attend one such meeting before the Lord's appearing. How that nothing but the want of means to defray expenses has prevented your spending a week, or more, with the heirs of the kingdom soon to be revealed. That barrier is wholly removed from all in this section, and partially so from the brethren throughout the State. But it will be attended with some trouble and expense. Certainly; we cannot serve God without doing something. We ought not to 'forsake the assembling of ourselves together, . . . but exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching." Present signs, so abundant in our land, and the crisis we have now reached in this world's history, seem to warrant us in looking for the Son of man at almost any hour. Time hastens, and a wicked world is passing swiftly with the current. A few more struggles with the enemy, a few more efforts to save perishing mortals, and all will be hushed. The meek, the pure in heart, the faithful will inherit the earth made new, and the wicked will sleep in death till their final awaking and everlasting destruction. Solemn thought! that our work will so soon be done, and we, as well as our neighbors around us, receive according to our works.

It is only by conquest, dear brethren, that we shall obtain an inheritance in the "world to come." Shall we refuse to enlist, and come up to the battle-field for a little while? Can we not arrest some souls in their downward course, and point them to Jesus, their only refuge, even during our Camp meeting? Are any tempted and tried—dissatisfied with their past unfruitfulness, or present enjoyment and hope of eternal glory? Come to the meeting. Are any who read the Crisis, or should see the notice, or hear of the meeting, and almost persuaded to become christians, come. O come to the place of prayer—come trusting in Jesus, your only Advocate—come determined to give up all for Christ and a home soon in the kingdom; and, ere the meeting closes, you may be made happy in God's love, and fit subjects for the earth made new. O come, brethren and sisters, and engage perhaps for the last time, before we meet in that solemn assembly, in prayer, in exhortation, and in singing and preaching the last message to mankind, ere Jesus shall come to sit on the throne of his glory. We have long desired to see in person the "Captain of our salvation," and share in the pensions promised to faithful soldiers. A little beyond the present strife of nations, beyond the "battle of the great day of God Almighty," is an eternal inheritance "under the whole heaven." Do you want a home therein—a place among the good and holy of all ages? In your solitary moments, when the sweet spirit of Christ has twined around your hearts, and whispered to you to leave the popular haunts of sin, to come unreservedly [to] Christ and secure life eternal, have you [not] wished that you were more perfect—that you were more holy—that you were pure in heart, or that you were a christian?—that you could attend one more social meeting of God's dear people, share in their prayers and tears for sinners sinking down to death, and make one more effort to reach eternal joys? Come, then, all who can, to the camp meeting to work for Christ—to enjoy a season of love—to tell of your hopes of heaven—your willingness to give up all for Christ, and labor for the salvation of your families, your neighbors, and all that are willing to be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

Holly Mills, Mich. A. F. SERVIS.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 21, 1861.

Wilbraham Camp Meeting.

TO THE SAINTS SCATTERED ABROAD:—Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Again the rallying cry has gone forth for our people to gather upon the old battle ground on Wilbraham Mountain, and never, in the history of the warfare, did the call so thrill my soul as now. We have heard almost nothing else for months past but the clang of arms, and seen but liitle else than the mighty preparations for grim visaged war and carnage. Our hearts are pained and wrung with sorrow at the terrible ordeal through which our country is passing, and at the accounts which are constantly reaching us from its various battle-fields. But these are fields of blood, and "death and hades follow in their train." How pleasant the thought, how blessed the privilege, that we may retire for a season from the arena of strife to the old spiritual battle-fields, where many a hard fought contest with the powers of the "darkness of this world" has been held and won; the victims of our conquering leaders not bathed in their own gore, but "washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb." These are the circumstances under which we are to meet the present year. How different from anything in our past history! With what proportions does our glorious hope loom up as we see the culmination of the unfailing record of this world's destiny—the light which has led us, like a "lamp in a dark place," for these weary years!

God has evidently risen up "out of his place to punish" this nation "for her iniquity," and this is a part of the great programme of the "breaking up of nations" and the downfall of dynasties. Soon will come the "time of Jacob's trouble" (Jer. 30: 7). How appropriate that the servants of the Prince of Peace should meet together where this world's strife may for a season be forgotten, if possible, and the grand and glorious themes of Life and Immortality through the coming and kingdom of Messiah, with kindred themes and subjects of the "work of the holy Spirit" and personal preparation for the great change now so imminently near, may occupy our time and thoughts. I anticipate a most glorious meeting, for everything in heaven above and in the earth beneath is now vindicating our great distinguishing doctrines, and there can be no lack of themes for our preachers, or subjects of thought for the people.

My dear brethren, let us gird up our loins to the work before us—make almost any reasonable sacrifice of ease, or comfort, or expense, to meet in the tented grove. I know the times are hard, and money is scarce; but a little self-denial and a good deal of moral courage will overcome any obstacle. The Lord will open the way for you; if you commit it unto Him, "He will direct your paths." We may never find it easier to attend camp meeting on this side the New Earth state, for we are among the last throes of this old agonized earth, and soon she will emerge from the fires and cleansings of the last day troubles, all purified and prepared for her glorious future destiny under the "the second Adam—the Lord from heaven." I do not mean that anything but sickness or death shall prevent my being at that camp meeting, if it please the Lord to permit it. I trust that we shall all make fervent prayer for the blessing of our heavenly Father upon it, that it may be like the "great day of the feast," when "Jesus stood and cried, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." Let us come together to labor for the good of perishing souls—come baptized into one Spirit, even the Spirit of Faith and perfect love, and it cannot but be a profitable, a successful, a triumphant meeting. Now let us all unite and say, By the grace of God I will go to Wilbraham Camp meeting, and labor for Him as I never labored before, and victory and success are ours.

R. E. L.

Our readers will accept the above, from the pen of Bro. Ladd, as our Camp Meeting editorial for this week. Many pressing cares have left us no time to write an article on the subject, but our dear brother L. has said the right things in the right way, and we cheerfully and heartily say, Amen. Our hope and prayer is, that the God of our fathers may meet with us at Wilbraham—blessing abundantly the labors of all who come to the meeting to do His will.

Following this is an article on the subject of the Camp Meeting by Bro. Munger, who, it will be seen, is "going to be" there "as usual." While he is "at work for the meeting" with his hands, on the ground, let those who cannot do this, show their "zeal" for its welfare by "laboring fervently" for it in the way Epaphras did for his brethren at Colosse while he was with Paul in Rome. See the closing portion of Paul's letter to the Colossians.

Wilbraham Camp Meeting.

The letters I have received, asking various questions about this meeting, had better be answered through the Crisis. I am going to be at the meeting as usual. Have not withdrawn, or lost my interest in the meeting. Am now at work for the meeting, under the direction of the Committee, making arrangements to accommodate all that come. It is a Second Advent meeting, as usual. The present Committee are our old, tried brethren and servants of God and the church, or they would not have taken upon them the drudgery of the Committee.

There is provision made for strangers and pilgrims as to tent room, but not for bedding. I have hired two large tents for strangers, by request of the Committee, which they probably forgot to notice; so come on, don't be frightened before you are hurt. All can have their tent places and frames, except some will have to be put back a few feet to enlarge the circle. Come on with your tents, or send them Monday, if you wish, in my care, until you can come. If you have a tent, send it along, or bring it. If there are only two or three of you, it shall be pitched for you without expense.

P. S. You or any one else can buy provisions without being cooked as cheap here as at home, and we have an extra stove and kettle on purpose to accommodate with hot water. So come on, you old pilgrims; I will help you economize.

J. G. There are neighbors near by that lodge for moderate prices.

N. K. Your rheumatism will be none the worse for sleeping in the woods; probably better; so come on, you may have a place in the preacher's stand to sleep, if you bring your own blanket.

We expect a good, peaceable time, as usual. The Camp of God's people on Wilbraham Mountain has never been bombarded yet, and our fortifications are yet good. Come on children to battle once more. It may be the last.

HIRAM MUNGER.

P. S.—Bro. Wendell says, in the last Crisis, my P. O. address is Chicopee. Hiram Munger lives at Chicopee Falls, Ms. If any wish to pitch their tents Saturday, they will be safe over Sunday, as we shall be on the ground from Saturday to Monday. Those near by would do well to pitch Saturday, and give our friends a shelter a few hours that come from a distance, while their tents are being pitched. Don't forget your bedding.

H. M.

Chicopee Falls, Aug. 17, 1861.

The Faithful Servant.

"Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

In the parallel passage to this, as recorded by Luke, the plural "servants" is used instead of the singular as in Matthew. "Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching."—Luke 12: 37. We are to understand, therefore, that the language designates a class, not a single man or person.

That it does not refer to persons living at the first advent, is evident from the whole connection. The general character of the subject forbids our making an application to the apostles, or disciples of our Lord; it belongs to a later age. That this is so, is seen from Luke 13: 35–48, where, after Christ had spoken of the servant giving meat in due season, the following conversation took place between Peter and the Savior: "Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all? And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his Lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing." Now it is evident, from this passage, that the servant referred to, is the one living when the Master cometh. Peter's anxiety was to know whether the Lord referred to all the servants, or some particular class or part of them. The answer is, it is that servant that shall be found giving meat in due season; and as if this was not sufficiently definite, he says, "Blessed" is he that shall be doing so when I come. However true it may be that God's faithful servants have been blessed in every age, in consideration of their faithfulness, it does not change neither does it weaken the fact, that a special blessing will rest upon those servants who are found faithfully discharging their duties when the Savior shall come the second time.

But what are we to understand by this giving of meat in due season? The word meat here means food of all kinds. When the Bible was translated into English, it included, as the original does, "all kinds of provisions requisite to support and nourish life." To give meat, or to be found giving meat, is to be found imparting such instruction as will nourish the church. "Feed," says the apostle, "the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Peter was commanded to "feed the lambs"; and Paul speaks of himself and brethren as "stewards of the mysteries of God." It is, perhaps, expressed in the phrase "Preach the word."

But while the duty of giving meat involves the idea of preaching all the truth, it does not alter the fact that some kinds of food may be needed much more than others. All truth is important, but some portions of truth are more vitally so than others. Now it is evident, in the connection in which the blessing is found, that there is an importance attached to the knowledge and proclamation concerning the coming of Christ. If this be not so, why is the evil servant spoken of as saying in his heart, "My Lord delayeth his coming"? It would seem that the good servant, unlike his compeer, says that the Lord is coming. This, without doubt, is the case; for else what can the good servant say, when he sees in the signs of the times sufficient evidence to warrant him in lifting up the head, knowing that his redemption draweth nigh? It is morally impossible for him to see the day approaching, and at the same time be silent as to the matter. If he sees redemption coming, he at the same time sees destruction coming on the enemies of the Lord; and how can it be said of him that he gives meat in due season, unless he warns men of the impending judgment? Due season, is proper season, when it is needed; and when can that be other than when he sees the end approaching? He may preach everything else, but if he leave this out, his ministrations will be deficient in that aliment which is absolutely necessary in order to the healthy growth of the body, and without which the church must suffer. The fact is, it is a part of the servant's duty in the last generation to proclaim the speedy advent of the Son of God. This question cannot be ignored by those whose minds have been enlightened. Disappointment may follow disappointment, yea, we may suffer defeat a score of times; but yet, the heart will cling to and cherish this hope of the Savior's coming. The believer sees that, if the Master does not come, the future is dark; that death is an eternal sleep. His only hope is in the return of Christ; the coming again of this same Jesus—the Lord himself, and not another. The more this hope is despised by a formal church and a popular ministry, the more vigilant he is in guarding it. He has found the pearl of great price; he has sold all that he had in order to purchase it; to deprive him of it now, would leave him bankrupt—he would be of all men the most miserable. He, like the martyrs of old, could submit to be outlawed, to be deprived of the blessings of society, to have his property confiscated, his friends torn from him, and be deprived of the blessings of society; but to deprive him of the hope of his Master's return, would be to take away his Lord, and burden his heart, even while life continued, with the dread of certain annihilation.

"Blessed is that servant," etc. The Savior, who saw the end from the beginning, knew, that to declare this truth, and occupy the position demanded by the fulfillment of the signs, would require not only faith, but a courageous faith—a faith that fires could not burn and waters could not drown; hence the blessing is a special blessing which is to rest upon the faithful servant. The trials of his position are, in part, occasioned by the ill treatment he receives at the hand of the evil servant, on account of proclaiming the speedy coming of Christ. Dr. Clarke, in speaking of the evil servant, says, "He has little or no faith in the speedy coming of Christ, either to punish for wickedness, or to pardon and sanctify those who believe. It may be, he does not outwardly profess this, but he says it in his heart, and God searches his heart, and knows that he professes to teach what he does not believe." He oppresses his colleagues; he smites his fellow servants because they are doing what he, in heart, is denying—they are proclaiming Christ's speedy advent. Amid the trials of the last times, and the perils of the last days, God says to his faithful ones, "Blessed are those servants, who shall be found giving meat in due season." In these words there is comfort and assurance. The faithful servant may not get all the comfort and ease which is secured and enjoyed by him who denies the Master's coming, but what he does not get in fact, he enjoys in anticipation. The approval of heaven he already has, and he can afford to wait a little for the life and immortality. He sees in his Savior a friend, and, in his return, an event that puts a period to all his sufferings. He knows that the event brings with it the resurrection of the dead, the rewarding of the saints and the prophets, and "all that fear his name, small and great," when "they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." To meet with his approval, to hear him say, "Come ye blessed of my father," we must be faithful. No compromise of the truth, but a faithful presentation of it in all its parts, and then shall the blessing, which is to be conferred on the faithful servant, be ours—He will make us rulers over all that he hath.

J. H. B.

ERRATUM.—In J. T. Curry's late reply to T. M. Preble, 3d column 5th line read "haven" instead of "heaven."

Scoffers.

The writer in the "Daily News," whose article we give elsewhere, denounces as "visionary" those who resort to "prophecy" for an interpretation of passing events in this "troubled," "convulsed," "trembling," "agitated," "excited" world! In doing this he but fulfills a portion of that unerring Word which portrays the times in which we live. "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming?" These "scoffers" will have no sympathy with those who believe that the regeneration of this groaning earth is at hand, and that the Lord Jesus is about to sway the sceptre of universal dominion. God pity them in their blindness. While the scoffers do their appropriate work, let us who look for the Savior's speedy coming be as faithful in doing ours. And though the unbelieving call us "visionary," we shall "do well" if we "take heed" unto the "sure word of prophecy, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place." The now dawning day of glory and deliverance will, when it comes, vindicate the waiting attitude of the suffering church of God while they unceasingly pray, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

To Our Subscribers.

We hope all our friends who are in arrears on subscription will make an effort to remit what is due us as early as possible. We shall be glad also to receive what is due us for Books and Tracts. It is hoped that a goodly number of our patrons will find it convenient to pay their subscriptions at the Camp Meeting next week. The receipts of a newspaper office are made up of small sums, and no subscriber should feel that his or her indebtedness to the office could cause no embarrassment, for if all felt thus, and acted accordingly, we should find our hands tied at once. Better for all who can to act as if the issue of the paper depended wholly upon their promptness in meeting their obligations.

"ETERNAL DEATH IN THE LITERAL SENSE IS ETERNAL PUNISHMENT."—Hudson's New Tract with this title—24 pp., 12 mo.—is being stereotyped, and will be ready for Wilbraham Camp Meeting. As might be expected, it is a capital thing, and will richly reward the most careful perusal—yes, study. Since our last issue we have received the following remittances for the Tract: monies hereafter sent for it will be acknowledged only among our cash receipts for Books and Tracts. D. W. Patterson $1.00; G. and C. H. Sutton $1.00; H. B. Gilbert, 25 cts.; "A Friend," 50 cts.

Orders hereafter received will be filled at the regular price of the Tract; what that is to be Bro. Hudson will please immediately inform us. Those who have not paid their pledges are desired to do so at once.

☞ Bro. A. N. Seymour, in the Camp meeting notice found in another column, writes:—"Cannot Bro. Grant come to Michican and attend our camp meeting? Or, if he cannot, may not some efficient brother be able to come over and help us? Perhaps some one may be coming west at that time; if so, let us know."

Bro. G. informs us that he cannot attend. Other brethren will observe what Bro. S. says.

☞ ROSWELL D. SPENCER, whose P. O. address is East Haddam, Ct., wants the Crisis of May 8th, 1861 (No. 9 of the present volume) to complete his file. Will some reader who has that No. to spare please mail it to Bro. S.? We have not an extra copy at this office.

A Fast.

In accordance with our usual custom, we would propose to those interested in our great annual campmeeting at Wilbraham, that Friday, Aug. 23d, be observed as a day of fasting and prayer, when earnest petitions shall be made to the Lord, that great good may result from our contemplated feast of tabernacles. Never have we, as a people, needed special help from the Lord more than at the present hour. In these perilous times, let us remember that all our help must come from Him.

For the Committee, M. GRANT.

"The Bread of Life"—A New Work.

The following letter, though not designed for publication, will explain itself. We have received the "copy" of the work Bro. Shepherd sent us, but have not had time to read it. We were exceedingly pleased with it when we heard it delivered in the form of a discourse, and have no doubt but that the new matter which has been added has enhanced the value of the production. We trust it may have a ready sale and cause many to renounce all hopes of the future that have not their foundation in Him who is "the bread of life."

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—I send you per this mail an unfinished copy of my work—"The Bread of Life." It will be ready in a few days, with a neat cover, etc. My object in sending now, before completed, was in order, if possible, to have it noticed, if you would be so kind, before the Camp Meeting. Will you please examine it and give it such notice as duty may suggest. You will find that since you heard it in the form of a discourse, there have been many important additions made and some striking points brought out of similarity existing between Joseph and Christ, together with those notes taken from A. Clarke's Commentary.

The work will be furnished as follows:—Single copies, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; twelve copies, 75 cts.; and $5.50 per one hundred, all prepaid. My address is ELD. WILLIAM SHEPHERD, Newark, New Jersey.

I do not claim for this work any thing more than it is—a plain and simple presentation of the truth as it is in Jesus, setting forth the Lord Jesus Christ in his true light to a lost, perishing and dying race of mortals, showing what his real mission was to this fallen world, namely, that he came to give life unto the same. You will no doubt appreciate it, and agree with me perhaps in every point laid down, and believe also that, under the blessing of God, it is a work calculated to do good.

If I was able, dear brother, I would send a parcel for the Crisis office, should they be acceptable, in return for the paper you send me. But my means are extremely small, and getting this work out involves me no little, as you are somewhat acquainted with the cost of publishing works, let them be ever so small. It is highly necessary that I realize something nice immediately, in order to meet my obligations in relation to this work. You see then how it is with me, brother. It is a struggle with me as it was with Paul—"without were fightings and within were fears"; but with him, by the grace of God, "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus," and intend to even until He comes whose right it is, and the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given unto him, and he shall reign in triumph over universal empire; and may God afford each of us grace to overcome, and finally reign with Messiah in the coming age of millennial blessedness and glory. Amen.

I expect, God willing, to attend the Camp Meeting, and we shall speak face to face. Peace be with thee.

Your brother and companion in tribulation and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ. Grace be with you all. Amen.

WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 17, '61.

For the Crisis.

Book Notices.

Disquisition on the Prophecies, by Francis H——. Boston: published by the Author. 64 pp. 12mo.

A neatly executed pamphlet, containing a brief summary of Prophecies fulfilled at Christ's Advent; Prophecies concerning Abraham and his seed; The overthrow of the kingdom of Israel; Prophecies concerning individuals; Prophecies concerning Babylon, Tyre, Egypt, Jerusalem; Prophecies of Daniel, etc. etc. The work is elementary and comprehensive, and will be of much interest to those who are not provided with more extensive works on the subject.

H. L. H.

PAULINE THEOLOGY.—Being often asked what I consider the best work to put in the hands of a common reader, to give at once a clear and comprehensive view of the theory of life and immortality only through Christ, I unhesitatingly answer, Hastings' "Pauline Theology." Of all the minor works, I have never read any thing that I thought would compare with Pauline Theology. It is evidently the master-piece of H. L. H.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, by D. T. Taylor, I have from the first considered as a work of incomparable value to such as would know the truth upon the question of Christ's reign upon the earth; a sine qua non; should be in the possession of all who love the appearing of Christ, and would thoroughly post themselves on the subject. Evidently this is not the time for publishing, but a good time for reading.

I wish also to say, that our friends will not forget that they can obtain what will be suitable to read and circulate at the present time, by sending for the sermon entitled "The Coming Conflict, with the inquiry, Ought Christians to bear Arms?" It was published in this form to better aid its circulation. Several hundred have been scattered by brethren in Boston. Price $3 per hundred, or 5 cents single copy, without postage. Orders for the Discourse may be addressed to me.

Boston. P. B. MORGAN.

For the Crisis.

Books and Berries.

I will take any kind of dried fruits, berries, etc., in exchange for any of my Books and Tracts, or as donations on the Tract fund; (to accommodate those who hav'nt got money these hard times); provided the articles can be sent me free of expense to Boston, Providence, or New York this fall or winter.

H. L. HASTINGS.

For the Crisis.

Inquiry.

Will some one give an explanation of the 9th of Romans? When comparing it with passages like Rev. 22: 17, Matt. 11: 28–30, I find it hard to reconcile. J. B.

He that is first in his own cause seemeth just; but his neighbor cometh and searcheth him. Prov. 18: 17.

For the Crisis.

Notice.

I expected to come to your Camp meeting again this year, but have finally concluded to attend the yearly conference in Indiana, and travel awhile in that state. One object I had in view in coming East, was to collect, where brethren have sold works, what was left with them; but, as I do not come, I send the amount of each brother's account to Bro. Wendell, who will have it at the Camp meeting, and receipt, or keep an account of, whatever is paid to him for me.

As the hard times have prevented my selling books, or receiving anything for labors for four months, and as I cannot collect from the West, owing to the failure of banks, in addition to the troublous times, I am in real need, and affectionately ask brethren to pay at the Camp meeting, or send soon to Bro. Wendell what may be due me on works sold. J. BLAIN.

Buffalo, Aug. 13, 1861.

Gleanings from Letters.

SAMUEL CURRY, New York, writes:—"Having read the Crisis for the year past, I can truly say I like it. My prayer is that you may experience the rich blessing of God in editing it."

F. J. HESS writes:—"We like the Crisis very much; it is a welcome messenger to us, for it is the most faithful interpreter of the Scriptures we have. We in this place who are watching for the Lord's return are a little band, numbering only about eighteen or twenty—too few to present much front to the enemy, though we are obliged to encounter error in all its might. The same spirit of blind opposition to the truth that manifests itself elsewhere, is active in our community. Yes, in our own family the Scriptures are literally fullfiled—'a man's foes shall be they of his own household,' and 'there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three.' Matt. 10:36; Luke 12:52."

Mrs. A. STILLMAN, North Pownal, Vt., writes:—"I send you $2 to renew my subscription to the Crisis. I feel that I could not do without it."

Mrs. M. W. MENDENHALL, Wilmington, Del., writes:—"The paper is a great comfort to us. We cannot feel satisfied by the preaching we hear in this place, so we spend our Sabbaths at home, with the Crisis for our preacher. There are none here that we know of who believe as we do. Our Crisis, we suppose, is the only one that comes here. We have passed it round several times, hoping to get some one interested in the truth, but our view in regard to the destiny of the wicked seems to condemn the whole paper at once. May their eyes be opened soon."

A. W. LLOYD, Otis, writes:—"Enclosed please find $2 for the Crisis. I hope to be able to send you more soon, if the Lord will. The Lord be with you, and enable you faithfully to discharge your duty in giving 'meat in due season' to the household of faith, is the prayer of your brother in Christ."

Sr. C. E. ROBINSON, Minnesota City, sends the names of four new subscribers, with $3 in cash, and writes:—"I address you for the first time since you became editor of our blessed paper, the Crisis. God help you to give us meat in due season. I see that you still ask readers to help in this good work to arouse a sleeping world. I have ever felt ready to do all I could. I have got a few to subscribe for the Crisis. You may call A. A. W. a subscriber for life; he expects to be one as long as he and the paper live. Bro. M. is just coming out from the Methodists, and Bro. Allen I think we can call an Advent preacher, although he has not been among the Advent preachers much of late."

J. W. IRELAND, Bangor, writes:—"I hardly know what to say, but this much I know—I am in a land of trouble, pain and death. When will my sorrows be over? When shall I live in that land of glory bright, where the trials of this world will never come? Glory to God for the hope within me, although I am in bondage as to the things of this world. Six months ago I looked forward to the time when I could say, I owe no man any thing; but a new and prevalent disease entered my family circle three months since, and we have not recovered yet; my debts have accumulated to twice what they were before; therefore I have to request that you discontinue the Crisis to me, for it gives me pain when I think I am taking that which I do not pay for. I can send you one dollar, which you will find enclosed in this; the balance due I will send as soon as possible. I shall expect the Crisis to be discontinued to me for the present. I shall miss its weekly visits. May God bless the Editor and conductors of the paper. Yours, looking for eternal life."

"A FRIEND" sends us 50 cents towards publishing Hudson's Tract and $1.50 for us "to appropriate where it will do the most towards spreading the truth," and says—"The Crisis has been a welcome messenger to me for about two years, and I am happy to say still continues to be so."

Bro. J. S. BOYD, of Philadelphia, writing from Groton Junction, Mass., says:—"I desire for one to say, that I rejoice to see latterly that the columns of the Crisis are opened to a free canvassing of the truth-seeking inquiries, pro. and con. I trust, therefore, while the paper is conducted under your editorial care, that the inquiry, What is truth? will be thoroughly investigated, as to who will live again by a resurrection from the dead. Let us become, as the Savior prayed that his disciples should be, "sanctified through the truth," and the truth will make us 'free indeed.' Your brother in the blessed hope of the gospel."

Correspondence.

From Bro. Franklin Douglass.

BRO. WENDELL:—It is now three weeks since we received the ever welcome Crisis. We learned by way of Sr. Goodell's paper that the receipts were not paying expenses. We expected last week's paper, as it was to contain a particular statement of the financial condition of the paper. We have not felt able to pay for the paper since Jane was taken sick. It costs a great deal for oils, etc., to keep her limbs from drawing up any more, if they do not straighten. Business here is very dull, and I think I shall be obliged to seek a new place in consequence. I want to be at liberty to go and proclaim the gospel to dying men. Jane is getting stronger, though still unable to stand on account of contraction.

Well, brother, your heart and hands are full of work. Methinks the office in which you were engaged in Albany would be almost a recreation, were you there now. But your work is a noble one. Are you weary? Look ahead! rest is promised. Is thy heart overburdened till it almost faints? Cheer up; it will soon be ever joyous. I see by the Crisis that two aged pilgrims, whose voices I have been privileged to hear in prayer and exhortation, are now wrapped in Death's slumbers. How they must be missed! The band were few, but now still less. I hope others will find the way and fill their places. It would do my heart good to see your face once more. I believe the feeling would be reciprocal.

Adventism here is at a low ebb. There have been many things to scatter a once numerous band of happy worshippers. A sect called Apostles sprang up, and a few now follow their teachings. It would do my heart good to hear Advent preaching. The Lord has been very good to us. The crucible of affliction has tried the purity of our faith. It has been good for us. We have a strong, abiding hope. Every day the Bible unfolds fresh thoughts to my mind. May it never lose its present charms.

I often thidk of you and yours, and that little daughter of affection. I greatly desire to be at Wilbraham, but do not now expect to for want of means. Please find one dollar enclosed for the Crisis. Please send the two last numbers. If you have not yet received the Crisis of February 2d, 1859, as requested, we can send it to you. Joyfully pressing on, I remain your brother in Christ.

Oswego, Aug. 12, 1861.

NOTE.—We have received the No. for Feb. 2, 1859—Bro, D. need not, therefore, send it. For the information of Bro. D., and other personal friends to whom we have not had time to write, we will add that Mrs. W. has been for three weeks prostrated with the severest illness of her life. By the blessing of God, she is now steadily recovering. It is quite doubtful whether she will be able to see Wilbraham this year, though she greatly desires to attend the meeting. Our "daughter" is in perfect health. Pray for us.

From Eld. P. S. W. Deyo.

BRO. WENDELL:—Knowing that the friends in the west are watching the movements of the cause here in this new field; and believing that they should hear from the pioneers that are sounding the gospel trumpet, I sit down to write a report of our tent meeting, etc. I started the 9th of July, and preached on my way to two churches of the christian order, who seemed anxious to hear more about this way. I arrived at Floyd the 11th, and found Bro. Chandler there as expected. Our meeting began with good prospects of increase both in numbers and interest, and so it proved. Preaching brethren present were M. Chandler, H. H. Jones, C. Churchill, A. J. Cottrell, L. G. Phelps, A. Duran, besides a good turn out of the brethren. The first one closed on Sunday evening by surrounding the table of the Lord, where over 50 partook of the Lord's Supper; then adjourned until the next Friday evening. In the interval we were to visit three other churches at these places—had a good time. We tried to strengthen the flock, and then returned to our tent and commenced the meeting again, and closed on Sunday evening with a very solemn time; while the parting hand was given bedewed with tears of affection, having the blessed hope, if we meet no more in this state, we may in that which is to come. Although there were none baptized, yet we believe the churches were established in the present truth. There were in all twenty sermons preached at the different points.

Two of our churches are suffering by the war spirit; and it is strange to me that brethren will contend for war and go there when our faith brings us where we should occupy a different position. Now bear with me while I state my position, which I think should be that of all who are looking for a universal monarchy—the kingdom of God. We have in the solemn ordinance of baptism taken the oaths of allegiance to that King and kingdom. We are not citizens; we are foreigners and pilgrims, protected here by this government as such, and belong to another community—being translated from the kingdom of darkness *for the kingdom of his dear Son. We can be legal citizens and not fight. We are in a free government, and are exempt from martial duty by giving our oath that we have religious scruples, as do the Quakers; then pay the tax that may be imposed on us; render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's. Every lover of God and liberty cannot help looking upon this war with a wish that those in bondage may be set free, as the result of the war; but when we see that the Bible says, all nations are to be gathered in battle, and it has been thought that the United States would never be brought into that prophecy, yet we see it being fulfilled; and, as we look for the Lord in the midst of a battle scene, we should not be connected with it, for as a snare it will come on all the world to try them. I hope we may all keep clear from it, and aloof from the world, having on all the armor of righteousness, and our loins girt about with truth, and waiting for the Son of man from heaven to change our vile body and fashion it like his glorious body. Amen. Even so come, Lord Jesus. Farewell.

Strawberry Point, July 31, 1861.

*See Barnes' Notes.

NOTE.—The above letter was in type before we discovered that the last paragraph was devoted to the discussion of the war question. We mention this to prevent the suspicion that we knowingly disregard our recent decision to let the subject rest a little while.—EDITOR.

Obituary Notices.

Fell asleep in Jesus at Amherst, Me., July 23d, 1861, HATTIE JANETTE, daughter of Isaiah P. and Lucy B. Haynes, aged four years one month and sixteen days.

They buried Hattie on their farm, by the side of a brother and sister who sleep and wait for the trump of God to sound. Then sweet Hattie will come forth, made immortal, to die no more. She will then sing, "O, grave, where is thy victory?" A discourse was preached by the writer, from Ezk. 37:13. In this hour of severe trial, of sorrow and affliction, I would say to the friends, mourn not as those that have no hope. May you learn to put your trust in Jesus, for he has said to all the little sleepers, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

"We wept to see thee die—
We mourn thy absence yet,
Oh may we meet thee in the sky,
And there our tears forget."

L. WETHERBEE.

Died, at Northfield Falls, June 19th, 1861, LORENZO D. THOMPSON, aged thirty-eight years, one month and five days.

His native place was Horam, County of Oxford, State of Maine. His early life was one of privation and suffering. His mother, whom I have often heard him speak of with tender affection, died of consumption when he was about twelve years old. He was the oldest of five children. When about fourteen he was solemnly impressed with conviction for sin against God, but did not fully yield until he was about seventeen, and very soon after felt it his duty to labor publicly in the cause of God. He embraced the precious doctrine of the speedy coming of Christ in 1843, at Kingston, N. H., Campmeeting. He was sadly disappointed in 1843 and '44, when the time passed, but did not give up his hope.

He was ordained to the work of the ministry at Newport, Vt., Oct. 20th, 1848. Sermon by Eld. B. S. Reynolds, prayer by Eld. Ira Bowles, and the charge by Elder Samuel Thurber. He preached his last sermon at Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 17th, 1861, came home the 19th sick, and, with the exception of short intervals, when he seemed better, continued to fail while he lived.

His disease was consumption of the bowels, caused by ulceration of the same. His left lung was diseased, but his physicians thought they might have healed it had it not been for his other complaints. His sufferings were dreadful at times, but he bore all with lamblike patience. Not a murmur escaped his lips. At one time, speaking of the warfare he had maintained against the world, the flesh and the devil, he said, "I have gained the victory. There is a crown of glory laid up for me;" then added, "Yes, O yes, glory to God!" The night before his death, after a severe paroxysm of distress, he said, reaching his hand to me, "Good bye, Betsey; I believe I am going." He then said, "Call the children." When they came, he took each by the hand, kissed us all, and said, "don't cry." He continued to breath until eleven o'clock the next day, then sweetly fell asleep without a struggle or a groan. O, when will the morning come!

BETSEY E. THOMPSON.

Died, in Richmond, Me., May 31st, 1861, Sister ESTHER ANN BAILEY, aged thirty-four years, wife of Joseph W. Bailey. Her disease was consumption.

Sister Bailey embraced the faith of Christ's reign on the earth and immortality only through him, under the labors of Eld. Hermon Stimson, in the first of his preaching the Advent doctrine. Since her acceptance of Christ she led an exemplary christian life, hoping very soon to see her Savior. Her religion was her support while life ebbed slowly away. The Sabbath before she died several of the brethren and sisters called to see her, as they knew she was fast wasting away; and, as she was talking with them and exhorting them to meet her in the kingdom, some fell down before her, the power of God was so great, promising her that they would; and on this promise I hope they will think, and may it be a means, in the hands of God, of keeping them in readiness to meet our blessed Lord when he comes.

The brethren and sisters in that place have lost an exemplary christian and loving friend, but the loss of her dear husband who can tell? He sorrows in hope, and may God bless and watch over him; and when feelings of loneliness come upon him, may Jesus, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, be present with him to impart consolation; and may the six children that are left in his care be led to seek the Lord in early life, and prepare to meet that dear mother who has so often borne them to the throne of grace, and may this affliction be sanctified to all the surviving friends.

The funeral was attended by the writer, and a discourse was preached to the neighbors and friends from Job 14:11, 12; after which our dear Sister was carried to her resting place, to sleep until He who has the keys of death shall come and raise up all his sleeping ones, and may that day hasten on.

JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Died, in Norton, Aug. 6th, of inflammation of the stomach and bowels, my only brother, ENOCH M. BOSTON, son of Royal Boston, aged forty-three years, eleven months and twenty-two days.

The subject of this notice was a resident of Roxbury, and was a member of the Baptist church of that place. Truly, in the midst of life we are in death. Dear brethren and sisters of the Crisis, pray that this affliction may be sanctified to the future and everlasting good of the relatives of the deceased. We mourn not as those who have no hope, for in a little from this we expect to meet our loved ones, who now sleep in the cold grave, in the everlasting kingdom. O, thank God, in that blessed land I hope to meet my dear brother, also a dear mother and sister, who are sleeping in the silent tomb. There will be no more parting there.

Oh, what a glorious hope is ours. In that blessed land sickness and sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more. In view of that blessed day we ask with the poet—

"How long shall death the tyrant reign,
And triumph o'er the just?"

The answer to me is, until Jesus, the glorious Conqueror, comes and destroys death and him that hath the power of death, which is the devil. Sleep on, dear brother; I hope to meet you in that blest morning, when this mortal shall put on immortality. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory, "Oh! death, where is thy sting? Oh! grave where is thy victory?" R. BOSTON.

Died, in New Haven, Ct., Aug. 10th, little NATTIE, aged eleven months, of cholera infantum.

Thus sleeps our darling child, but we mourn not as others that have no hope, for we believe that Christ died and rose again, and we wait the result. G. W. DENNY.

Married.

In Savoy, Aug. 17th, by Eld. Wm. Blanchard, Mr. GEO. A. OTIS of Northfield, Mass., to Miss ELLEN E. MAYHEW, of Savoy, Mass.

Notices, &c.

GENERAL CAMPMEETING at Wilbraham, Mass.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL camp meeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, Aug. 26th, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 50 cents per day. Single meal,—breakfast or supper,—20 cents; dinner 25 cents. The boarding department this year is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same, will go to the support of the meeting. The fare is reduced to half price on the Western R. R., which will be $2 50 from Boston, for both ways. Fare is also reduced one half on the Vermont and Mass., and Conn. River R R., from Brattleboro, South Vernon, and intermediate stations. Camp meeting tickets should be called for at the above stations, which will be good for both ways.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to GEO. T. ADAMS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass., when they purchase their Western tickets for the camp ground. Those coming from Albany will pay full fare to the camp ground, and receive free return passes from the Camp meeting Committee. Those coming from North Adams, Pittsfield, and intermediate places, also from Worcester, and intermediate stations, will call for camp meeting tickets at the ticket office.

N. B. All who wish to take the cars from Boston for the camp meeting, should remember that they can obtain their tickets only of Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover street, where they may be obtained any day during the meeting. Cars, which stop at the camp ground, leave the Boston and Worcester depot, in Boston, at 7 o'clock, A. M., and 1.30 P. M.

The cars leave Springfield for the camp ground at 7.15 and 10 1-2 A. M., and 5 P. M.

F. H. BERICK, MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS, } Committee of Arrangements.

The camp ground at Wilbraham is pleasantly located in a neighborhood noted for sustaining good order, and for acts of kindness towards those who assemble there from year to year to worship the God of our fathers. We hope to see a goodly number of the Lord's dear children, and that much good will be accomplished. Those who were present last year will remember that the great object of the meeting was for the salvation of sinners, and the comfort of saints, and that the effort was greatly blessed. We hope that our brethren and sisters will come again this year, strong in the Lord, and bring their unconverted children and neighbors for the purpose of persuading them to be christians.

All who believe in Christ as our Savior, and are willing to labor for the salvation of sinners, are invited to take part in the meetings. We would earnestly request all to make this meeting a subject of special prayer, that many wanderers may be reclaimed, the saints greatly strengthened, and the name of the Lord magnified among the people.

Notice.

BRO. WENDELL:—Permit me a second time to request the Brother who wrote me for a copy of my discussion, from "Leonardsburgh, Delaware Co., Ohio," to give me his name.

Springville, Wis. W. SHELDON.

Conference.

There will be an Advent meeting in Union Hall, Nottingham, N. H., to commence Friday, at 5 o'clock, P. M., August 23d, and continue over the following Sunday. Come, brethren, to this meeting, ready to lend a helping hand to enlighten and save the lost. I expect to be there.

L. BOUTELL, for the Brethren.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a Grove Meeting in Amherst, Maine, on the farm of Francis Foster, in a beautiful grove, on the bank of Union River, commencing Thursday, Sept. 12th. Brn. John Billings, Israel Damon and D. A. Jones are expected to be present to preach the word of Life; also Bro. James Hemenway is invited to be present (James, will you come?) Also a cordial invitation is extended to all the ministering brethren, as this is a new field, and many have become interested and are anxious to have a Grove Meeting, and want to hear more concerning the gospel hope. We hope that the brethren and sisters will come, for doubtless there will be a large gathering. At this place there is a waking up and deep interest felt in all this region concerning the coming and kingdom of Jesus Christ. This meeting will commence Sept. 12th, and continue over the Lord's day. In behalf of the Church, L. WETHERBEE.

Notice.

The next Rhode Island Quarterly Conference will meet at Rocky Brook, R. I., the last Wednesday in September. An invitation has been extended to the Conference from Exeter, and Lafayette and Rocky Brook churches. According to my instructions from the Conference, I have located it at Rocky Brook. M. R. PHETTEPLACE, Clerk.

Campmeeting in Maine.

There will be a Campmeeting in Exeter, Me., near the old spot, by the Chamberlin meeting-house, commencing the first Monday in September next and continuing over the Sabbath. Brethren coming from the West by cars will stop at Newport, where there will be teams provided to convey them to the meeting. Those coming by water will come to Bangor, where they also will find teams in waiting. There will be a Boarding Tent on the ground to accommodate all who wish for board. We hope all who purpose to attend this meeting will be on the ground as early in the week as possible; and all who can will bring their tents and bedding as they will be very convenient for ourselves and for those who will not be able to bring them.

P. S. We shall meet the brethren on the steamboat wharf on the arrival of the first boat in the week, and if there are any who cannot come on that day, if they will inform us through the Crisis, or by private letter to D. E. Ireland, North Hermon, on what day they will be at Bangor, we will send a team for them. In behalf of the brethren,

DANIEL E. IRELAND, HOLIS COLE, NELSON PATTEN, } Committee.

Conference.

The Northern Illinois Conference of Adventists will be held in Shabbona, at Shabbona Grove, west side, near Bro. Norton's, commencing Sept. 4th, at 7 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. Bro. Chandler is expected with the New England mission tent. Provision will be made for those who cannot carry their provisions. All other preachers are invited to come. Come, dear brethren, in the name of the Lord, to labor for the salvation of men, for Jesus soon is coming. H. G. McCULLOCK, Secretary of Conference.

Tent Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a Grove Meeting on the old ground, at the south side of Peach Pond, in North Salem, N. Y., four miles south-east of Brewster's Station, on the Harlem R. R., commencing Wednesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., on the 4th day of September, and continuing over Sunday. Friends are invited to come, with tents and provisions. H. L. Hastings and others are expected to be present and preach the gospel of the kingdom of God. HACHALIAH BAILEY.

Camp Meeting.

A Camp Meeting will be held in the town of Sandisfield, eleven miles from Winsted depot, on the daily stage route from Winsted to Barrington, commencing Sept. 9th and continuing over the following Lord's day. Railroad fare from Hartford to Winsted $1.25; stage fare from Winsted to the camp ground 40 cents. Bro. H. L. Hastings is expected at this meeting, and others who are competent to meet the expectations of the people at such a meeting. We should be glad to extend a general invitation to the preaching brethren, with the assurance that they would be remunerated. We will say that the preachers who make the sacrifice to come, shall be provided for while here. Board for man and beast will be provided on reasonable terms. We hope to see all the brethren from the Farmington and Naugatuck valleys here, with their tents, to enjoy a feast in a dry and beautiful grove.

A. D. SMITH, HENRY SAGE, ALONZO WATERMAN, ABNER WEBSTER.

WM. A. FENN, in behalf of the Committee

Camp Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a Camp Meeting in the town of Dover, N. Y., about three miles from South Dover Station, Harlem R. R., three and one half miles from South Kent Station, Housatonic R. R., Conn., and one and a half miles west of Bull's Bridge, Housatonic River, to commence Sept. 10th, 1861, and held over the following Sunday. As this is a new field, and many have become interested, and are anxious to have a Camp Meeting, and want to hear more concerning the gospel hope, we hope that the preaching brethren will come filled with the Spirit of the gospel, and labor for the good of those that may come to this meeting. Brethren and sisters, also, come to labor; come with tents, and bedding and provisions as far as convenient. Arrangements will be made to keep horses, and also provide for those that cannot bring their own provisions.

All preaching brethren who may feel sent by the Lord to this meeting, we heartily invite to come.

STEPHEN B. MUNN, GEORGE L. TEEPLE, CHARLES GARDINER, HIRAM OLIVET, } Committee.

The Maine Annual Advent Conference.

The next session of this Conference will be held in Yarmouth, (in the Institute occupied by the Advent Church) Wednesday, Sept. 11th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren there intend to make ample provision for all the friends who attend. Those who come by cars, if on the Kennebec and Portland R. R., will leave the cars at Yarmouth Junction, about half a mile from the meeting. Those coming on the Waterville, Farmington, or Grand Trunk R. R., will leave at Yarmouth Station, a few rods from the meeting. Those coming from the Penobscot can take the boat to Portland, then the Grand R. R., eleven miles to Yarmouth. Call on George W. Harvey, George Humphrey, and R. R. York. It will be a good place for another friendly greeting of the pilgrims in this time of trouble. It may be the last. We hope to see all the Advent ministers of Maine who can work and worship in harmony and union, and as many other such brethren and sisters as can well attend.

H. B. SAVY, President.
L. C. WELCOME, Secretary.

Richmond, Me., Aug. 1st, '61.

Michigan Grove and Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a Grove and Campmeeting in the town of Holly, Oakland County, Michigan, to commence Sept. 4th, 1861, and continue over Lord's day, and longer if thought proper. The meeting is to be held on the farm of Bro Hiram Austin, five miles north and east of Holly Depot, situated on the Detroit and Milwaukie, R. R., and about one and a half miles east of the plank road leading from Holly to the city of Flint. And now, my dear brethren and sisters throughout the State of Michigan, I wish to give you all a short, but warm and earnest invitation to come to this gathering of the saints. As this is the first meeting of the kind ever held in the State, we do hope and pray most fervently that all brethren and sisters who can possibly arrange their domestic affairs, will come with tents and provisions to the encampment, and spend a week with each other in a warm-hearted love feast. The times call for such an assemblage. The signs in the natural, moral and political world are agitating multitudes, and they are inquiring, "What things are coming on the earth?" The times are most eventful. Our blessed Savior is soon coming on the earth, and now is a good time, my brethren, to work for God, for one another and for perishing humanity around us. Come, then, to this meeting; come with warm hearts; come filled with and praying in the Holy Ghost; come with a zeal worthy of the hope you cherish; come with Jesus stamped upon your affections; come abundantly prepared to take care of yourselves and others. Come from Grand Blanc, Flint, Saginaw, Flushing, Davison, Richfield, Tyrone, Pleasant Valley, Ypsilanti, Nankin, Grand Rapids, Detroit. Come from all over the State. This is not a sectional meeting because of peculiar views, but it embraces all that love the Lord's appearing and want to be saved when Jesus appears. Come, one and all, to glorify God, and come so as to be on the ground at the commencement of the meeting; do not fail in this. Let our noble and enterprising Sisters take hold of this cause and we are sure of success, by the blessing of God. Brethren Wolverton, Anable, Jerome, Roberts, Skinner, Doty, Richards, Adams, Austin, Servis, and the church generally through that section, are alive for such a gathering.

We hope to see as many of our preaching brethren from the different parts of the State as can come, and this invitation does not exclude any out of the State. We hope that if any of the servants of Christ in other States, or coming from the east about that time, will arrange to attend this meeting

In behalf of the church,
A. N. SEYMOUR.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Lovely Street, Ct. .... Aug. 25.
Wrightville .... Sunday, Sept. 8.
C. GOODRICH.

Plymouth Hollow, Ct. .... Sunday, Aug. 25.
B. StJOHN.

Bristol .... Sunday, Sept. 1.
LEWIS GUN.

New Britain .... Sunday, Aug. 25.
WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

Massena, N. Y. .... Sundays, Sept. 8th and 15th.
M. BATCHELOR.

Densmore Hill, Hartland, Vt. .... Aug. 25.
Cornish, N. H., (J. Deming's) .... Aug. 26.
Campton, N. H. .... Sept. 1.
Sandwich (Wm Shaw's School-house) .... Sept. 2.
L. C. GLAZIER.

Roxbury, Ct., (where Bro. Buckingham may appoint .... Aug. 25.
South Dover, N. Y. (at Bro. Olivit's) .... Aug. 30
Pawling, N. Y. .... Sept. 1.
Brewster Station .... Sept. 3.
T. S. CANFIELD.

Nottingham, N. H. .... Aug. 23d, 24th and 25th.
Lee, N. H. .... Aug. 30th, 31st and Sept. 1.
Monday, Sept. 2d, take boat for Bangor and Exeter Campmeeting, Me. L. BOUTELL.

Hartford, Ct. .... Sept. 8th.
Will further arrange with brethren who have requested my labors in Connecticut, at the Camp Meeting. P. B. MORGAN.

East Otis .... Aug. 25.
Chester Factories .... Aug. 27 and 28.
Dalton .... Sept. 1.
Wells Forge .... Sept. 8.
J. K. BELLOWS.

Danbury .... Sept. 1.
Tuftonborough .... Sept. 8.
Holderness, (Tabernacle) .... Sept. 15.
Barnstead, (Clark M. H.) .... Aug. 22.
T. W. PIPER.

Caroline Mills .... Aug. 25.
E. BELLOWS.

Portland, Me. .... Sunday, Aug. 25.
J. HEMENWAY.

Cheshire Street .... Sunday, Aug. 25.
S. B. MUNN.

Goshen .... Aug. 24th, 25th.
GEO. A. OTIS.

Springfield, Mass. .... Aug. 25.
GEO. CHAMPLIN.

East Great Works .... Aug. 25.
D. A. JONES.

East Barnsted, Clark Meeting House .... Aug. 25th.
B. P. MANNING.

Surry (Morgan's Bay) .... Aug. 25.
Carmel, Me., Union Meeting House, Sunday, Sept. 1st. THOMAS SMITH.

Business Matters.

The Treasurer of the "Wilbraham Camp Meeting Fund" acknowledges the payment of the following subscriptions:—

Geo. Noble .... $2.00.
Sarah Blanchard .... .50.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

Boston, Aug. 20th, 1861.

To Correspondents.

Simeon Spaulding: This pays to No. 338—end of next volume.
Dr. Rollins, Beaver Dam: All right—paid to 311.
Mrs. C. E. Robinson: Paid to No. 380—end of last volume.

Cash Receipts.

Mrs. M A Hanes, p. pd., 312, $1.25; Alv. Perkins 280, $1.50; H McHurry 321, 50 cts; H H Northey 312, $1.50; C W Smith, 2 copies, 341, 57 cts. W S Moulton 312, S McDaniel 308, H H Corbin 264, Mary A Pote 338, [illegible] 312, [illegible] 302, Jos. Egleston 352, T K Allen 332, [illegible] 332, Saml. [illegible], F Douglas, G W [illegible] 294, O H Mann 336, Mrs. C S Stanford 322, T D Daniels 322, Danl. Smith 334, W [illegible] 334, W Wheeler 327, L Bronson 334, W D Wood [illegible], M B Lyons 322, D S Lyons 322, [illegible] A Tillotson [illegible], [illegible] 334, R E Ballou 328, Wm. Shaw [illegible] [illegible]

Books and Tracts.

W A Toole [illegible] $1.40.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price, single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. B. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 30 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. [illegible]

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. [illegible]

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Elvin Burnham. [illegible]

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. [illegible]

Words of Warning. [illegible]

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Three Kingdoms; or the Kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ. [illegible]

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D.D. [illegible]

The Saint's Inheritance. [illegible]

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. [illegible]

The Wicked not Immortal. [illegible]

[illegible]

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

The Hope of the Church.—No. 8.

1. We might multiply proofs touching this point, but we have already lingered long on our first reason for examining so fully the question, "Who are meant by the house of Jacob?" and must pass on to our second.

2. The establishment of this point settles conclusively the fact that Christ did not sit on David's throne—did not commence his reign at his first advent. We have shown conclusively that to Christ, as David's successor, was promised the throne located on Mount Zion in Jerusalem—the throne from which Zedekiah was deposed—the throne that was overturned, overturned, overturned, until it ceased to be; and that the subjects over which he is to reign, when enthroned as King, are "the house of Jacob,"—that his disciples who were specially chosen to be apostles, are to be associated with him in this reign: "Ye also, in the regeneration, shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

We have from various scriptures shown that the gathering of this scattered house of Jacob is connected with this reign of David, and that it is spoken of as being in fulfillment of a former covenant made with their fathers. Their establishment in the land forever, with the accompanying blessings, shows that it is when the promise made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is fulfilled; and all goes to establish the fact of a literal reign of a literal King, on a literal throne in a literal Zion and literal Jerusalem, and must therefore necessarily be future, and at the second advent of Jesus Christ. All the prophecies relating to the time, and locality of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, will be found perfectly to harmonize with those already quoted. To say that Christ was a King, and set up his kingdom spiritually, at his first advent, destroys all their force and harmony. The times of the Gentiles are represented under various symbols in the book of Daniel, and it is not until their expiration the prophecy comes in, "And at that time shall Michael stand up—the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people." To "stand up" means to reign. See chap. 11 : 3, 20. It is not until the "little horn" has been cast down by the coming of the Ancient of days—not until the fourth kingdom with its ten divisions has passed away, that the saints possess the kingdom. Dan. 7 : 21–27. Not until the seventh angel sounds, do the kingdoms of this world become the Lord's, and that is the time of wrath, and reward. Rev. 11 : 14–18.

The reign of Christ will be attended with great glory, and eternal pleasures. It will be the time of restitution, restoring back to Eden loveliness. The wilderness shall bloom like Eden, and the desert like the garden of the Lord. The curse will be removed, and "instead of the thorn, shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree." The inhabitants will never more weep, nor suffer pain; no sorrow shall afflict them; they will no more labor in vain, for the earth shall yield an abundant increase, nor bring forth children for trouble, because they and their offering are the blessed of the Lord. No blight shall be upon their harvests, no strife disturb their borders. The beasts will be harmless, as in the beginning; so that the wolf and the lamb can dwell together, and the leopard and the kid lie down together, and the little child shall lead them. "The sucking child will play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child put his hand on the cockatrice's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

We see by the evidences so abundantly presented from the word of God, that the hope of the church centres in the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ; that then comes the kingdom with its rich and ever-enduring blessings—the redemption of the purchased possession, the everlasting inheritance, the glorified body, the crown of unfading glory, the tree of life, the restored Paradise,—all, all comes with the returning Lord. We see, too, as we examine this subject, how the word of the Lord is made void by false traditions. Everything almost has been perverted and disarranged. The false idea that the kingdom was established eighteen hundred years ago—that it is set up in the heart, and that heaven is the home of the saint, and death the entrance gate—O, how it detracts from the beauty and glory and importance associated with Christ's coming! The one who enjoys the true hope, loves and longs for the returning. It is like an anchor to the soul, and leads to purification. May we all have the true hope of the gospel, and soon realize its accomplishment.

M. D. W.

CHILDHOOD.—Childhood is the most critical period of life, for the mind is tender and capable of receiving lasting impressions. How little do parents realize that every careless, thoughtless word makes an impression upon the plastic mind of youth which will strengthen with the mind, and, perchance, shape the destiny of man or woman through life. What a fearful responsibility then rests upon parents and teachers of youth. Father and mother, do you realize the value of that priceless gem which God has placed in your hands, destined for a holy sphere of action?

For the Crisis.

Don't waste a Crumb.

War is upon us—terrible, severe, and God only knows how long. Poverty follows. Famine is not far off. Harvests are plenty, but at the west hands that might have gathered the grain have grasped the sword. Business is dead, trade inactive. Every dollar of unrighteous gain that both north and south have wrung from the toiling slave, will be consumed, I think, before the war ends. Cotton has been king. His kingdom consists of plantations and factories, hoes and spindles; his subjects are slaves and factory operatives. His kingdom is divided against itself. Multitudes who have long lived from hand to mouth on factory work, will soon be in great want. I know christians who are working TO-DAY without food enough to eat or money to get it, and multitudes will soon be out of work, with no food at all.

As prospects now are, there will be such a cry for bread in the cities before winter ends as has never been heard in this country. In ordinary times, hardly a day or week passes but what we are called on, as most in cities are, to divide our food with sick, feeble and hungry persons, who we know to be proper objects of charity, besides the multitudes that come and beg without our knowing of their character. All this will be greatly increased. Just now our kind-hearted hired girl was detected in the act of secretly buying, with her scanty earnings, five loaves of bread and half a bushel of potatoes, for a family of twelve, who, with all their industry and prudence, had not food to eat. God bless her for the act. But such cases will be common soon. In the great cities on this continent starvation haunts the poor to-day.

Now, men and brethren and sisters, take heed. You who live in the country, where every thing is plenty to eat, remember prices will be low, you may not get much money, but don't waste a crumb. Spend nothing for luxury or finery. Save all. What you cannot sell you can give away. Do you say where? Keep it safe till you see where, and then send it there. You will hear the call soon enough. More than one mother comes to my house to tell of "nothing to eat," and we know they speak the truth. Thank God we have not yet had to turn any away. I cannot war after the flesh, but I can feed the hungry and clothe the naked so long as any thing remains.

Our Mission School goes on still in prosperity. Many children are shoeless, but they can do till winter, but when that comes, God pity the poor! Heed what I say. Save corn, wheat, rye and barley; save all you can for the POOR. DON'T WASTE A CRUMB.

H. L. HASTINGS.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 9th, '61.

For the Crisis.

Unclean Spirits.

BRO. WENDELL:—I wish to call the attention of the church (especially those correspondents who are proficient in the study of prophecy) to the subject of the "unclean spirits," that are now running so high, especially in this country. It appears to me perfectly plain that God's children should keep as clear as possible from their influence. Much has been said to warn the church of the wiles of Spiritualism. I think now it is high time the church was warned of the wiles of politics, especially so if God in prophecy has delineated their course and character. In order, therefore, to come to the subject at once, allow me, through the Crisis, to ask a few questions. First, what do the unclean spirits of Rev. 16 : 13 apply to? Do they not apply to politics and religion blended or united? They are said to come "out of the mouths of the dragon," or kings of the earth; "out of the mouth of the beast," or Roman church; and out of the mouth of the false prophet—teachers of this time, who are on the side of "peace and safety" relative to the Lord's soon coming. Some brethren have applied these spirits to the spiritual manifestations, but I fail to see that their arguments are logical. I think there are some arguments to show that that theory is correct. I cannot think that the rulers of these days are so weak as to be influenced by the weakness and absurdities of Spiritualism, in martialing their armies to the "battle of that great day of God Almighty."

We will not now stop to inquire whether or not the first vial was fulfilled early in the christian era, when carnal and sectarian divisions afflicted the church, preparing the way for the rise of the man of sin; neither will we inquire into the death-like state of the church under the second vial; nor stop to consider the savage and revengeful spirit of the church under the third vial, when the apostate church got the power over their pagan enemies, and so punished them rigorously for their crimes, committed against the true and apostolic church, from its earliest days to the sixth century. Neither will we stop to ask why the sun, mentioned in the fourth vial, may not be considered to mean the word of God in the hands of the reformers, in the days of Martin Luther and his followers, when the Roman church blasphemed God and warred against the truth. We will also pass over the fifth vial, only remarking that it is perfectly plain that the fifth vial was poured out on the seat of the beast, in the time of the French Revolution, when her errors were exposed by the infidelity of France, and finally when her civil power was taken away, and her "kingdom filled with darkness," yet they repented not.

Now we come to the sixth and seventh vials. With regard to the events of the sixth vial, it appears clear that the Turkish Empire is meant by the river Euphrates, and that its water, or power, was dried up in 1840. Since then, the kings of the eastern world have had the way prepared for the Crimean war. With regard to the unclean spirits, like frogs, coming out of the mouths of the dragon, beast and false prophet, a right understanding is very important in order to keep the church from the political spirit of the age. It is highly important that we first ascertain what is meant by the term dragon, used so often by the Revelator. Does it mean civil rule, or certain kings? There is no necessity of investigating the term beast, for on this we are all agreed, but the term false prophet is important to understand. I am satisfied it does not refer to Mohammedanism, because the Bible teaches that the false teachers are in our midst, coming to us in sheep's clothing.

Before I close, allow me to inquire, does not the term dragon, in the 12th and 13th chapters, apply to civil power—in the 12th to pagan civil power, and in the 13th to the civil power given to the Pope for 1260 years?

S. MARSH.

Shabbona Grove, Ill.

For the Crisis.

"Let not the Sun go down until he come."

Thus prayed an agonized wife for the return of her long absent husband. Thus she prayed, and thus was her prayer answered. Before the sun went down that day, that husband returned to his starving family. War and sickness had detained him.

This circumstance took place a few miles from us, in a neighborhood where we have been holding meetings, and produced a general sensation. Captain H. was in the Rio Janeiro coffee trade, and had been out five months over his time, during which they had received not a line from him, and had only heard that his crew had all been swept off with yellow fever except one man, and the ship was detained by blockade. During this dreadful suspense his wife and six children came to want, and when the war broke out, the eldest son, sixteen years of age, went. Kind friends did what they could, yet they were reduced to the last extremity. Finally, on the morning of his return, the mother set out, with one of her little ones, to gather huckleberries, like the Zerephan widow who went out to gather her two sticks to bake her cake, and eat it and die. As she passed the house of Mrs. D., where we hold our meetings and Sabbath school, she saw that she was crying, and went out and begged her to come in, and she would send her little boy with them. While waiting she remarked, "I feel as if I want to pray for my husband to come home." They knelt and mingled their prayers, and at this time went up this striking petition: "Let not the sun go down until he come, or that I receive a scratch of a pen from him." And behold! as the ten o'clock train arrived, a little boy came running to her, as she was picking near the station, and told her Captain H. had come. She could not believe it for some time, but the earnestness of the boy induced her to go and see—when lo! he was there, feeble indeed, but it was her long lost husband. Before noon Mrs. D. saw her coming, leading her husband. She ran to meet her in a transport of joy, who, a few hours before, had "offered up prayers, with strong crying and tears."

How changed were the feelings of this wife on the return of this feeble and wasted husband, who could afford her but partial relief; but how different will it be with "the bride, the Lamb's wife," when He shall appear! And after meeting, as we visited them, "to rejoice with those who rejoice," and saw as she received us a cheerful smile instead of "fell despair" upon her face as before, we could but think of the change that would come over God's suffering elect when Christ, the true husband, shall return. We spoke of it to her, and had a sweet time in commending her and hers to God. We learned that her husband was a man who feared God, and had prayed upon his vessel and in his family when at home. We left them the Crisis and a number of tracts to take on his next voyage, which will be very soon.

Not so with Jesus, when "his wife hath made herself ready" by "crying day and night unto him." No partial relief will He bring, nor partial joy. The rejoicing then will not be from a few friends, as in this case. O, no! it will be the joy of "a great multitude, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him, for the marriage of the Lamb has come and his wife hath made herself ready." And our strong convictions are, from "coming events which cast their shadows before," that God's elect will be brought into the extremity of this agonized woman, until, like her, their united voice will go up to God, "Let not the sun go down until He come."

Hammonton, July 20, '61. R. S. W.

For the Crisis.

The name Christian.

"And the disciples were called christians first in Antioch."—Acts 11: 26.

It is often remarked, that names are merely empty sounds, and of little consequence; yet all will allow that there are names of honor and significancy, and that, when they are accompanied with the things signified, they are of great importance. Of this class is the christian name. It is a name which was given to a certain people over eighteen hundred years ago. And as this name Christian, as a denominational cognomen, has fallen into very general disuse, it seems important to consider its origin, design, and adaptation. The followers of Christ were not distinguished at first by this name, but were called saints, in reference to their real and professed holiness; also disciples, in reference to their receiving Christ as their teacher; and brethren, from their relation to one another. But their enemies called them Galileans, Nazarenes, and by other names of contempt. But finally they were called christians. This name was given them first at Antioch, a city in Syria, which was so called by Antiochus Epiphanes. It has been a question in the minds of some, whether they were so called by their enemies, by way of derision, or assumed it themselves, or whether it was given to them by divine direction.

When we connect the fact of their being so called with the following prophecies addressed to God's ancient Zion, viz., "The Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory, and thou shalt be called by a new name which the mouth of the Lord shall name"—Isa. 62 : 2; also, "And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen, for the Lord God shall slay thee (the carnal Israel) and call his servants by another name"—Isa. 65 : 15; we see that the disciples were called Christians by divine order, and if so, why not all the followers of Christ be content with this name? Why need we add something else to it, such as Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Shaker, Orthodox, Unitarian, Advent? Now the term Advent, as I understand it, has reference to the second coming of Christ; and those that believe that doctrine might be called (by some) "Advents." Now I believe in the coming of Christ as strong as any one, but because I believe in that doctrine that is so plainly taught in the word of God, must I be called by a human name that uninspired men have invented? Never! as long as I can read my Bible and understand for myself. I profess to be a christian and nothing else. My prayer is that the time will soon come when all sectarian names shall be burned up, root and branch. It would do well for those christians that are advocating sectarian names, to read the 4th chapter of 1 Peter, and especially the 16th verse,—"Yet if any man suffer as a christian, let him not be ashamed," etc. Also turn to Acts 26 : 28. Here Paul is brought before king Agrippa, and the king gives him permission to speak for himself; he therefore expounds unto him the Scriptures, and Agrippa says, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a christian." Paul did not feel sorry because he was almost persuaded to be a christian. Oh, no; he exclaims, "I would to God that not only thou, but all them that hear me, were as I am." Paul was christian in name, in deed and truth.

Ah! my brethren and sisters in Christ, let us have our skirts clear from advocating any thing that will hinder the gospel of Christ. But let us who have been called to preach the gospel, hold up to the world the Bible as our only rule, christian character our test of fellowship, and for our name that glorious name of CHRISTIAN.

Your brother in Christ, C. I. DEYO.

Richland, Mich., 1861.

For the Crisis.

The Knowing Ones.

"Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God."

We live in the last days, therefore perilous times have come. The master said, "Watch, lest coming suddenly he find us sleeping." The world and the cold-hearted professors of religion scoff at our blessed hope, and call us infidels because we believe God's holy word. Yet we will rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer for his name's sake. The world have forgot God. They have rejected the truth, and as a mass are given over to death. Yet there are some who are not beyond the reach of hope. I have traveled for the past few weeks in a region where they have not heard of our blessed hope, neither have read works upon the subject, and in presenting the hope of the gospel to them, they said they never heard of such a doctrine. One Presbyterian minister heard that I was giving the people meat in due season, and he got wrathy and called it all infidelity. He brought up the "rich man," the "thief on the cross," etc., to prove the idea that the dead knew more than all the living. O the people want the gospel. How any intelligent man can preach eternal torment I do not see, nor how they can believe and teach the immortality of the soul, when there is no foundation for it in the Scriptures.

To you, brethren, it is given to know the truth upon these great and important points. Let us continue to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. To be ignorant of God's holy word is the worst of all blindness. Soon the master will come, and they that are ready will go in; and the door will be shut and forever closed. Let us work while the day lasts, for the night cometh wherein no man can work. O how precious the moments we have left! The slothful servant shall not receive any reward, but the faithful and wise servant shall be made ruler in the city of God.

I can look back sixteen long years and think over the blessed associations, our holy gatherings in the tented groves, the ardor and life there has been among us, the love of God and his power among us. Some have fallen asleep. But how many of the thousands will enter in through the gates into the city? Let us look well to our foundation in these times of the distress of nations, and see that our righteousness is the righteousness of Christ.

J. E. CLARK.

Selections.

A Few Words to Mothers.

One great trial and source of depression to a married woman, surrounded with a family of little children, is the small amount she can do. It seems literally, as month after month rolls by, as if she accomplished nothing. Life seems a blank, only filled up with petty cares, that wear out, and corrode, and canker the frail tenement of the flesh, but leave no trace behind.

"Oh! if I could only live for something, I could cheerfully bear all the burdens time brings to me!" is the desponding cry of many a mother; but, mother, look back on your own childhood, and then tell me if you do not live for something! Years ago, tired, hungry from out-door play, who brought you the nice, sweet bowl brimming with milk, that tasted sweeter to you than the rarest dish to the epicure? Who folded you in her arms, and rocked you to sleep as gently as the bee is rocked in its bed of roses? Who gave bright smiles and soft kisses when your heart was quivering with pain from the harsh, unfeeling words of some playmate? Whose soft step and light touch, and whispered words of prayer, drove away the dark images of fear, that darkness, to the child, is so often peopled with, and lit brightness in the belief of a protecting, sleepless care over all? Who fanned your fevered brow, and held the pure cooling draught that dripped from the gray rocks in the woods, which you had dreamed of all night, to your lips, and talked pleasantly of heaven, when your little feet seemed almost ready to step into death's dark river, and you shrank trembling back from the hurrying waters? Who gave you the pleasant memories of childhood, that have stolen to your hearts as gently as the dew to the flower, through the long, long years, and brought light and joy to the darkest hour of your life? Name your price for these memories, and then I can tell you what you are accomplishing! What if God had said to your youngest, that pet one, with soft silken ringlets and rosy dimpled fat hand, who is catching at the buttons on your dress, "He is a little thing; I will not mind about his sight?" Think of those laughing, sparkling, "pretty, prettty eyes," as you have said a hundred times, as sightless orbs; never again turning to his little crib, to find him watching you from under the soft lace; never starting from sleep as he clasps his arms around your neck, and raising your head from the pillow to catch a view in the clear moonlight of his loving eyes; never again joying at the glimpses of baby's mind through the mind's windows.

What if God had said, "He is a little thing; I will not mind about his intellect!" Just look at your sweet baby laughing, cooing, forever touching some chord of hope and joy, and then clasp a soulless casket in your arms. His cheek is fair and delicately tinted, his hair golden as the sunbeam, but his poor little mouth and eyes! No answering smile, no grieved look, no wondering glance, nothing but a vacant stare. Think of watching and yearning so for one look of intelligence, and when you catch your breath with joy to think it is yours, have it end in a smile of mere muscle, a contortion of the lips. Oh! the disappointment! the death of a loved one brings no sorrow like that!

God, who said, "Let there be light, and there was light," has great and stupendous things before him, but not a sparrow falls to the ground without his notice; and if a bird is worthy of his care, need mother complain that time, talents, strength must be given for comfort and training of the little ones, who each are created for immortality? Perhaps when time passes, and those loved children go out from the maternal nest, and their hearts grow hard and callous in the battle of life, some—what you now think trifling, valueless—act may come back to them as a sweet memory, that will permeate the hard crust that is closing around them, and leave it open to all kind, pure influences. We cannot see the end from the beginning, so let us trust Him who can, and accept our work cheerfully, if it does debar us from entering into the achievement of what we are often tempted to think are the great deeds of life.

Public Prayer.

Private prayer ought to be regarded as a pleasure and privilege rather than a duty. But public prayer may fitly be spoken of as a duty, since it is seldom that one would of choice pray publicly for his own devotion, but only because it is his duty to the brotherhood. No service needs more, and none is susceptible of so little improvement by means of instruction. This is an exercise into which men cannot be drilled. It is ungracious even to criticise what purports to be an address to God. Yet there are some suggestions which we may venture to make.

We think it very important that the pastor, or some leading officer should be faithful with the younger members of the church in pointing out blemishes and faults, which may easily be corrected at first, but which, if suffered to go on, will become ineradicable. One man falls into a whining tone, another prays in an inaudible whisper, another exalts his voice far beyond the natural conversational pitch, and others lose their natural tone entirely, and pray in a kind of sacred falsetto. Some talk in tenor, but pray in bass; some converse in upper bass tones, but pray in tenor tones. If a brother first speaks and then prays, a stranger listening from the outside would think that two men had been speaking. This habit becomes very marked in the ministrations of ministers of some branches of Christ's church, many of whom come, at length, to have a conversational voice, a praying voice, a hymn voice, a reading voice, and a preaching voice.

Men are seldom entirely true to themselves and natural in their prayers. There is a certain round of topics supposed to be necessary to symmetrical prayer. These they punctiliously introduce, whether their heart craves such utterance or not. If, when a christian brother is in the full tide of such a prayer, uttering his regular succession of topics, Christ would really appear before him, how extremely impertinent would most of his petitions seem addressed to a living and visible Savior! Thus a man's real feeling is not expressed; and matters quite good in themselves, but almost wholly indifferent to him, constitute the bulk of petition. Reverential tones and well-connected sentences, expressing very proper ideas do not constitute prayer. The very essence of praying is that it conveys the real desire or thoughts of the suppliant. When a man really reveres God, how simple is the language of veneration! If a man's heart is breaking with sorrow, or depressed by care, or fretted by ill-adjusted affairs, why should he leave the real strain of feeling, and strike into a false key?

It is remarkable how skilfully men will contrive to avoid all real interests, and express almost wholly those which are not real to them. A man prays for the glory of God, for the advancement of his kingdom, for the evangelization of the world; but he does not allude to the specialities in which his very life may stand, nor to the wants which every day are working their impress upon his character. The cares, the petty annoyances, the impatience of temper, pride, self-indulgence, selfishness, consciously and unconsciously, or on the other hand, the gladness of daily life, the blessings of home, the felicities of friendship, the joys and successes of life, in short, all the things which one would talk of to a venerable parent, in an hour of confidence, are excluded from prayer. Without a doubt, reserve and delicacy must be often exercised in the disclosure of one's secret and private experiences. But this is not to be carried so far as to strip prayer of all its leaves and blossoms, and leave it like a formal bush or tree in winter, with barren branches standing in cold outline against a bleak sky.

Going Directly to the Cross of Christ.

One of the mistakes which are prevalent among a certain class of pious people is that of supposing that the Holy Spirit leads every converted sinner through the very same exercises of mind, and exactly in the same order. This is a mistake which is often attended with painful circumstances, for it tends to discourage many young converts in their christian path, and to inspire others with a kind of infallibility in judging of the christian experience of their friends. Let us relate a fact in illustration of what we mean.

Some years ago a young minister was engaged in missionary labors in the highlands of Scotland. He was young, pious, and zealous, but by no means remarkable for an enlarged knowledge of the human, heart, or of christian experience. He had carefully read good John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, and verily supposed that every christian must walk in the same path as Bunyan's pilgrim. In one of his pedestrain preaching tours, he overtook a poor girl walking, as is common among the poor in that country, shoeless and stockingless. He soon began to enter into conversation with her, as to the high concerns of her soul and eternity, and found that she had previously known somewhat of things of this character. He drew her on to state the circumstances by which she was brought to the enjoyment of religion. After she had told him how she made the discovery of her exceeding sinfulness in the sight of God, the young missionary asked: "I supdose that when you saw how that you were burdened with guilt, you found yourself, like poor Pilgrim, in the slough of despond?" "Oh, no, Sir," said she, "I never was there in my life." "How, then, did you obtain peace?" was the inquiry. "Why, Sir, I heard of the way of salvation, and I went directly to the cross," was the beautiful reply. Honored brethren in the ministry, let us lead sinners directly to the cross.—Watchman and Reflector.

Time's Changes.

In an editorial in the American Presbyterian, Rev. Albert Barnes, who has recently returned from his native town, Rome, N. Y., makes the following touching reflections. He is now about sixty-two years old:

"Men pass off the stage. God 'changes their countenance and sends them away.' The old generation that lived and moved in Rome sixty years ago, as everywhere else on the face of the earth, is gone. But nature is the same, and what was there then of earth and waters, of hills and running streams, is there still. The river—bright, clear, pure—on the banks of which the writer of this article first breathed the air, and looked upon the light of the sun—is there still, and flows on as it did then. The old log house, then ready to fall, where life began, has long since been removed; but the fields are there, and even a few of the old trees, which stood in the days of boyhood, are there still. All who have arrived at a period of life when they can understand what it is to go back after half a century to the scenes of childhood, can appreciate the emotions with which a man of gray hairs and of advancing years wanders along on the banks of such a river; stands on the spot where he was born; walks over such grounds; looks on such ancient trees, solitary, living memorials of the past, or contemplates the old dwelling, the first of all houses in his recollections; the emotions which one feels as he pauses in these solitary rambles, and reflects on what he did in his boyhood, and strives to recall the views and anticipations of his own early years. Alas! he is alone. From that old habitation all who used to dwell there are gone forever. Every living thing that he ever saw there has gone. Father, mother, brothers, sisters, are all in the grave, and the wanderer is alone. No one can understand, except he who has experienced it, what it is for a man to feel that all his own family are dead; the utter desolation of soul that comes over a man when he feels that he is the last of his family, that none now stand between him and the great ocean of eternity on which he himself is soon to embark; and that of his own household, he now has no one to be his companion as he moves on toward that boundless ocean. To the recollection of the writer of this article, no such feeling of utter desolation has ever come over the soul as was experienced when he learned, in a foreign land, that the last of the family, a beloved brother, was also dead. Then how little was there in a splendid capital to soothe the heart; how lonely and how desolate was the soul, though surrounded by the gayety and splendor of the most splendid city of the world!"

Just What he Was when a Boy.

A few evenings since, while slowly making my exit from a crowded lecture-room, where an appreciative audience had been listening with absorbed interest to the glowing pictures of India, presented by a popular and gifted lecturer, an earnest voice by my side exclaimed:

"Just what he was when he was a boy. I heard him offer his first prayer in public, and I shall never forget my feelings. He was just as earnest then as now. You could scarcely breathe for listening."

"But," said a lady in reply, "can you believe all he has said?"

"Yes," was the instant reply. "That boy could never say what was not exactly true. I believe him just as much as I believe the Bible."

I mused upon the words, "Just what he was when he was a boy." The same quick thoughts, glowing with poetic imagery—the same fervid eloquence, seemed to lift the hearer to some lofty stand-point, whence the far-famed luxuriance of Eastern climes stretches out a sea of verdure before his admiring gaze, or amid the oriental grandeur of scenery sees the vast crowds held in thraldom of debasing errors, till his heart glows to stretch forth his hand to those perishing millions, and pluck them as "brands from the burning."

Oh, that these carelessly uttered words might have fallen upon the heart of every boy in our land, making each realize that even now he is weaving the mantle of his future manhood, tracing his character in dim outline, to which future years shall only add the shading? How wise, then, in youth, to follow noble ambitions, to do those things which are right!—Mother's Journal.

NONE THE POORER FOR GIVING.—Several years ago, a Secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society related the following instances of liberal and unostentatious giving, which we commend especially to our wealthy readers:

"One of these instances was that of an elderly lady, who for nineteen years past had been in the habit of making periodical calls at Earl street, depositing on each occasion an anonymous gift, and then disappearing till the next visit. For several years her contributions had amounted to about 200 guineas per annum, but lately they had risen to about £600 ($3000) a year. Another example was that of a gentleman residing on the Continent, whose contributions commenced about five years ago with a simple donation of £20. In 1854, his year's gift had risen to over £2700; in 1855, to £5,665; and last January, he intimated his readiness to make his donations for 1856, either £13,000 or £15,000, adding, that when they were gone, more would be forthcoming. This gentleman's answer to some inquiries was, the more he gave, the more he got. He was a richer man now than when he first began to give."

☞ Lord Macaulay had a singular taste for walking through the deserted streets of the great metropolis in the hours when the citizens were fast asleep, and all was hushed. Those were the hours, he used to remark, for reflection and thought—when the utter loneliness which is peculiar at midnight to great cities, steals over the meditating wayfarer, solitary, apparently, and alone in the world. Dr. Johnson possessed a similar taste, and Charles Dickens is singularly fond of old city streets and alleys, when they are emptied of the busy throng that fill them in the day time.

☞ An exchange says: "A patent has been taken out for perforating newspapers and periodicals and books after the manner of postage stamps, which are now torn and not cut apart. If the method can be successfully applied, it will be a great convenience, as paper-knives are not carried in every pocket; and to turn the London Times inside out, especially when traveling, is a job all will be pleased to be spared."

☞ The Emperor Adrian, meeting a man who had insulted him before he came to the government, said to him, "Approach; you have nothing to fear; I am an Emperor." This is an example well worthy of being imitated by those who are called to return good for evil.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications on sale at this office, should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to prepay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above [illegible] will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 310. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28, 1861. VOL. XIII. NO. 25.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Invocation.

Search me, O God, and know my heart,
Cleanse every vain and sinful part;
Show me, O Lord, thy mercies still—
Teach me to know and do thy will.

Search well my thoughts, my Father kind,
Let no deceit dwell in my mind;
O may my musings ever be Upon thy goodness, Lord, and Thee.

Search thou, O God, my every way,
Nor let me from thy presence stray;
May I walk humbly in thy sight,
Still guided by the Gospel light.

My Father, keep my longing heart,
O let me ne'er from thee depart;
Incline my feet in wisdom's ways—
O teach my lips to speak thy praise.

MRS W. P. WENTWORTH.

La Fayette, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Great Restoration.

BY P. E. ARMSTRONG.

"And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come and restore all things"—Matt. 17 : 11.

(Concluded.)

Having briefly noticed a few of the prophecies relating to a Harbinger and restoration of a people preparatory to the coming of our Lord, we will as briefly as possible notice the scriptural nature of this restoration. The simple meaning of the word is a revival or bringing back to first principles. In a doctrinal point of view, it is not advancing anything new, but a renewal of something departed from. The two great sins which seem inherent in man since the fall are pride and covetousness; both, however, are the offspring of unbelief, and will disappear as our faith brightens into fruition, and the love and promises of God become our all-absorbing thought. Where are covetousness and pride when the dying saint, with eyes of faith fixed on the resurrection morn and day of restitution, is about quitting a life of mortality to arise again from his humble dust, blooming with the freshness of immortal youth and Eden beauty? Truly, pride in a state of mortality is the most unreasonable of all sins, and well may the prophet put words in the mouth of the messenger, when asking, What shall I cry? "All flesh is grass, and the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field." What folly, then, is human pride! What madness the selfish covetousness of glittering bubbles, that are so transient and fleeting! while the pursuit of them destroys our citizenship to the kingdom so near at hand, and which abideth forever. Then should not we who desire to live to meet our Lord, unite and restore the first principles of the church of Christ, and an active faith such as was exhibited at Jerusalem, when the Spirit acted in concert with those who, with unbounded love to God and their brethren, chose an equality of this world's goods, bringing their all at the apostles' feet for equal distribution to the household of faith? And we hold that this is one is one of the great principles of restoration, which both the Jews and Christians have so widely departed from.

Before the Lord gave the seed of Abraham possession of the typical Canaan, he brought them through a process of trial, to purify them of these predominant sins; first humbling the envious sons of Jacob at the feet of their meek but despised brother Joseph, and their offspring to a protracted servitude to Egyptian bondage; then released them in a manner calculated to keep them humble, and brought them into a wilderness, where they were entirely dependent on him for everything (beautifully foreshadowing the life of the true christian); and, having cut off those old in rebellion and unbelief, he miraculously fed and provided for the rising generation for forty years, in such a manner as was calculated to smother any innate, covetous desire, and keep them a fraternal and united people. The nature of the manna was wisely ordered to be unfit for food the following day; thus, while it fostered a daily dependence on his bounty, its perishable nature prevented the first rising of avarice, and those who gathered much, freely imparted to those who gathered less, and thus preserved a spirit of love and unity, to prepare them for entering the land of promise as a peculiar people, taught of God, schooled by divine wisdom, and shadowing forth a basis of love and trust in God—a liberal, free community, to which the antypical church must conform ere the Savior can claim her as his waiting Bride, and bring her the long sought rest. The sin of covetousness brought speedy judgment on the house of Achan, showing that God could admit them to the promised land only as a unit, and not while a single member of their camp indulged in this particular sin.

Having established the groundwork of restoration, which is the negative of pride and covetousness, or a free community of humility, unity and love, we see at once the necessity of a restoring forerunner at the first advent of our Lord. The Jews had wandered wide from the schooling of their fathers in the wilderness; they were proud and covetous in the extreme; they were divided in bitter contending sects and parties, all arising from their arbitrary self-will and want of love, when they should have been endeared to each other other not only by the ties of consanguinity, but holding within themselves the oracles of God. Such was their condition when the time was fulfilled when their king should appear. John vainly attempted to school them again in humility and love; he draws them again into the wilderness, and teaches them the doctrine of common interest, saying, "If any man have two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise." The Savior followed him, teaching the same doctrine, telling the rich young man, who thought he was perfect in the pharisaical observance of the law, to sell his possessions (level himself with God's poor) and follow him. Here was the touchstone; it showed him what he lacked, and caused bitterness in his soul. The disciples traveled and labored together as a free community, and our Lord, having drawn a multitude into the wilderness, and visible means failing, exercised like Moses the divine power in supplying their wants, demonstrating that God can and will provide for those who gather together, even in the wilderness, if they rely on him for their daily wants.

We need not multiply texts to prove that faith in God, with its consequents, humility and fraternal love for each other, was the wilderness preparation for typical Canaan, as well as the groundwork and basis of Christianity; for, when the Spirit of truth wrought so powerfully at the pentecostal gathering, this was the unanimous impulse of believers; they sold their possessions and gathered together, (which is the true and effectual way of carrying out this fraternal principle,) and which David so beautifully and prophetically describes in the 133d Psalm—"Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" and looks forward to a future Zion where the Lord commands his blessing, "even life forevermore"; and even after the church at Jerusalem, having established the great precedent, and pointing conclusively to the great restoration and preparation of the Bride, other churches, though scattered by persecution, still adhered as far as possible to this common interest with the poor saints at Jerusalem. The churches at Macedonia strove to preserve an equilibrium in temporal benefits, and the apostle Paul commends them, and urges the same fraternal love on the Corinthian church, in 2d Cor. 8th chapter, and at the 13th verse adds, "For I mean not that other men be eased and you burdened, but by an equality that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for your want: that there may be equality: as it is written, he that had gathered much had nothing over, and he that had gathered little had no lack." And the apostle, to prove his position, refers to the first principle in the design of the manna in the wilderness to teach a common interest in the household of faith pertaining to temporal matters.

We will now examine a few passages corroborating the text, and showing that the forerunner and restoration are immediately connected with the second advent of our Lord. Malachi says Elijah's mission is to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers. Query—when? Why, he says before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. How long before? Why, more than 1800 years, say our learned commentators. Does this look reasonable? Well, suppose we find the church now worse divided, equally covetous and void of reciprocal love, and a great body even entering upon a dreadful war of coercion to a deified flag on one side, and a resistance to the death against supposed encroachment of rights on the other, while professed ministers of God in both sections pray for and urge on the respective combatants of their choice?—may we not fear that unless a restoration is effected to some extent, the prophetic curse will follow, as it did upon the Jews when they failed to recognize their restoring Elias and Zion's humble king? They were looking for a Messiah to accord with their proud, covetous hearts; the mass of the church now profess the same, though a literal appearing is thought opposed to sound philosophy; and a coming in flesh, though glorified and immortal, and reigning over the earth, is thought too gross and worldly, and they have too much spiritual pride to admit of such a kingdom; or, if a moiety do, his coming is so indefinitely postponed that their faith dies in vague uncertainty; while the great mass are living not only in jealous, sectarian variance, but indulging, to a greater or less extent, the lust of the world, love of honor, or pride of life. It is true, like the Jews they are punctual attendants to a form of worship, carried on in costly structures, but they are not to be recognized from the unbelieving world; but, like them, arrayed in every fanciful form, the putting on of gold and costly apparel interferes not with their creeds, neither do the wants of poorer brethren; and, if asked for the hope within them, they are not prepared to give a scriptural answer, but tell you when they die they hope to go, in some immaterial form, to some distant state or condition too glorious to define, and not to be known till death opens the portals to endless bliss; and thus having made their covenant with the grim monster, they have lost sight of the literal coming of Jesus and the resurrection. And even if we descend to the more humble and scattered advent church, we find them distracted and divided in many points, and, although striving to agree, in disagreeing many are languishing in faith, while the whole are more or less conformed to the outside pressure of worldly contamination; and, in point of charity, it is to be feared they are almost as jealous of private opinions as the sects of their written creeds—a too general want of love and unity of action.

What, then, is wanted? The Savior says a restorer, the prophets say a restorer, together with a centre point in locality—a nucleus around which may gradually gather the sealed ones for the kingdom. To guard against religious anarchy, the scriptures have wisely authorized a visible head for the preparation unto the great day of the Lord. What is the condition of the religious world at present? It is wholly a system of Babylonish confusion and anarchy; and did not the secular majority hold the balance of power, there is no knowing what excesses might not be enacted. What glorious hopes our Bible unfolds to us! It has been indeed the book of glorious promises to the church in all ages, but it is exceeding precious to the little waiting flock of these last eventful days. May the Lord enable us all to see his truth, and unite in this restoration of humility and fraternal love, and watch and pray always, that we may be accounted worthy to escape all things coming on the earth, and to live to see our King in his beauty, and then, being transformed into the likeness of Him who is our Life, we shall be forever with the Lord.

For the Crisis.

War with Eternal Evil.

BRO. WENDELL:—Wishing to keep brethren in remembrance of one of the great points of reform in which we are engaged—the final end of evil, I send some remarks on the subject by the noted Gerret Smith of our State, who has been through life a prominent member of the Congregational church, or, as you Easterners call it, Orthodox church. In an article from his pen published in the N. Y. Tribune, July 23, 1857, he speaks of hell and says:

"Providence and nature tell of a Father, and not of a fiend. God will be as forgiving in another life as in this. An eternal hell! Then must sin be an eternal disturbing force in the universe. . . . . Orthodoxy makes God infinitely more malevolent than the most cruel man. No man does or can believe it. Let all wake up to-morrow in the belief, and no work would be done. The first step in the belief, is a step towards the mad house. Ministers save their sanity only through insincerity; to be sincere in preaching it, they must first be insane—their belief must be at most but a dreamy and fancied one—be so even of religion itself."

From one of these remarks we learn that this sympathetic, noble-minded man embraced Restorationism; which, as I have often said, is becoming the belief of most discerning and thoughtful men, both in and out of the churches. As we believe they err and the unconverted are resting on a false foundation, and may miss of eternal life by the error, we, to whom God in mercy has given new life, are under weighty obligations to sound the alarm in every possible way. We may do them good, and "save souls from death," while teachers of endless woe are leading them to destruction. [illegible] I am grieved to find some among us too much neglecting this great subject by doing as did the Athenians, who "spent all their time, either to tell or to hear some new thing." (Acts 17 : 21). The glorious plan of salvation, and the great duties of religion were known and taught before the present generation; yet some talk as if naught but "fables" had been preached. Gerrit Smith, I see, is too condemnatory. As we were all once in the dark as to some things we now see, we should pity those who are yet where we then were, and only censure their stupidity and neglect, seeing they have been warned of their mistakes in some points of doctrine. When we reflect on the fact that the giant mind of G. Smith had been, for many years, deeply affected by the abomination of slavery in our land, and learn that of late years his attention has been called to look at the far greater abomination—that of eternal slavery, in the government of God, as taught in his own and other churches, we see good cause for his derangement a year or two ago. He has recovered, and may God spare him to battle slavery and eternal evil.

J. BLAIN.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 16, '61.

For the Crisis.

"To your Tents, O Israel!"

Will you come to the Feast that is preparing for you,
Ye sad, weary pilgrims, ye noble and true?
On the green hills in Wilbraham the banquet is spread—
Come and drink of Life's waters—partake of Life's bread.
Will you come to the Feast?

Come—but yet not alone; to thy neighbor and friend,
Be he sinner or saint, invitations extend:
Bid the man of grey hairs, and the wild, thoughtless youth,
Go "sell all that he has" and then come "buy the truth."
Will you come to the Feast?

Let him who, grown weary with fighting, no more
Now "smelleth the battle from far" as of yore,
And him who is weak, and feels he's the "least
In the house of his Father," let him come to the feast.
Will you come to the Feast?

And ye who long years have the battle-field trod;
Whose weapons of warfare are "mighty through God";
Whose darts "through the joints of the harness" go in,
And who "feel for the pillars" of the temple of sin,
Will you come to the Feast?

Though "faint, yet pursuing"—still grasping the sword,
Let's come up "'gainst the mighty to the help of the Lord."
Ye lonely and sad, and ye joyful ones, come—
Greet the saints once again, ere you meet them at home.
Will you come to the Feast?

Ah! they'll come from the valleys—they'll come from the hills—
They'll come from the cities, from work-shops and mills—
With a smile on their lips—with joy thrilling each breast—
And with love-lighted eyes they'll come up to the feast.
Will you come to the Feast?

The heart-burdened, too, and the wretched will come,
In sadness and tears, but with songs they'll go home;
The famed "Good Samaritan's" "oil" and his "wine"
Having made their hearts glad and their faces to shine.
Will you come to the Feast?

"Beautiful on the mountains" there too will appear
The feet of those Heralds that glad tidings bear,
That say 'the morn cometh," all radiant with light!
When the waiting ones ask, "Watchman, what of the night?"
Will you come to the Feast?

Ah! methinks even now I can hear in the air
The songs of the pilgrims—the music of prayer;
While praise fills each heart and perfumes every breeze
That fan the white tents 'mong the verdure-crowned trees.
Will you come to the Feast?

War has girdled the globe, but in that hallowed grove
Thy banner o'er us, "Prince of Peace," shall be love!
Oh, then come to the Feast—come with "pitcher and lamp,"
For the "shout of a king" will be heard in the camp!
Will you come to the Feast?

Warner, N. H. L. R. K. BISHOP.

A Thought or two on Preaching.

One of the chief advantages connected with the customary ministerial vacation is the opportunity which it gives to him who is continually preaching to others to hear others preach; to look at the work which they and he alike accomplish from the stand-point of the pew instead of the pulpit; and to estimate the effect of it on himself as a hearer, instead of trying to prejudge what they ought to be, according to the rules, while he himself is uttering the message. Several opportunities of this kind which we have recently enjoyed have left distinct impressions upon us in regard to Preaching—its methods and its influences—to one or two of which we will give brief expression.

It seems to us plain that sermons are usually too long and too literary, as well as too com[illegible] in plan, and too gen[illegible] [illegible] treatment of their themes, to produce the most positive and beneficial effects. They are too long; and this is the source of other mischiefs. Listening lately on one Sunday to a sermon of forty-five minutes, and on another to one of but thirty-five minutes in length, we could not but feel that, independently of all other considerations, on account merely of its superior brevity, the advantage was altogether with the latter. It left the hearers with their minds still all awake and active; before their faculties had been fatigued and harassed by a too prolonged and difficult attention; while they were just in the very mood to talk over the subject, to discuss the arguments and consider the illustrations of it which had been given by the preacher, and to carry it out for themselves into other relations than those suggested by him. It thus secured by far the stronger hold on their remembrance; since what men talk of afterwards with each other, not what is simply brought to them by the speaker, is that which they clearly and effectively recollect. It became their own, by their personal and vital appropriation of it; and was not left to slide off from their minds, made sluggish and inert by a too protracted effort, or to be repelled from their minds by the involuntary resistance which every man makes to a subject which has occupied until it has wearied him. It was a proper objection which the Puritans made to the "longsomeness" of the Episcopal liturgy in the days of King James.

Such brevity in sermons tends naturally to foster, too, a more terse and striking mode of expression, a more lively and pungent mode of illustration, than is either customary or natural where the whole discussion is drawn out to greater length. Compelling the preacher to make his impression in a briefer space of time, it naturally incites him to use such forms of argument as shall hit at once the minds he is addressing; and such illustrative analogies anecdotes, metaphors, as shall fix the thought most promptly and sharply in the memory of the hearers. A discourse confined within narrower limits is therefore less likely to be abstract, meditative, theoretic; is more likely to be personal, practical, vital itself in every part, and so imbued with a vivifying force. The preacher elaborating his hour-long sermon within the walls of his study, is altogether too apt to forget that the merchants, mechanics, lawyers, farmers, the women and the children as well as the men, who are to come up to hear him, will come nowise prepared to follow his more subtle and intellectual processes; that a paragraph will not be remembered by them, though a sentence may be; that an apposite instance from history or biography will remain with them longer than the carefulest dialectics; and that they will take for granted much of his argument, and be content to carry away only the lessons which he has deduced from it. If he would remember this, he would reduce his whole sermon to half its size; would put sharp sentences in place of long-drawn and debilitated periods; would cause it here and there to sparkle with the spear-points of authoritative statement, instead of arguing every position; would not shrink from startling the mind now and then by a paradox; and thus would make the sermon which he produces a hundred-fold more effective to the popular mind than the more elaborate and to him satisfactory discussion ever can be.

Of course it is to be understood that a sermon does not become effective merely by being shortened; any more than a tree becomes symmetrical by being cut off at half its height. The whole plan of the discourse must contemplate a brief and vigorous discussion, and make up by the energy and denseness of each part for what is wanting in superficial extensiveness; or else the final impression will be only the more unsatisfactory in the case of a short sermon than in that of a longer. Of course, too, there are occasions and themes which seem to necessitate a discourse of larger outline and proportion; where an hour or more may be properly occupied, before a fit audience, upon the special and high occasion. But in general, we are positive, from recent experience as well as from long cherished conviction, that the preacher who means to bring his sermon within thirty-five minutes, other things being equal, will write more vigorously, illustrate more forcibly, bring himself to a more direct contact with his hearers, and leave upon them a more vivid impression, than he who allows himself an ampler range, even if it be only of an additional ten minutes. The gun-boat is not as big as the frigate. It does not so much impress the spectator, or figure so largely on canvass or in the woodcut. But it is far more manageable, and for the ordinary purposes of warfare more available and useful. And if our sermons came nearer to the likeness of the sharp, iron-sheathed, iron-turreted, steam-impelled modern gun-boat, they would be far more effective we are sure than when they approach, as so usually they do, the old heavy-sparred and unwieldly three-decker.

One other thought which always impresses us as we worship with other congregations than our own, is that of the immense advantage which he has—if only as a preacher—who comes to the devotional services of the church so prepared by previous thought and prayer that his heart enters naturally, immediately, and wholly, into the office which he performs of conducting the worship of the gathered assembly. One man reads the hymns as a child takes his medicine: as hurriedly as possible, and looking all the time as if he would make a wry face if he dared. Another reads them with simply cold and mechanical correctness, with apparently no sympathetic sentiment suffusing his soul. And still another utters them to the people with such a rich and evident feeling of all their tones of praise and petition, that the singing when it comes is but an echo of his first sweeter and nobler chant. One prays almost carelessly; "from the teeth outward;" with correctness enough of thought and expression, without extravagance and without ostentation, but without any tenderness or triumph in his heart, with a mere fluent and superficial rapidity of utterance. And another prays as if his very heart of hearts soared up spontaneously, and sought of God, the present Father, with filial trust and boundless gladness, all needful good. And often thus the whole end of the service has been practically answered before the text of the sermon has been mentioned. And often—alas! how much too often—has the sermon on the other hand failed utterly of its office because the prayer which went before it, and the hymns that were meant to be of adoration, have weighed down the soul instead of inspiring it, and pinned it in hopeless helplessness to the earth, instead of lifting it as on eagle's wings to the presence and throne and face of God.—Independent.

For the Crisis.

The Voice of the Church.

This cyclopedia of millennial facts is a gem of invaluable worth; inasmuch as it embodies a greater amount of general information touching the reign of Christ on earth, than any other work of the same price and capacity. Its value is inestimable, because it involves incontrovertible facts which stretch their bright shadows far back through the dark ages to the early church, and opens to the struggling church of Christ a wealth of truth which comes to them through the inspiration of the martyred dead. If I would learn the origin of my "blessed hope"—the paths the christian martyrs trod—I am carried back through many an apostate age, to a holier church, planted and fostered by apostolic hands. If I would be persuaded of the authenticity of the "Advent Church," no better proof of its legitimacy and the ultimate fulfillment of its doctrines need be sought for than is found among the numerous collated testimonies in the "Voice of the Church." If I would know from Justin Martyr, Polycarp, Papias, Irenæus, Ignatius, and others of their contemporaries of sainted memory, I need only to pore over its instructive pages to learn who and what they were. And, finally, if you want a good book—if you want a book pre-eminently superior to every other, save your Bible, buy the "Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ." You will be pleased with it. It is the choicest volume of my library; and if I found no other consolation to be derived from it, that closing splendid appeal from the pen of Dr. Cumming would win for it a prestige in my estimation well worth the price of the book.

Buy it, ye reflective minds, for its internal merits—for the extensive erudition of those sainted authors; and if for nothing else, buy it to convince this apostate age that the doctrine of the reign of Christ on earth is no religious innovation.

Blackstone, Mass. C. G. CARRE.

For the Crisis.

"Swear not at all."—Matt. 5: 33-38.

As there are various opinions about taking oaths, I have thought the following words of the Savior should settle the matter in the minds of God's children. Christ says, "Ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths: but I say unto you swear not at all;" "neither by heaven," "nor by the earth;" neither shalt thou swear by thy head. "But let your communication be, yea, yea; and nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." [illegible] fami[illegible] had reference to taking an oath. The [illegible] commands us not to profane his name. The Savior repeats the commandment when he says, "swear not all," and then adds, "let your communication be yea, yea; and nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."

Shall we take the oath of allegiance to the government under which we live? I think not. They that are God's children are pilgrims and strangers; they have no continuing city, but are looking for one to "come, whose maker and builder is God." The Savior says, "If ye were of the world the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Let us trust in God. But we are commanded to submit to the laws of the land, or rulers, as far as their laws do not conflict with the laws of God. But what if they do conflict with the laws of God? Then we will not obey. Let us look back to the three worthies in Nebuchadnezzar's reign; they were commanded to bow down and worship the image he had set up. Did they do it? No! they stood on the word of God, which says, "thou shalt have no other God before me." The command of Christ is "swear not at all." Has not the Savior used plain language? Then why not take him as he says? Some may ask, what shall we do? Shall we not use our own judgment? Must we take man's judgment? Yes, if it agrees with the word of God; if not, then take God's word alone. Paul says, "That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." Again, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, not wavering."

Brother, sister, have you forgotten that Christ has called you out of the world, and that you are pilgrims and strangers here? O how many there are that want to grasp the blessings with one hand and the world with the other! God says he that is not for me is against me. The Savior says, "I would that thou wert cold or hot, but because thou art neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth." O, brothers and sisters, wake up! Are you not a stumbling block in the way of others? Blessed is he that keepeth his garment "unspotted from the world." Again the Savior says, "My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews." Does this not show a peace policy—that the children of God should not fight with carnal weapons, but should fight the good fight of faith? Let us trust in God and ask wisdom of him. Our Savior said, "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me." Then if we believe in God, let us live out our faith and walk humbly before the Lord, obeying his commandments. The Savior says, "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments."

GEORGE W. SMITH.

Portsmouth, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Salvation.

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."—Eph. 11 : 8.

This passage is often quoted by persons to justify their careless neglect of duty, as if the Lord was to first favor them with the offer of salvation, and then believe, or receive it for us. We quote the 9th verse: "It is not of works, lest any man should boast." Now to obtain justification by works is not gospel, for we are "justified by faith, and have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

But what kind of faith is it that [illegible] justification, or the grace by which we are saved? Is it dead faith? nay, but rather the faith that works by love and purifies the heart. Then we become fit temples for the Holy Spirit; then what we do is of faith; it is pleasing to God, for otherwise it were impossible to please Him. It is faith that leads the possessor to please God. But how? by neglect of duty? I think not. If we refrain from work, faith becomes a dead faith, and so it is not gospel faith. It is to a lively hope that we are begotten, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. If we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight, shall we not know we receive the things we ask of him. Is God a respecter of persons? Will he [illegible] our believing his word? [illegible] Let us believe, for that is [illegible] given to us for, let us [illegible] no more. As many as [illegible] of God, they are the[illegible] then heirs and [illegible] What grea[illegible] us to serve [illegible]

[illegible]ions and an Inquiry.

[illegible] Wendell:—I do not wish to interfere with the management of the Crisis, but merely to suggest a few thoughts for the consideration of those who have the management of it. Was it an act of wisdom to exclude the "war question" from its columns? To whom does the Crisis belong? Was it not the property of its subscribers, and that they should have the right, at all times, to express their thoughts through its columns, subject only to this restriction—that no personal controversy nor unkind words towards others should be tolerated? I am confident that the affirmation of this question is the truth. That the Crisis is the property of its subscribers, is recognized in the "editorial" of May 14th, '56, thus:—"Were the paper private property, it would be quite different, but our interests are MUTUAL." In a note from F. H. B., contained in the Crisis of July 10th, '61, the right of its subscribers is fully acknowledged. Respecting an article he inserted in the paper during the absence of the Editor, Bro. B. says:—

"1st. It" (the article) "was written by one of the subscribers of the Crisis." (This is one reason given why Bro. B. inserted the article in the Crisis, and implied the right of the subscriber to its columns.)

"4th. There is no reason why brethren differing in sentiments should not have the privilege of expressing their sentiments in a christian-like manner."

"5th. It is too late in the day to undertake to stifle conviction, or prevent investigation."

"6th. It is not a sufficient reason why I should reject an article simply because I believe the writer is advocating error; to do this, would not only inflict a wrong upon such person, by depriving him of his right to a hearing," etc.

Why, then, should the subscribers of the Crisis be deprived of the privilege of expressing through its columns their sentiments in regard to the "war question?" These questions and these [illegible]sions are not the fruits of [illegible]ness; they are designed merely to [illegible]d the managers of the Crisis [illegible] rights of others, and that the rights of every one ought to be respected.

The principal object I have in view is, to suggest the propriety of discussing at this time, the "war question," which propriety appears from several reasons.

1. It is a subject which is fraught with momentous consequences to the church. It is either their bounden duty to bear arms at this time, or it is not their duty. The gospel requires them to establish a principle in regard to this subject, one way or the other. Hence, the subject ought to be discussed till it is rendered sufficiently plain that no one need mistake his duty as to this matter. A wrong course in this, as well as in other cases, may lead to inevitable perdition.

2. As the "war question" is a subject of deep interest to the church at the present sime, arising from the latest grand occurrence in the providence of God, it becomes the leading item in "present truth" till some future development of God's purposes shall place some other question in advance of this. Therefore it should be freely discussed. Without the leading item in "present truth," the word of truth cannot be rightly divided, nor meat in due season be given. In the language of another, "The world changes—the church in her history changes—all changes. There is but one spot in all the book of God which will fit the church to-day. The word of God which fits the church to-day must be known, that she may know what she is and where she is." In regard to discussing the "war question," I adopt the sentiment expressed by the Editor in the Crisis of May 29th, '61, thus:—"The subject is a deeply interesting one, and now is the time to scatter light upon it."

One question more. In regard to the writers for the Crisis not having "any reference to the articles written by others." Is it to be understood that no allusion to the articles of others is to be had, even without naming the writer? If so, I think it is drawing the lines a little too close. The object aimed at in writing for a religious publication should be, to disseminate truth in the love of it. But man is fallible—liable to err. And, as error can do no one any good—we being sanctified through the truth, if sanctified at all—all error should be combatted by the truth. But many are the instances in which error appears so strongly fortified, that a simple statement of its opposing truth will produce but little effort, when, by attacking it in its intrenchments, it may be driven out into the open field, where it can be seen in all its horrid deformity. And thus many, who, otherwise would continue to feast themselves upon the mephitic refections of error, would abandon those poisonous luxuries, and receive instead the living bread which comes down from heaven. Hence, disputed points should be suitably [illegible] not for the mere sake of gaining [illegible] triumph; [illegible] earnestly for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from DEATH, and shall hide a multitude of sins." Yours in love of the truth as it is in Jesus.

R. Robbins.

For the Crisis.

A Righteous King.

History affords ample testimony to sustain the assertion that wicked and unrighteous kings have borne sway. By the exercise of the power in them vested, they have manifested all the evil workings of sinful flesh; by their position their acts have become patent to the world; being elevated among the common people, all they did was made note of; and to-day what a sad spectacle is presented us in the corrupt systems of kingcraft as they obtain in the old world. The same spirit is not confined to men who are called kings; it is in emperors, princes, dukes, dictators and presidents. Witness the overbearing manner in which they rule. Let the question come up, why should they thus act, and the answer is, because by the overawing of the common mind they keep them in subjection, and by these means maintain their name and place. Once permit the mass to move in a direction of their own, and in consequence of ill treatment they will assert their native right, and make unto themselves a government suiting their ideal—republics for example. It has ever been the feeling inherent in enlightened humanity, for them to withdraw from under that system of goverment which did not comport with their wants and necessities—the American revolution, and still later, the Italian uprising, for example. The wants of the human family must be met if they can be, and the many forms of government under which we have lived plainly argues the necessity of a form which must supercede all before.

Righteousness is the professed form of all governments; they are professedly for the protection of the well, and punishment of the evil doer. If history and facts were in agreement, then we might believe that human governments are what they profess to be. But what do we find? Why, the nearer the throne or place of power, the greater the rascality. How often are we shocked when examining committees are appointed to ferret out some delinquencies charged against those who occupied place and power. The report of these committees show most plainly where the corruptness lies. Self-aggrandizement is a predominant feature of humanity, from the beggar to the king upon his throne; in the professional beggar it shows itself the same in character as it does in the king. If I could believe that selfishness was the exception and not the rule, then I could believe that out of an unclean thing a clean could be brought. This cannot be by any means human.

The want of ability in man to govern himself, presents before us the necessity of ONE who is more than man, and who alone can govern him. This individual is set forth by prophets as a prophet like unto Moses. This prophet is Jesus. See Deut. 18:15 and Acts 3:22. By another he is set forth as a King that should reign in righteousness, and associated with him in the administration of the world's affairs princes should rule in judgment. It is conclusively and satisfactorily settled in my mind that the affairs of this world cannot be attended to, and all things properly adjusted, unless God intervenes. In the time appointed of God he sent forth his Son, born of a woman, made under the law, that he might redeem those who were under the law; also, in the fullness of the times of the Gentiles, God will again send forth this Son, with full power and commission to rule and reign in the midst of his enemies; his government will be just and equitable; nothing shall intimidate the execution of a sovereign will; his princes will be all righteous! The executors of his will, who shall withstand them? When this day dawns—when the bright and morning star shall manifest itself in all its splendor and glory—when this sun shall shine in undimmed effulgence on those who are made alive by the healing of his beams—then, ah! then shall the righteous shine forth in the kingdom of their Father; then shall be inaugurated a government that shall know no ending, no succession, no fear of usurpation, for none will ever combine the strength and wisdom this King has; for when this King is seated on his throne, with all his associate rulers—when he is exalted to the occupancy of his throne in Zion, then wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of his times. By the down-trodden of earth, the persecuted and tormented, this day is devoutly longed for, prayed for, and is an object of ardent hope. What an overturning of the hill and mountain governments in that day! Then many of those who have lived luxuriantly will be made to lick the dust, and then will be fulfilled the prophecy of Hannah—I Sam. 2:1-12; also that of Mary in Luke 1:48-56.

There is a consolation flowing out of the foregoing that those who suffer for Christ [illegible] shall reign with him [illegible] those who have been washed from the natural filthiness of flesh—who have done justly, loved mercy and walked uprightly, shall then be presented as the accepted of God, and the admired of the angels in heaven. For the coming of the King of kings and the establishment of a righteous government, let us, with the voice of prophets and apostles, cry, "Come, come!"

New York. G. W. Y.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 28, 1861.

No Paper Next Week.

This being Camp meeting week, we shall, "all hands," rest from our usual office labors, and will therefore issue no paper next week. This has been the custom of the office in past years, as most of our readers know. In our next issue we expect to give an account of the Camp meeting, and trust the report concerning it will be such as to cheer the hearts of those Christian friends who would be with us at Wilbraham if they could be.

Our next issue will close the present volume, and it will be necessary for our patrons to do all that lies in their power in the matter of remitting their arrearages on subscription and advancing the pay for the coming volume. Every number of the Crisis which we print we must pay for in cash, and for the means to do this we are dependent wholly upon our subscribers. Will each one do all they can to help carry the paper through the money crisis which presses so hard in every direction? If the CRISIS is sustained, it will be because those who read it love it well enough to read it at their own expense, as far as this is possible. Very many newspapers have stopped entirely on account of the hard times, while others are obliged to omit some of their regular issues. We have resorted to this latter expedient once, and shall have to do it sometimes in the future. In such cases our subscribers will have to count the omitted numbers among those for which they have paid. If this is a "war necessity," we trust they will not be disposed to complain.

Postage Stamps.

Persons sending Postage Stamps are requested to send us only the new kind. The old ones are worthless, and should we receive any, we shall have to return them to the parties sending them. ☞ Remember that none but the new stamps are of any value.

The Death Penalty.

"If ceasing to be, or non existence, is the punishment threatened, then men were punished before they were born; and those who fall asleep in Jesus are, for the time being, suffering the same punishment as those who die impenitent. On your theory, some of the righteous dead have been thus punished for the past 6000 years. And can you harmonize this with Scripture?"

Thus writes our friend W., and we do not hesitate to affirm that his plea for ceaseless torture is a very lame one. We will submit a few remarks for his consideration, hoping that his candid mind will not fail to appreciate certain bearings of the question with which he seems not yet to have become familiar. He does not desire controversy, but perceives, as he supposes, a conflict between our theory of future punishment and the teachings of scripture, and wishes us to harmonize the two, if we can.

Our first remark is, that W. must not expect us to "harmonize with scripture" the idea that "some of the righteous dead have been punished for the past 6000 years." The notion is opposed to scripture—it forms no part of our theory—and we steadfastly repudiate it. The punishment threatened is for the wicked—not for those who come to Christ for life. The latter class, in dying, "fall asleep in Jesus," but this condition—"in Jesus"—involves a relationship to the Fountain of Eternal Life and Blessedness which is incompatible with the idea of punishment. Whether the consistency of this disclaimer is in any way compromised by the assertion of literal death as the penalty of sin, will perhaps be apparent if we view the subject for a moment in the aspect in which our friend presents it.

Let us weigh his first statement. "If ceasing to be is the punishment threatened, then men were punished before they were born." We marvel that such a premise should be relied upon to support such a conclusion! What is the premise? That "ceasing to be is the threatened punishment." And what does this statement involve? We answer, It involves the actual living existence of a moral agent. This is so, (1.) because that cannot cease "to be" which has no being; and (2.) because a "threatened" punishment implies that the subject of the menace has an existence. If, then, "ceasing to be," as a threatened punishment, presupposes the previous existence of the subject of such punishment, it follows that our understanding of the "wages of sin" does not contain the absurd implication that "men were punished" before they had an existence, or, in the words of our friend, "before they were born."

W. does not, (whatever may be his opinion) affirm that "ceasing to be," forever, would not be a punishment to those by whom immortal bliss is attainable, and we therefore raise no argument on that point. But we deem it important to remind him that neither torment nor privation necessarily implies punishment. To suffer pain or to be deprived of desired good are both punishments only when they result from the voluntary infraction of known law, or law that might be known. (We speak of the Divine administration.) Applying this principle to the righteous and wicked dead, we observe that though both classes are—actually, not relatively—in "the same" condition, neither class are, even "for the time being," suffering punishment. They are dead by virtue of a law which sweeps all into the grave, irrespective of moral character. Their personal obedience or disobedience to moral claims has had nothing to do with the matter. "The creature was made subject to vanity, [mortality] not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20. The time approaches, however, when the manifestation of the sons of God will take place; when the saints who are held by the power of the grave are to receive an incorruptible life, by a resurrection from the dead, through the mighty working of him who is "the resurrection and the life." He is "alive forevermore," and has left us this assurance concerning the believer—"I will raise him up at the last day." The time, then, when all who will may have a deathless being, is "at the last day," and every moment of "non-existence" beyond this hour of deliverance "from the bondage of corruption," will be a period of punishment to all who have failed to lay hold on eternal life by faith in the Life Giver, Jesus Christ.

There are some who hold that the punishment of the wicked dead does not begin until a thousand years after the righteous dead have been glorified. This, we conceive, is equivalent to the assertion that the wicked will never be punished at all. The essence of the revealed death penalty is privation—the loss of all the joys to which the redeemed are admitted in God's everlasting kingdom; and as this privation is just as real during the first thousand years that follow this dispensation as it ever can be, the punishment must necessarily be as real during this period as it ever can be during the wasteless ages of eternity. We wonder that any intelligent believer in the doctrine of Immortality through Christ should dissent from this view, especially so since it rests upon the most positive testimony of the Word of God. "These," saith the Saviour, shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." There is no intimation here that the "life," which is mentioned last, is to be conferred a whole millennium before the infliction of the "punishment," which is mentioned first. The Apostle Paul brings out the truth on this point in the clearest manner in the first chapter of the second epistle to the Thessalonians. "And to you who are troubled REST with us, WHEN the the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking VENGEANCE on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power; WHEN he shall come to be GLORIFIED IN HIS SAINTS, and to be ADMIRED in all them that believe .... in that day." When do believers enter upon their eternal "rest"? Answer—"when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven." When is "vengeance" executed "upon them that know not God"? Answer—at the same time. When will Christ be "glorified" and "admired" in his saints? Answer—"when he shall come." When will "everlasting destruction" be inflicted upon them "that obey not the gospel"? Answer—at the same time. What countenance, then, does the Bible give to the opinion that the retribution of the impenitent does not run parallel with the entire period during which the righteous live to die no more? Answer—none at all.

Returning from this digression, we would express our hope that our friend W. will not hastily conclude that the literal interpretation of the death penalty does not "harmonize" with sound reason and the general tenor of Bible teaching. The gospel of the Son of God comes to dying men with the offer of deliverance from mortality by a new and imperishable life. Our present life "is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." How vastly important that we realize its frailty and fleetness, and that we secure and retain an interest in "Christ, who is OUR LIFE," that when he "shall appear" we may "also appear with him in glory."

"The conditions"—says another with whose words we conclude—"upon which the human family receive the Life, which is deposited for them in Christ, are so clearly revealed in the Word of God, as to preclude the necessity for mistake. If we would partake of the life and nature of the vine, a living bond of union must exist between us. God hath sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. And 'this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.' If we would partake of this life we must grasp firmly the Life Giver, by an unwavering faith. If we would enter into life we must keep his commandments. And if we thus patiently continue in well-doing, if we seek for glory, and honor, and immortality, God will grant to us, at the resurrection of the just, his priceless 'gift'—Eternal Life."

Personal Controversy.

We do not know that the letter from Bro. Rufus Robbins, found in another column, was intended for publication, but have no doubt it will be perused with interest. The "war question," as we stated two or three weeks ago, is not permanently excluded from the Crisis, and it is our purpose to give articles on the subject after a while. We have good reason to believe that a large portion of our readers would be pleased to see a further canvassing of the question. It is our opinion, however, that but a very small number would advise us to publish only on one side of the subject; but be the number greater or smaller, we should deem such a course on our part as unwise and unjust, to say nothing of the fact that truth is best elicited by presenting the different sides of a question.

But our object in referring to Bro. Robbins' letter was to answer his inquiry as to whether "no allusion to the articles of others is to be had" by those who write for the Crisis. We answer 1. That the regulation touching this matter does not preclude any expressions of approval of sentiments in the articles of others. 2. But on the other hand, it is intended to discountenance such expressions of disapproval of what others have written as would give them a right to reply. This does not prevent a writer from animadverting upon the sentiments of others, so long as he does not, by personal references or by the use of quotation marks, connect such sentiments with the individuals who hold them. We think the rule, properly understood, abridges no liberty of our correspondents which is essential in presenting truth or exposing error. At all events, its advantages are greater among the writers for and readers of this paper than its disadvantages. To illustrate: in our article on The Death Penalty we say there are some who believe that the wicked are not to receive their punishment until one thousand years after the Lord comes, and then we undertake to show that such a view is opposed by plain Bible testimony. As we have made no personal allusions in the statement, none can claim that they are specially entitled to be heard in reply. But suppose we had said—"The view we here oppose is held by Bro. Rufus Robbins, as may be seen by his article in such a number of the Crisis;" or suppose we should, omitting his name, quote his language in such a way as to render it clear to the reader that Bro. R. was intended,—the result forthwith would be, probably, that Bro. R. would either wish to show through the paper that we had misrepresented him, or that the position we attributed to him was the truth and that our reasoning on the subject was fallacious. In such a case, if we refused him a hearing, he might perhaps justly feel that we were "drawing the lines a little too close." As the matter now stands, should half a dozen persons send us articles defending the view which we say "some" hold, but which we reject, we would be left at liberty to publish such of them as presented the subject in the best and most conclusive manner—no personal considerations coming in to determine who should or should not have a hearing. But we have not time for further remark. If we have not made ourselves understood, we will try again at another time.

Severe Illness of Bro. Howell.

This morning's mail brought a letter from Sister Howell, mailed the 22d, for Bro. Grant, who is at the Camp Ground. Mrs. G. has permitted us to take a copy of it, and as the sad intelligence it contains will be of interest to so many, we give it to our readers. We have no heart for remarks, but trust it may please God to spare our dear brother's life. We write this on Saturday, 24th; if other intelligence reaches us before we go to press on Monday, we will add it to this.

Dear Bro. Grant:—I just pencil you a few lines to inform you of our present affliction, and that my husband will not be at the Camp meeting. Hemorrhage of the lungs has reduced him to the gates of death. He has had four severe bleeding turns since yesterday. We do not know now whether it is permanently stopped or not. He has not spoken aloud for twenty-four hours. It is dreadful to stand and see the blood pour out of his mouth. Do pray for us. I wish you were here. His mind is in a heavenly state. We keep ice on his chest, and watch every breath. My hand trembles and my heart is full. O, pray, pray for me. L. S. Howell.

☞ It was expected that Bro. D. T. Taylor would spend the 25th with the Hartford Church. We presume he did so, and that he will be at the Wilbraham meeting. At the time of going to press we have no later intelligence concerning Bro. Howell, which makes us hope that he is recovering.

Erratum.—"Dark Ages and Meteoric Showers"—the title of an article in the Crisis of Aug. 7th—should read "Dark Days and Meteoric Showers." The fault of the mistake was ours.

Appointments.—As we go to press on Monday, this week, notices and appointments reaching us on Tuesday morning cannot be inserted in the present number.

The Second Death.—One of our Connecticut subscribers desires us to ask Bro. J. T. Curry to give "an explication of the phrase second death, etc."

☞ We spent Sunday the 25th very pleasantly with the Church in Salem.

Not the Same Person.

Bro. S. G. Clark, in a recent letter, says: "I would be glad to know if you are the same brother that I used to know in Syracuse and Lodi, N. Y." I answer—I am not "the same brother," and never lived in either of those places. The individual whom you have in your recollection is Jonas Wendell, who lives in Edinborough, Pa. This explanation will correct an erroneous impression of Bro. John G. Hook, and possibly of some others to whom I am personally unknown. Editor.

Book Notices.

"What will become of the wicked? A Review of J. M. Cramp, D. D. By J. Lenfest, Cornwallis, N. S. 1861." This is an interesting tract of 24 pages, which does excellent execution upon the "address" of Dr. Cramp which was published at the request of "The King's County Baptist Ministerial Conference." We hope it may be widely scattered and do its share of the work of enlightening the world concerning man's nature and destiny as taught in the Bible. If Bro. Lenfest had made himself known to us when he was in our office, we should have been happy to have made his acquaintance and to have told him in person how much pleased we are with his tract. We thank him for advertising our paper and many of the books and tracts on sale at this office, on one page of his cover. We observe that he has omitted an "l" at the end of our name.

"A Tract for the Times. What is truth? or Divine Instruction to the Inquirer after Truth. By Thomas G. Newman, Seneca Falls, N. Y. 1861." All Scripture, and must be accepted as orthodox by all who believe the Bible. "Our object," says the author, "is not to undermine or destroy any of the Theological doctrines of the present day, but only to present the truths of inspiration in the plain and positive teachings of God's word; allowing the mistaken notions of men to fall Dragon-like before its powerful influences, and be crushed beneath the weight of its positive testimony."

"Anti-Tobacco Journal. Vol. I, No. 10. August and September, 1861." This excellent periodical is published by George Trask, Fitchburg, Mass., and the number before us is replete with useful matter. We bid Bro. Trask God-speed in his labor of love. In our inmost soul we have always abominated the use of "the weed" in all its forms as useless, filthy, unhealthy and expensive. We are settled in the belief that ninety-nine out of every hundred tobacco consumers know very well that the habit is an injurious one. How such persons can keep on good terms with their own consciences we do not understand. "If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy." If we used tobacco, we should think that text meant us, unless the habit had perverted our moral sense so much that we were "past feeling" on the subject. If you want to aid in putting down "the most popular sin under heaven," send for Bro. Trask's publications and scatter them among the sinners who need them. Each copy of the Journal can be divided and turned into a dozen or more Tracts, "short, spicy and readable." Published quarterly. Price $1 a year, postage paid.

"The Wise Shall Understand."

There are two thoughts suggested to the mind in the declaration of the prophet, "The wise shall understand," namely, who are the wise? and, what are they to understand? As to the characters referred to, we may remark, that the wisdom for which they are distinguished is not of an earthly character, but it is that which results from obedience to God. In this case it is true, as always, that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," and that to conform to the commands would, in the present, as in the case of the Israelites anciently, be wisdom and understanding. "Behold," says Moses, "I have taught you statutes, and judgments, even as the Lord my God commanded me, that ye should do in the land whither ye go to possess it. Keep therefore and do them, for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people." Who can fail to see the true sense in which the terms wise and wisdom are to be understood? The wise are the ones who are "purified, made white, and tried." It is this purifying process that fits them for the position which they are required to occupy. It is in their case as in the one referred to by the wise man, "Whoso keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing; and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment." The favor of God attends the spirit of faithfulness wherever found, and hence Amos, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth His secret unto His servants the prophets." This principle was clearly discovered in the case of Noah and the antediluvians. Noah was a righteous man and God favored him with that knowledge that proved his salvation; while of the wicked of that time it is said, "They knew not until the flood came and took them all away." Noah knew because he was wise; they were destitute of this moral fitness, and being so, were not prepared to see and embrace the light which proved salvation in the case of the patriarch and his family. To be wise, therefore, is to have that moral fitness which results from a conformity to the truth—"such shall understand."

What shall the "wise understand?" To say that the wise will understand the nature of the event to transpire at the end, is claiming nothing more for them than can be claimed for the wicked. Who does not know that there are now and always have been scores of wicked men who understand the great doctrines of the Bible? So that to affirm that the particular thing to be known or understood is the event that is to transpire, is, as above stated, claiming nothing more for the wise than the wicked can boast of.

Is it not evident that that which the wise are to understand is just what, at the time the angel was conversing with Daniel, constituted the subject of inquiry? The question had been asked, "How long to the end of these wonders"? The prophet says he heard, but he understood not; hence the question, "What shall be the end of these things?" Now, as to the first question, there can be no doubt of its import. "How long to the end" can mean but one thing; it refers to the precise length of time that was to elapse between a given point and the conclusion of a series of events. But as to the second question, namely, "What shall be the end of these things?" is not so clear, when we consider that an answer to the "When shall these things be" comprises the declaration, "It shall be for a time, times and a half," and also, the period during which the scattering of the power of the holy people is to be accomplished. In other words, the whole length of time which is to elapse from a given point to the resurrection is comprised within the time, times and a half and the period during which the scattering process is going on.

Daniel heard this question answered, but did not understand it. He without any question comprehended the period signified by the "time, times and a half," and also the event to transpire when the power of the holy people should be accomplished; but the length of time beyond "the time, times and a half," during which this scattering process would be going on, or the time it would require to accomplish it, was what he did not understand; hence the question, "What shall be the end of these things"? The "what" refers both to the duration and nature of the scattering, or to what shall transpire after the "time, times and a half" are finished, and also, the definite period, or length of time, during which this strange work is going on. The apostle Peter declares, that the prophets searched to know the "time" and the "manner of time." By the phrase "time," is undoubtedly meant the "when these things shall be." This was the opinion of Grotius, Doddridge, Bloomfield, Benson, Whitby, and others; but, in the phrase "manner of time," must be meant just what Daniel means by the question, "What shall be the end," etc. The prophet wanted to know the when and the what, and hence Peter says, "Searching what (time) or what manner of time." On this last phrase Dr. Barnes says, "This phrase, in Greek, would properly relate, not to the exact time when these things would occur, but to the character or condition of the age when they would take place. * * * Perhaps, however, the inquiry in their minds pertained to the time when the predictions would be fulfilled, as well as to the condition of the world when the event takes place."

Now that we are right in supposing that the prophet had in his eye both the natnre and time of the event or events to transpire, after the "time, times and a half," is evident from the instruction that follows. First, he speaks of the moral condition of mankind—the wicked, as being very wicked; and the opposite class, as being "purified, made white, and tried"; and without doubt, we have in this purifying process, in this "tried" condition and its causes, just what is referred to previously, namely, "The scattering of the power of the holy people." He had already been apprized of the fact that, at the time of the end, "many should run to and fro, and knowledge should be increased"; hence this running to and fro, the purifying and trying of many, and the wicked (servant) doing wickedly, mark, in a particular manner, the time of the end—the last of the last days. Second. On the question of the time, the angel imparts two additional distinct thoughts, namely, he states when the period, first named, is to commence, namely, "From the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days"; and then he gives the exact time required to accomplish the scattering of the power of the holy people, namely, the excess of the 1335 days over the 1290 days, a period of forty-five days, or years, in length. Hence to understand, in the sense of the declaration of the angel, involves a knowledge of the time as well as of the events; and whether it be understood at present is not the question. Men may disbelieve, commit blunders, make mistakes, set the time at the waxing and waning of every moon, be disappointed a score of times, get mad, call it a humbug, deny that it has any reference to the time of the Savior's coming, regret their mistakes, preach against Millerism, tell what fools Adventists are, or have been, and yet the word remains, like God himself, ever and unchanged. It reads the same and means the same, and will receive a complete fulfillment. He who cannot lie declares, "the wise"—those who are purified, made white and tried—"shall understand." Even so let it be.

F. H. B.

The New Earth.

"Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

What glory clusters around this promise! How much real satisfaction there is in its contemplation! New heavens and new earth! What music there is in these words! How cheering to the way-worn, toiling pilgrim, who is striving for the city of God! Only think, not only new heavens, but, what is more glorious, a new earth filled with righteousness! Death will be vanquished, and his long reign broken up; the curse will be entirely gone, gone forever. The promise cannot fail, "As truly as I live, saith the Lord, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." "Hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?" Thanks to the Lord God, it is impossible for him to fail in fulfilling this word of promise; the word that has gone forth out of his mouth "shall not return" unto him void; it shall accomplish that which he please, and shall prosper in the thing whereunto he sent it.

The Seraphim cried in the hearing of the prophet, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts—the whole earth is full of His glory." This never has been, but it will be. His will will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. Holiness shall reign, peace shall wave her sceptre, the banner of love shall proclaim victory—everlasting and eternal victory. The hill-tops of paradise, and the fair fields of Beulah shall be baptized in the sunlight of heaven, while the sparkling waters of life shall again flow through Eden restored. And this to be enjoyed by his people, for "the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. There will be no more death"; and this is the very reason why the "perfect shall remain in it." They shall neither fall by disease nor the sword. "Violence shall no more be heard in the land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders." This certainly will be a new order of things, no violence nor death; the curse with all its concomitants shall be removed; then the tabernacle of God will be with men, and "He will dwell with them, and they shall be his people." God himself shall dwell with them and be their God, "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things have passed away." They dwell before his throne and "serve him day and night in his temple." "They shall hunger no more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat; for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them to living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

The change is not to be or consist in simply making the earth new; this would amount to but little if man was to remain in sin, and death was to reign; but the creature must be changed, the mind renewed, the heart made new, the man converted, so that the will of God will become the rule of his life, to do it his meat and drink. The earth being regenerated, and man so changed in mind and body as to be adapted to it—to its glorified condition, all things then indeed will be new. Then the heavenly harps will sing, "Worthy the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory and blessing," while resounding praise shall echo back, "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth" forever and forevermore. Amen.

F. H. B.

New Tract.—By H. V. Reed, entitled, "Sprinkling not Baptism."

This is a tract of sixteen pages. It abounds with quotations from, and references to, classical authors, lexicographers and modern writers. The writer has, we think, very clearly shown—1st. That the Greek word, which, in our translation, is rendered baptize, affords not the least support for sprinkling. 2. That the mode of baptism practised by the apostles and disciples was immersion. 3. That there is nothing in the New Testament to authorise infant sprinkling.

F. H. B.

New Pamphlet.—A Discussion of the immortality of the Soul and the Destruction of the Wicked, between Eld. William Sheldon and Theodore Brooks.

This is a work containing 134 pages, and is very interesting. The men are men of ability, and both sides of these questions are clearly presented. Both of the disputants show a familiarity with the subject. Upon reading this pamphlet, one can but impressed with the fact that Mr. B. has an aptness to talk, while S. shows an aptness to teach.

F. H. B.

For the Crisis.

Calamities.

"Yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast."

Calamities have ever formed a part of the inheritance belonging to human beings since the world began. Our first parents, while walking in the sunshine of their paradise home, scarcely dreamed of the sad reverse of fortune that awaited them; but suddenly in one day there fell upon them, because of their disobedience, the first calamity ever known to them in all their life time of bliss before. They were driven from the sacred retreat of their eden bower, and bidden to earn their bread in the sweat of their brow, while sorrows upon every hand should be multiplied unto them, until they should return to the dust from whence they were taken. And ever since that eventful period one continued succession of calamities has rested upon their doomed posterity, without any way of escape, save in the promise of a merciful God, that the "seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head." From that glad moment hope sprung up in the stricken heart, and in every age of the world, under all and every circumstance of life, the tried and troubled sons and daughters of earth, trusting in God for deliverance, have been enabled to adopt the language of the Psalmist, "Yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast."

As individuals, and as a nation of people, we have passed through sore tribulation, long and continued conflict, to purchase the heaven sent boon of liberty we now enjoy. The blood of our forefather's freely flowed that we, their children, might receive from their hand the sacred gift, and impart to others as freely as we had received it. But, instead of doing this at all times, we have become great in our own eyes, and "concerning oppression we have spoken loftily;" yea, in the language of the prophet, "they are waxen fat, they shine, yea, they overpass the deeds of the wicked, they judge not the cause, the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper, and the right of the needy do they not judge." "Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord, shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?" When God speaks we should listen. All the offences of which the prophet complains are in our midst as a people, and clinging to our skirts are the wrongs of four millions of helpless men, women and children; and because of this, one of the greatest calamities that has ever befallen us since we became a nation has burst upon us—has desolated our homes, driven consternation to every face, and threatens to drench our land with blood. And again, in view of our abused mercies, we have only to ask ourselves the question, in the language of the prophet, "Hast thou not procured this unto thyself, in that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, when he led thee by the way, and now thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee; know therefore and see that it is an evil and bitter thing that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord God of hosts. Then let us turn from the error of our ways, and rend our heart and not our garments." Let us pray for our enemies, who would in their blindness seek to destroy themselves and us; let us not wantonly seek their blood, but their repentance toward God, and their reconciliation to man. Let us be patient in our tribulations and Christ-like in our spirit, leaving the issue of our troubles in the hands of Him who hath said he executeth righteousness and judgment for all who are opprest. Thus the christian may ever find a hiding place in the yea and amen promises of the blessed Lord Jesus: and, while those who are destitute of this precious shelter are tossed to and fro upon the billows of doubt and uncertainty, the christian may comply with the invitation, "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as is were for a moment, until the indignation be overpast. "And then when we have sufficiently endured the chastisements of the Lord, we shall come forth as gold tried and purified, and better enabled to appreciate our blessings as a people—"to love mercy, deal justly, and walk humbly with our God."

Neal's Creek, Ind. M. A. T.

For the Crisis.

Contentment.

Contentment embraces in itself all the blessed fruits of the Spirit. Those who possess it are blest with the following fruits: They have love to the nature, commands and ways of God; the love of christian fellowship to all who give evidence of their adoption into the family of God; and the love of pity to all men, their greatest enemies not excepted. They have a holy and solid joy wrought in them by the Holy Ghost, by which they rejoice in the past and present goodness of God, and in the hope of greater favors. They have peace of conscience by the pardon of all sin; peace with God by having the enmity of their heart slain, and by being reconciled to God through the Son of his love; peace toward the people of God, and, as much as in them lies, live peaceably with all men. They are long suffering under all afflictions and injuries; though provoked to anger and revenge, yet patient and forgiving. They are not fierce and voracious, like the devouring lion and merciless tiger; but gentle and mild, like the unoffending lamb or the innocent dove. They have good tempers of heart—good words, actions, and motives of action. They have a living, operative faith in God and his word. They are meek, not rough in temper, and proud, but soft, calm and humble. They are temperate in eating, drinking, sleeping and dressing. Gal. 5: 22, 23. They are blest with a hope full of immortality, which gives great consolation, and enables them to rejoice in God, with joy unspeakable and full of glory. And if they enjoy contentment in that degree which the gospel makes to be their privilege, they see the hand of God in all things, and are resigned and cheerful under all his dispensations. Obedience is their delight; the use of all the means of grace becomes profitable and delightful. None is more so than the one of holding a familiar converse with God in prayer. They discover such a beauty in the divine character and conduct, in the plan of salvation, and in the commands and promises of God, that their souls are often overwhelmed and lost in praise. They clearly see that sickness and health, life and death, are always best when God sends them. Willing that God should hold the reins of government, they rest themselves in the arms of his wise and gracious providence, with a comfortable assurance that all things shall work together for their good.

These views, together with the love of God shed abroad in the heart, constitute the earnest of an inheritance, incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. In short, the contented enjoy all the blessings of the new covenant, or they are pressing on to the enjoyment of them, as far as they are promised in this life, and are happy as far as happiness consists with a state of trial. And when Jesus comes to put a period to their warfare, they are so far from being overwhelmed with fear, that they can cry aloud, "this is our God; we have been waiting for him, and he will receive us, and we shall live with him forever and ever!" C. Diggett.

Bangor, Me., Aug. 17, 1861.

For the Crisis.

False Illustration.

A preacher of universal salvation thus, in substance, illustrated the position of God and the sinner. A son has left his father's house, and is wandering far from home. His father seeks his return, and for this purpose sends a messenger to plead with him, and to offer him joy, peace, and plenty. The messenger, instead of following his directions, threatens the son with the wrath and implacable vengeance of the father unless he returns. In this illustration the course the messenger took was supposed to be the course of the Orthodox clergy, and the true message which he should have preached was the course of the Universalists.

I consider this illustration to be a false one, because it is one-sided and incomplete. The disposition of man is not represented, neither is his danger alluded to. It is as though an alienation between God and man was all the trouble that existed, and God's only purpose was to bring about a reconciliation.

Let us examine the points of the illustration. A son has left home. Is that all? We might suppose that he left of his own choice against his father's will. Is this all? Does not the son think himself better off where he is than at home? Does he not hate his father? And, above all, is he not in great danger, of which he is not aware? Yes, all this is true, and should have been mentioned in the illustration, and whatsoever the father would do to cause him to be willing to return, must recognize all these facts, or fail to accomplish its purpose. God has recognized all these in man, and has planned and revealed in accordance with the whole. He has sent forth his messengers to lay before rebellious man the whole matter. He has not told them to preach peace and love alone. This would have but little effect on the hardened sinner, who loves his own way best, and is careless of the future. In connection with the peace which God offers, must be preached "there is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." In connection with the love of God must be preached that this love was manifested that "whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life."

God has decreed certain things which shall come to pass though heaven and earth pass away. Among the things decreed are the facts that the wicked are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished, and that then they shall be punished with everlasting destruction. That the day for this has been appointed, and that there is no name given under heaven among men whereby they may be saved but the name of Jesus, and "he that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."

God warns man of "things not seen as yet," and urges him to accept salvation; which his own love has wrought out in his behalf, that he may not perish with things temporal. The things not seen are the scenes of the "day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." God decrees this day—the Universalist says it shall never come. Reader, which do you believe?

Honeoye, N. Y. Frank Burr.

Obituary Notice.

Died, in Springville, July 9th, 1861, Sister Adaline Cale, in the thirtieth year of her age.

Sister Cale was converted under the labors of the writer, in the winter of 1860, and baptized by him in the month of February. She immediately united with the Springville church, since which time she has been a faithful follower of Christ. She was prompt in her attendance at meetings, and loved to listen to an unadulterated gospel. She remembered the prayer meetings, for there her soul was often refreshed. She was not sparing in her efforts to support the gospel. Her influence was on the side of unpopular truth. She was a strong believer in immortality only through Christ at the resurrection. In her last hours she evinced a readiness, and expressed a willingness, to sleep in Jesus.

It was Sister Cale's dying request that the writer should preach her funeral sermon. Being absent at the time of her death, I preached the discourse a month afterwards, from the following words: "I will redeem them from the power of the grave: I will deliver them from death." She leaves a husband, father, mother, brothers and sisters to weep over her. May the Lord support Bro. Cale. He has lost a faithful companion, the church a worthy member, and the community a respected neighbor. Sister Cale sleeps, to be awakened by the voice of the Son of God, to die no more. She will soon be gathered with the Master's jewels.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

W. Sheldon.

Married.

In New Bedford, August 25th, by Francis H Brick, Mr. Lorenzo Littlefield to Miss Lizzie Ann Ely.

Correspondence.

From Bro. I. K. Lombard.

You suggested in your kind note, some time ago, that my name had better be published as the author of the "Coming Struggle." My reason for withholding my name was, principally, that I thought the article would be more likely to pass for what it is worth without, than with a known signature. As brethren have had time, now, to weigh the matter, and draw their own conclusions, I am willing that you should use my name according to your own inclination, to publish or not.

I was sorry to find a notice in the Crisis reminding us that a "truce" of several months was thought best on the war question. I would not think it best to publish everything received, be it much or little; but it strikes me that a judicious selection could be made sufficient to supply two or three columns each week. This, I think, would be acceptable to all parties.

I would like to inquire through the Crisis, whether some reader of the same has not Sanders' Reader, Third or Fourth, in which is found a representation of the "spirit land" under the dream of an Indian, and accredited to Knickerbocker? If so, will they please forward it to the Crisis for publication? It is the best representation of the "spirit land" as commonly held, that I have seen, and yet, a burlesque on common sense.

Aug. 15, 1861.

From Bro. W. Sheldon.

Bro. Wendell:—Our grove meeting near Ironton was attended by Elders G. W. Barnes and G. W. Turner, who assisted in preaching the word. Sunday was a rainy day. This kept many at home. Three were intending to be baptized, but owing to the rain it was put off till another time. Have appointed another grove meeting near Baraboo, (on the old ground,) to commence on Sept. 14th. At our last meeting there, I baptized three; since the meeting, Bro. Barnes has baptized three more; and now others are requesting baptism. May the work go on. Amen.

Springville, Wis., Aug. 13th, 1861.

"Put away from thee a froward mouth, and perverse lips put far from thee."

"The way of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what they stumble."

"Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men."

"Better is a dry morsel, and quietness therewith, than an house full of sacrifices and strife."

Notices, &c.

Notice.

The Lord willing, I will be at the Wilbraham Camp Meeting. Collinsville, Wednesday, Sept. 4th Newfield, Sunday, Sept. 8th. Sandisfield Camp Meeting. At intermediate dates I would like to call on brethren in Springfield, Hartford, Pleasant Valley, Bakerville and Winsted. I shall have with me books from the "Millennial Harbinger" office, also its subscription list, on which I will receive payments due, and solicit new subscribers.

Honeoye, N. Y. Frank Burr.

To Western Friends.

I have received from Bro. Hastings another lot of tracts, supplied from the "Tract Fund." Brethren or sisters wishing packages of them, must enclose enough money or stamps to pay the postage on them. Hope soon to receive many orders, that the tracts may be scattered and doing their work. Also, tracts and books on hand for sale. Orders accompanied with the cash will be attended to immediately. All orders must be directed to me at Moline, Illinois. N. Branch, Jr.

Grove Meeting.

The brethren in this place who are looking for the return of their Lord have concluded to hold a grove meeting, commencing Sept. 16th, to continue through the week, over the following Lord's day, and as much longer as the Lord will. The meeting is about thirty-four miles north of New York city, five miles east of Sing Sing, and three-fourths of a mile west of Pleasantville Depot. Bro. H. Pratt and others are expected to be present and preach the word. All who love the appearing of our dear Lord we cheerfully invite to come and labor with us. Come, dear brethren, here is a new field to labor in.

For the brethren, Wm H. Wild.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a Grove Meeting in Amherst, Maine, on the farm of Frances Foster, in a beautiful grove, on the bank of Union River, commencing Thursday, Sept. 12th. Brn. John Billings, Israel Damon and D. A. Jones are expected to be present to preach the word of Life; also Bro. James Hemenway is invited to be present (James, will you come?) Also a cordial invitation is extended to all the ministering brethren, as this is a new field, and many have become interested and are anxious to have a Grove Meeting, and want to hear more concerning the gospel hope. We hope that the brethren and sisters will come, for doubtless there will be a large gathering. At this place there is a waking up and deep interest felt in all this region concerning the coming and kingdom of Jesus Christ. This meeting will commence Sept. 12th, and continue over the Lord's day. In behalf of the Church, L. Wetherbee.

Campmeeting in Maine.

There will be a Campmeeting in Exeter, Me., near the old spot, by the Chamberlin meeting-house, commencing the first Monday in September next and continuing over the Sabbath. Brethren coming from the West by cars will stop at Newport, where there will be teams provided to convey them to the meeting. Those coming by water will come to Bangor, where they also will find teams in waiting. There will be a Boarding Tent on the ground to accommodate all who wish for board. We hope all who purpose to attend this meeting will be on the ground as early in the week as possible, and all who can will bring their tents and bedding as they will be very convenient for ourselves and for those who will not be able to bring them.

P. S. We shall meet the brethren on the steamboat wharf on the arrival of the first boat in the week, and if there are any who cannot come on that day, if they will inform us through the Crisis, or by private letter to D. E. Ireland, North Hermon, on what day they will be at Bangor, we will send a team for them. In behalf of the brethren,

Daniel E. Ireland,
Holis Cole,
Nelson Patten, } Committee.

Conference.

The Northern Illinois Conference of Adventists will be held in Shabbona, at Shabbona Grove, west side, near Bro. Norton's, commencing Sept 4th, at 7 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. Bro. Chandler is expected with the New England mission tent. Provision will be made for those who cannot carry their provisions. All other preachers are invited to come. Come, dear brethren, in the name of the Lord, to labor for the salvation of men, for Jesus soon is coming. H. G. McCulloch,

Secretary of Conference.

Tent Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a Grove Meeting on the old ground, at the south side of Peach Pond, in North Salem, N. Y., four miles south-east of Brewster's Station, on the Harlem R. R., commencing Wednesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., on the 4th day of September, and continuing over Sunday. Friends are invited to come, with tents and provisions. H. L. Hastings and others are expected to be present and preach the gospel of the kingdom of God. Hachaliah Bailey.

Camp Meeting.

A Camp Meeting will be held in the town of Sandisfield, eleven miles from Winsted depot, on the daily stage route from Winsted to Barrington, commencing Sept. 9th and continuing over the following Lord's day. Railroad fare from Hartford to Winsted $1.25; stage fare from Winsted to the camp ground 40 cents. Bro. H. L. Hastings is expected at this meeting, and others who are competent to meet the expectations of the people at such a meeting. We should be glad to extend a general invitation to the preaching brethren, with the assurance that they would be remunerated. We will say that the preachers who make the sacrifice to come, shall be provided for while here. Board for man and beast will be provided on reasonable terms. We hope to see all the brethren from the Farmington and Naugatuck valleys here, with their tents, to enjoy a feast in a dry and beautiful grove.

A. D. Smith,
Henry Sage,
Alonzo Waterman,
Abner Webster.

Wm. A. Fenn, in behalf of the Committee.

Camp Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a Camp Meeting in the town of Dover, N. Y., about three miles from South Dover Station, Harlem R. R., three and one half miles from South Kent Station, Housatonic R. R., Conn., and one and a half miles west of Bull's Bridge, Housatonic River, to commence Sept. 10th, 1861, and held over the following Sunday. As this is a new field, and many have become interested, and are anxious to have a Camp Meeting, and want to hear more concerning the gospel hope, we hope that the preaching brethren will come filled with the Spirit of the gospel, and labor for the good of those that may come to this meeting. Brethren and sisters, also, come to labor, come with tents, and bedding and provisions as far as convenient. Arrangements will be made to keep horses, and also provide for those that cannot bring their own provisions.

All preaching brethren who may feel sent by the Lord to this meeting, we heartily invite to come.

Stephen B. Munn,
George L Teeple,
Charles Gardiner,
Hiram Olivet, } Committee.

The Maine Annual Advent Conference.

The next session of this Conference will be held in Yarmouth, (in the Institute occupied by the Advent Church) Wednesday, Sept. 11th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren there intend to make ample provision for all the friends who attend. Those who come by cars, if on the Kennebec and Portland R. R., will leave the cars at Yarmouth Junction, about half a mile from the meeting. Those coming on the Waterville, Farmington, or Grand Trunk R. R., will leave at Yarmouth Station, a few rods from the meeting. Those coming from the Penobscot can take the boat to Portland, then the Grand R. R., eleven miles to Yarmouth. Call on George W. Harvey, George Humphrey, and R. R. York. It will be a good place for another friendly greeting of the pilgrims in this time of trouble. It may be the last. We hope to see all the Advent ministers of Maine who can work and worship in harmony and union, and as many other such brethren and sisters as can well attend. H. B. Sevey, President.

I. C. Wellcome, Secretary.

Richmond, Me., Aug. 1st '61.

Michigan Grove and Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a Grove and Campmeeting in the town of Holly, Oakland County, Michigan, to commence Sept. 4th, 1861, and continue over Lord's day, and longer if thought proper. The meeting is to be held on the farm of Bro Hiram Austin, five miles north and east of Holly Depot, situated on the Detroit and Milwaukie, R. R., and about one and a half miles east of the plank road leading from Holly to the city of Flint. And now, my dear brethren and sisters throughout the State of Michigan, I wish to give you all a short, but warm and earnest invitation to come to this gathering of the saints. As this is the first meeting of the kind ever held in the State, we do hope and pray most fervently that all brethren and sisters who can possibly arrange their domestic affairs, will come with tents and provisions to the encampment, and spend a week with each other in a warm-hearted love feast. The times call for such an assemblage. The signs in the natural, moral and political world are agitating multitudes, and they are inquiring, "What things are coming on the earth?" The times are most eventful. Our blessed Savior is soon coming on the earth, and now is a good time, my brethren, to work for God, for one another and for perishing humanity around us. Come, then, to this meeting; come with warm hearts; come filled with and praying in the Holy Ghost; come with a zeal worthy of the hope you cherish; come with Jesus stamped upon your affections; come abundantly prepared to take care of yourselves and others. Come from Grand Blanc, Flint, Saginaw, Flushing, Davison, Richfield, Tyrone, Pleasant Valley, Ypsilanti, Nankin, Grand Rapids, Detroit. Come from all over the State. This is not a sectional meeting because of peculiar views, but it embraces all that love the Lord's appearing and want to be saved when Jesus appears. Come, one and all, to glorify God, and come so as to be on the ground at the commencement of the meeting; do not fail in this. Let our noble and enterprising Sisters take hold of this cause and we are sure of success, by the blessing of God. Brethren Wolverton, Anable, Jerome, Roberts, Skinner, Doty, Richards, Adams, Austin, Servis, and the church generally through that section, are alive for such a gathering.

We hope to see as many of our preaching brethren from the different parts of the State as can come, and this invitation does not exclude any out of the State. We hope that if any of the servants of Christ in other States, or coming from the east about that time, will arrange to attend this meeting.

In behalf of the church,
A. N. Seymour.

Notice.

The next Rhode Island Quarterly Conference will meet at Rocky Brook, R. I., the last Wednesday in September. An invitation has been extended to the Conference from Exeter, and Lafayette and Rocky Brook churches. According to my instructions from the Conference, I have located it at Rocky Brook. M. R. Phettteplace, Clerk.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Manchester, N. H. .... Sunday, Sept. 1.
West Deerfield .... Sept. 6th, 2 o'clock, P. M.
Sunday, Sept. 8th, where Bro. Emerson may appoint.
J. G. SMITH.

Holden, Me. .... Sept. 4.
Burlington, Me., (where Bro. S. C. Page may appoint) .... Sept. 15.
Will the friends be there from Lincoln and arrange for meetings in their vicinty?
D. A. JONES.

Abington, (Bro. Huntington's charge) .... Sept. 1.
JOSEPH D. BROWN.

Jamaica, (Rawsonville, Vt.,) Sunday, Sept. 1st and stop till the 4th.
Hebron, N. Y., Sept. 5th and stop over Sunday.
Addison, Vt. .... Sept. 9th, at 7 o'clock, P. M.
Chateaugay, N. Y., Sept. 10th and stop over Sunday.
R. V. LYON.

Lovely Street, Ct. .... Aug. 25.
Wrightville .... Sunday, Sept. 8.
C. GOODRICH.

Bristol .... Sunday, Sept. 1.
LEWIS GUN.

Massena, N. Y. .... Sundays, Sept. 8th and 15th.
M. BATCHELOR.

Campton, N. H. .... Sept 1.
Sandwich (Wm. Shaw's School-house) .... Sept. 2.
L. C. GLAZIER.

Roxbury, Ct., (where Bro. Buckingham may appoint) .... Aug. 25.
South Dover, N. Y. (at Bro. Olivit's) .... Aug 30.
Pawling, N. Y. .... Sept. 1.
Brewster Station .... Sept. 3.
T. S. CANFIELD.

Nottingham, N. H. .... Aug. 23d, 24th and 25th.
Lee, N. H. .... Aug. 30th, 31st and Sept. 1.
Monday, Sept. 2d, take boat for Bangor and Exeter Campmeeting, Me.
L. BOUTELL.

Hartford, Ct. .... Sept. 8th.
Will further arrange with brethren who have requested my labors in Connecticut, at the Camp Meeting.
P. B. MORGAN.

East Otis .... Aug. 25.
Chester Factories .... Aug. 27 and 28.
Dalton .... Sept. 1.
Wells Forge .... Sept. 8.
J. K. BELLOWS.

Danbury .... Sept. 1.
Tuftonborough .... Sept. 8.
Holderness, (Tabernacle) .... Sept. 15.
Barnstead, (Clark M. H.) .... Aug. 22.
T. W. PIPER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

S. G. Clark: You are entitled to as many copies of Hudson's Tract as you have paid for. Where shall we send them? We ask because you have left Wales, Ill.

Cash Receipts.

B E Thompson, extra, 24 cts; J Howard 307, 36 cts; Mrs. E A W Lake 299, 63 cts; Mrs. H Dunning 375, $3.00; C. N. Fisk 321,—50 cts.

D F Corey, H Haynes, R Matterson, T Inman, J Bochard, A K Miller, W Taft, J L Himes, W Davis, G Winslow, are to 334,—80 cts. each—$8.00.

L P Fox 286, P M Weaver 312, G L Makepeace 312, W F Collier 312, H B Gilbert 293, D D Haines 317, Eli Skinner 334, T Wigfall 309, J W Simmons 312, J H F Varney 335, Sarah Weston 312, Perley Curtis 282, R Robbins 338, Warren Moore 312, Jer. Small 334, J C Pease 286, D Bump 325,—$1.00 each.

L Bates 296, Geo. Sutton 376, C H Sutton 378, S Timberlake 338, D C Tourtelot 334, Wm. Lucas 334, T L Saltonstall 332, M H Irish 336, D W Perry 338, E T Hobbs 330,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

I K Lombard for H L Hastings $5.00, J Pinkham 6 cts, M H Irish 50 cts, Mrs. Dunning 7 cts, J Mc Cameron $1.00.

Books and [Tracts.]

Law requires all transient [papers to] be pre-paid; hence, persons [wishing] books or tracts, must send enough to [pre-pay] postage. The postage on tracts is only [a] half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of Immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 2 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruah and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 14 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, of Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, comp' by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of [touch]ing incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment, collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price [illegible] 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Bacons, No. 3 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I. [illegible]

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusions; Bible Hell; [illegible] Foster's Letter and Tracts [illegible]

[illegible]ions and an Inquiry.

[illegible] Wendell:—I do not wish to in[illegible] with the management of the Crisis, [illegible] merely to suggest a few thoughts for [illegible] consideration of those who have the management of it. Was it an act of wisdom to exclude the "war question" from its columns? To whom does the Crisis belong? Was it not the property of its subscribers, and that they should have the right, at all times, to express their thoughts through its columns, subject only to this restriction—that no personal controversy nor unkind words towards others should be tolerated? I am confident that the affirmation of this question is the truth. That the Crisis is the property of its subscribers, is recognized in the "editorial" of May 14th, '56, thus:—"Were the paper private property, it would be quite different, but our interests are MUTUAL." In a note from F. H. B., contained in the Crisis of July 10th, '61, the right of its subscribers is fully acknowledged. Respecting an article he inserted in the paper during the absence of the Editor, Bro. B. says:—

"1st. It" (the article) "was written by one of the subscribers of the Crisis." (This is one reason given why Bro. B. inserted the article in the Crisis, and implied the right of the subscriber to its columns.)

"4th. There is no reason why brethren differing in sentiments should not have the privilege of expressing their sentiments in a christian-like manner."

"5th. It is too late in the day to undertake to stifle conviction, or prevent investigation."

"6th. It is not a sufficient reason why I should reject an article simply because I believe the writer is advocating error; to do this, would not only inflict a wrong upon such person, by depriving him of his right to a hearing," etc.

Why, then, should the subscribers of the Crisis be deprived of the privilege of expressing through its columns their sentiments in regard to the "war question?" These questions and these allusions are not the fruits of bitterness; they are designed merely to remind the managers of the Crisis of the rights of others, and that the rights of every one ought to be respected.

The principal object I have in view is, to suggest the propriety of discussing at this time, the "war question," which propriety appears from several reasons.

1. It is a subject which is fraught with momentous consequences to the church. It is either their bounden duty to bear arms at this time, or it is not their duty. The gospel requires them to establish a princple in regard to this subject, one way or the other. Hence, the subject ought to be discussed till it is rendered sufficiently plain that no one need mistake his duty as to this matter. A wrong course in this, as well as in other cases, may lead to inevitable perdition.

2. As the "war question" is a subject of deep interest to the church at the present time, arising from the latest grand occurrence in the providence of God, it becomes the leading item in "present truth" till some future development of God's purposes shall place some other question in advance of this. Therefore it should be freely discussed. Without the leading item in "present truth," the word of truth cannot be rightly divided, nor meat in due season be given. In the language of another, "The world changes—the church in her history changes—all changes. There is but one spot in all the book of God which will fit the church to-day. The word of God which fits the church to-day must be known, that she may know what she is and where she is." In regard to discussing the "war question," I adopt the sentiment expressed by the Editor in the Crisis of May 29th, '61, thus:—"The subject is a deeply interesting one, and now is the time to scatter light upon it."

One question more. In regard to the writers for the Crisis not having "any reference to the articles written by others." Is it to be understood that no allusion to the articles of others is to be had, even without naming the writer? If so, I think it is drawing the lines a little too close. The object aimed at in writing for a religious publication should be, to disseminate truth in the love of it. But man is fallible—liable to err. And, as error can do no one any good—we being sanctified through the truth, if sanctified at all—all error should be combatted by the truth. But many are the instances in which error appears so strongly fortified, that a simple statement of its opposing truth will produce but little effort, when, by attacking it in its intrenchments, it may be driven out into the open field, where it can be seen in all its horrid deformity. And thus many, who, otherwise would continue to feast themselves upon the mephitic refections of error, would abandon those poisonous luxuries, and receive instead the living bread which comes down from heaven. Hence, disputed points should be suitably [illegible] not for the mere sake of gaining [illegible] triumph; [illegible] nestly for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from DEATH, and shall hide a multitude of sins." Yours in love of the truth as it is in Jesus.

R. Robbins.

For the Crisis.

A Righteous King.

History affords ample testimony to sustain the assertion that wicked and unrighteous kings have borne sway. By the exercise of the power in them vested, they have manifested all the evil workings of sinful flesh; by their position their acts have become patent to the world; being elevated among the common people, all they did was made note of; and to-day what a sad spectacle is presented us in the corrupt systems of kingcraft as they obtain in the old world. The same spirit is not confined to men who are called kings; it is in emperors, princes, dukes, dictators and presidents. Witness the overbearing manner in which they rule. Let the question come up, why should they thus act, and the answer is, because by the overawing of the common mind they keep them in subjection, and by these means maintain their name and place. Once permit the mass to move in a direction of their own, and in consequence of ill treatment they will assert their native right, and make unto themselves a government suiting their ideal—republics for example. It has ever been the feeling inherent in enlightened humanity, for them to withdraw from under that system of goverment which did not comport with their wants and necessities—the American revolution, and still later, the Italian uprising, for example. The wants of the human family must be met if they can be, and the many forms of government under which we have lived plainly argues the necessity of a form which must supercede all before.

Righteousness is the professed form of all governments; they are professedly for the protection of the well, and punishment of the evil doer. If history and facts were in agreement, then we might believe that human governments are what they profess to be. But what do we find? Why, the nearer the throne or place of power, the greater the rascality. How often are we shocked when examining committees are appointed to ferret out some delinquencies charged against those who occupied place and power. The report of these committees show most plainly where the corruptness lies. Self-aggrandizement is a predominant feature of humanity, from the beggar to the king upon his throne; in the professional beggar it shows itself the same in character as it does in the king. If I could believe that selfishness was the exception and not the rule, then I could believe that out of an unclean thing a clean could be brought. This cannot be by any means human.

The want of ability in man to govern himself, presents before us the necessity of ONE who is more than man, and who alone can govern him. This individual is set forth by prophets as a prophet like unto Moses. This prophet is Jesus. See Deut. 18:15 and Acts 3:22. By another he is set forth as a King that should reign in righteousness, and associated with him in the administration of the world's affairs princes should rule in judgment. It is conclusively and satisfactorily settled in my mind that the affairs of this world cannot be attended to, and all things properly adjusted, unless God intervenes. In the time appointed of God he sent forth his Son, born of a woman, made under the law, that he might redeem those who were under the law; also, in the fullness of the times of the Gentiles, God will again send forth this Son, with full power and commission to rule and reign in the midst of his enemies; his government will be just and equitable; nothing shall intimidate the execution of a sovereign will; his princes will be all righteous! The executors of his will, who shall withstand them? When this day dawns—when the bright and morning star shall manifest itself in all its splendor and glory—when this sun shall shine in undimmed effulgence on those who are made alive by the healing of his beams—then, ah! then shall the righteous shine forth in the kingdom of their Father; then shall be inaugurated a government that shall know no ending, no succession, no fear of usurpation, for none will ever combine the strength and wisdom this King has; for when this King is seated on his throne, with all his associate rulers—when he is exalted to the occupancy of his throne in Zion, then wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of his times. By the downtrodden of earth, the persecuted and tormented, this day is devoutly longed for, prayed for, and is an object of ardent hope. What an overturning of the hill and mountain governments in that day! Then many of those who have lived luxuriantly will be made to lick the dust, and then will be fulfilled the prophecy of Hannah—1 Sam. 2: 1-12; also that of Mary in Luke 1: 48-56.

There is a consolation flowing out of the foregoing that those who suffer for Christ now shall reign with him [illegible] those who have been washed from the natural filthiness of flesh—who have done justly, loved mercy and walked uprightly, shall then be presented as the accepted of God, and the admired of the angels in heaven. For the coming of the King of kings and the establishment of a righteous government, let us, with the voice of prophets and apostles, cry, "Come, come!"

New York. G. W. Y.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 28, 1861.

No Paper Next Week.

This being Camp meeting week, we shall, "all hands," rest from our usual office labors, and will therefore issue no paper next week. This has been the custom of the office in past years, as most of our readers know. In our next issue we expect to give an account of the Camp meeting, and trust the report concerning it will be such as to cheer the hearts of those Christian friends who would be with us at Wilbraham if they could be.

Our next issue will close the present volume, and it will be necessary for our patrons to do all that lies in their power in the matter of remitting their arrearages on subscription and advancing the pay for the coming volume. Every number of the Crisis which we print we must pay for in cash, and for the means to do this we are dependent wholly upon our subscribers. Will each one do all they can to help carry the paper through the money crisis which presses so hard in every direction? If the CRISIS is sustained, it will be because those who read it love it well enough to read it at their own expense, as far as this is possible. Very many newspapers have stopped entirely on account of the hard times, while others are obliged to omit some of their regular issues. We have resorted to this latter expedient once, and shall have to do it sometimes in the future. In such cases our subscribers will have to count the omitted numbers among those for which they have paid. If this is a "war necessity," we trust they will not be disposed to complain.

Postage Stamps.

Persons sending Postage Stamps are requested to send us only the new kind. The old ones are worthless, and should we receive any, we shall have to return them to the parties sending them. ☞ Remember that none but the new stamps are of any value.

The Death Penalty.

"If ceasing to be, or non existence, is the punishment threatened, then men were punished before they were born; and those who fall asleep in Jesus are, for the time being, suffering the same punishment as those who die impenitent. On your theory, some of the righteous dead have been thus punished for the past 6000 years. And can you harmonize this with Scripture?"

Thus writes our friend W., and we do not hesitate to affirm that his plea for ceaseless torture is a very lame one. We will submit a few remarks for his consideration, hoping that his candid mind will not fail to appreciate certain bearings of the question with which he seems not yet to have become familiar. He does not desire controversy, but perceives, as he supposes, a conflict between our theory of future punishment and the teachings of scripture, and wishes us to harmonize the two, if we can.

Our first remark is, that W. must not expect us to "harmonize with scripture" the idea that "some of the righteous dead have been punished for the past 6000 years." The notion is opposed to scripture—it forms no part of our theory—and we steadfastly repudiate it. The punishment threatened is for the wicked—not for those who come to Christ for life. The latter class, in dying, "fall asleep in Jesus," but this condition—"in Jesus"—involves a relationship to the Fountain of Eternal Life and Blessedness which is incompatible with the idea of punishment. Whether the consistency of this disclaimer is in any way compromised by the assertion of literal death as the penalty of sin, will perhaps be apparent if we view the subject for a moment in the aspect in which our friend presents it.

Let us weigh his first statement. "If ceasing to be is the punishment threatened, then men were punished before they were born." We marvel that such a premise should be relied upon to support such a conclusion! What is the premise? That "ceasing to be is the threatened punishment." And what does this statement involve? We answer, It involves the actual living existence of a moral agent. This is so, (1.) because that cannot cease "to be" which has no being; and (2.) because a "threatened" punishment implies that the subject of the menace has an existence. If, then, "ceasing to be," as a threatened punishment, presupposes the previous existence of the subject of such punishment, it follows that our understanding of the "wages of sin" does not contain the absurd implication that "men were punished" before they had an existence, or, in the words of our friend, "before they were born."

W. does not, (whatever may be his opinion) affirm that "ceasing to be," forever, would not be a punishment to those by whom immortal bliss is attainable, and we therefore raise no argument on that point. But we deem it important to remind him that neither torment nor privation necessarily implies punishment. To suffer pain or to be deprived of desired good are both punishments only when they result from the voluntary infraction of known law, or law that might be known. (We speak of the Divine administration.) Applying this principle to the righteous and wicked dead, we observe that though both classes are—actually, not relatively—in "the same" condition, neither class are, even "for the time being," suffering punishment. They are dead by virtue of a law which sweeps all into the grave, irrespective of moral character. Their personal obedience or disobedience to moral claims has had nothing to do with the matter. "The creature was made subject to vanity, [mortality] not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20. The time approaches, however, when the manifestation of the sons of God will take place; when the saints who are held by the power of the grave are to receive an incorruptible life, by a resurrection from the dead, through the mighty working of him who is "the resurrection and the life." He is "alive forevermore," and has left us this assurance concerning the believer—"I will raise him up at the last day." The time, then, when all who will may have a deathless being, is "at the last day," and every moment of "non-existence" beyond this hour of deliverance "from the bondage of corruption," will be a period of punishment to all who have failed to lay hold on eternal life by faith in the Life Giver, Jesus Christ.

There are some who hold that the punishment of the wicked dead does not begin until a thousand years after the righteous dead have been glorified. This, we conceive, is equivalent to the assertion that the wicked will never be punished at all. The essence of the revealed death penalty is privation—the loss of all the joys to which the redeemed are admitted in God's everlasting kingdom; and as this privation is just as real during the first thousand years that follow this dispensation as it ever can be, the punishment must necessarily be as real during this period as it ever can be during the wasteless ages of eternity. We wonder that any intelligent believer in the doctrine of Immortality through Christ should dissent from this view, especially so since it rests upon the most positive testimony of the Word of God. "These," saith the Saviour, shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." There is no intimation here that the "life," which is mentioned last, is to be conferred a whole millennium before the infliction of the "punishment," which is mentioned first. The Apostle Paul brings out the truth on this point in the clearest manner in the first chapter of the second epistle to the Thessalonians. "And to you who are troubled REST with us, WHEN the the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking VENGEANCE on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power; WHEN he shall come to be GLORIFIED IN HIS SAINTS, and to be ADMIRED in all them that believe . . . . in that day." When do believers enter upon their eternal "rest"? Answer—"when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven." When is "vengeance" executed "upon them that know not God"? Answer—at the same time. When will Christ be "glorified" and "admired" in his saints? Answer—"when he shall come." When will "everlasting destruction" be inflicted upon them "that obey not the gospel"? Answer—at the same time. What countenance, then, does the Bible give to the opinion that the retribution of the impenitent does not run parallel with the entire period during which the righteous live to die no more? Answer—none at all.

Returning from this digression, we would express our hope that our friend W. will not hastily conclude that the literal interpretation of the death penalty does not "harmonize" with sound reason and the general tenor of Bible teaching. The gospel of the Son of God comes to dying men with the offer of deliverance from mortality by a new and imperishable life. Our present life "is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." How vastly important that we realize its frailty and fleetness, and that we secure and retain an interest in "Christ, who is OUR LIFE," that when he "shall appear" we may "also appear with him in glory."

"The conditions"—says another with whose words we conclude—"upon which the human family receive the Life, which is deposited for them in Christ, are so clearly revealed in the Word of God, as to preclude the necessity for mistake. If we would partake of the life and nature of the vine, a living bond of union must exist between us. God hath sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. And 'this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.' If we would partake of this life we must grasp firmly the Life Giver, by an unwavering faith. If we would enter into life we must keep his commandments. And if [illegible] thus patiently continue in well-doing, if we seek for glory, and honor, and immortality, God will grant to us, at the resurrection of the just, his priceless 'gift'—Eternal Life."

Personal Controversy.

We do not know that the letter from Bro. Rufus Robbins, found in another column, was intended for publication, but have no doubt it will be perused with interest. The "war question," as we stated two or three weeks ago, is not permanently excluded from the Crisis, and it is our purpose to give articles on the subject after a while. We have good reason to believe that a large portion of our readers would be pleased to see a further canvassing of the question. It is our opinion, however, that but a very small number would advise us to publish only on one side of the subject; but be the number greater or smaller, we should deem such a course on our part as unwise and unjust, to say nothing of the fact that truth is best elicited by presenting the different sides of a question.

But our object in referring to Bro. Robbins' letter was to answer his inquiry as to whether "no allusion to the articles of others is to be had" by those who write for the Crisis. We answer 1. That the regulation touching this matter does not preclude any expressions of approval of sentiments in the articles of others. 2. But on the other hand, it is intended to discountenance such expressions of disapproval of what others have written as would give them a right to reply. This does not prevent a writer from animadverting upon the sentiments of others, so long as he does not, by personal references or by the use of quotation marks, connect such sentiments with the individuals who hold them. We think the rule, properly understood, abridges no liberty of our correspondents which is essential in presenting truth or exposing error. At all events, its advantages are greater among the writers for and readers of this paper than its disadvantages. To illustrate: in our article on The Death Penalty we say there are some who believe that the wicked are not to receive their punishment until one thousand years after the Lord comes, and then we undertake to show that such a view is opposed by plain Bible testimony. As we have made no personal allusions in the statement, none can claim that they are specially entitled to be heard in reply. But suppose we had said—"The view we here oppose is held by Bro. Rufus Robbins, as may be seen by his article in such a number of the Crisis;" or suppose we should, omitting his name, quote his language in such a way as to render it clear to the reader that Bro. R. was intended,—the result forthwith would be, probably, that Bro. R. would either wish to show through the paper that we had misrepresented him, or that the position we attributed to him was the truth and that our reasoning on the subject was fallacious. In such a case, if we refused him a hearing, he might perhaps justly feel that we were "drawing the lines a little too close." As the matter now stands, should half a dozen persons send us articles defending the view which we say "some" hold, but which we reject, we would be left at liberty to publish such of them as presented the subject in the best and most conclusive manner—no personal considerations coming in to determine who should or should not have a hearing. But we have not time for further remark. If we have not made ourselves understood, we will try again at another time.

Severe Illness of Bro. Howell.

This morning's mail brought a letter from Sister Howell, mailed the 22d, for Bro. Grant, who is at the Camp Ground. Mrs. G. has permitted us to take a copy of it, and as the sad intelligence it contains will be of interest to so many, we give it to our readers. We have no heart for remarks, but trust it may please God to spare our dear brother's life. We write this on Saturday, 24th; if other intelligence reaches us before we go to press on Monday, we will add it to this.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—I just pencil you a few lines to inform you of our present affliction, and that my husband will not be at the Camp meeting. Hemorrhage of the lungs has reduced him to the gates of death. He has had four severe bleeding turns since yesterday. We do not know now whether it is permanently stopped or not. He has not spoken aloud for twenty-four hours. It is dreadful to stand and see the blood pour out of his mouth. Do pray for us. I wish you were here. His mind is in a heavenly state. We keep ice on his chest, and watch every breath. My hand trembles and my heart is full. O, pray, pray for me. L. S. HOWELL.

☞ It was expected that Bro. D. T. Taylor would spend the 25th with the Hartford Church. We presume he did so, and that he will be at the Wilbraham meeting. At the time of going to press we have no later intelligence concerning Bro. Howell, which makes us hope that he is recovering.

ERRATUM.—"Dark Ages and Meteoric Showers"—the title of an article in the Crisis of Aug. 7th—should read "Dark Days and Meteoric Showers." The fault of the mistake was ours.

APPOINTMENTS.—As we go to press on Monday, this week, notices and appointments reaching us on Tuesday morning cannot be inserted in the present number.

THE SECOND DEATH.—One of our Connecticut subscribers desires us to ask Bro. J. T. Curry to give "an explication of the phrase second death, etc."

☞ We spent Sunday the 25th very pleasantly with the Church in Salem.

Not the Same Person.

Bro. S. G. Clark, in a recent letter, says: "I would be glad to know if you are the same brother that I used to know in Syracuse and Lodi, N. Y." I answer—I am not "the same brother," and never lived in either of those places. The individual whom you have in your recollection is JONAS WENDELL, who lives in Edinborough, Pa. This explanation will correct an erroneous impression of Bro. John G. Hook, and possibly of some others to whom I am personally unknown. EDITOR.

Book Notices.

"What will become of the wicked? A Review of J. M. Cramp, D. D. By J. Lenfest, Cornwallis, N. S. 1861." This is an interesting tract of 24 pages, which does excellent execution upon the "address" of Dr. Cramp which was published at the request of "The King's County Baptist Ministerial Conference." We hope it may be widely scattered and do its share of the work of enlightening the world concerning man's nature and destiny as taught in the Bible. If Bro. Lenfest had made himself known to us when he was in our office, we should have been happy to have made his acquaintance and to have told him in person how much pleased we are with his tract. We thank him for advertising our paper and many of the books and tracts on sale at this office, on one page of his cover. We observe that he has omitted an "l" at the end of our name.

"A Tract for the Times. What is truth? or Divine Instruction to the Inquirer after Truth. By Thomas G. Newman, Seneca Falls, N. Y. 1861." All Scripture, and must be accepted as orthodox by all who believe the Bible. "Our object," says the author, "is not to undermine or destroy any of the Theological doctrines of the present day, but only to present the truths of inspiration in the plain and positive teachings of God's word; allowing the mistaken notions of men to fall Dragon-like before its powerful influences, and be crushed beneath the weight of its positive testimony."

"Anti-Tobacco Journal. Vol. I, No. 10. August and September, 1861." This excellent periodical is published by George Trask, Fitchburg, Mass., and the number before us is replete with useful matter. We bid Bro. Trask God-speed in his labor of love. In our inmost soul we have always abominated the use of "the weed" in all its forms as useless, filthy, unhealthy and expensive. We are settled in the belief that ninety-nine out of every hundred tobacco consumers know very well that the habit is an injurious one. How such persons can keep on good terms with their own consciences we do not understand. "If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy." If we used tobacco, we should think that text meant us, unless the habit had perverted our moral sense so much that we were "past feeling" on the subject. If you want to aid in putting down "the most popular sin under heaven," send for Bro. Trask's publications and scatter them among the sinners who need them. Each copy of the Journal can be divided and turned into a dozen or more Tracts, "short, spicy and readable." Published quarterly. Price $1 a year, postage paid.

"The Wise Shall Understand."

There are two thoughts suggested to the mind in the declaration of the prophet, "The wise shall understand," namely, who are the wise? and, what are they to understand? As to the characters referred to, we may remark, that the wisdom for which they are distinguished is not of an earthly character, but it is that which results from obedience to God. In this case it is true, as always, that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," and that to conform to the commands would, in the present, as in the case of the Israelites anciently, be wisdom and understanding. "Behold," says Moses, "I have taught you statutes, and judgments, even as the Lord my God commanded me, that ye should do in the land whither ye go to possess it. Keep therefore and do them, for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people." Who can fail to see the true sense in which the terms wise and wisdom are to be understood? The wise are the ones who are "purified, made white, and tried." It is this purifying process that fits them for the position which they are required to occupy. It is in their case as in the one referred to by the wise man, "Whoso keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing; and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment." The favor of God attends the spirit of faithfulness wherever found, and hence Amos, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth His secret unto His servants the prophets." This principle was clearly discovered in the case of Noah and the antediluvians. Noah was a righteous man and God favored him with that knowledge that proved his salvation; while of the wicked of that time it is said, "They knew not until the flood came and took them all away." Noah knew because he was wise; they were destitute of this moral fitness, and being so, were not prepared to see and embrace the light which proved salvation in the case of the patriarch and his family. To be wise, therefore, is to have that moral fitness which results from a conformity to the truth—"such shall understand."

What shall the "wise understand?" To say that the wise will understand the nature of the event to transpire at the end, is claiming nothing more for them than can be claimed for the wicked. Who does not know that there are now and always have been scores of wicked men who understand the great doctrines of the Bible? So that to affirm that the particular thing to be known or understood is the event that is to transpire, is, as above stated, claiming nothing more for the wise than the wicked can boast of.

Is it not evident that that which the wise are to understand is just what, at the time the angel was conversing with Daniel, constituted the subject of inquiry? The question had been asked, "How long to the end of these wonders"? The prophet says he heard, but he understood not; hence the question, "What shall be the end of these things?" Now, as to the first question, there can be no doubt of its import. "How long to the end" can mean but one thing; it refers to the precise length of time that was to elapse between a given point and the conclusion of a series of events. But as to the second question, namely, "What shall be the end of these things?" is not so clear, when we consider that an answer to the "When shall these things be" comprises the declaration, "It shall be for a time, times and a half," and also, the period during which the scattering of the power of the holy people is to be accomplished. In other words, the whole length of time which is to elapse from a given point to the resurrection is comprised within the time, times and a half and the period during which the scattering process is going on.

Daniel heard this question answered, but did not understand it. He without any question comprehended the period signified by the "time, times and a half," and also the event to transpire when the power of the holy people should be accomplished; but the length of time beyond "the time, times and a half," during which this scattering process would be going on, or the time it would require to accomplish it, was what he did not understand; hence the question, "What shall be the end of these things"? The "what" refers both to the duration and nature of the scattering, or to what shall transpire after the "time, times and a half" are finished, and also, the definite period, or length of time, during which this strange work is going on. The apostle Peter declares, that the prophets searched to know the "time" and the "manner of time." By the phrase "time," is undoubtedly meant the "when these things shall be." This was the opinion of Grotius, Doddridge, Bloomfield, Benson, Whitby, and others; but, in the phrase "manner of time," must be meant just what Daniel means by the question, "What shall be the end," etc. The prophet wanted to know the when and the what, and hence Peter says, "Searching what (time) or what manner of time." On this last phrase Dr. Barnes says, "This phrase, in Greek, would properly relate, not to the exact time when these things would occur, but to the character or condition of the age when they would take place. * * * Perhaps, however, the inquiry in their minds pertained to the time when the predictions would be fulfilled, as well as to the condition of the world when the event takes place."

Now that we are right in supposing that the prophet had in his eye both the natnre and time of the event or events to transpire, after the "time, times and a half," is evident from the instruction that follows. First, he speaks of the moral condition of mankind—the wicked, as being very wicked; and the opposite class, as being "purified, made white, and tried"; and without doubt, we have in this purifying process, in this "tried" condition and its causes, just what is referred to previously, namely, "The scattering of the power of the holy people." He had already been apprized of the fact that, at the time of the end, "many should run to and fro, and knowledge should be increased"; hence this running to and fro, the purifying and trying of many, and the wicked (servant) doing wickedly, mark, in a particular manner, the time of the end—the last of the last days. Second. On the question of the time, the angel imparts two additional distinct thoughts, namely, he states when the period, first named, is to commence, namely, "From the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days"; and then he gives the exact time required to accomplish the scattering of the power of the holy people, namely, the excess of the 1335 days over the 1290 days, a period of forty-five days, or years, in length. Hence to understand, in the sense of the declaration of the angel, involves a knowledge of the time as well as of the events; and whether it be understood at present is not the question. Men may disbelieve, commit blunders, make mistakes, set the time at the waxing and waning of every moon, be disappointed a score of times, get mad, call it a humbug, deny that it has any reference to the time of the Savior's coming, regret their mistakes, preach against Millerism, tell what fools Adventists are, or have been, and yet the word remains, like God himself, ever and unchanged. It reads the same and means the same, and will receive a complete fulfillment. He who cannot lie declares, "the wise"—those who are purified, made white and tried—"shall understand." Even so let it be.

F. H. B.

The New Earth.

"Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

What glory clusters around this promise! How much real satisfaction there is in its contemplation! New heavens and new earth! What music there is in these words! How cheering to the way-worn, toiling pilgrim, who is striving for the city of God! Only think, not only new heavens, but, what is more glorious, a new earth filled with righteousness! Death will be vanquished, and his long reign broken up; the curse will be entirely gone, gone forever. The promise cannot fail, "As truly as I live, saith the Lord, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." "Hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?" Thanks to the Lord God, it is impossible for him to fail in fulfilling this word of promise; the word that has gone forth out of his mouth "shall not return" unto him void; it shall accomplish that which he please, and shall prosper in the thing whereunto he sent it.

The Seraphim cried in the hearing of the prophet, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts—the whole earth is full of His glory." This never has been, but it will be. His will will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. Holiness shall reign, peace shall wave her sceptre, the banner of love shall proclaim victory—everlasting and eternal victory. The hill-tops of paradise, and the fair fields of Beulah shall be baptized in the sunlight of heaven, while the sparkling waters of life shall again flow through Eden restored. And this to be enjoyed by his people, for "the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. There will be no more death"; and this is the very reason why the "perfect shall remain in it." They shall neither fall by disease nor the sword. "Violence shall no more be heard in the land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders." This certainly will be a new order of things, no violence nor death; the curse with all its concomitants shall be removed; then the tabernacle of God will be with men, and "He will dwell with them, and they shall be his people." God himself shall dwell with them and be their God, "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things have passed away." They dwell before his throne and "serve him day and night in his temple." "They shall hunger no more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat; for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them to living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

The change is not to be or consist in simply making the earth new; this would amount to but little if man was to remain in sin, and death was to reign; but the creature must be changed, the mind renewed, the heart made new, the man converted, so that the will of God will become the rule of his life, to do it his meat and drink. The earth being regenerated, and man so changed in mind and body as to be adapted to it—to its glorified condition, all things then indeed will be new. Then the heavenly harps will sing, "Worthy the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory and blessing," while resounding praise shall echo back, "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth" forever and forevermore. Amen.

F. H. B.

NEW TRACT.—By H. V. Reed, entitled, "Sprinkling not Baptism."

This is a tract of sixteen pages. It abounds with quotations from, and references to, classical authors, lexicographers and modern writers. The writer has, we think, very clearly shown—1st. That the Greek word, which, in our translation, is rendered baptize, affords not the least support for sprinkling. 2. That the mode of baptism practised by the apostles and disciples was immersion. 3. That there is nothing in the New Testament to authorise infant sprinkling.

F. H. B.

NEW PAMPHLET.—A Discussion of the immortality of the Soul and the Destruction of the Wicked, between Eld. William Sheldon and Theodore Brooks.

This is a work containing 134 pages, and is very interesting. The men are men of ability, and both sides of these questions are clearly presented. Both of the disputants show a familiarity with the subject. Upon reading this pamphlet, one can but impressed with the fact that Mr. B. has an aptness to talk, while S. shows an aptness to teach.

F. H. B.

Calamities.

For the Crisis.

"Yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast."

Calamities have ever formed a part of the inheritance belonging to human beings since the world began. Our first parents, while walking in the sunshine of their paradise home, scarcely dreamed of the sad reverse of fortune that awaited them; but suddenly in one day there fell upon them, because of their disobedience, the first calamity ever known to them in all their life time of bliss before. They were driven from the sacred retreat of their eden bower, and bidden to earn their bread in the sweat of their brow, while sorrows upon every hand should be multiplied unto them, until they should return to the dust from whence they were taken. And ever since that eventful period one continued succession of calamities has rested upon their doomed posterity, without any way of escape, save in the promise of a merciful God, that the "seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head." From that glad moment hope sprung up in the stricken heart, and in every age of the world, under all and every circumstance of life, the tried and troubled sons and daughters of earth, trusting in God for deliverance, have been enabled to adopt the language of the Psalmist, "Yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast."

As individuals, and as a nation of people, we have passed through sore tribulation, long and continued conflict, to purchase the heaven sent boon of liberty we now enjoy. The blood of our forefather's freely flowed that we, their children, might receive from their hand the sacred gift, and impart to others as freely as we had received it. But, instead of doing this at all times, we have become great in our own eyes, and "concerning oppression we have spoken loftily;" yea, in the language of the prophet, "they are waxen fat, they shine, yea, they overpass the deeds of the wicked, they judge not the cause, the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper, and the right of the needy do they not judge." "Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord, shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?" When God speaks we should listen. All the offences of which the prophet complains are in our midst as a people, and clinging to our skirts are the wrongs of four millions of helpless men, women and children; and because of this, one of the greatest calamities that has ever befallen us since we became a nation has burst upon us—has desolated our homes, driven consternation to every face, and threatens to drench our land with blood. And again, in view of our abused mercies, we have only to ask ourselves the question, in the language of the prophet, "Hast thou not procured this unto thyself, in that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, when he led thee by the way, and now thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee; know therefore and see that it is an evil and bitter thing that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord God of hosts. Then let us turn from the error of our ways, and rend our heart and not our garments." Let us pray for our enemies, who would in their blindness seek to destroy themselves and us; let us not wantonly seek their blood, but their repentance toward God, and their reconciliation to man. Let us be patient in our tribulations and Christ-like in our spirit, leaving the issue of our troubles in the hands of Him who hath said he executeth righteousness and judgment for all who are opprest. Thus the christian may ever find a hiding place in the yea and amen promises of the blessed Lord Jesus; and, while those who are destitute of this precious shelter are tossed to and fro upon the billows of doubt and uncertainty, the christian may comply with the invitation, "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as is were for a moment, until the indignation be overpast. "And then when we have sufficiently endured the chastisements of the Lord, we shall come forth as gold tried and purified, and better enabled to appreciate our blessings as a people—"to love mercy, deal justly, and walk humbly with our God."

Neal's Creek, Ind. M. A. T.

Contentment.

For the Crisis.

Contentment embraces in itself all the blessed fruits of the Spirit. Those who possess it are blest with the following fruits: They have love to the nature, commands and ways of God; the love of christian fellowship to all who give evidence of their adoption into the family of God; and the love of pity to all men, their greatest enemies not excepted. They have a holy and solid joy wrought in them by the Holy Ghost, by which they rejoice in the past and present goodness of God, and in the hope of greater favors. They have peace of conscience by the pardon of all sin; peace with God by having the enmity of their heart slain, and by being reconciled to God through the Son of his love; peace toward the people of God, and, as much as in them lies, live peaceably with all men. They are long suffering under all afflictions and injuries; though provoked to anger and revenge, yet patient and forgiving. They are not fierce and voracious, like the devouring lion and merciless tiger; but gentle and mild, like the unoffending lamb or the innocent dove. They have good tempers of heart—good words, actions, and motives of action. They have a living, operative faith in God and his word. They are meek, not rough in temper, and proud, but soft, calm and humble. They are temperate in eating, drinking, sleeping and dressing. Gal. 5: 22, 23. They are blest with a hope full of immortality, which gives great consolation, and enables them to rejoice in God, with joy unspeakable and full of glory. And if they enjoy contentment in that degree which the gospel makes to be their privilege, they see the hand of God in all things, and are resigned and cheerful under all his dispensations. Obedience is their delight; the use of all the means of grace becomes profitable and delightful. None is more so than the one of holding a familiar converse with God in prayer. They discover such a beauty in the divine character and conduct, in the plan of salvation, and in the commands and promises of God, that their souls are often overwhelmed and lost in praise. They clearly see that sickness and health, life and death, are always best when God sends them. Willing that God should hold the reins of government, they rest themselves in the arms of his wise and gracious providence, with a comfortable assurance that all things shall work together for their good.

These views, together with the love of God shed abroad in the heart, constitute the earnest of an inheritance, incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. In short, the contented enjoy all the blessings of the new covenant, or they are pressing on to the enjoyment of them, as far as they are promised in this life, and are happy as far as happiness consists with a state of trial. And when Jesus comes to put a period to their warfare, they are so far from being overwhelmed with fear, that they can cry aloud, "this is our God; we have been waiting for him, and he will receive us, and we shall live with him forever and ever!" C. DIGGETT.

Bangor, Me., Aug. 17, 1861.

False Illustration.

For the Crisis.

A preacher of universal salvation thus, in substance, illustrated the position of God and the sinner. A son has left his father's house, and is wandering far from home. His father seeks his return, and for this purpose sends a messenger to plead with him, and to offer him joy, peace, and plenty. The messenger, instead of following his directions, threatens the son with the wrath and implacable vengeance of the father unless he returns. In this illustration the course the messenger took was supposed to be the course of the Orthodox clergy, and the true message which he should have preached was the course of the Universalists.

I consider this illustration to be a false one, because it is one-sided and incomplete. The disposition of man is not represented, neither is his danger alluded to. It is as though an alienation between God and man was all the trouble that existed, and God's only purpose was to bring about a reconciliation.

Let us examine the points of the illustration. A son has left home. Is that all? We might suppose that he left of his own choice against his father's will. Is this all? Does not the son think himself better off where he is than at home? Does he not hate his father? And, above all, is he not in great danger, of which he is not aware? Yes, all this is true, and should have been mentioned in the illustration, and whatsoever the father would do to cause him to be willing to return, must recognize all these facts, or fail to accomplish its purpose. God has recognized all these in man, and has planned and revealed in accordance with the whole. He has sent forth his messengers to lay before rebellious man the whole matter. He has not told them to preach peace and love alone. This would have but little effect on the hardened sinner, who loves his own way best, and is careless of the future. In connection with the peace which God offers, must be preached "there is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." In connection with the love of God must be preached that this love was manifested that "whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life."

God has decreed certain things which shall come to pass though heaven and earth pass away. Among the things decreed are the facts that the wicked are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished, and that then they shall be punished with everlasting destruction. That the day for this has been appointed, and that there is no name given under heaven among men whereby they may be saved but the name of Jesus, and "he that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."

God warns man of "things not seen as yet," and urges him to accept salvation which his own love has wrought out in his behalf, that he may not perish with things temporal. The things not seen are the scenes of the "day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." God decrees this day—the Universalist says it shall never come. Reader, which do you believe?

Honeoye, N. Y. FRANK BURR.

Obituary Notice.

Died, in Springville, July 9th, 1861, Sister ADALINE CALE, in the thirtieth year of her age.

Sister Cale was converted under the labors of the writer, in the winter of 1860, and baptized by him in the month of February. She immediately united with the Springville church, since which time she has been a faithful follower of Christ. She was prompt in her attendance at meetings, and loved to listen to an unadulterated gospel. She remembered the prayer meetings, for there her soul was often refreshed. She was not sparing in her efforts to support the gospel. Her influence was on the side of unpopular truth. She was a strong believer in immortality only through Christ at the resurrection. In her last hours she evinced a readiness, and expressed a willingness, to sleep in Jesus.

It was Sister Cale's dying request that the writer should preach her funeral sermon. Being absent at the time of her death, I preached the discourse a month afterwards, from the following words: "I will redeem them from the power of the grave: I will deliver them from death." She leaves a husband, father, mother, brothers and sisters to weep over her. May the Lord support Bro. Cale. He has lost a faithful companion, the church a worthy member, and the community a respected neighbor. Sister Cale sleeps, to be awakened by the voice of the Son of God, to die no more. She will soon be gathered with the Master's jewels.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

W. SHELDON.

Married.

In New Bedford, August 25th, by Francis H Berick, Mr. LORENZO LITTLEFIELD to Miss LIZZIE ANN ELY.

Correspondence.

From Bro. I. K. Lombard.

You suggested in your kind note, some time ago, that my name had better be published as the author of the "Coming Struggle." My reason for withholding my name was, principally, that I thought the article would be more likely to pass for what it is worth without, than with a known signature. As brethren have had time, now, to weigh the matter, and draw their own conclusions, I am willing that you should use my name according to your own inclination, to publish or not.

I was sorry to find a notice in the Crisis reminding us that a "truce" of several months was thought best on the war question. I would not think it best to publish everything received, be it much or little; but it strikes me that a judicious selection could be made sufficient to supply two or three columns each week. This, I think, would be acceptable to all parties.

I would like to inquire through the Crisis, whether some reader of the same has not Sanders' Reader, Third or Fourth, in which is found a representation of the "spirit land" under the dream of an Indian, and accredited to Knickerbocker? If so, will they please forward it to the Crisis for publication? It is the best representation of the "spirit land" as commonly held, that I have seen, and yet, a burlesque on common sense.

Aug. 15, 1861.

From Bro. W. Sheldon.

BRO. WENDELL:—Our grove meeting near Ironton was attended by Elders G. W. Barnes and G. W. Turner, who assisted in preaching the word. Sunday was a rainy day. This kept many at home. Three were intending to be baptized, but owing to the rain it was put off till another time. Have appointed another grove meeting near Baraboo, (on the old ground,) to commence on Sept. 14th. At our last meeting there, I baptized three; since the meeting, Bro. Barnes has baptized three more; and now others are requesting baptism. May the work go on. Amen.

Springville, Wis., Aug, 13th, 1861.

"Put away from thee a froward mouth, and perverse lips put far from thee."

"The way of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what they stumble."

"Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men."

"Better is a dry morsel, and quietness therewith, than an house full of sacrifices and strife."

Notices, &c.

Notice.

The Lord willing, I will be at the Wilbraham Camp Meeting. Collinsville, Wednesday, Sept. 4th Newfield, Sunday, Sept. 8th. Sandisfield Camp Meeting. At intermediate dates I would like to call on brethren in Springfield, Hartford, Pleasant Valley, Bakerville and Winsted. I shall have with me books from the "Millennial Harbinger" office, also its subscription list, on which I will receive payments due, and solicit new subscribers.

Honeoye, N. Y. FRANK BURR.

To Western Friends.

I have received from Bro. Hastings another lot of tracts, supplied from the "Tract Fund." Brethren or sisters wishing packages of them, must enclose enough money or stamps to pay the postage on them. Hope soon to receive many orders, that the tracts may be scattered and doing their work. Also, tracts and books on hand for sale. Orders accompanied with the cash will be attended to immediately. All orders must be directed to me at Moline, Illinois. N. BRANCH, Jr.

Grove Meeting.

The brethren in this place who are looking for the return of their Lord have concluded to hold a grove meeting, commencing Sept. 16th, to continue through the week, over the following Lord's day, and as much longer as the Lord will. The meeting is about thirty-four miles north of New York city, five miles east of Sing Sing, and three-fourths of a mile west of Pleasantville Depot. Bro. H. Pratt and others are expected to be present and preach the word. All who love the appearing of our dear Lord we cheerfully invite to come and labor with us. Come, dear brethren, here is a new field to labor in.

For the brethren, WM. H. WILD.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a Grove Meeting in Amherst, Maine, on the farm of Frances Foster, in a beautiful grove, on the bank of Union River, commencing Thursday, Sept. 12th. Brn. John Billings, Israel Damon and D. A. Jones are expected to be present to preach the word of Life; also Bro. James Hemenway is invited to be present (James, will you come?) Also a cordial invitation is extended to all the ministering brethren, as this is a new field, and many have become interested and are anxious to have a Grove Meeting, and want to hear more concerning the gospel hope. We hope that the brethren and sisters will come, for doubtless there will be a large gathering. At this place there is a waking up and deep interest felt in all this region concerning the coming and kingdom of Jesus Christ. This meeting will commence Sept. 12th, and continue over the Lord's day. In behalf of the Church, L. WETHERBEE.

Campmeeting in Maine.

There will be a Campmeeting in Exeter, Me., near the old spot, by the Chamberlin meeting-house, commencing the first Monday in September next and continuing over the Sabbath. Brethren coming from the West by cars will stop at Newport, where there will be teams provided to convey them to the meeting. Those coming by water will come to Bangor, where they also will find teams in waiting. There will be a Boarding Tent on the ground to accommodate all who wish for board. We hope all who purpose to attend this meeting will be on the ground as early in the week as possible, and all who can will bring their tents and bedding as they will be very convenient for ourselves and for those who will not be able to bring them.

P. S. We shall meet the brethren on the steamboat wharf on the arrival of the first boat in the week, and if there are any who cannot come on that day, if they will inform us through the Crisis, or by private letter to D. E. Ireland, North Hermon, on what day they will be at Bangor, we will send a team for them. In behalf of the brethren,

DANIEL E. IRELAND,
HOLIS COLE, } Committee.
NELSON PATTEN,

Conference.

The Northern Illinois Conference of Adventists will be held in Shabbona, at Shabbona Grove, west side, near Bro. Norton's, commencing Sept 4th, at 7 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. Bro. Chandler is expected with the New England mission tent. Provision will be made for those who cannot carry their provisions. All other preachers are invited to come. Come, dear brethren, in the name of the Lord, to labor for the salvation of men, for Jesus soon is coming. H. G. McCULLOCK, Secretary of Conference.

Tent Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a Grove Meeting on the old ground, at the south side of Peach Pond, in North Salem, N. Y., four miles south-east of Brewster's Station, on the Harlem R. R., commencing Wednesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., on the 4th day of September, and continuing over Sunday. Friends are invited to come, with tents and provisions. H. L. Hastings and others are expected to be present and preach the gospel of the kingdom of God. HACHALIAH BAILEY.

Camp Meeting.

A Camp Meeting will be held in the town of Sandisfield, eleven miles from Winsted depot, on the daily stage route from Winsted to Barrington, commencing Sept. 9th and continuing over the following Lord's day. Railroad fare from Hartford to Winsted $1.25, stage fare from Winsted to the camp ground 40 cents. Bro. H. L. Hastings is expected at this meeting, and others who are competent to meet the expectations of the people at such a meeting. We should be glad to extend a general invitation to the preaching brethren, with the assurance that they would be remunerated. We will say that the preachers who make the sacrifice to come, shall be provided for while here. Board for man and beast will be provided on reasonable terms. We hope to see all the brethren from the Farmington and Naugatuck valleys here, with their tents, to enjoy a feast in a dry and beautiful grove.

A. D. SMITH,
HENRY SAGE,
ALONZO WATERMAN,
ABNER WEBSTER.
WM. A. FENN, in behalf of the Committee.

Camp Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a Camp Meeting in the town of Dover, N. Y., about three miles from South Dover Station, Harlem R. R., three and one half miles from South Kent Station, Housatonic R. R., Conn., and one and a half miles west of Bull's Bridge, Housatonic River, to commence Sept. 10th, 1861, and held over the following Sunday. As this is a new field, and many have become interested, and are anxious to have a Camp Meeting, and want to hear more concerning the gospel hope, we hope that the preaching brethren will come filled with the Spirit of the gospel, and labor for the good of those that may come to this meeting. Brethren and sisters, also, come to labor, come with tents, and bedding and provisions as far as convenient. Arrangements will be made to keep horses, and also provide for those that cannot bring their own provisions.

All preaching brethren who may feel sent by the Lord to this meeting, we heartily invite to come.

STEPHEN B. MUNN,
GEORGE L. TEEPLE,
CHARLES GARDINER, } Committee.
HIRAM OLIVET,

The Maine Annual Advent Conference.

The next session of this Conference will be held in Yarmouth, (in the Institute occupied by the Advent Church) Wednesday, Sept. 11th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren there intend to make ample provision for all the friends who attend. Those who come by cars, if on the Kennebec and Portland R. R., will leave the cars at Yarmouth Junction, about half a mile from the meeting. Those coming on the Waterville, Farmington, or Grand Trunk R. R., will leave at Yarmouth Station, a few rods from the meeting. Those coming from the Penobscot can take the boat to Portland, then the Grand R. R., eleven miles to Yarmouth. Call on George W. Harvey, George Humphrey, and R. R. York. It will be a good place for another friendly greeting of the pilgrims in this time of trouble. It may be the last. We hope to see all the Advent ministers of Maine who can work and worship in harmony and union, and as many other such brethren and sisters as can well attend.

H. B. SEVEY, President.
I. C. WELLCOME, Secretary.

Richmond, Me., Aug. 1st, '61.

Michigan Grove and Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a Grove and Campmeeting in the town of Holly, Oakland County, Michigan, to commence Sept. 4th, 1861, and continue over Lord's day, and longer if thought proper. The meeting is to be held on the farm of Bro Hiram Austin, five miles north and east of Holly Depot, situated on the Detroit and Milwaukie, R. R., and about one and a half miles east of the plank road leading from Holly to the city of Flint. And now, my dear brethren and sisters throughout the State of Michigan, I wish to give you all a short, but warm and earnest invitation to come to this gathering of the saints. As this is the first meeting of the kind ever held in the State, we do hope and pray most fervently that all brethren and sisters who can possibly arrange their domestic affairs, will come with tents and provisions to the encampment, and spend a week with each other in a warm-hearted love feast. The times call for such an assemblage. The signs in the natural, moral and political world are agitating multitudes, and they are inquiring, "What things are coming on the earth?" The times are most eventful. Our blessed Savior is soon coming on the earth, and now is a good time, my brethren, to work for God, for one another and for perishing humanity around us. Come, then, to this meeting; come with warm hearts; come filled with and praying in the Holy Ghost; come with a zeal worthy of the hope you cherish; come with Jesus stamped upon your affections; come abundantly prepared to take care of yourselves and others. Come from Grand Blanc, Flint, Saginaw, Flushing, Davison, Richfield, Tyrone, Pleasant Valley, Ypsilanti, Nankin, Grand Rapids, Detroit. Come from all over the State. This is not a sectional meeting because of peculiar views, but it embraces all that love the Lord's appearing and want to be saved when Jesus appears. Come, one and all, to glorify God, and come so as to be on the ground at the commencement of the meeting; do not fail in this. Let our noble and enterprising Sisters take hold of this cause and we are sure of success, by the blessing of God. Brethren Wolverton, Anable, Jerome, Roberts, Skinner, Doty, Richards, Adams, Austin, Servis, and the church generally through that section, are alive for such a gathering.

We hope to see as many of our preaching brethren from the different parts of the State as can come, and this invitation does not exclude any out of the State. We hope that if any of the servants of Christ in other States, or coming from the east about that time, will arrange to attend this meeting

In behalf of the church,
A. N. SEYMOUR.

Notice.

The next Rhode Island Quarterly Conference will meet at Rocky Brook, R. I., the last Wednesday in September. An invitation has been extended to the Conference from Exeter, and Lafayette and Rocky Brook churches. According to my instructions from the Conference, I have located it at Rocky Brook. M. R. PHETTEPLACE, Clerk.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon, otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Manchester, N. H. .... Sunday, Sept. 1.
West Deerfield .... Sept. 6th, 2 o'clock, P. M.
Sunday, Sept. 8th, where Bro. Emerson may appoint.
J. G. SMITH.

Holden, Me. .... Sept. 4.
Burlington, Me., (where Bro. S. C. Page may appoint) .... Sept. 15.
Will the friends be there from Lincoln and arrange for meetings in their vicinty?
D. A. JONES.

Abington, (Bro. Huntington's charge) .... Sept. 1.
JOSEPH D. BROWN.

Jamaica, (Rawsonville, Vt.,) Sunday, Sept. 1st and stop till the 4th.
Hebron, N. Y., Sept. 5th and stop over Sunday.
Addison, Vt. .... Sept. 9th, at 7 o'clock, P. M.
Chateaugay, N. Y., Sept. 10th and stop over Sunday.
R. V. LYON.

Lovely Street, Ct. .... Aug. 25.
Wrightville .... Sunday, Sept. 8.
C. GOODRICH.

Bristol .... Sunday, Sept. 1.
LEWIS GUN.

Massena, N. Y. .... Sundays, Sept. 8th and 15th.
M. BATCHELOR.

Campton, N. H. .... Sept 1.
Sandwich (Wm. Shaw's School-house) .... Sept. 2.
L. C. GLAZIER.

Roxbury, Ct., (where Bro. Buckingham may appoint. .... Aug. 25.
South Dover, N. Y. (at Bro. Olivit's) .... Aug. 30.
Pawling, N. Y. .... Sept. 1.
Brewster Station. .... Sept. 3.
T. S. CANFIELD.

Nottingham, N. H. .... Aug. 23d, 24th and 25th.
Lee, N. H. .... Aug. 30th, 31st and Sept. 1.
Monday, Sept. 2d, take boat for Bangor and Exeter Campmeeting, Me. L. BOUTELL.

Hartford, Ct. .... Sept. 8th.
Will further arrange with brethren who have requested my labors in Connecticut, at the Camp Meeting. P. B. MORGAN.

East Otis. .... Aug. 25.
Chester Factories .... Aug. 27 and 28.
Dalton .... Sept. 1.
Wells Forge .... Sept. 8.
J. K. BELLOWS.

Danbury .... Sept. 1.
Tuftonborough .... Sept. 8.
Holderness, (Tabernacle) .... Sept. 15.
Barnstead, (Clark M. H.) .... Aug. 22.
T. W. PIPER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

S. G. Clark: You are entitled to as many copies of Hudson's Tract as you have paid for. Where shall we send them? We ask because you have left Wales, Ill.

Cash Receipts.

B E Thompson, extra, 24 cts; J Howard 307, 36 cts; Mrs. E A W Lake 299, 63 cts; Mrs. H Dunning 375, $3.00; C. N. Fisk 321,—50 cts.

D F Corey, H Haynes, R Matterson, T Inman, J Bochard, A K Miller, W Taft, J L Himes, W Davis, G Winslow, are to 334,—80 cts. each—$8.00.

L P Fox 286, P M Weaver 312, G L Makepeace 312, W F Collier 312, H B Gilbert 293, D D Haines 317, Eli Skinner 334, T Wigfall 309, J W Simmons 312, J H F Varney 325, Sarah Weston 312, Perley Curtis 282, R Robbins 338, Warren Moore 312, Jer. Small 334, J C Pease 286, D Bump 325,—$1.00 each.

L Bates 296, Geo. Sutton 376, C H Sutton 378, S Timberlake 338, D C Tourtelot 364, Wm. Lucas 364, T L Saltonstall 322, M H Irish 325, D W Perry 338, E T Hobbs 330,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

I K Lombard for H L Hastings $3.00, J Pinkham 6 cts, M H Irish 50 cts, Mrs. Dunning 7 cts, J Mc Cameron $1.00. [illegible]

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid, hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of Immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $4.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single, postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 259 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 5 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, comp. by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of [illegible] ing incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 3 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. [illegible] 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Brooks, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I. The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Sabbatic Delusion; Bible Hell; [illegible] Foster's Letter and Treatise on [illegible]

For the Crisis.

To the Watchmen.

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

Earth has barren spots to gladden,
Waste not toil where all is fair;
Showers untimely serve to harden
Soil, where scorching sunbeams glare.

Plant and water—all are brothers—
Thou its harvest may not glean;
Thou hast gathered, too, where others
Sowed the precious seed, I ween.

Wait not for the plant to laud thee
Thou hast shielded from the storm;
It possesses latent beauty—
Buds and blossoms yet unborn.

Scatter blessings freely given—
Where most needed none can tell;
Drops profusely fall from heaven—
Some might linger just as well.

Should some brighter gifts and graces
Fall unto thy brother's share,
In more cultivated places
God will use him—never fear.

All have not the skill to finish—
God will not his gifts misplace;
Some must build and others garnish—
All are useful in their place.

Learn to trust, and wait and labor—
Never fold thy hands to sleep
While thou hast a suff'ring neighbor—
While there's one to toil and weep.

Then fleeting joys shall be inverted—
Tears be counted treasur'd gems;
Humble works of love converted
Into pearls and diadems.

For the Crisis.

"The Scripture cannot be Broken."

For many centuries man in his vain theorizing has put forth a mighty effort to break the Scriptures, by trying to make it bend to his spiritual theory, and thus making out that the Devil told the truth instead of God; and that system of teaching is yet in practice; and my heart sickens when I see those who profess to stand on the plain, literal word of God, that they have not yet, after many years' study, abandoned the old system. Christ does not remain on the throne of his Father until all his [illegible]mies are destroyed and the earth all made new. I will endeavor to give the word of the Lord for proof; and first permit me to quote from an old translation: 1 Cor. 15 : 22.—"For as by Adam all the human race was subjected to mortality, so by Christ Jesus shall all the pious dead be entitled to immortality. 23d verse. But every one in this restitution, in a regular gradation, is raised. Christ was the first that rose from death to immortality; the next will be the virtuous Christians, at his glorious advent. 24th verse. Subsequent to this will be the final desolation of the globe—which event will take place; but not till after he (Christ) hath surrendered up his kingdom to God, even the Supreme Father; not till after he (Christ) hath totally crushed and demolished every opposing civil power and secular sovereignty." This sound ssensible and in harmony with all the prophets, that Christ is coming to destroy his enemies, to rule in the midst of them. 25th verse.—"For he must retain his kingdom until he (Christ) hath brought all his adversaries prostrate at his feet." (Some believe all Christ's adversaries are put under his feet before he takes his kingdom; but my Bible teaches me a very different doctrine.) 26th verse. The last foe he (Christ) shall dethrone and annihilate is death. (Now allow the thousand years where God has placed it—then when is death destroyed?) 26th verse. For God hath subjected all things to his control; but when the Deity declares that he hath subjected all things under him, it is self-evident that he himself must be excepted, who primarily invested him with this sovereign authority. 28th verse. But when all things shall have become the subjects of his universal dominion, then shall the Son himself be subjected to HIM who originally vested him (Christ) with this universal authority—that the DEITY may be all in all."

The Apostle Paul teaches the same as the prophets have taught. Christ comes and gathers out of his kingdom all those that offend and do iniquity,—destroys all those who corrupt the earth. (Matt. 13: 41.) When any one can show me that the [illegible] earth is the kingdom that is to be [illegible] to the little flock when Christ comes, [illegible] may admit that the scriptures can be broken. The kingdom of God has its boundaries as distinctly marked out in the word of the Lord, as any man's farm is bounded off in his deed. And if any one wishes to know the boundaries of the kingdom, let them search the record, and be careful that they do not engage in removing the land-marks that God has placed himself. It is while the ten kingdoms are existing and in power, when the kingdom of God is set up, (Dan. 2 : 44); or when Jesus Christ receives his kingdom, (Dan. 7 : 13, 14; Rev. 19 : 11–19.) Now I ask if these scriptures teach, with any fair common sense understanding, that the beast is destroyed and all of Christ's enemies are put under his feet while he remains at the right hand of the Father? Does not the beast gather his army together, to make war against Christ and his army? (Rev. 19 : 19.)

Again, to me it is a gross error that the [illegible] up of the kingdom is before the [illegible] this age. For it is at the end of [illegible] that Christ receives his kingdom [illegible] one thousand years before the [illegible] 1 Cor. 15 : 25, 26,) and before he delivers up the kingdom to his Father. So it reads and so I believe. Notwithstanding, it may sound strange to some, and especially to those who place the thousand years reign of Christ, under the tyrannical reign of Papacy. And here I will give a few scripture quotations, to be harmonized with such a theory:—Psa. 72; 102 : 12–17; Isa. 2 : 2–5; 11 : 4–16; 60; 61 : 8–11; Jer. 23 : 6–26; Ezk. 36 : 21–36; Micah 4 : 1–8. I might continue on, page after page, in quoting scripture from the prophets, the apostles and Jesus Christ. If all Christ's foes are destroyed before he comes to receive his kingdom, and the kingdom is the whole earth, how and when will the Jews (certain ones) see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom, and they cast out? Where will be the dominion, if the whole earth is the kingdom? How can they be gathered from the east and the west, the north and the south, (the four points of compass,) if all the earth is the kingdom? If any wish to harmonize this, they can go to work, and when they get through with it, I will be ready to give them more. But remember it is dangerous work to add to or take from the word of the Lord. G. DILLABAUGH.

Seneca Falls, N. Y., Aug. 19, '61.

For the Crisis.

From Darkness to Light.

BRO. WENDELL:—Allow me to give, through the columns of the Crisis, a brief sketch of my late experience. Having lived all my life, until the few past months, in sin and rebellion against God and his laws, and running after all manner of wickedness, I became perfectly miserable. Having moved from Michigan into the western or prairie States some three years ago, and leaving behind home and friends that were near and dear to me, I could then meditate upon my past life. Being among strangers of course gave me many lonely hours to think upon past events. I asked myself the question, what have I yet done for the salvation of my soul? What will ever save me if I pursue this course until my allotted time of probation ends? The answer came in tones of thunder, that my life had been a perfect blank, and unless I sought the Lord with all my heart, that I should be forever lost, and that without remedy.

It so happened about this time that I received a letter from Bro. A. F. Servis, with many inquiries whether I was preparing for an entrance into Christ's everlasting kingdom. Accompanying this letter was a copy of the Crisis which contained one of Bro. H. L. Hastings' discourses, and many other matters, which had a great tendency to lead me to the Bible to see whether there could be any possible chance for me to secure an entrance into that kingdom or not. The more I read, the more satisfied I became that salvation was yet offered to me; yet my sins seemed so great that I had doubts in my mind whether they would be forgiven, even if I should comply with the requirements laid down in the Book of Life. But upon a continued search after truth I found that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. Yet I like many others said, Go thy way for this time; when I have a more convenient season I will call for thee.

Thus time passed on until November last, when myself and companion resolved together to call upon the Lord; and, glory be to his name, he met us more than half way. Then our Bible seemed like the most glorious book that we ever read. We then sent one dollar for the Crisis, which has been a welcome messenger ever since. May God bless its authors, is our prayer. After making up our minds to forsake the old paths of sin and death, we found ourselves among strangers—indeed, none to say God speed you; no, but rather to discourage us. But thank God we had learned where to go in our lonely hours for consolation. Thus we went on our way rejoicing until Spring, but finding none of like precious faith in the vicinity where we then resided, and knowing that there was a church of Advent believers in the neighborhood that we had left in Michigan, and being anxious to hear one gospel sermon preached, if no more, we resolved to go back to the land of our childhood and unite ourselves with the little church there, that had been organized under the influence of Bro. and Sister Seymour and Bro. Servis. A few days thus passed, when my wife started for Michigan, I being detained some weeks on account of business. We then sent one dollar again for a copy of the Crisis to be sent to Goodrich, the place of her destination, because we thought that we could neither of us live without reading its contents. The more we read it, the more we love it, and the more we pray for its preaching to fill the whole earth as the waters cover the seas. But the anticipation of soon following my companion, and seeing my brethren that were there, cheered my soul while I remained in the west.

Time passed, and about the middle of June last found me here in my old native State. But as we are subject to disappointments in this world, I must acknowledge that I was on this occasion. I found the church in a state of coldness; many of the brethren had lost their first love, and were trying to feed upon the word without the Spirit; no meetings neither, had there [illegible] like. In the meantime Bro. Seymour happened our way, and preached the word from 2 Peter 1 : 16, 17. This revived us somewhat, and we appointed a prayer meeting once a week, which some of us still keep up, while others are starving upon the dead letter.

Brethren and sisters, in the name of Jesus, pray for us; for I fear that we are many of us farther from God to-day than the sects. O let us awake to righteousness, for the day of the Lord is at hand. Let us be up and out of the way of sinners. While other churches are looking at us upon all sides for an example, let us be faithful. Let me exhort you, in the name of my Master, to arise and trim your lamps, for the day is far spent; and while we are accused of not being a praying people, let us look about ourselves—let us live a holy and consecrated life; let us awake and put on the whole armor of Christ. O brethren, this world is nothing to me! I feel to thank and praise God's holy name that I have been brought to see the beauties of the great plan of salvation. Brethren, all is plain, good and glorious, where it was once dark and dismal. What a consolation to the poor pilgrim to know that he has a sure covert from the coming storm; and while God is about to pour out his judgments upon this wicked world, let us not sleep. Although the clouds of thick darkness are hovering over us, let us look beyond with an eye of faith to that land of rest which will soon heave in sight with all its glories. Then, if faithful, we shall see Jesus, and be able to exclaim with joy, This is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us.

My heart is pained when I look around this neighborhood and ask my God who will be saved. Are there ten righteous souls here? I fear not. Taking warning from what we see around us, let us get rid of this drowsy spell that has overtaken us. Let us trim our lamps anew, for "He will come and will not tarry." Brethren, we are but an infant church here, and other churches are watching for our good works. Now is the time to convince them that we have Christ in us the hope of glory. I rejoice that God has been willing to accept of my offering at this late hour, and I feel to say, glory to God, when I realize that I am an heir to that inheritance that fadeth not away. Remember me at the altar of prayer, that my faith fail not, and that I may meet you in the everlasting Kingdom. L. ROBERTS.

Grand Blanc, Mich., Aug. 17, '61.

For the Crisis.

Bro. Alling on the Conference.

The readers of the Crisis will recollect that in the number of the 7th instant there appeared a communication from Bro. Southwick, calling upon me, as Corresponding Secretary of our Ohio Conference, for some speedy action in favor of another annual convocation, also urging the necessity of such a meeting. As the members of the committee are much scattered, and a considerable time would be consumed in conferring with each one separately and arranging matters, I have concluded to adopt the following plan, viz.: to recommend each member of the committee to confer with the churches in his vicinity; and to churches where there is no resident committee, to take up the subject, and take such action as to time and place for holding said conference as they may think proper, and communicate the result to me as soon as possible, upon the receipt of which information the committee will be prepared to act. By this mode it is hoped that unanimity and concert of action will be secured. If no invitations are sent in, I see not how the committee can act. Now, whatever is done, brethren, must be done quickly. So don't delay.

It is most manifest to all who are in any wise acquainted with the state of the cause in which we are engaged, that prompt and efficient action is necessary on the part of every lover of the truth of the speedy return of our long absent Lord, in order to preserve alive the lingering graces and drooping faith of the church, amidst the perils and dangers through which we are now passing. That a good old-fashioned christian conference would aid in some degree I readily admit, but as comparatively few would be able to attend such a meeting, I am led to fear this would fall short of our necessities. An increased faith and increased effort are what is needed on the part of every individual member, in order to outride the tornado of evil that has burst upon us. The question is an important one as to how these desirable ends can be attained. As an incident has occurred very recently with me which has thrown some light upon the subject to my mind, I take the liberty of narrating it for the consideration of the brethren.

As I was passing to my usual place of business I met an aged brother, who, with his wife, keep the seventh-day Sabbath, as the best light they enjoy upon the subject, who gave me an urgent invitation to visit them. He said his wife was wonderfully cast down through manifold trials, etc. In the afternoon, according to promise, I gave them a call, and sure enough, I found her passing through a season of depression and gloom, of trial and temptation, apparently too great for her frail nature to endure. I soon learned that one leading cause of these evils resulted from their depressed circumstances. Recently they had lost a cow, on which they very much depended, and their place had yielded this year but a small portion of its usual fruits; both were in feeble health, and with all her husband could find no work, etc., and to use her words, starvation stared them in the face. After offering such consolation and calling attention to such promises as seemed best adapted to their wants, I left them, promising to call again soon.

As I returned home, the inquiry arose as to what is my duty, and what can I do for them? As to money, I had none. I resolved to take them a basket of vegetables, and present their case to a kind female relative, and do whatever else providence seemed to indicate to be duty; and the result was a contribution that relieved and gladdened their sad hearts, and made us to feel that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Now, dear brothers and sisters in the Lord, don't wait as I did to be called upon, but each one form himself into a committee, and seek out the poor, the tempted and the tried, and minister unto them kind and consoling words, and also of our substance—not forgetting those who labor in word and in doctrine, according to our ability, and thus show by our acts that we are in deed doers of the word as well as hearers, and we shall be blessed in our deeds. If each one will but carefully read the 2d chapter of James' Epistle, and set about at once in reducing its precepts to practice by uniting works to our faith, and if the present spiritual dearth that hangs over us like a pall of death is not soon dissipated, then be assured that God has not spoken by me.

If those who propose attending our contemplated conference will thus act up to the time of that meeting, and will then come together in the spirit and unity of the one body of our crucified, ascended, and soon coming Lord, we shall have a meeting that will tell on the hearts of both saint and sinner, and we shall separate as giants refreshed with new wine. If we come together thus, it will not take half or more of the time to get warmed up and thawed out by a fire of our own kindling, and bring us into working order. P. ALLING.

Norwalk, Ohio, Aug. 10, '61.

For the Crisis.

Will the Wicked Dead live again?

We believe they will. Why should we not, when the Scriptures plainly teach it? If to believe this is thought by some to surrender a point to the common enemy we see no way to help them, for the word of God must stand, though men's theories be blown to the winds.

It is often declared that the Old Testament is entirely silent in regard to the resurrection of the wicked. Is Prof. C. F. HUDSON wrong in his criticism on Psa. 9 : 17, as found in "Debt and Grace," page 206? He says, "The Hebrew* always denotes a return, or turning back, to a former place or state." Is this so? If it is, then the wicked must come forth from hell—sheol or hades—or they cannot "return," or be turned back again into sheol! To illustrate: if a man be shut up in prison, he must first come out of the prison, or he could not return back again! How, then, can the wicked be turned back again into sheol or hades, unless they are first brought forth out of it! We find further proof that the wicked will live again in Dan. 12 : 2. Here we will introduce a criticism of Prof. WHITING on this passage:—

"There is an obscurity in this passage, produced by an improper rendering of the Hebrew words, 'ailleh—weailleh.' They are translated in this instance, 'some—and some.' Now the phrase, composed of the pronoun ailleh, with the conjunction wau (and) joined to ailleh, is the proper expression for these and those. The idea of some, or a part of a thing, is usually expressed in Hebrew by the preposition min (or the consonant mem—alone), from. Thus, to express, according to the idiom of that language, such an English phrase as 'He took some silver,' it would be, 'He took from silver.' This pronoun is plural. In a simpler form, ail, it is found only in the Pentateuch and 1 Chron. 20 : 8. The words should be translated thus: 'And many from the sleepers of the dust of the ground shall awake, these to everlasting life, and those to reproaches and everlasting abhorrence.'"

Here, what is said of the one class, so far as it regards their awaking, is said also of the other class, viz.: "These"—the righteous—awake "to everlasting life"—and "those"—the wicked—awake to "everlasting abhorrence;" or, as our common translation renders it, "to shame and everlasting contempt." It does not say that the wicked awake to everlasting shame! or everlasting reproaches; but everlasting contempt, or abhorrence. This is well guarded, for no one can feel the sensation of of shame, unless they are conscious! and we do not believe the "shame" will be everlasting, or without end; because the wicked must die a "second death," i. e., be turned back again into sheol, and "be as though they had not been!" The contempt, or abhorrence, however, may last eternally, on the same principle as we hold in everlasting contempt the traitor to his country—Benedict Arnold! although he is not conscious of it!

The same argument that would prove the wicked will not live again, would also prove that the righteous will not live again; so far, certainly, as this text is concerned. In proof of this, we will introduce the conclusion of Prof. BUSH's criticism on this passage, (Dan. 12 : 2.) He says:—"The evidence is, on the whole, we think, decisive that Daniel speaks of a mystical and not of a literal resurrection!" Let us beware of the rock on which Prof. Bush split!

It is declared by some that there is no proof in the Old Testament that the wicked will ever live again, because it is no where expressed in so many words. But if this is to be taken as proof, the same will apply to the righteous, for the phrase "eternal life" is not found in the Old Testament, and "everlasting life" occurs but once. But in the same verse where "everlasting life" is found, it is also declared that the wicked—or "those" who do not awake to everlasting life, "awake" to "shame and everlasting contempt."

More in my next, as I intend to follow the motto—"Be short." T. M. PREBLE.

Concord, N. H., Aug. 15, '61.

* Our correspondent here gives a word in the Hebrew characters, for which we have no type; nor have we time, before going to press, to ascertain what should be its englicized form.—EDITOR.

For the Crisis.

Save All.

Save all. Roast beef costs say twelve cents per pound—eight pounds for a dollar. That won't last long in a family. Corn or rye meal costs half a cent to a cent and a half a pound. One pound of meal will make two pounds of pudding—more than enough to last a poor hungry man all day. A man can live ten times as long on a dollar's worth of corn as on a dollar's worth of pork or beef. A man can live on corn for a cent or two a day, while it will cost ten or twenty times as much to feed him on beef. Do you smile at these items? I have had to study such figures for years. ☞ You may have to before another year. Hundreds of starving poor will have to think of these things soon. Let us then save all.

You can feed ten bushels of corn to a pig, and when it is killed you get two hundred pounds of pork; but your corn would have made five hundred pounds of meal and one thousand pounds of boiled corn, corn cake or pudding, and each pound of that would sustain life as long as a pound of pork. Act wisely this year, for, while food is abundant in the land, famine is and will be in cities, not from lack of bread alone, but from lack of work and means to buy it. We must give, and if we give, we must save, that we may give, and that we may not want ourselves. Jesus could bless five loaves into five thousand dinners, but when they had done he said, gather up the fragments, and let nothing be lost.

O, friends, how many poor little orphans, and worse than orphans, would be glad to leave their rags and haunts of famine, misery and shame, and go into the country and pick the crumbs that fall from your tables—the crusts you give your pigs and dogs, and warm themselves these cold winter days by your cheerful fires. You will be called on for help soon, no doubt; now save all, and be ready when the famine gnaws the vitals of the poor. See that you do your duty then, and many shall call you blessed. H. L. H.

Selections.

Christianity and Slavery.

"Among those social relations which were alien to the nature of christianity, and which christianity found existing at the time of its first propagation, belonged slavery. By the estrangement of humanity from God, its original unity was disturbed. Mankind, destined to be one, split asunder into a multitude of nations, each striving to assert itself as the whole, and each taking an opposite direction to the other in its course of development. Thus the consciousness of possessing a common human worth was lost; and it became possible for man to be placed in that relation to his fellow in which nature alone should stand to humanity, and his own nature to the individual. A relation so unnatural could find its justification only by assuming the position that the difference among nations,—which took place at a later period, and originated in sin,—that difference, by virtue of which there exists so great a a disparity of intellectual and moral power, was something original. Hence men could no longer recognize the fundamental identity of human nature, and believed one class destined by nature itself to be the tools of another, and without any will of their own. Thus was this relation a necessary result of the position held by antiquity, when state and nation constituted the absolute form for the realization of the highest good; and thus it could happen that the nation which was the most ardent for civil liberty, still employed thousands only as slaves. And, though their situation was often rendered more tolerable through the influence of manners and the pure sentiments of humanity—which, breaking through unnatural restraints, would introduce a heartier fellowship between master and slave,—yet the contradiction between this whole relation and man's essential dignity could not thus be set aside; and in general it continued to be the prevailing habit, to regard slaves not as men gifted with the same rights as all others, but as things. * * *

But christianity brought about that change in the consciousness of humanity, from which a dissolution of this whole relation, though it could not be immediately effected, yet by virtue of the consequences resulting from that change, must eventually take place. This effect christianity produced, first by the facts of which it was a witness; and next by the ideas which, by occasion of these facts, it set in circulation. By Christ, the Savior, belonging to all mankind, the antagonisms among men resulting from sin were annulled; by him the original oneness was restored. These facts must now continue to operate in transforming the life of mankind. Masters as well as servants were obliged to acknowledge themselves the servants of sin, and to receive in the same manner, as a gift of God's free grace, their deliverance from this common bondage,—the true, the highest freedom. Servants and masters, if they had become believers, were brought together under the same bond of an heavenly union, destined for immortality; they became brethren in Christ, in whom there is neither bond nor free, members of one body, baptized into one spirit, heirs of the same heavenly inheritance."—Selected by F. H. B.

Commit thy way unto the Lord.

In times of scarcity in money and employment, how many hearts beat with a painful anxiety, lest the "barrel of meal and cruise of oil" should utterly fail! How many at the present time, now in comparative comfort, look forward with painful forebodings to the future for themselves and those dependent upon them! Every one realizes, as perhaps they have seldom done before, that they "know not what a day may bring forth." It is such time as this that tests the superiority of the christian's faith above the hope of the mere worldling. The promises of God are full and precious to those that put their trust in him, and the inspired Psalmist could say in his old age, "I have never seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." The hand which ruled the affairs of earth then, is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

Many years ago a devoted English clergyman was in a strange place, and became reduced to great straits. His money was all gone, and not a particle of food remained for his household. In the depth of his distress he cried mightily unto the Lord at the hour of morning prayer. When he arose his little ones begged for bread, and as there was none to give them all burst into tears. But a sleepless eye had watched all his footsteps, and even while he was yet speaking, had sent a messenger to relieve his distress. The door-bell rang, and a man presented to the astonished wife a small parcel, saying he was directed by a gentleman to leave it there, and that some provisions would arrive shortly. Very soon a countryman drove up with a load of provisions of almost every description. The paper was found to contain forty gold pieces. Such a profusion had never been known in the house of the poor minister before. It was with feelings almost of awe as well as boundless gratitude that this marvellous relief was regarded, so plainly was the hand of God to be seen in it. These timely gifts were continued at intervals until the day of his death, yet it was long before he could learn from whence they came. At length it was found to be a benevolent christian merchant, who had often observed the clergymen walking the streets with a grave, dejected air, and had been led to inquire privately into his circumstances. As a result, he had sent them the gold by his clerk, and the provisions by his country servant, saying, "God forbid that any of Christ's ambassadors should be strangers and we not visit them; or in distress, and we not assist them."

Desponding christian, though for a time your earthly prospects look dark, remember you "have a rich Father in heaven." And you, to whom God has given an abundance, now may you show your gratitude by distributing to the necessities of others. Follow the promptings of your heart to such charities. It may be the whisperings of God's Spirit to your soul and if you do not listen he will choose a worthier instrument. "What a pleasure it is," said the noble Howard, as he took a cluster of luscious grapes to refresh a dying soldier, "to afford relief even to the bodies of men!"—Presbyterian.

A Child's Faith.

Visiting one of the mission schools of Brooklyn, I was introduced to a remarkable child. He was brought into the school from the highways and hedges, and we have reason to hope that, young as he is, he has been taught of God. One day he was playing with powder, and putting his mouth to the match to blow it, it exploded, and the whole charge went into his face and eyes. For some time he was totally blind, and the physician gave but little hope of recovery. But the little sufferer was patient and calm, and even hopeful; sitting through the dark days meditating on what he had learned at the mission Sabbath-school, and repeating passages of Scripture and many a beautiful hymn.

One evening after the physician had spoken discouragingly, and his parents, as he perceived, were in deep distress, he was absorbed on his knees in a corner of the room in earnest prayer. His voice, though subdued almost to a whisper, was indicative of intense feeling. His parents inquired what he had been praying so earnestly for. Why, said he, that Jesus Christ would open my eyes. The doctor says he can't, and so I thought I would ask the Savior to do it for me. Here was faith in its simplest form. It was the faith of a child; and his prayer was heard. He can now see. What christian may not take a lesson from this childlike confidence?

Prayer Answered.

About twenty-five years ago, the packet ship Sovereign, Capt. Griswold, of New York, with a large number of passengers and freight was in the British channel, on a lee shore, in a heavy gale. At that place called the bill of Portland the land forms a curve, two points of land projecting into the sea. Between these, the ship was drifting directly on shore, and escape seemed impossible. Only a change of wind could save them.

It was near midnight. No one had retired, for none expected to see another rising of the sun. The captain thought that within an hour and a half all would be over.

There was on board, as steward, a colored boy, about eighteen years of age. He was a good christian lad, then recently converted. When all were anxious for their fate, he went down into the coal-hold, under the forecastle, and there prayed. When he came up, he went to the mate, whose name was Williams, and said, "Mr. Williams, we shall not go ashore!" "How do you know?" inquired he with an oath and a sneer. "Because the Lord has told me so," replied the boy; "we shall have a change of wind."

Whether in answer to his prayer or not, let the reader judge, but half an hour from that time, the wind shifted about five points of the compass, enabling the ship to pass clear of the land, and they were safe. The ship returned to New York, discharged her passengers and cargo, went on another voyage and was lost.

Of course unbelief will construe all this as the result of accident. To the atheist the world is the result of accident. But men of God, who are in the habit of visiting the closet and communing with God, to whom the prayer of faith is a reality, will have no difficulty in believing that that colored boy knew whereof he affirmed when he said, "God told him so." There is a God who hears and answers prayer. May we all know the way to his throne! B. S. BATCHELOR.

New Bedford, Aug. 6, 1861.

P. S. The above facts I received from the lips of one who was one of the ship's crew at the time the accident occurred.

The Man without an Enemy.

Heaven help the man who imagines he can dodge "enemies" by trying to please everybody! If such an individual ever succeeded, we should be glad to know it. Not that we believe in a man's going through the world trying to find beams to knock his head against; disputing every man's opinion; fighting and elbowing and crowding all who differ from him. That again is another extreme. Other people have a right to their opinions—so have you; don't fall into the error of supposing they respect you less for maintaining it—or respect you more for turning your coat every day to match the color of theirs. Wear your own colors, spite wind or weather, storms or sunshine. It costs the vacillating and irresolute ten times the trouble, to wind and shuffle and twist that it does honest, manly independence to stand its ground. Take what time you please to make up your mind; having made it up, stick to it.

Weak Things Confound the Mighty.

The famous William Tennant once took much pains to prepare a sermon to convince a celebrated infidel. But in attempting to deliver this labored discourse, Mr. Tennant was so confused that he was obliged to stop and close the service by prayer. This unexpected failure in one who had so often astonished the unbeliever with his eloquence, led the infidel to reflect that Mr. Tennant had been at other times aided by a divine Power. This reflection proved the means of his conversion. Thus God accomplished by silence what his servant meant to effect by persuasive speaking.

Mr. Tennant used afterwards to say "his dumb sermon was the most profitable sermon he ever delivered."

The Bible.

It is a Book of Laws to show the right and wrong.

It is a book of Wisdom that makes the foolish wise.

It is a book of Truth that detects all errors.

It is a Book of Life that shows how to avoid everlasting death.

It is the most authentic and entertaining History that was ever published.

It contains the most remote antiquities, remarkable events and wonderful occurrences.

It is a complete code of laws.
It is a perfect body of divinity.
It is an unequaled narrative.
It is a Book of Biography.
It is a Book of Travels.
It is a Book of Voyages.

It is the best Covenant that was ever made; the best Deed that was ever sealed.

It is the best Will that was ever executed; the best Testament that was ever signed.

It is the young man's best Companion.
It is the school-boy's best Instructor.
It is the house-wife's best Guide.
It is the learned man's Masterpiece.
It is the ignorant man's Dictionary, and every man's Directory.

It promises an eternal reward to the faithful and believing.

But that which crowns all, is the Author.

He is without partiality and without hypocrisy.

"With whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

It is the bright and morning star—the hope of glory.

SECTARIANISM.—Dr. Tyng says: "Sir, I have tried to be a sectarian. I can't be. I have labored to work out the principles on which people spent their lives in building up dividing fences between themselves and neighbors. But, sir, I have always found that a summer spent in building fences brings a winter of starvation without a crop. I prefer to think of those things in which, as christians, we are united, and they constitute the whole truth which is necessary to save us from sin."

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.00
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis or any of the Publications on sale at this office should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, BOSTON, MASS.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PREPAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 311. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1861. VOL. XIII. NO. 26.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

The Christian.

BY VESTA M. CUDWORTH.

I saw him when the night was cold and dark,
The starry hosts were veiled, while his frail barque
Seemed wrestling with the storm king's power,
Threatening destruction; black clouds slowly lower,
While rattling thunders seem with fiends to cope,
Then wail a sullen requiem to hope.
But when the lightning flashed with fearful gleam,
His little barque safe on the wave was seen;
Thus patiently he breasts the storm until
The winds are hushed—he is a victor still.

I saw him when his earthly sky was fair,
His pathway led through pleasure's softest snare;
Fame's tempting garlands too were spread for him,
And golden bubbles graced the bowers of sin;
Beings of brightest beauty beckoned on—
To wine and dance, where sparkling wit and song
Awaited him on false, enchanting ground—
Where sensual love and poisoned fruits are found;
The tempter smiles, but lo! the prey is gone,
And angels shouted, he hath overcome!

I saw him when his race was almost run,
O'er burning sands he toiled, far, far from home;
Friends had deserted in the hour of strife,
And foes sought madly for his precious life.
Weary and sick, once more the tempter came,
And taunting whisper'd, where's your boasted gain?
The God you've served so faithful and so long,
Has given poverty, reproach and wrong.
The rod and staff still comfort me, he cried,
And shouting VICTORY! the pilgrim died.

I see the pilgrim now (by faith) and lo!
His conflicts all are ended here below;
He roams where beauty in perfection glows,
And drinks where love's sweet fountain ever flows;
Nor tempter e'er shall reach that peaceful home,
Where sickness, death and tears are never known;
His harp rings loudly in that happy throng,
And glory, glory trembles in his song;
He suffer'd that a kingdom he might win,
Now in that kingdom he is CROWNED A KING!

Words and Truth.

REV. H. W. BEECHER has defined his position touching the system of Christian truth in the following terms:—

"There are those who are on the rebound from dogmatism in our time—from an effete ecclesiasticism. We are living in an age in which men are breaking away from old forms of thought—not from old truths I myself profess to be among the number of those who are breaking away from old forms; but not from one old truth, blessed be God!—not one. In all the great truths which relate to man's nature and destiny, and which holy men have endeavored to present in every age, I most fervently believe—from the bottom of my soul I believe in them; but not in their particular mode of expressing them; not in any concatenation of words in which they saw fit to clothe them. I claim the liberty which every man has, in every age, of saying the things which God reveals to his consciousness in the words which most clearly express them. I hold myself at liberty to speak the truths of God in exactly that language which best suits the audience, the time, and the habits and wants of the age. But this leaving old forms is not the same as leaving old truths, any more than leaving old clothes is leaving the people that wore them. For forms are but dresses, after all; and by so much as a person is worth more than his raiment, by so much is a truth worth more than the particular form of words used to express the truth."

We are not sure that we understand to what extent Mr. Beecher intends to assert his independence of old forms of thought and speech upon theological subjects. His language may mean nothing more than that boastful liberality and catholicity which The Boston Recorder asserts for itself as "the representative of New England Congregationalism and of the faith of the Puritans but not sectarian in its spirit, nor bigoted in its attachment to forms." Mr. Beecher claims the liberty of "leaving old forms," while he yet declares that he most fervently believes, from the bottom of his soul, "in all the great truths which relate to man's nature and destiny, and which holy men have endeavored to present in every age." The Boston Recorder with equal confidence claims to hold inviolate "the faith of the Puritans," while it professes a charming freedom from bigotry "in its attachment to forms." Possibly Mr. Beecher and The Recorder mean just the same thing;—that they hold fully and earnestly every truth which is contained in the Scriptures, every truth which holy men in other ages have sought to express; but will not suffer their faith to be hidebound in mere human formulas devised from the statement of those truths. If this is all that Mr. Beecher means, either he must be put in the same category with The Boston Recorder, as one of the pillars of Orthodoxy in these degenerate times, or The Recorder must be delivered over to the tender mercies of The Boston Review.

But Mr. Beecher's avowed contempt of the use of words for expressing truths, has made him careless of the niceties of definition in respect to his own statements and beliefs. If by forms of words he means metaphysical or theoretical explanations of revealed truths, he is quite right in saying that he will not be bound by the particular mode of expressing such truths which holy men in other ages may have adopted, according to their mental philosophy or personal experience. Such forms of words, indeed, should not lightly be set aside. They embody much of the pious thought and the concentrated wisdom of the ages. They are worthy to be pondered by every inquirer after truth. But they are guides and helps only, not authorities. Yet inasmuch as truth can be stated only in words, it is not possible to reject every "particular form of words" used to express a given truth without breaking away from the truth itself. The Scriptures declare that Christ is God and was with God from eternity. Theologians have devised metaphysical theories of the mode of the divine existence, with a view to explain this declaration of the Bible, but the belief of no one of these theories is necessary to a belief in the divinity of Christ. Yet one cannot shuffle off, as an old dress, the "particular form of words used to express that truth" in the first three verses of John's Gospel, and still claim that he believes without qualification or reservation that Christ is God. The truth lies in that particular form of words, fairly interpreted.

Theologians have various theories to define the vicarious nature of the death of Christ, and the divine method of justification through the atonement. Many or all of these theories may be dissented from in part, by one who "from the bottom of his soul" believes in the fact of the atonement. But there is a "particular form of words" upon this subject that cannot be modified or rejected without rejecting the very substance of the truth. That statement is, "Being justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins." Here the words are of the very essence of truth, and must be honestly accepted and strictly held by one who professes to believe in the atonement.

The same might be said of the doctrines of depravity, regeneration, future punishment, etc. Setting aside all human theories and methods for the formal or philosophical expression of these doctrines, it yet remains that a belief in "these old truths" demands an implicit belief in the very words used in the Bible to express them. We say "used in the Bible." Mr. Beecher speaks of "the things which God reveals in his consciousness." But has God made no other revelation of truth than that which comes through the consciousness of every man? Is not the Bible an explicit revelation from God in words which "most clearly express" what God himself intended? Is there any revelation now in human consciousness, except through the medium of those same truths interpreted and applied by the Holy Spirit, in devout communings of the soul with God? Would Mr. Beecher place even such revelations in consciousness upon a par with the Bible in respect to authority? But if the Bible is a revelation of truth from God to man, we are to come at its truths not primarily through consciousness, but by the grammatical and logical interpretation of the words of the book itself. So that it is utterly impossible to hold a truth which the Bible reveals, while rejecting or explaining away "the particular form of words" which the Bible uses to express that truth. Moreover, there is a right and a wrong interpretation of the words of the Bible. It is possible for common sense and common honesty devoutly exercised upon the words of Scripture, first clearly to ascertain their meaning by the aid of grammar and lexicon, and then fairly to state that meaning in other and equivalent terms as a doctrine or an article of faith, the belief of which, 'for substance, at least' is an evidence that one really accepts not only the words of Scripture, but the truth which those words are intended to convey. A minister of the Gospel should be "nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine," and should "hold fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers."—Independent.

☞ A great many drop a tear at the door of poverty, when they should rather drop a sixpence.

☞ He whose soul does not sing, need not try to do it with his throat.

The following interesting article, taken from the writings of John Hurley, of New York City, comes to us in the handwriting of Bro. J. K. Bellows, by whom it has been selected for the Crisis. We publish it with pleasure. ED.

"Retrogression of Human Life.

The history of Adam, though brief, is really wonderful. He was made of the dust of the ground. His organization and symmetry of parts manifested the perfection of divine wisdom; for of all the works of this creation there is nothing so exquisitely beautiful as man. He was made to live by breathing. God breathed into his nostrils the breath of lives, and the man became a living soul. All the material substance that constituted the man Adam was organized—blood, brains, etc. He needed an element to put in motion this machinery of which he was made up; this element was the atmospheric air, called the breath of lives, because without it life cannot exist; yet the air is not itself the life. Life is the principle which causes motion. This element of life is undefinable; it emanates from God; he is the source of it. It is in scripture called the soul, and in some instances it is called the spirit. It is not a being, but it animates and gives motion to being, as in the case of Adam. God communicated it with the air or breath and the organized man became a living being. The principle of life once communicated to organized matter and prolonged by respiration of the air which surrounds the whole earth, being itself alive or in perpetual motion, could never cease without some cause of violence to the organized machinery.

This is implied in God's charge to Adam—in the day of thy eating, dying thou shalt die. The earth was cursed and became corrupted through Adam's transgression; and that the food without which he could not prolong existence became the ultimate and infallible cause of his death; and that in death he dissolved into his native element, dust. 'Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.' Adam lived the longest of any of the Patriarchs but three—Jared, Methuselah, and Noah;—from this we my learn the perfection of his organization and constitutional strength, as also that his habits and mode of living were more frugal than the general habits of his posterity. His son Seth lived 912 years, and his son Enos 905; Canaan, son of Enos, 910; Mahalaleel, his son, 895; Jared, the father of Enoch, 962. Enoch was the father of Methuselah, who lived 969 years, and whose longevity is doubtless attributable to the piety of his father and grandfather. And the fact that Noah lived 950 years is also the result of his extraordinary piety; he was steady, sober and faithful. Shem, Noah's son, only lived 600 years; and the average of life in those days after the flood was from 300 to 400 years; and men lived long or short according to their habits of sobriety and frugality.

Everything which the earth produced before it was cursed was 'very good.' But after God pronounced the curse upon it, it could no longer yield its original fruit, but thorns and thistles; and much of its herbage is fatal to human life; hence the legitimate consequence of excessive and incautious indulgence of appetite is premature death; and the general and no less natural or certain consequence of the corruption of our food is the ultimate death of all men. The forcible and unanswerable proof of this fact is the deterioration and retrogression of our race since the days of Adam; and despite the efforts of medical science to the contrary, this course will continue to the end. Those who fare sumptuously generally if at all labor easily and die horridly. No man ever became more corpulent than nature requires, whose physical exercise is equal to his food. Corpulency of bulk indicates want of mental energy or opportunity to take physical exercise. Eating too much and working too little is always a natural consequence of worldly affluence, and the certain precursor of a nation's downfall. The Patriarchs' food was more simple and less artificial than is ours at the present day. They ate when they were hungry, and to satisfy the demands of nature. The retrogression of the human race as regards age and size, is what must strike every observer of nature with peculiar force. There are few if any of us equal to our grandparents in size or constitutional strength. The exceptions are rare when we surpass them, * * * and a few isolated cases (we will say one to a thousand) will never hold good against the fact that, instead of men living 900 years, as after the creation, the average will not reach twenty.

In the Patriarchal days, we have no account of the death of children; but go into any of our cemeteries, and look at the graves and tombstones, and you will find five-eights are children under ten years of age. Well—but says the objector, What does this argue? Why, it argues this: that the present life of man does not average twenty years to the generation. Well, then, we will suppose the world, or time, to last 4000 years longer—where, I ask, would be the sons of Adam? They would all be dead; and not one to tell an inhabitant of another planet that a race of intelligent beings did once live on this earth. We have account only of the lives of the Patriarchs; doubtless others lived as long, and perhaps longer than they. From the account given we may safely average the life of man during the patriarchal age at 800. Well, suppose we could average the present age at 50 years—which by common consent is 20 years over the mark—then we see that the human race has deteriorated more than 100 to every thousand years since the creation of Adam. Making the greatest allowance in favor of our race in five hundred years from now, the age of man will not exceed TEN years. It will be as remarkable then to see a man live thirty years, as it is now to see a man live one hundred years. The natural decay of man is much greater than we are at first sight ready to admit: we see it both in childhood and old age. Thousands and tens of thousands of children are constitutionally decayed at birth, and it is by great care and tenderness they are a few years preserved in a dying state; and if, by extraordinary care, they should live to get married and beget children in their own likeness, they but furnish ready food for the worm, and lumber for the tomb.

The decay of nature is peculiarly prominent in aged people—so visible is it indeed that no person can help seeing it, unless they willingly close their eyes. Behold that aged man or woman who totters and trembles and staggers along as they walk or rather feel their way! and cast back your eyes of memory twenty or thirty years, and look at them in the full bloom of youth and health, gay and thoughtless, anxious only for merriment and sport—never considering that, in a few short years, they would have little if any interest in the things that now absorb their whole attention. Ask yourself this question: Is it the same soul which animated this person thirty years ago that now animates him? If it be, then surely the soul is changeable, capable of growth in strength, wisdom or weakness. And if the soul be capable of these changes, who will dare say that it is not capable of death? especially seeing God has declared that the soul that sinneth, it shall die.'—Ezk. 18: 4 and 20. If man have a soul which is something that is not affected by his youth, old age, sickness, infirmity or death, then it cannot be affected by sin. If affected by one, it is by all. If it be an entity wholly distinct from man, then it cannot be affected by man's good or evil acts; but if it be a principle infused in man which cannot know, nor feel, nor move, but as he knows, and feels, and moves, and acts—then its life, apart from man's life, is of no account either to itself or to the man who possessed it.

All this of course on the supposition that man has a soul, which requires better proof than the mere assertion. Nature and common sense teach us if a child have a soul, that soul has only the knowledge of a child—the life of a child. If there was no other book to teach mankind of a future state of existence than the Bible, no one would ever imagine so foolish and unreasonable an idea as that he himself is somebody distinct from himself—some one who can and does live, and move, and know, and act, feel pain or pleasure, joy or sorrow, when he himself does not live, nor move, nor know, nor act, nor feel, and when he is alike insensible to pleasure, pain, joy, or sorrow. The inconsistency of such a notion would appear so glaringly contradictory to the mind simply influenced and guided by scripture and reason alone, that all the divines in Christendom could not get them to receive it; but people are not influenced in religious belief by reason, but by fiction or superstitious fears. Hence when it is said 'All the days that Adam lived were 920 years and he died,' it is not understood that Adam ceased to exist, but that he changed, by bursting the shell and dropping his body; while the Adam proper did not die at all. But the Bible plainly and significantly teaches that Adam, whom God created and commanded, sinned, and that because he sinned he died; and that all his posterity died in him.

Adam lived nine hundred and thirty years, 'dying to die,' as the original has it; and as was the case with himself individually, so also it is with his posterity; for the retrogressive life shows that in him, both individually and collectively, they are dying to die. To redeem Adam and his posterity from the death that his transgression brought on them, is why Christ became incarnate, lived, died, and rose from death; for "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

For the Crisis.

Lines.

His willing hands prepared the water,
And lowly bending, kneeling there,
He washed the feet of each disciple,
And wiped them with attentive care.

Until he came to Simon Peter,
Who sat amazed to view the scene;
He cried, "Lord, dost thou wash my feet?
Shall Jesus stoop to make me clean?

"Nay! nay! thou art the Son of God!
I'm for thy servant scarcely meet—
Unworthy e'en thy love to share,
And thou shalt never wash my feet!"

But Jesus answering Peter, said,
"Thou knowest not what I do to thee;
But hearken, if I wash thee not,
Behold thou hast no part with me."

Then Peter trembling bowed him low,
With streaming eyes he meekly cried,
"Lord, pardon! deign to wash my feet—
O wash my hands, my head beside!"

Poor sorrowing souls who've waited long,
Repentant at the throne of grace,
Yet failed to feel His pardoning love,
To taste the joys of perfect peace,—

Search well your hearts; do you not find
Rebellious pride still lurks within?
Which cries, "my Savior shall not stoop
To wash away my guilt and sin."

Are you not trusting your own strength—
Your own good deeds to make you whole?
Rejecting Jesus' precious blood,
So freely shed to cleanse your soul.

No more like Peter dare dispute
Jehovah's wondrous, mighty plan;
In ignorance and folly cry,
"My will, O Lord, not thine be done."

But humbly lay at Jesus' feet
Your guilty, sad, o'e burdened heart;
O meekly yield your way to his—
He'll peace and blissful rest impart.

MRS. W. P. WENTWORTH.

La Fayette, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

A Letter to my Friends.

I have received letters from several of like faith from Vermont, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine and Rhode Island. It will oblige me much if such will accept this as an answer to theirs. Many inquire if the Mission S. S. is still existing. It is, but suffers much since "hard times" came on. There are a great many little ones who have had to stay at home of late, some needing dresses, others shoes. We have nothing to make boys' clothing of. Good has been done in this city, without its aid, too. I regret that my own hands have not been busier in that direction. What little I have done has been done cheerfully. The blessings called upon me from the poor, who could give nothing more, will follow me through life. A man, his wife and daughter, have been thoroughly converted, not only to "the truth," but to the Lord. Bro. Hastings baptized them. They are growing in grace, learning to trust in God,—which is the best lesson christians can learn.

Besides all good wishes from the School, I got the measles, which improved my health. The Lord restored my soul. This is the reason you have not had answers to your letters. SARAH, of Westford, go on serving the Lord. Wake up the dreamers there. Be zealous for the right. ABBIE, Ashfield, has been "healed." Well, your life henceforth belongs to God. I have seen enough in the actions of one who professed to have been healed, one who spoke of God's power in the Crisis, one whom ministers held up as an example of faith to their churches. That one has proved to be the greatest deceiver I ever met. God's power is unlimitable; but we should be careful to live so righteous that people can believe it has been manifested to us. The "healing" question is a delicate point; the man who professes to have this gift should be sure to have the "gift" of a good character, for he is looked upon with suspicion. Think not I am an opposer to this faith. I believe there are cases of healing in truth, but nine tenths of the cases I have witnessed were only the consequence of a strong will. Some of them have turned to be the results of fanaticism.

In one week more I expect to be in Canada, after an absence of eighteen months. If there is a spot on earth where cannons can't be heard, nor soldiers seen, I want to be there. My experience the past year is worth much. I have learned more of the world, the church, the enemy, and I've learned how to trust in God; have proved him to be both Father and Friend.

Purposed to have been at Wilbraham. Think it better to meet with the "two or three" at the Conference in Maine. Hope to be there. Have thought much of the cause there. Though I leave the missionary field in Providence, there's no need of leaving the work entirely. There's plenty to do up in Canada, and plenty who wont do it. The world is full of poor ignorant children. I suppose if each christian would labor in his own neighborhood, and let "foreign missions" do the same, the world would be just as likely to be converted.

Good by to U. S. A. God bless the saints in its borders. Thanks to all who have kindly received me. Pardon from those whom I may have offended. The little ones of my acquaintance must be faithful. Let me hear from you. Write when you can. Pray for unworthy me. Address me to Danville, C. E.

I hope the friends will remember the school. It is on Sister Hastings' hands. They come to her for clothes. She has none for them, and but few for herself. Think of a coming winter. Think of a coming judgment. God keep us in time, and save us in eternity. Amen.

M. MATHEWS.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 3, '61.

For the Crisis.

"Behold, I come quickly."

"Even so! come, Lord Jesus!" These are the last aspirations of love, of one who breathed forth love in almost every expression,—one who not only believed his Lord would come again, but who truly loved his appearing. Six thousand years this world has rolled on, getting hoary with age, and stained with blood, sins, and sorrow; and still death reigns, sorrow's tear is still coursing down the cheek, the cries of the down-trodden and oppressed are still heard, the widow and orphan are yet heard crying and pleading for help. Man's inhumanity to man has made countless thousands to mourn.

And shall this long night of death, mourning and sorrow continue always? Have we no tokens of that morning that bringeth "JOY" with its sun-rising? Yes, verily! A waiting, expectant Church sees the long-drawn shadows of twilight announcing, "The Lord is at hand." His faithful servants have been studiously examining the chart all along the coast, and they see that the reckoning is about run out, and, like faithful watchmen, they have been crying out that LAND is near. Prepare! prepare to enter the harbor of rest. O! happy day, when thine adorable Redeemer, so long dishonored and despised, shall be publicly enthroned, in presence of an assembled universe, crowned Lord of ALL, glorified in his saints, satisfied in the fruits of his soul's travail, destroying his enemies with the brightness of his coming, causing the hearts of his waiting people to "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."

Reader, prepare to meet him! Let it be a joyous thought to thee—thy "blessed hope"—the meeting of thine Elder Brother, and only Life-Giver. Stand with the armor on, ready to catch the first streak of that coming brightness, which will enlighten the earth with such a ray of glory as mortal eyes never gazed upon before. The world is now in preparation. It is rocking on its worn-out axle. Distress of nations is upon us, and none can help seeing it but those who are blinded by the wisdom of this world, or led by the blind leaders of the blind. There are voices on every side proclaiming "He cometh! he cometh! to judge the earth." Reader! art thou among the number of those who "love his appearing?" Remember the attitude of his expectant saints: "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, will find WATCHING!"

G. DILLABAUGH.

Seneca Falls, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Identical, yet not the Same.

We read in Matt. 26: 64, thus:—. . . "nevertheless, I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye (high priest) see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Again we read in Rev. 1: 7,—"Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him."

Question. Do these texts settle the fact that the wicked dead will be raised, and also that their resurrection will be simultaneous with that of the righteous, with no one thousand years between? Must this self-same high priest, and those identical individuals who pierced our Saviour, be raised at Christ's coming, in order to verify these texts? A possible explanation was suggested to me in reading such items as these:—

There is a woman in Peachem, Vt., who has an apron that she has worn for forty-nine years, and a part of the original fabric is still visible in places. This same woman has also a dress that she has worn for forty-seven years.

Again. "The forty-seventh Regiment in Canada.—The forty-seventh regiment, now in camp at Montreal, formed part of the army under Gen. Wolfe which took Quebec in 1759. When Wolf was mortally wounded, he was carried from the field by some grenadiers of the forty-seventh, and the regiment for many years bore the name of 'Wolf's Own.' To this day the officers wear a black worm in their lace, as mourning for him."

This last item is taken from the Atlantic Herald, and that credits it to an Exchange. Says the Editor, "And yet not a man remains in all that regiment who ever saw one connected with it in 1759; and no one of them, probably, ever saw any one who had seen one of them."

TIMOTHY WHEELER.

Waterbury Center, Vt., Aug. 26, '61.

For the Crisis.

Letter from N. D. Wight.

BRO. WENDELL:—I rejoice that permission is granted and liberty given for a free expression of sentiments of such as feel it duty to give their views, providing it is done in a christian-like manner, through the columns of the Crisis. Br. Berick has truthfully said, "It is too late in the day to undertake to stifle conviction or prevent investigation," especially upon Bible questions. The many questions that have been asked of late in the Crisis I consider appropriate at the present time to be presented for a more thorough investigation. One of which rests more upon my mind at this time is that asked by a brother in the Crisis of July 10th upon Rev. 22: 9, and also who the angel was that talked with John on the Isle of Patmos? In Rev. 1: 1, we find that God gave a message or revelation to Jesus Christ. Jesus gave it to the angel, and the angel gave it to John, who transmitted it to the churches. In Rev. 22: 16, we read, "I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches." In v. 20, "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly"; then follows the response of the Church, "Amen, even so, come Lord Jesus." And again, "The Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done." In the 8th verse, when John had heard and seen these things, he fell down to worship before the feet of the angel that showed him these things. In verse 9th, the angel tells him, "See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God." Does a fellow servant imply anything more than a messenger, a mortal being sent to instruct God's people? Does it not imply by the keeping of the sayings of this Book, that he is one who is subject to the rule or government of the dispensation under which we live; though, perhaps, a being more noted and worthy than it has ever been our privilege to see? May not this fellow servant be one of those spoken of in Rev. 6: 11, that are represented as martyred, subject to death from the Beast who "ascendeth out of the bottomless pit," who is to slay the witnesses? Rev. 11th chapter. It is my view that the Angel referred to in all of the above named verses is one and the same, and if so, is of course the fellow servant of Rev. 22: 9. Your brother, in hope of Life through Christ the Life-Giver.

Bond's Village, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Do you Love Jesus?

We love Jesus because he first loved us, and still loves us. He came down from the Father on high, where he had the glory of heaven shining around him, and the holy angels to attend him. From his holy habitation he saw the whole human family was lost; they were without hope, and Christ loved them, and his heart yearned for them, and he came down from on high and gave himself a ransom for them. And should we not love such a Savior as this, who has given himself away to purchase our redemption? Who spilt his blood on Calvary's summit—who wandered about destitute and afflicted,—poor and despised. He had no place of abode, for he says "the foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Why was Christ so poor? Because he had such love for you and me, dear reader! O how Christ loved us, poor mortal beings! When I begin to meditate upon the goodness of God, although sometimes weak and faint, and worn out with the toils of the day, it brings peace and comfort to my soul, and I feel to bless God for his goodness; then I can sing—

"O, how I long to see that day
When the redeemed shall come
To Zion, clad in white array,
Their blissful, happy home.

My longing heart cries out, O come!
Creation groans for thee:
The weary pilgrim sighs, O come,
Bring immortality!"

What joy there is in religion! What comfort it brings to the saints of God, when we lay ourselves down to rest, and feel that he is watching over us! O can we not love such a Jesus as this? He bore our sins on the tree, and by his stripes we are healed. And when the Jews had nailed him to the cross, they thought he was in their power. But Joseph took his body and laid it in the tomb. Glory to God! the grave could not hold him, for the he rose and has ascended on high, and making intercession for us. He sits on the right hand of the Father. O, when I look round and see how much Christ has done for us, and how little we are doing for him, I feel unworthy to share the glory which shall be revealed when Jesus will bring salvation to the weary saint; when he shall gather his ransomed ones home to inherit the kingdom forever. O, may we continue faithful here, and overcome the few besetting sins and trials of this wicked and gainsaying world. And at last come off conquerors over the devil, and sit down on Christ's throne, as he has overcome and sits down on his Father's throne. J. Sarl.

Foster, R. I.

For the Crisis.

From Pennsylvania.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—The time draws nigh for the yearly gathering on Wilbraham Hills, and my heart wanders away and enters, with the pilgrim throng, that almost hallowed enclosure. I feel again the clasp of the warm-greeting hand, and look into each love-beaming face, and live over again the hours of "sweet counsel" with those whom I love "in the truth," and of blessed foretaste of glory to be revealed, or of overwhelming love of God in Christ Jesus, as some servant of the Lord preaches the word, with his own soul bathed in an "unction from above"! Ah! these are Camp meeting memories. I may not meet you again till we gather "where congregations ne'er break up, and Sabbaths have no end," yet, though absent in body, I shall be present in spirit, and pray the Lord of Hosts to rest down on the encampment. May the War-fiend breathe no breath of discord there, but Truth be proclaimed and believed, peace and harmony prevail, and God be glorified.

O! I love the people of God. When doubt and fear obscure every other evidence, this remains, that I have "passed from death unto life." A few years ago I turned from the world and a worldly-minded church, and took up my cross to follow Jesus with the "sect everywhere spoken against"; and fathers and mothers, brethren and sisters, houses and lands, with a little persecution, I have had, as promised. Dear Bro. and Sister Brewer, revered and beloved saints of God, "I was a stranger, and ye took me in"; "sick," and you cared for me. May your rich reward, with all those whom I have found "friends indeed" because "friends in need" be, to hear from the lips of the King, on his throne of glory, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." God bless you all, is the prayer of my deepest heart.

The guiding hand of my heavenly Father has led me away from those of like precious faith, and, with only ONE pilgrim companion, I live in a region where nature has been bounteous enough, but the light of the glorious gospel has been obscured by teaching for "doctrines the commandments of men";—in a word, modern immortal-soul-go-to-heaven-when-you-die theology has taken the place of the [illegible] until he (Christ) hath brought all [illegible] of the dead and the coming and reign of Jesus the Messiah. The message of Wm. Miller reached this region, and the cry "Behold he cometh" startled many from their slumbers; but in the dark and cloudy day that followed, the light seems to have gone out: perhaps there are warm embers, that only need blowing upon to kindle into life.

Here, then, is a field for the new evangelists which the church may send out from Wibraham, and I join in the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us." Are there not some strong, devoted young men, who with a carpet bag of tracts could leave cars and carriages and travel on foot—yes, walk over the hills and through the valleys of this beautiful country, and tell the people the glad news of the coming of the Prince of Life and Peace to this disordered, dying world? Here is no lack of places to preach. Some ancient customs prevail yet, and meetings are held in barns; and there are groves where the stand for the preacher and the seats stand all the year round, free for all; and the people walk many miles to meeting. The war has made "hard times," but the people are hospitable. May the Lord send forth laborers.

Dear brethren and sisters, farewell. Pray for us, that we may stand with you on Mount Zion, when the world shall bow to the peaceful sceptre of the Son of David.

Maria T. Albert.

Falmouth, Lancaster Co., Pa.

For the Crisis.

Questions.

1. Does not the argument of Paul in the 15th of 1st Cor. show that the righteous dead are judged while dead?

2. If this be so, is it not equally true that the wicked dead are judged while dead?

H. S. Meservey.

Boston, Sept. 7, 1861.

☞ A man of sense may well disdain artifice, just as a man of known wealth may venture to appear in a plain garb.

☞ The greatest truths are the simplest, and so are the greatest men.

☞ Honor is a good brooch to wear in a man's bosom at all times.

☞ The ways of the Lord are the ways of peace.

☞ Nature confesses that she has bestowed on man a most susceptible heart—that she has granted tears.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBR 11, 1861.

Close of the Volume.

Another volume of the Crisis closes with the present number—the sixteenth issue since the change of editorship early in May. The various duties of our position—duties which were formerly shared by three individuals, have taxed our strength to the utmost, and proved a heavier burden than we anticipated when we assumed them. But our experience has been a valuable one, and we make no complaint. While we remain at this post we shall meet its responsibilities with cheerfulness, endeavoring to do our work "heartily, as unto the Lord." Every day's mail brings kind words of appreciation and approval, for which we feel grateful.

There is special need at the present time for effort on the part of our subscribers, and it is very desirable that they send us, as soon as may be, pay for the next volume. Many firm friends of the paper, who would reluctantly do without it, send us the cry of "hard times;" but we hope prudence and economy will enable a large number of those who feel the pressure to pay for the paper until the "times" are easier—if such a thing is to be looked for in these last days of peril. Let those whom God has prospered in the things of this world, remember the necessities of their weekly visitor—the Crisis—at this time, and do all that duty demands in the matter of sustaining it.

The Camp Meeting.

We mean the Wilbraham meeting, of course, and are happy to say, for the information of those who were not there, that it was a most excellent one. In saying this, we but express, so far as we know, the unanimous verdict of all whom we heard refer to it. Entire harmony characterized the meeting from first to last, and we doubt not but that it was productive of much good to large numbers. Contrary to the expectations of many, the gathering was a very large one—larger, we were told, than on any former occasion! The numbers present on Sunday, Sept. 1st, we heard variously estimated at from four to eight thousand persons; five thousand would perhaps be the estimate of the more competent judges. The weather was perfect throughout, which prevented any interruption of meetings at the stand. The boarding arrangements were all that could be desired, and reflected much credit on those who had them in charge. The best of order prevailed, as has always been the case at Wilbraham. We are told there were about fifty preachers at the meeting—we have noted down the names of between thirty and forty since we came home, and suppose quite a number may be omitted on our list. All could not preach, of course, but all could take part in the meeting, and we trust [illegible] would be forgiven, even if I should [illegible] all did so in some useful way. The CHILDREN were there, and we may safely say they were never before quite so welcome at the Camp Meeting.

The week before the meeting was spent by Bro. Grant, one of the Camp Meeting Committee, on the ground in fitting it up for the expected multitude. On Sunday, Aug. 25th, Bro. G. preached on the ground to several hundreds who came out to hear, and we were informed that a good impression was made at that time. The meeting proper commenced on Monday, Aug. 26th. We did not reach the ground till Wednesday, (waiting nearly 24 hours to have our family accompany us,) but we learn, since our return, from Bro. Adams, that on Monday evening there was a social meeting in the Boston tent. He also informs us that there was preaching on Tuesday by Brn. G. A. Otis, C. Goodrich and Joseph D. Brown.

Wednesday, Aug. 28th.. Reaching the ground late in the forenoon, our first emotion was one of joyful supprise when we saw what promise the appearance of the encampment gave of a good meeting. Our "weeping prophet," Bro. Brewer, [the Lord bless him on his tour in our native state,] was in the midst of an earnest discourse at this time, and seating ourselves near Bro. D. T. Taylor, whose presence at the meeting gladdened many hearts, we listened to it with interest to the end. Bro. B. loves to persuade men to come, to Christ, and his whole being seems ravished with the "blessed hope" of soon seeing Him whom he so faithfully offers to dying men as their only refuge "from the wrath to come." In the afternoon Bro. P. B. Morgan preached an excellent practical sermon on Faith. In the evening Bro. R. V. Lyon gave us an earnest discourse on the kingdom of God from the words, "Fear not little flock," etc. At the close of the evening services the writer invited the children of the encampment to assemble at the stand when the signal should be given the next morning.

Thursday, 29th. Early in the morning we had an interesting preliminary meeting with forty-seven children in front of the stand. Many adult persons were in tears, we were afterwards told, while this exercise was progressing, and one of our good preaching brethren has informed us since our return home that he "cried like a child" during one entire meeting devoted to the children. Our second meeting with the little folks was at one o'clock, and our number then was increased to eighty-seven! Bro. Ladd remarked that no one would have dreamed that there were so many children on the ground. Certain it is that few dreamed until then that the presence of children could be made so largely conducive to the interest of a Camp meeting. We dare hardly trust ourself to revert to this pleasant theme in this sketch, (which we are obliged to pen at hurricane speed,) and will therefore add right here that meetings of the children were held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, to the great delight of themselves, their parents and large numbers of spectators. On one occasion a choir of adult persons of both sexes consented to go into the preachers' stand and sing the "Glory Hallelujah" hymn for the children. Bro. D. N. Smith likewise manifested an interest in the efforts to interest them, providing them all with copies of papers adapted to their years, and teaching them a child's hymn, or at least how to sing the chorus of one. Sister Higgins, on one occasion, addressed our little audience, or rather our large audience of little listeners. One small boy said he would be willing to walk every day from Worcester to Wilbraham to attend such meetings! The Lord bless the children who were at our Camp meeting. We shall always remember the happy hours we spent with them, and hope to meet them in the land made glorious by the presence of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

The forenoon discourse was by Bro. S. G. Mathewson from Rom. 12: 1. A good text well handled by a good man, who was listened to with interest by a large audience. The afternoon sermon was by Eld. Himes: subject, "the signs of the times." It was replete with interesting matter and food for solemn reflection. We trust it was good seed sown in good ground. The preacher for the evening was Bro. Henry Pratt, whom we were unavoidably denied the privilege of hearing. Hence we cannot speak of the discourse, but we will say that he preached well at the Boston Conference last Spring when we did hear him: we do not forget the good things he brought out concerning our interest in the "Will" of our Heavenly Father. We should have stated that at 8 1-2 o'clock this morning there was a Conference meeting at the stand. This recurred at the same hour every morning till the meeting closed.

Friday, 30th. This morning at 6 1-2 o'clock Eld. Himes preached a short discourse which we did not hear. The forenoon sermon was by Bro. Berick, from Rev. 3: 11. This was only the second opportunity we had ever enjoyed of hearing Bro. B. preach, and we listened to his able discourse with the deepest interest. So far as we know it gave excellent satisfaction to all who heard it. In the afternoon the writer spoke on the nature of man from the words, "we are dust." At the close [illegible] committee are much scattered [illegible] of the discourse, a Methodist preacher, Bro. Noble, very courteously proposed three inquiries, to which answers were returned. We can hardly believe his Methodist friends generally would thank him for repudiating, in their behalf, the expositions which Richard Watson and Adam Clarke have given of the Mosaic account of man's creation. The view Bro. N. gave of Gen. 2: 7, received the hearty "amen" of the congregation. In the evening Bro. Joseph T. Curry discussed the subject of the atonement in an able and interesting discourse. We cordially commend Bro. C. to the regard and fellowship of our churches. He seems possessed of a loving and gentle spirit, and we are happy to have made his acquaintance. His hearty belief of the doctrine of no future life out of Christ may be something of a barrier to his cordial recognition with some who believe that all the dead will live again, but he can afford to be patient and we trust he will be. He has, personally, our warm sympathies, and his faith concerning life from the dead is that which we have cherished for more than five years.

Saturday, 31st. At 6 1-2 o'clock, Bro. Ira Morgan preached a short practical discourse concerning the young man who inquired of the Saviour what he must do to inherit eternal life. We heard only a portion of his remarks. The forenoon discourse was by Bro. Hastings, who took for a theme large portions of the 10th chapter of Hebrews. So far as we learned the sermon gave general satisfaction. Much of it was practical and right to the point. He urged Heb. 10: 27, 29 with considerable energy to prove that the impenitent dead will live again to be judged and punished. Other scriptures were cited for the same purpose. On his way to the meeting on Friday, Bro. H. sprained his ancle, which compelled him to use crutches, and for the same reason he sat down while delivering some portions of his discourse. In the afternoon Bro. Grant preached an interesting sermon on the resurrection of the dead—proving first man's unconsciousness in death, thus establishing the necessity of a resurrection in order to a future life. His text was, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" in connection with Christ's words in John 5: 28, 29. While the discourse inculcated a universal resurrection, the illustrations of the subject, and most of the proofs, were drawn from the scriptures which relate wholly to the righteous. Of Bro. G's illustration of the subject of identity in the resurrection, in which he used several tumblers filled with pieces of candy, we have neither time nor space now to speak. The "silver cup" illustration pleased us much. In the evening we listened with deep interest to a well digested discourse on Redemption through Christ by Bro. W. S. Campbell. It contained much food for thought, and we enjoyed it.

Sunday, Sept. 1. Early in the morning of this the "last" and "great day of the feast," Eld. Britton preached a discourse setting forth his reasons for renouncing erroneous views which he had held, and which identified him with the "Cummings" party. His "confession" was very acceptable, and his return to the associations he had forsaken was heartily welcomed. At half past eight o'clock, the children of God assembled in front of the stand for a general Love Feast. About 125 persons spoke in the time allotted to this exercise; the season was one of interest, and will be long remembered. The forenoon discourse, delivered to an audience which filled the encampment, was by Bro. Berick, based upon the first thirteen verses of 1st Peter, 1st chapter. The subject discussed was, the evidences that Christ's second advent is an event nigh even at the doors. The solemn theme was ably and earnestly presented, and the sermon evinced extensive familiarity with sacred prophecy and profane history. We hope much good will result from the discourse, and that Bro. B. may continue to herald the evidences of redemption near and be largely instrumental under God in calling attention to this glorious theme.

The last sermon of the meeting was preached in the afternoon by Bro. Mathewson from Luke 21: 27. The theme was appropriate to the occasion, and the discourse was one more earnest effort to awaken an interest in an event concerning which the world and professing church are asleep. About fifteen persons were baptized during the week in the beautiful river near the encampment.

On Sunday evening the Lord's supper was observed in the boarding tent, anp was participated in by a very large number. The occasion was one of interest to the children of God, and was the last public feature of our excellent and long to be remembered Camp Meeting.

Of the number who commenced the Christian life at this meeting we cannot speak with accuracy, but we know that a considerable number presented themselves for the prayers of God's people.

Prayer and Conference meetings of much interest were kept up in various tents from first to last. We attended only those in the Boston, Springfield and Hartford tents—the last being the sheltering place for us and our family during the meeting. A good Hartford brother, referring to one of the best of the social meetings held in their tent, declared repeatedly that he had [illegible] notes [illegible] never [illegible] that so much of Christian joy could be experienced this side of the kingdom of God. If it was "unspeakable and full of glory" it was no more than is contemplated in the promises of the Bible. May the fruits of these precious seasons of fellowship with God and his children be abiding and abound unto life eternal.

Hudson's New Tract.—This Tract is ready and for sale at this office. Price, 5 cents for single copies, we paying postage; 100 copies for $2.00 if paid in advance, the purchaser paying the postage or expressage; if ordered in quantities of less than 60 copies, to retail or give away, the price will be 3 cents, the purchaser paying ing postage. The actual first cost of the edition of 2500 copies is a little more than 2 cts. per copy; hence to sell at $2 a hundred is a loss to Bro. Hudson. But he has himself named the terms, so send in your orders.

The Oldest Man.—At the Campmeeting a brother handed us the following to use in our exercises with the children. We forgot his request, but now give the question and answers to our larger audience—the readers of the Crisis.

"Question: Who was the oldest man?

Answer: Methuselah.

Question: How could he have been the oldest man when his father was sixty-five years old at the time of his birth, and he died while his father was still living?

Answer: His father (Enoch) was translated and did not die."

"Retribution."—This work by Bro. Hastings "is now ready," as we learn by a Notice which reaches us too late for this paper; said notice will appear in our next. The price for single copies, post paid, will be 38 cents. Orders with the cash, must be sent to the author at Providence, R. I.

Bro. Howell.—Just as we go to press a line from Bro. Grant informs us that "Bro. Howell is slowly improving, but his recovery is still quite doubtful."

A. C. A.—Please observe Bro. Morgan's notice in another column of the Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

☞ We spent last Lord's day in Boston, preaching twice in Chapman Hall.

The Ten Virgins.

The object in writing upon the subject suggested by the parable of the ten virgins, is not to notice or apply every part of this interesting passage, but simply to define the time when the movement in the moral world, corresponding with the going forth of the virgins, commences, or when it takes place. Before coming to the direct question, it may be well for us to remark, that this passage was spoken in answer to an inquiry of the disciples while Christ was upon the Mount of Olives, namely, "Tell us when shall these things be? what shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" The object, therefore, of the Saviour, is to illustrate and enforce the grand doctrine of his second advent, and also to give a clue to the time when the event shall happen. The figure employed, or the exact import of every point, may not be perfectly clear; but the general character and design without doubt may be understood. It is safe to take the leading features in the parable, and seek for their fulfillment. For example, in the parable of the treasure in the field, we have three points which are very prominent, (1.) The discovery of the treasure, (2.) Its estimated value, being regarded of as much value as all the man's possessions, (3.) The sacrifice made to obtain it—he sold all that he had and purchased that field.

But we turn again to the parable of Matt. 25. We are told, sometimes, that the great end sought to be obtained by this parable is watchfulness,—vigilance on the part of the servants of Christ; that by this he endeavors to enforce the duty of vigilance. But we are led to inquire, why was it necessary to present so much matter, such an extensive illustration, such a peculiar figure in order to enforce the duty of watchfulness, when it could have been done more effectually by employing many other figures, more forcible in their character? Hence, while we believe the duty of watchfulness is involved, we do not believe this to be the object of the parable, but rather to set forth the fact of the Saviour's coming in such a way that the church may know when it is to take place. The parable is introduced by the phrase, "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins." What is the meaning of this word "Then"? Does it have the sense of "For this reason," or, "On account of what I have been telling you," or, does it refer to a point of time marked by the action of the good and evil servants, spoken of in the previous chapter? Perhaps there is no essential difference between the two, for as the events of chapter 24—the action of the two servants, takes place near the end, the result is substantially the same in either case. We shall, therefore, regard the word "Then" as an adverb of time, pointing directly to the events of the latter part of the previous chapter.

When, then, do those events take [illegible] themselves those cold place? or when do the virgins go forth to meet the Bridegroom? Some tell us that the virgins went forth in the days of the apostles, or, that they have been going forth ever since. Is this so? What is meant by "going forth"? If it be said that the church commenced looking for the Saviour immediately after he left the world, I would ask, have they not continued to look for him ever since? While the formal or apostate church lost sight of the Saviour's return, this could not be said of the true church, who, in the person of the Waldenses, and other sects, strenuously maintained the doctrine of the Saviour's Second Coming. This was never lost sight of by the true church. How then could the fact of a belief in the coming of Christ, be going forth to meet him, when the church has always believed it, believe it to-day, and will, if they do not become infidel, continue to believe it until he comes. As slumbering and sleeping is a state opposite to activity, so if the going forth consisted in looking for his second advent, or believing in it, the opposite state would involve a disbelief of his return, and this could never be said of the true church, who have always maintained it. Hence a simple belief of the Saviour's coming could never, with any propriety, be called "going forth to meet the Bridegroom." The language implies, not only a belief in, but an expectation of, meeting him. They would not have gone forth had they not expected to meet him; whereas the church, at or during the first second or third centuries, had no such expectation. It is intimated, to be sure, that the Thessalonians expected him, but we have no right to infer that the virgins generally expected him. They had no substantial reasons for expecting him at that time. They could not look for him while a large part of prophecy remained unfulfilled.

Now the considerations that we urge against the going forth at or immediately after the time Christ left the earth, may be urged equally against the going forth in or from and after the days of Luther. The position of the true church as to the Saviour's coming, after the reformation, was no different than before. Those whom the apostate church regarded as heretics maintained, throughout the 1260 days, the same doctrine in relation to the Saviour's coming. The going forth, therefore, is of later date. It evidently marks a period in the world, when the church will be alive to the fact that the Saviour is coming immediately, and evidently synchronizes with Luke—"When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads: for your redemption draweth nigh." Here is an expectation of redemption, which produces that action on the part of the church marked as "The lifting up of the head." Here is not only an expectation of the Saviour's coming, but it is founded on evidence, namely, the transpiring of certain things. The presumption then is, that the church will know when the things come to pass which indicate, beyond a question, that redemption (or the Saviour) is drawing nigh. This fact of redemption DRAWING NIGH will not be known until these things begin to come to pass, and hence there will be no expectation of his IMMEDIATE COMING until the signs in the sun are seen, and consequently no going forth until after the darkening of the sun. The movement is one that takes place in the end of the world, or just before the end is reached. It probably has no reference to the apostolic age, or the time of Luther, or the Reformation. It is one of those truths for which our times are distinguished, one that belongs to us as much as the fact that Christ should be born in Bethlehem belonged to the Jews at the first advent. Then let us act our part faithfully.

F. H. B.

S. S. Hymns.

We are not in possession of the information asked for in the following note; if any of our friends are, they will please communicate with Bro. Mansfield:—

Dear Bro. Wendell:—We want some books for Sunday school, and I am requested to write to you for information. Do you know of anything suitable for Hymn Books for Sabbath schools; if so, what is the price by the dozen? What will be the price of one hundred library books for scholars? Can that be obtained on time, say three months? Please let me know as soon as convenient. Direct to Buchanan, Mich. As ever yours,

D. R. Mansfield.

For the Crisis.

A word to the Writers of Poetry.

We have here in Philadelphia a little organization of believers, and we employ, in singing the praises of God, the Prayer Meeting Hymn Books, published by the American S. S. Union. We are too poor to purchase the "Christian Lyre," and the Prayer Meeting Hymn Books contain very few hymns which suit us, and the sentiment of which we can adopt. Would it be asking too much to solicit from the pens of the writers of poetry some appropriate hymns, which can be published in the Crisis, from which we will copy them, or sent to my address at Kensington P. O., Philadelphia. Will Bro. Hastings and other brethren, and Vesta N. Cudworth, M. D. W., and others, compose a few hymns in S. M. C. M.—L. M. particularly? We shall feel very grateful for such favors. Yours in the truth,

Thos. W. Smith,

In behalf of the Church.

P. S. If any good hymns on such subjects as the coming of Christ, his personal reign, state of the dead, etc., which are published already can be sent us, we will be much gratified. T. W. S.

Gleanings from Letters.

James W. Simmons, E. Bridgwater, Ms., writes;—"I have taken the Crisis for the past three years, and cannot get along without it."

S. H. Bowman writes:—"I like the Crisis, and as long as I can command the means I shall take it."

Bro. Silas Tucker, Thompson Centre, Ct., writes:—"Enclosed you will find two dollars; one for the continuance of my paper, and one to help support the Crisis. I hope it will not have to be stopped while time remains, for we should not know how to do without it. We prize it next to our Bible."

Sr. Edith Wood, Martinsburgh, N. Y., writes:—"I do not feel as though I could get along without your excellent paper. I trust that it may continue to be a bold and earnest expositor of solemn Bible truth, and be the means of feeding the scattered flock of Christ in these times of trouble and spiritual darkness."

Ann Eliza Smith, North Montpelier, Vt., writes:—"Enclosed I send one dollar in payment to my subscription for the Crisis. I am poor and depend upon my labor for a living, but feel willing to deprive myself of some of the comforts of life rather than to part with the Crisis. I cannot speak in too high terms of its worth to me. I am amidst a people that regard not its truths, but some venture to say they wish its doctrine were true, and seem willing to hear. I think I am the only one that takes the Crisis in this town, or that believes in the doctrines it advocates. I regret very much that I had not the privilege of meeting with the brothers and sisters at Camp meeting. Pray for me, that I may meet you all in the kingdom."

☞ He that will not break the hedge of a fair command to avoid the foul way of some heavy affliction, may well conclude that his affliction is in love.

☞ And, if ye, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

Correspondence.

From Bro. L. Wetherbee.

Dear Brethren in the Ministry:—I write you a few lines concerning a Grove meeting up here beside Union river, on Francis Foster's farm, in a pleasant Grove on the bank of the river. There is a people up here having an ear to hear the truth of God; not only here in Amherst, but all up and down Union river. Also, in the back towns are some good warm-hearted friends who love to hear and do the will of God. Bro. Israel Dammon was up here this Spring and left a solemn impression on the minds of the people, who begin to inquire, Are these things so? God bless him and his little family, is my prayer. The Coming of the Lord, the Saints' Inheritance, and the Signs of the Times, are new to the people up this way. Although it makes the Devil mad, it did in Noah's day; it did in Lot's day; it did in the Saviour's day; it did in the Apostles' day; it did in Luther's, Wesley's, and William Miller's days, and it will down here in the closing scenes of time. But God help the watchmen that are on Zion's wall to cleanse the skirts of their garments from the blood of all men.

I would say to Brn. J. Billings, J. Damon, D. Jones, J. Hemenway, and Bro Boutell—Can any of you, or all of you, come over in August, September, or the first of October, and have a three or four days' meeting? If so, we will do what we can to sustain you. You can write me, or put a notice in the Crisis, if you feel like coming. Talk it over with the Lord, brethren.

Amherst, Me., July 16, 1861.

From Sister Mary A. Clark.

Dear Bro.:—We are still pilgrims and strangers on this lone earth, surrounded with trials and afflictions. I have been sick all the past year, but I am better now, thank the good Lord. I was greatly relieved from my distress and raised from a bed of sickness in answer, I believe, to the prayers of God's people, who made me a subject of their fervent supplications. O what should I do while passing through such trials without the grace of God and the prayers of his people; but for these and the kind attention of my physician I must have been sleeping in the dust. I praise the Lord I am still numbered with the living, and the blessed hope is good to-day. If faithful we shall see Jesus and be made like him. Jesus is coming; what cheering, soul-rejoicing words to the waiting ones. How could we endure the storms and ills of life were it not for the hope that our deliverer is near. My prayer is that we may all be ready to meet him when he comes. It seems to me that time is short. Nations are meeting for conflict on the vast field of battle. Wherever we turn our eyes we see the ingenuity of man is to invent some new instrument or some new way of slaughter and bloodshed and destruction of the human race. The sound of booming cannon and the drum's death-rattle is borne on almost every breeze. The judgment day is hastening on! If ever there was need to watch and pray, study our Bibles and trust wholly in the Lord, it is now. May you and I and all his dear children hear that sweet voice, Come ye blessed of my Father, rest with me in the kingdom forever.

Charlestown, N. H.

☞ We would inform our sister, who has not seen the Crisis for more than six months, that Bro. Grant, to whom her letter was directed, ceased to be editor early last May. You say in your business note that you are "away from all those who are looking for the Lord's speedy return." Well, you must not be disheartened. "The Lord knoweth them that are his," and in the day of the Savior's return from heaven he will gather the lonely ones who have loved his appearing and waited patiently for him.—Ed.

From Bro. Abram Brown.

Bro. Wendell:—I am under the unpleasant necessity of saying, stop my paper. This may sound harsh in your ears, but let me explain. I have just buried my dear companion, and am left to battle the journey of life alone; I have incurred a heavy expense, and it will take every dime I can raise to square up with the world and fix so as to live; and no honest man will take a paper without some prospect of paying for it. But I love the Crisis; I love to hear from my Father's children; I love to hear about their prosperity as a people, and happy feasts together; and, dear brother, if you think it safe to risk the pay, send it on, and if the good Lord will prosper me, I will try to pay for it.

There are several books that I want very much and did intend to send for this fall; but it is out of the question now. You don't know how much we need all such helps here in this dark corner, with but very few of like precious faith, and no preaching. You may well know that we get along poorly, and do not grow and thrive. But the Lord is good, bless his holy name. Wishing you many new paying subscribers, and abundant success in your labors of love, farewell, dear brother.

Grafton, Jersey Co., Ill., Aug. 25.

☞ If we had more faith, we should have less care.

☞ God is on the side of [illegible].

INDEX TO VOLUME XIII.

A general epistle....56
A rusty saw....56
A proposal....58
A letter....34, 37, 50, 58
A leaf from my journal....59
As ye have received Christ, etc....64
Anecdote of Dr. Hooker....64
Answer to inquiries....42
A new theological seminary....42
A cheering thought....43
A popular ministry....41
Ancient usage....45
And make straight paths for your feet....47
Apocalypse opened....47
A little while....32
A Sunday morning talk....9
A starless crown....9
A condensed report....17, 21, 25, 29
Anecdote of Father Moody....54
A wise answer....70
A confession....74
A foretaste of the coming struggle....76
A happy experience....65
A walk among the tombs....65
Absence of God in prayer....65
A letter....66
A sure defence....66
A paraphrase....68
Adversity....4
A plan of redemption....5
A word to an inquirer....5
A sermon....85
An explanation....86
A good reporter....88
Am I a christian?....78
A new book....80
A brief pastoral charge....84
A world in trouble....90
A few words to mothers....94
A thought or two on preaching....93
A righteous king....94
A child's faith....96
A letter to my friends....97
A word to the writers of poetry....98
Bible doctrine....14
Backsliding....44
Bearing arms....57
Belgrade quarterly conference....62
Brief comments....86
Berlin Falls, N. H....2
Bro. Pratt's health....74
Books and berries....90
Bro. Alling on the conference....96
"Behold, I come quickly."....97
Children and parents....64
Carpet Bag reform....54
Christian Association....58
Camp bed....59
Christian hospitality....36
Christ's intercession....45
Christ's statement regarding himself....48
Controversy....48, 80
Conference of Seneca Falls....50
Contentment....16, 34, 95
Comfort ye, my people....56
Commit thy way unto the Lord....65, 96
Confidence in God....65
Campmeeting....66
Can I be a christian?....66
Courage....24
Cure for drunkenness....6
Cannibalism in Africa....88
Christ not silent....84
Calamities....95
Christianity and slavery....96
Deliverance to captives....1
Divine Providence....8
Dr. Guthrie of Scotland....16
Dew....45
Discussion postponed....46
Distress of nations....53
Drinking impure water....64
Death of Cavour....63
Dark ages and meteoric showers....81
Dull discourses....4
Divinity of Jesus....6
Don't waste a crumb....92
Do you love Jesus?....97
Dr. Miller's duck story....100
Explanation....46
European....30
Evening Shadows....5, 12, 13, 18, 30, 34, 38, 41, 45, 52, 58
Eternally too late....69
Eye-sight....72
Encouraging word....74
Eld. Pratt's reply....2, 4, 6, 9, 13, 17
Everybody's book....87
Eternal life....88
Faithful, yet gentle....60
Feed bones to hens....60
Follow thou me....49
From the prairie....42
From the South....55
From Bro. Carpenter....58
From D. Bosworth....74, 78
From J. Perry....85
From Philadelphia....88
From a thought suggested, etc....74
Family government....68
Feet washing....73
Faith's offering....67
False illustration....95
From darkness to light....96
From Pennsylvania....98
General conference....62
Go forth to the kings of the earth....34
God's providence....68
Gregory of Nyssa....72
Gleanings from letters....76, 82, 91
Great swelling words....4
Good news from a far country....6
Good resolutions....80
Going directly to the cross of Christ....92
Gleanings from letters....98
He is faithful that promised....82
How to read the Bible....24
Hope....26
Healthy children....28
How to write easy....44
How much was a penny a day....60
Hold your tongue....58
Human destiny....6
How to be miserable....74
Head teaching and heart teaching....68
His purpose and coming....82
If we will work....58
Intelligence....54
Inquiries to J. S. W....62
Inherent immortality....45
If you please, make me a christian....40
It is the cross....8
Importance of prophecy....13, 29, 37, 41
In behalf of the oppressed....29
Is it so?....44
Inquiries....66, 70, 78
I will not....72
In Christ shall all be made alive....73
Is war ever right?....73
It is so....76
In Christ shall all be made alive....66
Is any part of man immortal?....4, 5, 10, 14
Inference....6
Interesting experience....77
Is it not thus?....84
Inquiry....87, 90
I can't....88
Identical, yet not the same....97
Jots and tittles....20
Jubilees....22
Jesus wept....80
Just what he was when a boy....92
Kind words....28
Luther....41
Look to Jesus....9
Lady's talk with the Pope....12
Light in darkness....14
Love your wife....38
Light wanted....44
Life thoughts....52
Leave it to God....44
Letter from H. Pratt....62
Letter from S. S. Brewer....53
" " Canada West....56
Life and death....57
Letter from C. N. Smith....78
" " Ohio....82
" " Nova Scotia....82
" " Minnesota....83
" " Springfield....86
Little cross bearers....88
Living without life....65
Luther's early life....68
"Let not the sun go down until he come"....92
Letter from N. D. Wight....97
My visit to Winsted....62
Mighty in the Scriptures....64
My experience....34
Ministerial rascality....1, 44
Minutes of the R. I. quarterly conference....21, 78
My journal....2, 22
My experience....1, 10, 25, 46, 60, 81
Model church....30
Meeting in Starks, Me....18
Millennium....18
Mother....28
May 19th, 1780....65
Misapprehension....81
Minnesota....81
Michigan campmeeting....90
Money....100
Modern infidelity....100
My furlough....100
Note from J. V. H....87
Notes by railroad....72
Notice to brethren at large....27
Notes by the way....38
Not far enough....60
Note from E. Burnham....63
New book....18
Nothe....91
None the poorer for giving....92
Oil on waters....36
Once and only once....36
Old grudges....36
Our mission....36, 65
One drop at a time....13
O think of the rest!....66
Our necessities....73
Original contributions....8
Please buy some books....6
Pine Swamp grove meeting....70
Phenomena in 1860....73
Prepare to meet thy God....65
Preach small....65
Pointed sermons....68
Prayer of faith....54
Pride....30
Preach the doctrine....18
Please notice....16
Perils of the last day....16
Psalms 119, 18....18
Prayer for the watchmen....84
Prepare for the new earth....47
Precious thoughts....50
Proper names in the N. T....76
Public prayer....92
Prayer answered....98
Quick sympathies....54
Question....90
Ready for either....20, 64
Rare praise....64
Request....54
Revival intelligence....64, 66
Revelation 17: 8....18
Recognition....16
Report....18
Revelation 22: 7....75
Report of conference at Kennebunk....2
Reasons for my hope....5
Remarks to Sunday school teachers....81
Religious reading....82
Reimer's German Tract....73
Retrogression of human life....97
Shall we smite with the sword?....69
Suffering and glory to follow....9
Sad consequences of error....16
Select thoughts....56
Should christians fight?....72
Signs of the times....48, 69
Singing and giving....24
Secret prayer....25
Scoffers....37
Second letter to Eld. Knapp....45
Scripture God-breathed....52
Self-deception....62
Solar substances....62
Scolding clergymen....64
Sermon—John 11: 41....17
Something the matter....35
Swear not at all....93
Salvation....91
Suggestions and a query....98
Save all....85
Sectarianism....98
The closing up of this dispensation....1
That prayer meeting....6
The present times of test, etc....
" glory of God in Christ....
Truth....
The facts....
" golden rule....
" conference love feast....
" resurrection of the dead....29, 34, 37
" reasons why....
" coming of the Lord....
To whom it may concern....
The more convenient season....
" N. H. State conference....
" signs....
" favorite hymns....
This world one vast scene of sorrow....
The day of rest....
Thessalonica....
Tremont grove meeting....
The day of rest....76, 80, 84
" coming struggle....65, 68, 14, 16, 20, 24, 28, 32, 36, 40
The hidden tract....
Thoughts on government....
The Poland conference....
" seventy weeks, etc....
" burnt tree....
" love of Christ....
" souls that were beheaded....
" dark day of 1780....
" work of an evang list....
" attitude of loving faith....
" future reign of Christ....
" slavery of drink....
" word of God abideth forever....
" transcribers of the Scriptures....
Thoughts on government....
Thoughts suggested by thoughts, etc....
To the beloved saints....
The convicting work of the Spirit....
" blessed ones....
To the preaching brethren....
The coming struggle....
" child is father of the man....
" conference in Amboy....
" secret out....
" blind boy and the Bible....
" two-horned beast....
" soul, what is it?....
" model church....
" family....
Too much Bible....
Take advice....
The last of an estate....
Troublesome children....
The fulness of wisdom....
" sword of the Spirit....
" Syrian complication....
" need of laborers....
" position....
" battle field of the west....
" importance of regularity....
Thoughts for the times....57, 61
The command....
Thoughts on the coming of Christ....
The hope of the church....60, 64, 68, 72, 80, 81, 88
Thoughts on 1st Cor....
To the church and friends....
The dead wife....
" least one in the kingdom....
" mystery of music....
" company of two or three, etc....
" distinctive time when the saints, etc....
Trust in God....
The test....
" Spirit's influence....
" sin of Israel....
" war, what is our duty?....
Thessalonica, or, the Model Church....
The signs....
" future state....
" fulfilment of wishes....
" clouds that precede the coming, etc....
There shall be wars and rumors of wars....
True religion....
True church....
Toil on, christian, etc....
The prayer of slaves....
This do and live....
The resurrection....
" darkness of the sun....
" love of God....
" blind mother, etc....
To our preachers....
The great restoration....89, 93
" attractions of the closet....
" hope of the church....
" name christian....
" knowing ones....
Time's changes....
The Voice of the Church....
"The Scripture cannot be broken"....
The man without an enemy....
" Bible....
The Camp Meeting....
Unhallowed prayer....
Use of salt....
Unclean spirits....
Voting and fighting....
Variety....
Vision....
Various modes of preaching....
Why am I not a christian?....
Women as preachers and lecturers....
War, what is the christian's duty?....49, 77
Who will live again?....
What we need....
What of Christ....
Work tried by fire....
Who will live again....
Word to a sad one....
Wilful king....
What is your position....
Way marks....
Who is on the Lord's side?....
Words and truth....
What is man?....
Weapons of warfare....
What do the catacombs teach?....
Where is heaven?....
Watch and pray....41, 50
Why not fight?....
Was Moses raised?....
Was the sun darkened, etc....
Women as physicians....
What makes a good editor....
Why fight?....
We may do the same....
What is truth?....
War with eternal evil....
Weak things confound the mighty....
Will the wicked dead live again?....

EDITORIAL.

Apocrypha....
A noble sentiment....
An hundred fold....
A pilgrim's notes....
A card....
A worthy enterprise....
A desire to depart....
A wish....
A correction....
A spiritual body....
American war....
Anti-Tobacco Journal....
Anguished faith....
A correction....
Away from home....
Appreciative criticism....
An editor's duty....
A new enterprise....
A fast....
Boston conference....
Conversation with an atheist....2
Coming events....14
Civil war....22
Correction....22
Contract....30
Close of the volume....98
Discussion at South Ashburnham....14
Dead souls....22
Effects of novel reading....18
Editorial notices....30
Eventful times....30
Eternal suffering....34
Errata....38
Editorial Items....54
Eld. J. Howell....50
Exemplary....54
Erratum....54
Fast and pray....82
Friendly words....94
Fourth of July....10
Garibaldian song....38
Home in glory....2
Hudson's New Tract....70, 74, 82, 98
Information wanted....6
Inquiries....42
Interesting experience....78
Journeyings....70
Kingdom of Christ yet future....10
King of Shesbach....30
Luke 16: 9....30
Light for the Germans....82
Light wanted....50
Luke 23: 43....26
Laws of life....30
Marvels of men....46
Misapprehensions....50
My pilgrimage....54
Men shall become gods....50
Man is mortal....2
New volume....2
Never die....2
Notes from my diary....22
New arrangement....30, 34
Napoleon III....34
No paper next week....54
Not the same person....58
Our new employment....74
Our explanation accepted....78
Paragraph of Lincoln's Inaugural....2
Prince of Louis Napoleon....6
Preachers' appointments....26
Postage stamps....34
Personal controversy....38
Questions....78
Rare but merited praise....2
Rest awhile....18
"Retribution"....18
Spiritualism in the church....
Salutatory....
Special notice....
Scoffers....
Severe illness of Bro. Howell....
S. S. Hymns....
They were terrified....
To the friends of the poor....
The state of Europe....
The state of man....
Teachings of demons....
The gates of hell....
Truth at all hazards....
Then and now....
The great crisis....
The eighth head....
The world one vast camp....
Thessalonica....
Too True....
The Pope's perplexity....
To all our patrons....
The camp bed....
The new tract....
The day of rest....
The Fourth....
Too long....
The contrast....
To our subscribers....75, 90
To writers for Crisis....
To our correspondents....
The war question....
The new tract a success....
The faithful servant....
The death penalty....
The wise shall understand....
The new earth....
The Camp Meeting....
The old and the new....
The ten virgins....
Valedictory....
Voice of the Prophets....
War, what is the christian's duty?....
Why fight?....
Was Moses raised?....
Watch....
Where are we?....
Wickliffe....
What Luther said....
What is that to thee....
Wilbraham campmeeting....90, 99

BOOK NOTICES.

Disquisition on the Prophecies....6, 90
New Tract, by Isaac Dimmick....14, 58
Decorum Grace....26
Thessalonica....26, 46, 50
Breath of Life....42
Discussion on the doctrine of Future Punishment....42
Wayside Gleanings....42, 50
The Coming Conflict....42, 46, 50
Debney on Future Punishment....46
The Kingdom of God....49
German Tract....54
Hudson's New Tract....62
"The Bread of Life"—A New Work....90
Fauline Theology....90
The Voice of the Church....94
What will become of the Wicked?....94
A Tract for the times—What is Truth?....94
Anti-tobacco Journal....95
"Sprinkling not Baptism"....
Discussion on the Immortality of the Soul and the Destruction of the Wicked....95

POETRY.

Angel and saint....1
Anticipations....5
A quiet mind....8
Angel of the Lord....69
Comfort ye my people....56
Evening hymn....4
Evening song....20
Everlasting life....81
Earth has no sorrow, etc....45
Follow thou me....49
Going home....4
God, give us men....13
Heed well the pilot....12
He'll come again....40
"... upward"....85
Influence....16
In memory of Carrie....93
Invocation....12
Judah's captive....77
Justified by his blood....9
Look to Jesus....20
Let me go....89, 97
Lines....21, 28, 52, 89, 97
Latter day greeting....68
Love's labor's light....64
Musings....24
My home....20
Memorable year....26
My bou ehold hearth....36
Our Savior....36, 65
Praise to the name of God....16
Prayer for the watchmen....29
Psalm 119: 18....84
Rabboni....20
Resurrection morning....32
Response to Sr. A. C. Judson....41
Redemption nigh....64
Supposing....1
Shortness of time....28
The inquiring....4
Time....25
There's ever one bright star....28
To our aged brother....34
The all healing spring....37
" gathering storm....53
" fly in the cathedral....69
" throne of grace....61
To-day....72
To the comet visible July 1st, 1861....73
This world is growing old....88
"To your tents, O Israel!"....93
To the watchmen....96
The christian....97
Worthy the Lamb....34
Wait a little longer....57
Why wear mourning?....100

OBITUARIES.

Betsey Neal....3
Freddie Bronson....3
Samuel B. Robins....3
Almeda L. Whitney....3
Carrie E. Rice....3
Abba Fowler....3
Ida G. Way....3
Polly Rowe....7
S. Grant....11
Jane Stoddard....11
M. P. Socking....15
E. Ayres....15
D. E. Harriman....15
Adam Waggoner....19
S. B. Peck....19
J. R. Getchell....19
M. C. Riley....23
Helen Mannaghan....23
M. J. Hanscom....23
J. P. Deyo....27
R. N. Moody....31
D. S. Bailey....31
S W Wheelock....35
C Groff....35
P S Keith....35
P Roberts....39
J A Greenman....35
E C Gould....35
L A Gould....35
G Sylvia....39
J B Hale....39
M H Hale....39
H Holmes....49
C S Getchell....43
O M Tatro....43
M J Sweet....43
E A Phelps....43
L Spaulding....43
E Stores....43
D T Pollard....47
P Anderson....47
F E Bliss....51
K J Martin....55
J R Dodge....55
E McClellen....59
F A Tayne....59
Z Thompson....59
S Shapley....63, 71
C T Christie....63
J Batchelder....67
M Reynolds....67
Ella McNulty....67
L L Leach....67
J Graham....71
I A Andrews....71
S Arnold....79
E M Leavett....79
M Folsom....79
F Twiss....79
H Parsons....79
L Blood....79
S Giles....79
S Jenks....83
F Tiffany....87
E E Johnson....87
Carrie B Francis....87
John Sanderson....87
S Kennecum....87
H J Haynes....91
L D Thompson....91
E A Buley....91
E B Boston....91
Nettie....91
A Cale....95
F C Abbott....99
E F Fletcher....99
S B Curtis....99
J E Long....99
E Field....99
F W Denny....99

MARRIAGES.

J. M. Albert to S. M. Thompson....11
L. Mills to E. Ackerman....15
D. S. Ramsey to E. A. Hatfield....23
A. H. Hatch to M. L. Batchelder....51
C. H. Smith to R. H. Socking....71
W. W. Waugh to E. A. Drake....71
H. S. George to S. J. Preble....71
C. Clark to M. Howard....87
Geo. A. Otis to E. Mayhew....91
L. Littlefield to L. A. Ely....95

CORRESPONDENCE.

C S Emerson 2, S Chase 2, J Buswell 3, T W Smith 3, S S Brewer 7, T W Smith 7, G G Emery 7, P E Armstrong 15, J Howell 15, L P Hastings 19, M Crandler 19, S A Elmore 19, L Gilmore 19, B Spaulding 22, J Clesley 23, L Boutell 30, 38, J Cane 35, B Spaulding 35, J W White 35, J V Himes 38, M M Preble 38, R V Lyon 38, G A Streeter 38, E S Willard 43, A Thomas 43, E P Armstrong 47, A H Bolton 47, H F Sweeny 50, B Spaulding 50, I C Wellcome 51, J G Hook 51, S M Henry 54, F Douglass 54, J H Rice 54, A G Cottrel 54, W Sheldon 54, A Mussey 54, I G Hess 54, A Hotchkiss 54, A T Sevis 59, W W Bowen 63, P B Manning 63, S T Leavitt 63, E A W Loke 63, A W Mace 67, L Boutell 67, D E Smith 70, J Watkins 70, A Andrews 70, C H Colton 70, W Sheldon 71, J M Weston 71, J Carr 71, R V Lyon 71, S S Craft 71, T Guigley 71, J M Bruce 75, B Spaulding 75, E S Willard 79, R V Lyon 79, W Sheldon 79, C Bunnell 79, Z Whitney 79, E G Sprague 79, P B Hoy 83, W W Ingham 83, J Mayo 83, G W Turner 83, C B Turner 87, F Douglass 91, P S W Deyo 91, T K Lombard 95, W Sheldon 95, L Wetherbee 98, A Brown 98, M A Clark 98.

READING FOR YOUTH.

A little thing....4
Betty....20
Be a comfort....36
Boys, help your mother....36
Honesty is the best policy....12
Little folks....4
Led, but not driven....12
Not alone....20
Selfishness and self-denial....36
The earlier the easier....4
The Indian chief....4
The first American....20
Whom shall I take....?
....52

HYGIENE.

A lady's first experience in the reformed dress....24
Change of clothing....24
Dr. Twitchell's theory, etc....40
Eating between meals....56
How to preserve the teeth....8
Health Salutation....48
Marvels of man....48
Pledge....32
Stimulation vs. nutrition....16
The oatmeal....8, 24
The reformed dress....16
The brain....24
Tobacco and hard times....32
We must eat salt....16
Tobacco culture....48

Obituary Notices.

Fell asleep in Jesus at Amherst, Me., Aug. 14th, of consumption, Sister FANNY C. ABBOT, in the thirty-ninth year of her age.

Our sister never made a public profession, but she found peace in her Savior, and fell asleep in a very calm and happy state of mind. She has left a father, three brothers, an only sister and an affectionate companion, besides a large circle of friends, to mourn her loss. Funeral at the house; services by the writer, founded on Job 19 : 23-26.

Also, fell asleep at Amherst, of diphtheria, Aug. 7th, JULIA EDA, daughter of George F. and Emily D. Archer, aged eight years, four months and nineteen days.

Julia sleeps in Jesus. The blow falls heavily upon the afflicted ones, but thank God, sin has made no wound that Jesus cannot heal. Then let the afflicted ones look away from earth and anchor their hope in Jesus, who knows how to sympathize with us in all our trials, believing that all of these little ones that have been scattered in a dark and cloudy day, will be brought from the land of the enemy and gathered into the fold of Christ, where we can meet them if we are found faithful unto the end. The writer attended the funeral. Preached from Job. 19 : 26.

Also, in Amherst, Me., Aug. 6th, of diphtheria, EDGAR FRANKLIN, son of Zelotes G. and Sarah F. Fletcher, aged one year, ten months and nine days.

He was a bright and lovely child. I would say to the afflicted parents, sorrow not as those that have no hope, for Jesus will soon come and raise the little ones to life and give them immortality.

> Then together, father, mother,
> With our little ones will be;
> By the peaceful flowing river
> Of life's water we'll be free.
> No more sorrow, no more weeping,
> No more parting hand of death;
> Soon will come the heavenly greeting
> In the restituted earth.

L. WETHERBEE.

Died, in Worcester, July 6th, 1861, of typhoid fever, sister S. B. CURTIS, aged fifty-six years.

Sister Curtis embraced the Advent faith in 1843, and was a devoted follower of the Lord. In 1854 she was strong in the faith that deliverance would come. Again she was disappointed, but her faith failed not; steadily she pressed her way on through trials, assured that the kingdom would soon come. In her last sickness the christian hope was her hope. Fully reconciled to the will of God, she fell asleep in Christ, to rest from her labors until the Master shall charge his angels to gather up his jewels. May God bless her children, and enable them to secure a right to the tree of life, that they may greet their mother in a land where death will have no power.

J. H.

Died, at Meredith Village, N. H., Aug. 10th, 1861, JOSEPH ELWIN, eldest son of Thomas E. and Susan B. Lang, aged nine years, eleven months and nineteen days.

In this death our brother and sister are called suddenly to part with an active and interesting child. His sickness was congestion of the brain, of about one week's continuance. Thus fond parents are left to mourn, but not without hope, for they not only cherish the hope of immortality at the coming of Christ, but that Josie, through the merits of the Savior, will have part in the first resurrection, to suffer no more. But now, with the quiet sleepers, he safely rests beyond the wicked influence of these last days. May this affliction be sanctified to the good of our brother and sister. Funeral attended by the writer. Subject on the occasion founded on Jer. 31 : 16.

J. G. SMITH.

Died, in Newtonville, Mass., Aug. 19th, 1861, Bro. ELISHA FIELD, aged seventy-seven.

Bro. Field, formerly of Boston, was a consistent Congregationalist till he heard the good news "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" and being captivated, and receiving the love of it, with its blessings, it soon drew him into a new channel of thought and contemplation, which led him directly to the Bible for council, and, although cautious about changes, yet he concluded it safe to follow plain, positive Bible testimony. Thus doing, he soon found his former notions give way to a permanent theology, embracing the Bible plan of redemption from man in Adamic death to a second, or resurrection life through Christ. From this time onward he was a learner, and his life was a "patient continuance in well doing, seeking for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life," and, although his organism was such as to lead him to be desponding and distrustful of himself, yet the hope in Christ would always cheer and lift him up. In the later period of life you could but see that the gospel hope was preparing him fully for that rest which remains for the people of God. He dwelt with special interest on Christ the great Sacrifice to save, the resurrection from the dead necessary to future life, also the coming of the Lord to awake the sleeping and give immortality to the faithful.

His last months, weeks and days were sweet, peaceful, calm and cheerful; not a murmur escaped his lips, but feeling the blessed assurance that all was well, and "being ready to be offered" thus, his last days were his best, till, like a shock of corn fully ripe, he was gathered to his fathers, to wait the final call, then with the Psalmist to awake and be satisfied in his likeness.

Bro. J. S. White attended the funeral, giving consolation and comfort, with Bible assurances, of a resurrection from the dead and coming reward.

The loss of Bro. Field will be deeply felt in the family and neighborhood, but may the same faith that sustained him till the last, sustain our bereaved and deeply afflicted sister and daughter, till the storms of life are past, and give a passport through the gates into the city, where all is life eternal.

L. BOUTELL.

Will the Harbinger please copy?

In New Haven, Ct., Sept. 3d, FRANK W. DENNY, only son of G. W. Denny, aged five years, seven days, of scarlet fever.

He was our darling noble boy. Words cannot express the heart pang that remains. When told that it was thought he must die, he said, "Well, mamma, if I do die, God will raise me up again." Thus he died in the faith and hope of the gospel.

G. W. DENNY.

Notices, &c.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times; and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

Notice.

The Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin Christian Conference will be held at Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, to commence Thursday evening, Sept. 26th, and continue over Lord's day. The meeting is expected to be held in the New England Mission tent; after which there is partial arrangement made for a debate between Bro. Sheldon and a Universalist. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers, delegates and brethren. Those who cannot come are expected to send letters, that we may know how the cause moves on.

WM. SWEET,
WM. SHELDON,
PETER S. W. DEYO, } Evangelists.

Strawberry Point, Aug. 25th, '61.
Harbinger, please copy.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference at the Clark Meeting House in Barnstead, N. H., to commence Sept. 20th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. Brethren J. Billings and P. B. Morgan are to attend, also Brethren Bishop, Brown and Britton are expected; all are invited. Come, brethren and sisters, praying that the Lord may bless the labors of the meeting.

J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

It is expected there will be a meeting at Bro. Asahel Judd Mix's, in Bristol, commencing Oct. 2d, 1861, to continue five days. Bro. Levi R. Teeple is expected to preach, as the Lord may direct. Whosoever will may come.

Meetings at Campville, Conn.

If the Lord will, there will be a series of meetings held in the Old Brick Tavern at Campville, or Camp's Mills, Conn., (where Bro. L. Gunn resides,) on the Naugatuck R. R., about 20 miles south of Winsted, and 15 miles north of Waterbury, commencing Wednesday evening, Sept. 18th. Brn. P. C. Rodman, J. D. Brown and H. L. Hastings, and others, are expected to be present and preach the word. The Old Tavern will furnish plenty of room for cooking and lodging for all who will bring beds and provisions. Board and horse keeping can also be had at reasonable rates by such as desire it. In behalf of the brethren, H. L. HASTINGS.

Grove Meeting.

The brethren in this place who are looking for the return of their Lord have concluded to hold a grove meeting, commencing Sept. 16th, to continue through the week, over the following Lord's day, and as much longer as the Lord will. The meeting is about thirty-four miles north of New York city, five miles east of Sing Sing, and three-fourths of a mile west of Pleasantville Depot. Bro. H. Pratt and others are expected to be present and preach the word. All who love the appearing of our dear Lord we cheerfully invite to come and labor with us. Come, dear brethren, here is a new field to labor in.

For the brethren, WM. H. WILD.

Appointments.

APPOINTMENTS FOR BOSTON.

Bro. Hiram Munger....Sunday, Sept. 15.
Eld. J. Couch....Sunday, Sept. 22.

Portsmouth....Sept. 22d and 29th.
Portland....Oct. 6.
Yarmouth....Oct. 13.

If supplied, please notify me in season to comply with other requests. The two last weeks in Oct. not engaged. HIRAM MUNGER.

Portland, Me....Sept. 15.
J. COUCH

East Hebron, N. Y....Sunday, Sept. 15.
S. W. BISHOP.

Bristol....Sept. 15.
Plainville....Evening, Sept. 15.
IRA MORGAN.

Bristol....Sept. 29.
C. GOODRICH.

Cheshire Street....Sept. 15.
WM. SUTHERLAND.

Dinsmore Hill, Hartland, Vt....Sunday, Sept. 15.
JOSEPH KIMBALL.

Lake Village, N. H., Tuesday evening, 7 o'clock, Sept. 17th.
Meredith Neck, at 2 and 7 o'clock....Sept. 18th.
Tuftonborough, at 2 and 7 o'clock....Sept. 19th.
P. B. MORGAN.

Plainfield Pond, Mass....Sept. 16th and 17th.
Griswoldville....Sept. 18th and 19th.
Vernon, Vt....Sept. 22d.
West Brattleboro, (where Bro. Charles Miller may appoint)....Sept. 23d and 24th.
Williamsville, Vt., where Bro. Davis may appoint, a protracted meeting commencing Sept. 25th and continuing over the Sabbath.
GEO. A. OTIS.

APPOINTMENTS FOR WORCESTER.

P. B. Morgan....Sunday, Sept. 15.
Geo. Champlain....Sunday, Sept. 22.
W. Pratt....Sunday, Sept. 29.
R. CURTIS.

Yarmouth, Me., Sept. 11th, at the Annual Conference, ...
Litchfield, Robinson School House, Sept. 17th and 18th, in the evening.
Hallowell....Sept. 20th.
Augusta....Sunday, Sept. 22d.
O. R. FASSETT.

Amherst, Mass....Sept. 19th and 20th.
Northfield....Sept. 22.
Brattleboro, Vt., (where Bro. Miller may appoint) Sept. 24th.
Newfane, Vt....Sept. 25th and 26th.
Vernon, Vt....Sept. 29.
Erving, Mass....Sept. 30.
GEO. A. STREETER.

Chesterville Village, Me....Sunday, Sept. 15.
T. M. PREBLE.

Central Village, R. I., evening....Sept. 20.
River Point....Sunday, Sept. 22.
Arnold's Bridge (as Bro. Wilson may arrange) evening, Sept. 23.
Lafayette, R. I....Sept. 24.
Rocky Brook....Sunday, Sept. 29.
H. F. CARPENTER.

I will attend the Grove Meeting in South Haw-ey, commencing Sept. 11th.
Albany, Monday evening....Sept. 16.
New York City....Sunday, Sept. 27.
Newark, evenings....Sept. 24th and 25th.
H. PRATT.

South Windsor, Conn., (Pleasant Valley School House) Sabbath, Sept. 15th.
S. P. BABCOCK.

Hartford, Ct....Sunday, Sept. 15.
RUFUS WENDELL.

Burlington, Me., (where Bro. S. C. Page may appoint)....Sept. 15.
Will the friends be there from Lincoln and arrange for meetings in their vicinity?
D. A. JONES.

Massena, N. Y....Sunday, Sept. 15.
M. BATCHELOR.

Holderness, (Tabernacle)....Sept. 15.
Barnstead, (Clark M. H.)....Aug. 22.
T. W. PIPER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

M. C. Kendell: All right.
Chester Crawford: You have paid to No. 286—six months behind.
K. H. Simmons: Right now.
J&W. Simmons: All right.

Cash Receipts.

Stephen Parker 364, $2.26; R F Woodford 338, $3 00; D Hutchinson 361, $4.00; W W Taylor 318 $1.25; M L Nichols 321, 83 cts; S A A Pray 338, 80 cts; An. Gage 342, $3 00; L H Armstrong 390, $4 00; S F Mathews 315, $1.50.

Mrs. M A Clark 323, J F Slater 324, Mrs. M Forrester 315, A M Andrews 328, L S Ford 338, T J Wetherell 325, S F Hulburd 330, M S Orcutt 325, S S Campbell (overlooked) 318,—50 cents each.

Eld. H Soule 364, Jno. Saddler 356, E M Haggett 312, Benj. Ross 312, Dr. J Alexander 331, A H Robbins 307, R Plummer 338, Mrs. F Eaton 338, War. Dayton 338, O S Lee 338, D D Clark 338, A S Richards 338, Mrs. C Darkee 333, Geo. Brackett 329, Mrs. E Collins 338, T Pease 338, A B Andrews 275, Mrs. S Parsons 343, J R Brown 364, Wm. Brown 312, J H Piper 322, O D Pease 335, D Randall 338, M L Morgan 332, Benj. Snyder 327, J Canterbury 338, J B Walker 338, Mrs. I W Montague 336, I B Brown 312, E E Miles 280, B F Parsons 338, Aust. Smith 312, J W Houghton 338, M Fisk 329, J B Whitmore 316, Alb. Wright 324, E Marston 338, Z Whitney 346, Mrs. A E Smith 319, Jno. Woodward 338, D B Rogers 338, H S Hough 338, W O Hough 331, J P Blaisdell 312, H C Wilkinson 325, M L Blodgett 314, J S Beecher 338, Miss A Shaw 323, M W Cleveland 338, War. Howard 312, Mrs. D Perry 338, Jos. Ellmore 322, Sarah Ellmore 338, I Barnes 312, S Cooper 341, D D Chaffee 338, B T Weaver 322, S Goodell 312, Em. Fanchier 338, Ez. Hall 315, Alb. Jenny 286, E C Paine 354, M Merrill 312, J I Johnson 286, Jno. Brackett 348, Asa Ware 174, N D Wight 338, G L Rice 338, Am. Kingsbury 364, J B Morgan 286, D W Spear 312, E A Sackett 348, Elizth. Edson 342, Mrs. S Pease 333, H Cady 338,—$1.00 each.

☞ Owing to a deficiency of type, the remainder must be deferred till next week.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have ... per hundred,—8 cts. single ...

ANTI-ETERNAL T... Burnham. Price 1 cent ... Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams ... An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 3 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $4.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 2 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1 00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or En... Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all ... relied on to prove endless misery are explained ... two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. J... Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that ... and sin are to end in the universe by a literal ... struction of wicked men and devils, at the judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Brooks, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:— The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, ...

VOL. XIII. NO. 26. THE WORLD'S CRISIS. 99

INDEX TO VOLUME XIII.

A general epistle ... 56
A rusty saw ... 56
A proposal ... 58
A letter ... 34, 37, 50, 58
A leaf from my journal ... 59
As ye have received Christ, etc. ... 64
Anecdote of Dr. Hooker ... 64
Answer to inquiries ... 42
A new theological seminary ... 42
A cheering thought ... 42
A popular ministry ... 41
Ancient usage ... 45
And make straight paths for your feet ... 47
Apocalypse opened ... 47
A little while ... 32
A Sunday morning talk ... 9
A starless crown ... 9
A condensed report ... 17, 21, 25, 29
Anecdote of Father Moody ... 54
A wise answer ... 70
A confession ... 74
A foretaste of the coming struggle ... 76
A happy experience ... 65
A walk among the tombs ... 65
Absence of God in prayer ... 65
A letter ... 66
A sure defence ... 66
A paraphrase ... 68
Adversity ... 4
A plan of redemption ... 5
A word to an inquirer ... 5
A sermon ... 85
An explanation ... 86
A good reporter ... 88
Am I a christian? ... 78
A new book ... 80
A brief pastoral charge ... 84
A world in trouble ... 90
A few words to mothers ... 92
A thought or two on preaching ... 93
A righteous king ... 94
A child's faith ... 96
A letter to my friends ... 97
A word to the writers of poetry ... 98
Bible doctrine ... 14
Backsliding ... 44
Bearing arms ... 57
Belgrade quarterly conference ... 62
Brief comments ... 86
Berlin Falls, N. H. ... 2
Bro. Pratt's health ... 74
Books and berries ... 90
Bro. Alling on the conference ... 96
"Behold, I come quickly." ... 97
Children and parents ... 64
Carpet Bag reform ... 54
Christian Association ... 58
Camp bed ... 59
Christian hospitality ... 86
Christ's intercession ... 45
Christ's statement regarding himself ... 48
Controversy ... 48, 80
Conference of Seneca Falls ... 50
Contentment ... 16, 34, 95
Comfort ye, my people ... 56
Commit thy way unto the Lord ... 65, 96
Confidence in God ... 65
Campmeeting ... 66
Can I be a christian? ... 66
Courage ... 24
Cure for drunkenness ... 6
Cannibalism in Africa ... 88
Christ not silent ... 81
Calamities ... 95
Christianity and slavery ... 96
Deliverance to captives ... 1
Divine Providence ... 8
Dr. Guthrie of Scotland ... 16
Dew ... 45
Discussion postponed ... 46
Distress of nations ... 53
Drinking impure water ... 62
Death of Cavour ... 63
Dark ages and meteoric showers ... 81
Dull discourses ... 4
Divinity of Jesus ... 6
Don't waste a crumb ... 92
Do you love Jesus? ... 97
Dr. Miller's duck story ... 100
Explanation ... 46
European ... 30
Evening Shadows ... 5, 12, 13, 18, 30, 34, 38, 41, 45, 52, 58
Eternally too late ... 69
Eye-sight ... 72
Encouraging word ... 74
Eld. Pratt's reply ... 2, 4, 6, 9, 13, 17
Everybody's book ... 87
Eternal life ... 88
Faithful, yet gentle ... 60
Feed bones to hens ... 60
Follow thou me ... 49
From the prairie ... 42
From the South ... 55
From Bro. Carpenter ... 58
From D. Bosworth ... 74, 78
From J. Perry ... 85
From Philadelphia ... 88
From a thought suggested, etc ... 74
Family government ... 68
Feet washing ... 73
Faith's offering ... 67
False illustration ... 95
From darkness to light ... 96
From Pennsylvania ... 98
General conference ... 62
Go forth to the kings of the earth ... 34
God's providence ... 68
Gregory of Nyssa ... 72
Gleanings from letters ... 75, 82, 91
Great swelling words ... 4
Good news from a far country ... 6
Good resolutions ... 80
Going directly to the cross of Christ ... 92
Gleanings from letters ... 98
He is faithful that promised ... 82
How to read the Bible ... 24
Hope ... 26
Healthy children ... 28
How to write easy ... 44
How much was a penny a day ... 60
Hold your tongue ... 58
Human destiny ... 6
How to be miserable ... 74
Head teaching and heart teaching ... 68
His purpose and coming ... 82
If we will work ... 58
Intelligence ... 54
Inquiries to J. S. W. ... 62
Inherent immortality ... 45
If you please, make me a christian ... 40
It is the cross ... 8
Importance of prophecy ... 13, 29, 37, 41
In behalf of the oppressed ... 29
Is it so? ... 44
Inquiries ... 66, 70, 78
I will not ... 72
In Christ shall all be made alive ... 73
Is war ever right? ... 73
It is so ... 76
In Christ shall all be made alive ... 66
Is any part of man immortal? ... 4, 5, 10, 14
Inference ... 6
Interesting experience ... 77
Is it not thus? ... 84
Inquiry ... 87, 90
I can't ... 88
Identical, yet not the same ... 97
Jots and tittles ... 20
Jubilees ... 22
Jesus wept ... 80
Just what he was when a boy ... 92
Kind words ... 28
Luther ... 41
Look to Jesus ... 9
Lady's talk with the Pope ... 12
Light in darkness ... 14
Love your wife ... 38
Light wanted ... 44
Life thoughts ... 52
Leave it to God ... 44
Letter from H. Pratt ... 62
Letter from S. S. Brewer ... 53
" " Canada West ... 56
Life and death ... 57
Letter from C. N. Smith ... 78
" " Ohio ... 82
" " Nova Scotia ... 82
" " Minnesota ... 83
" " Springfield ... 86
Little cross bearers ... 88
Living without life ... 65
Luther's early life ... 68
"Let not the sun go down until he come" ... 92
Letter from N. D. Wight ... 97
My visit to Winsted ... 62
Mighty in the Scriptures ... 64
My experience ... 34
Ministerial rascality ... 1, 44
Minutes of the R. I. quarterly conference ... 21, 78
My journal ... 2, 22
My experience ... 1, 10, 25, 46, 60, 81
Model church ... 30
Meeting in Starks, Me. ... 18
Millennium ... 18
Mother ... 28
May 19th, 1780 ... 65
Misapprehension ... 81
Minnesota ... 81
Michigan campmeeting ... 90
Money ... 100
Modern infidelity ... 100
My furlough ... 100
Note from J. V. H. ... 87
Notes by railroad ... 72
Notice to brethren at large ... 27
Notes by the way ... 38
Not far enough ... 60
Note from E. Burnham ... 62
New book ... 18
Nothe ... 91
None the poorer for giving ... 92
Oil on waters ... 36
Once and only once ... 36
Old grudges ... 36
Our savior ... [illegible]
One drop at a time ... [illegible]
O think of the rest ... [illegible]
Our necessities ... 73
Original contributions ... 8
Please buy some books ... 6
Pine Swamp grove meeting ... 70
Phenomena in 1860 ... 72
Prepare to meet thy God ... 65
Preach small ... 65
Pointed sermons ... 68
Prayer of faith ... 30
Pride ... 18
Preach the doctrine ... 16
Please notice ... 18
Perils of the last day ... 20
Psalms 119, 18 ... 84
Prayer for the watchmen ... 29
Prepare for the new earth ... 50
Precious thoughts ... 52
Proper names in the N. T. ... 56
Public prayer ... 92
Prayer answered ... 94
Quick sympathies ... 80
Questions ... 98
Ready for either ... 20, 64
Rare praise ... 64
Request ... 54
Revival intelligence ... 34, 46
Revelation 17: 8 ... 48
Recognition ... 16
Report ... 18
Revelation 22: 7 ... 75
Report of conference at Kennebunk ... 2
Reasons for my hope ... 2
Remarks to Sunday school teachers ... 81
Religious reading ... 84
Reimer's German Tract ... 86
Retrogression of human life ... 97
Shall we smite with the sword? ... 69
Suffering and glory to follow ... 18
Sad consequences of error ... 86
Select thoughts ... 73
Should christians fight? ... 76
Signs of the times ... 48, 69
Singing and giving ... 68
Secret prayer ... 21
Scoffers ... 27
Second letter to Eld. Knapp ... 45
Scripture God-breathed ... 52
Self-deception ... 52
Solar substances ... 42
Scolding clergymen ... 64
Sermon.—John 11: 43 ... 17
Something the matter ... 66
Swear not at all ... 93
Salvation ... 93
Suggestions and an inquiry ... 94
Save all ... 96
Sectarianism ... 96
The closing up of this dispensation ... 20
That prayer meeting ... 22
The present times of test, etc ... 24
" glory of God in Christ ... 24
Truth ... 24
The facts ... 26
" golden rule ... 26
" conference love feast ... 27
" resurrection of the dead ... 29, 34, 37
" reasons why ... 30
" coming of the Lord ... 34
To whom it may concern ... 34
The more convenient season ... 69
" N. H. State conference ... 70
" signs ... 70
" favorite hymns ... 72
This world one vast scene of sorrow ... 71
The day of rest ... 72
Thessalonica ... 75
Tremont grove meeting ... 75
The day of rest ... 76, 80, 84
" coming struggle ... 65, 48, 11, 16, 20, 24, 28, 32, 36, 40
The hidden tract ... 65
Thoughts on government ... 66
The Poland conference ... 66
" seventy weeks, etc ... 66
" burnt tract ... 68
" love of Christ ... 69
" souls that were beheaded ... 69
" dark day of 1780 ... 2
" work of an evangelist ... 4
" attitude of loving faith ... 4
" future reign of Christ ... 4
" slavery of drink ... 4
" word of God abideth forever ... 5
" transcribers of the Scriptures ... 76
Thoughts on government ... 78
Thoughts suggested by thoughts, etc ... 80
To the beloved saints ... 80
The convicting work of the Spirit ... 81
" blessed ones ... 82
To the preaching brethren ... 82
The coming struggle ... 83
" child is father of the man ... 84
" conference in Amboy ... 60
" secret out ... 60
" blind boy and the Bible ... 60
" two-horned beast ... 61
" soul, what is it? ... 62
" model church ... 62
" family ... 62
Too much Bible ... 64
Take advice ... 64
The last of an estate ... 64
Troublesome children ... 64
The fulness of wisdom ... 53
" sword of the Spirit ... 53
" Syrian complication ... 54
" need of laborers ... 54
" position ... 55
" battle field of the west ... 56
" importance of regularity ... 56
Thoughts for the times ... 57, 61
The command ... 57
Thoughts on the coming of Christ ... 58
The hope of the church ... 60, 64, 68, 72, 80, 81, 88
Thoughts on 1st Cor. ... 44
To the church and friends ... 48
The dead wife ... 48
" least one in the kingdom ... 49
" mystery of music ... 49
" company of two or three, etc ... 50
" distinctive time when the saints, etc ... 52
Trust in God ... 52
The test ... 36
" Spirit's influence ... 37
" sin of Israel ... 37
" war, what is our duty? ... 37
Thessalonica; or, the Model Church ... 40
The signs ... 41
" future state ... 42
" fulfilment of wishes ... 42
" clouds that precede the coming, etc ... 42
There shall be wars and rumors of wars ... 4
True religion ... 14
True church ... 16
Toil on, christian, etc ... 16
The prayer of slaves ... 85
This do and live ... 85
The resurrection ... 86
" darkness of the sun ... 86
" love of God ... 88
" blind mother, etc ... 88
To our preachers ... 87
The great restoration ... 89, 93
" attractions of the closet ... 90
" hope of the church ... 92
" name christian ... 92
" knowing ones ... 92
Time's changes ... 92
The Voice of the Church ... 93
"The Scripture cannot be broken" ... 96
The man without an enemy ... 96
" Bible ... 96
The Camp Meeting ... 100
Unhallowed prayer ... 88
Use of salt ... 28
Unclean spirits ... 92
Voting and fighting ... 46
Variety ... 76
Vision ... 34
Various modes of preaching ... 52
Why am I not a christian? ... 32
Women as preachers and lecturers ... 34
War, what is the christian's duty? ... 49, 77
Who will live again? ... 84
What we need ... 8
What of Christ ... 8
Work tried by fire ... 68
Who will live again ... 70
Word to a sad one ... 24
Wilful king ... 26
What is your position ... 34
Way marks ... 10
Who is on the Lord's side? ... 20
Words and truth ... 97
What is man? ... 100
Weapons of warfare ... 38
What do the catacombs teach? ... 40
Where is heaven? ... 40
Watch and pray ... 41, 50
Why not fight? ... 48
Was Moses raised? ... 53
Was the sun darkened, etc ... 57
Women as physicians ... 60
What makes a good editor ... 60
Why fight? ... 61
We may do the same ... 61
What is truth? ... 89
War with eternal evil ... 93
Weak things confound the mighty ... 96
Will the wicked dead live again? ... 96

EDITORIAL.

Apocrypha ... 2
A noble sentiment ... 2
An hundred fold ... 6
A pilgrim's notes ... 10
A card ... 10
A worthy enterprise ... 14
A desire to depart ... 22
A wish ... 22
A correction ... 26
A spiritual body ... 26
American war ... 26
Anti-Tobacco Journal ... 30
Anguished faith ... 30
A correction ... 63
Away from home ... 70
Appreciative criticism ... 70
An editor's duty ... 74
A new enterprise ... [illegible]
A fast ... [illegible]
Boston conference ... [illegible]
Conversation with an atheist ... 2
Coming events ... 14
Civil war ... 22
Correction ... 30
Contract ... 30
Close of the volume ... 98
Discussion at South Ashburnham ... 14
Dead souls ... 22
Effects of novel reading ... 18
Editorial notices ... 30
Eventful times ... 38
Eternal suffering ... 44
Errata ... 50
Editorial Items ... 54
Eld. J. Howell ... 58
Exemplary ... 82
Erratum ... 94
Fast and pray ... 10
Friendly words ... 38
Fourth of July ... 58
Garibaldian song ... 2
Home in glory ... 82
Hudson's New Tract ... 70, 74, 82, 98
Information wanted ... 6
Inquiries ... 42
Interesting experience ... 78
Journeyings ... 70
Kingdom of Christ yet future ... 10
King of Sheshach ... 30
Luke 16: 9 ... 82
Light for the Germans ... 50
Light wanted ... 26
Luke 23: 43 ... 30
Laws of life ... 26
Marvels of men ... 46
Misapprehensions ... 50
My pilgrimage ... 14
Men shall become gods ... 22
Man is mortal ... 22
New volume ... 2
Never die ... 10
Notes from my diary ... 22
New arrangement ... 30, 34, 38
Napoleon III ... 34
No paper next week ... 94
Not the same person ... 94
Our new employment ... 50
Our explanation accepted ... 54
Paragraph of Lincoln's Inaugural ... 2
Policy of Louis Napoleon ... 46
Preachers appointments ... 62
Postage stamps ... 94
Personal controversy ... 94
Questions ... 78
Rare but merited praise ... 70
Rest awhile ... 78
"Retribution" ... 98
Spiritualism in the church ... 18
Salutatory ... 14
Special notice ... 34
Scoffers ... 90
Severe illness of Bro. Howell ... 94
S. S. Hymns ... 98
They were terrified ... 2
To the friends of the poor ... 10
The state of Europe ... 18
The state of souls ... 18
Teachings of demons ... 18
The gates of hell ... 22
Truth at all hazards ... 22
Then and now ... 22
The great crisis ... 30
The eighth head ... 30
The world one vast camp ... 34
Thessalonica ... 38
Too True ... 46
The Pope's perplexity ... 54
To all our patrons ... 58
The camp bed ... 58
The new tract ... 62
The day of rest ... 70
The fourth ... 74
Too long ... 74
The contract ... 74
To our subscribers ... 78, 90
To writers for Crisis ... 82
To our correspondents ... 82
The war question ... 86
The new tract a success ... 86
The faithful servant ... 90
The death penalty ... 94
The wise shall understand ... 94
The new earth ... 94
The Camp Meeting ... 98
The oldest man ... 98
The ten virgins ... 98
Valedictory ... 30
Voice of the Prophets ... 22
War, what is the christian's duty? ... 50
Why fight? ... 62
Was Moses raised? ... 82
Watch ... 30
Where are we? ... 34
Wickliffe ... 38
What Luther said ... 38
What is that to thee ... 2
Wilbraham campmeeting ... 90, 99

BOOK NOTICES.

Disquisition on the Prophecies ... 6, 90
New Tract, by Isaac Dimmick ... 14, 58
Debt and Grace ... 26
Thessalonica ... 26, 46, 50
Breath of Life ... 42
Discussion on the doctrine of Future Punishment ... 42
Wayside Gleanings ... 42, 50
The Coming Conflict ... 42, 46, 50
Dobney on Future Punishment ... 46
The Kingdom of God ... 54
German Tract ... 62
Hudson's New Tract ... 90
"The Bread of Life"—A New Work ... 90
Pauline Theology ... 90
The Voice of the Church ... 90
What will become of the Wicked? ... 94
A Tract for the times—What is Truth? ... 94
Anti-tobacco Journal ... 94
"Sprinkling not Baptism ... 95
Discussion of the Immortality of the Soul and the Destruction of the Wicked ... 95

POETRY.

Angel and saint ... 1
Anticipations ... 5
A quiet mind ... 8
Angel of the Lord ... 69
Comfort ye my people ... 56
Evening hymn ... 4
Evening song ... 20
Everlasting life ... 81
Earth has no sorrow, etc ... 45
Follow thou me ... 49
Going home ... 4
God, give us men ... 13
Heed well the pilot ... 12
He'll come again ... 40
Hasten upward ... 85
Influence ... 16
In memory of Carrie ... 16
Invocation ... 93
Judah's captive ... 12
Justified by his blood ... 77
Look to Jesus ... 9
Let me go ... 20
Lines ... 21, 28, 52, 89, 97
Latter day greeting ... 68
Love's labor's light ... 64
Musings ... 24
My home ... 20
Memorable year ... 26
My household hearth ... 36
Our Savior ... 36, 65
Praise to the name of God ... 16
Prayer for the watchmen ... 29
Psalm 119: 18 ... 84
Rabboni ... 20
Resurrection morning ... 32
Response to Sr. A. C. Judson ... 41
Redemption nigh ... 64
Supposing ... 1
Shortness of time ... 28
The inquiring ... 4
Time ... 25
There's ever one bright star ... 28
To our aged brother ... 34
The all healing spring ... 37
" gathering storm ... 53
" fly in the cathedral ... 69
" throne of grace ... 61
To-day ... 72
To the comet visible July 1st, 1861 ... 73
This world is growing old ... 86
"To your tents, O Israel!" ... 93
To the watchmen ... 96
The christian ... 97
Worthy the Lamb ... 34
Wait a little longer ... 57
Why wear mourning? ... 100

OBITUARIES.

Betsey Neal ... 3
Freddie Bronson ... 3
Samuel B. Robins ... 3
Almeda L. Whitney ... 3
Carrie E. Rice ... 3
Abba Foster ... 3
Ida G. Way ... 3
Polly Rowe ... 7
S. Grant ... 11
Jane Stoddard ... 11
M. P. Stocking ... 15
E. Ayres ... 15
D. E. Harriman ... 15
Adam Waggoner ... 19
S. B. Peck ... 19
J. R. Getchell ... 19
M. C. Riley ... 23
Helen Mannaghan ... 23
M. J. Hanscom ... 23
J. P. Deyo ... 27
E. N. Moody ... [illegible]
D. S. Bailey ... [illegible]
S W Wheelock ... [illegible]
C Groff ... 35
P S Keith ... 35
P Roberts ... 39
J A Greenman ... 35
E C Gould ... 35
L A Gould ... 35
G Sylvia ... 39
J B Hale ... 39
M H Hale ... 39
H Holme ... 43
C S Getchell ... 43
O M Tatro ... 43
M J Sweet ... 43
E A Phelps ... 43
L Spaulding ... 43
E Stores ... 43
D T Pollard ... 47
P Anderson ... 47
F E Bliss ... 51
K J Martin ... 55
J R Dodge ... 55
E McClellen ... 59
F A Tayne ... 59
Z Thompson ... 59
S Shapley ... 63, 71
C T Christie ... 63
J Batchelder ... 67
M Reynolds ... 67
Effa McNulty ... 67
L L Leach ... 67
J Graham ... 71
T A Andrews ... 71
S Arnold ... 79
E M Leavett ... 79
M Folsom ... 79
E Twiss ... 79
H Parsons ... 79
L Blood ... 79
S Giles ... 79
S Jenks ... 83
E Tiffany ... 87
E E Johnson ... 87
Carrie B Francis ... 87
John Sanderson ... 87
S Kennecam ... 87
H J Haynes ... 91
L D Thompson ... 91
E A Bailey ... 91
E B Boston ... 91
Nettie ... 91
A Cale ... 95
F C Abbott ... 99
E F Fletcher ... 99
S B Curtis ... 99
J E Lang ... 99
E Field ... 99
F W Denny ... 99

MARRIAGES.

J. M. Albert to S. M. Thompson ... 11
L. M Bates to E. Ackerman ... 15
D. S. Ramsey to E. A. Hatfield ... 23
A. H. Hatch to M. L. Batchelder ... 51
C. H. Smith to R. H. Stocking ... 71
W. W. Waugh to E. A. Drake ... 71
H. S. George to S. J. Preble ... 71
C. Clark to M. Howard ... 87
Geo. A. Otis to E. Mayhew ... 91
L. Littlefield to L. A. Ely ... 95

CORRESPONDENCE.

C S Emerson 2, S Chase 2, J Buswell 3, T W Smith 3, S S Brewer 7, T W Smith 7, G G Emery 7, P E Armstrong 15, J Howell 15, L P Hastings 19, M Chandler 19, S A Elmore 19, L Gilmore 19, B Spaulding 22, J Clewley 23, L Boutell 30, 38, J Cane 35, B Spaulding 35, J W White 35, J V Himes 38, M M Preble 38, R V Lyon 38, G A S ree e 38, E S Willard 43, A Thomas 43, E P Armstrong 47, A H Bolton 47, H F Sweeny 50, B Spaulding 50, I C Welcome 51, J G Hook 51, S M Henry 54, F Douglass 54, J H Rice 54, A G Cottrel 54, W Sheldon 54, A Mussey 54, T G Hess 54, A Hotchkiss 54, A T Sevis 59, W W Bowen 63, P B Manning 63, S T Leavet 63, E A W Lake 63, A W Mace 67, L Boutell 67, D E Smith 70, J Watkins 70, A Andrews 70, C H Colton 70, W Sheldon 71, J M Weston 71, J Carr 71, R V Lyon 71, S S Craft 71, T Cogley 71, J M Bruce 75, B Spaulding 75, E S Willard 79, R V Lyon 79, W Sheldon 79, C Bonnell 79, Z Whitney 79, E G Sprague 79, P B Hoyt 83, W W Ingham 83, J Mayo 83, G W Turner 83, C B Turner 87, F Douglass 91, P S W Deyo 91, I K Lombard 95, W Sheldon 95, L Weatherbee 98, A Brown 98, M A Clark 98.

READING FOR YOUTH.

A little thing ... 4
Betty ... 20
Be a comfort ... 36
Boys, help your mother ... 36
Honesty is the best policy ... 12
Little folks ... 4
Led, but not driven ... 12
Not alone ... 20
Selfishness and self-denial ... 36
The earlier the easier ... 4
The Indian chief ... 4
The first American ... 20
Whom shall I ask? ... 20
[illegible] ... 52

HYGIENE.

A lady's first experience in the reformed dress ... 24
Change of clothing ... 24
Dr. Twitchell's theory, etc ... 40
Eating between meals ... 56
How to preserve the teeth ... 8
Health Salutation ... 48
Marvels of man ... 48
Pledge ... 32
Stimulation vs. nutrition ... 24
Thoughtful ... 8, 24
The reformed dress ... 16
The brain ... 24
Tobacco and hard times ... 32
We must eat salt ... 16
Tobacco culture ... 48

Obituary Notices.

Fell asleep in Jesus at Amherst, Me., Aug 14th, of consumption, Sister FANNY C. ABBOT, in the thirty-ninth year of her age.

Our sister never made a public profession, but she found peace in her Savior, and fell asleep in a very calm and happy state of mind. She has left a father, three brothers, an only sister and an affectionate companion, besides a large circle of friends, to mourn her loss. Funeral at the house; services by the writer, founded on Job 19: 23-26.

Also, fell asleep at Amherst, of diphtheria, Aug. 7th, JULIA EDA, daughter of George F. and Emily D. Archer, aged eight years, four months and nineteen days.

Julia sleeps in Jesus. The blow falls heavily upon the afflicted ones, but thank God, sin has made no wound that Jesus cannot heal. Then let the afflicted ones look away from earth and anchor their hope in Jesus, who knows how to sympathize with us in all our trials, believing that all of these little ones that have been scattered in a dark and cloudy day, will be brought from the land of the enemy and gathered into the fold of Christ, where we can meet them if we are found faithful unto the end. The writer attended the funeral. Preached from Job. 19: 26.

Also, in Amherst, Me., Aug. 6th, of diphtheria, EDGAR FRANKLIN, son of Zelotes G. and Sarah P. Fletcher, aged one year, ten months and nine days.

He was a bright and lovely child. I would say to the afflicted parents, sorrow not as those that have no hope, for Jesus will soon come and raise the little ones to life and give them immortality.

Then together, father, mother,
With our little ones will be;
By the peaceful flowing river
Of life's water we'll be free.
No more sorrow, no more weeping,
No more parting hand of death;
Soon will come the heavenly greeting
In the restituted earth.

L. WETHERBEE.

Died, in Worcester, July 6th, 1861, of typhoid fever, sister S. B. CURTIS, aged fifty-six years.

Sister Curtis embraced the Advent faith in 1843, and was a devoted follower of the Lord. In 1854 she was strong in the faith that deliverance would come. Again she was disappointed, but her faith failed not; steadily she pressed her way on through trials, assured that the kingdom would soon come. In her last sickness the christian hope was her hope. Fully reconciled to the will of God, she fell asleep in Christ, to rest from her labors until the Master shall charge his angels to gather up his jewels. May God bless her children, and enable them to secure a right to the tree of life, that they may greet their mother in a land where death will have no power.

J. H.

Died, at Meredith Village, N. H., Aug. 10th, 1861, JOSEPH ELWIN, eldest son of Thomas E. and Susan B. Lang, aged nine years, eleven months and nineteen days.

In this death our brother and sister are called suddenly to part with an active and interesting child. His sickness was congestion of the brain, of about one week's continuance. Thus fond parents are left to mourn, but not without hope, for they not only cherish the hope of immortality at the coming of Christ, but that Josie, through the merits of the Savior, will have part in the first resurrection, to suffer no more. But now, with the quiet sleepers, he safely rests beyond the wicked influence of these last days. May this affliction be sanctified to the good of our brother and sister. Funeral attended by the writer. Subject on the occasion founded on Jer. 31: 16.

J. G. SMITH.

Died, in Newtonville, Mass., Aug. 19th, 1861, Bro ELISHA FIELD, aged seventy-seven.

Bro. Field, formerly of Boston, was a consistent Congregationalist till he heard the good news "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" and being captivated, and receiving the love of it, with its blessings, it soon drew him into a new channel of thought and contemplation, which led him directly to the Bible for council, and, although cautious about changes, yet he concluded it safe to follow plain, positive Bible testimony. Thus doing, he soon found his former notions give way to a permanent theology, embracing the Bible plan of redemption from man in Adamic death to a second, or resurrection life through Christ. From this time onward he was a learner, and his life was a "patient continuance in well doing, seeking for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life," and, although his organism was such as to lead him to be desponding and distrustful of himself, yet the hope in Christ would always cheer and lift him up. In the later period of life you could but see that the gospel hope was preparing him fully for that rest which remains for the people of God. He dwelt with special interest on Christ the great Sacrifice to save, the resurrection from the dead necessary to future life, also the coming of the Lord to awake the sleeping and give immortality to the faithful.

His last months, weeks and days were sweet, peaceful, calm and cheerful; not a murmur escaped his lips, but feeling the blessed assurance that all was well, and "being ready to be offered" thus, his last days were his best, till, like a shock of corn fully ripe, he was gathered to his fathers, to wait the final call; then with the Psalmist to awake and be satisfied in his likeness.

Bro. J. S. White attended the funeral, giving consolation and comfort, with Bible assurances, of a resurrection from the dead and coming reward.

The loss of Bro. Field will be deeply felt in the family and neighborhood, but may the same faith that sustained him till the last, sustain our bereaved and deeply afflicted sister and daughter, till the storms of life are past, and give a passport through the gates into the city, where all is life eternal.

L. BOUTELL.

Will the Harbinger please copy?

In New Haven, Ct., Sept. 3d, FRANK W. DENNY, only son of G. W. Denny, aged five years, seven days, of scarlet fever.

He was our darling noble boy. Words cannot express the heart pang that remains. When told that it was thought he must die, he said, "Well, mamma, if I do die, God will raise me up agin." Thus he died in the faith and hope of the gospel.

G. W. DENNY.

Notices, &c.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times; and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

By order of the Board of Managers,
P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

Notice.

The Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin Christian Conference will be held at Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, to commence Thursday evening, Sept. 26th, and continue over Lord's day. The meeting is expected to be held in the New England Mission tent; after which there is partial arrangement made for a debate between Bro. Sheldon and a Universalist. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers, delegates and brethren. Those who cannot come are expected to send letters, that we may know how the cause moves on.

WM. SWEET,
WM. SHELDON, } Evangelists.
PETER S W. DEYO,

Strawberry Point, Aug. 25th, '61.
Harbinger, please copy.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference at the Clark Meeting House in Barnstead, N. H., to commence Sept. 20th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. Brethren J. Billings and P B. Morgan are to attend, also Brethren Bishop, Brown and Britton are expected; all are invited. Come, brethren and sisters, praying that the Lord may bless the labors of the meeting.

J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

It is expected there will be a meeting at Bro. Asahel Judd Mix's, in Bristol, commencing Oct. 2d, 1861, to continue five days. Bro. Levi R. [illegible] is expected to preach, and [illegible]

Meetings at Campville, Conn.

If the Lord will, there will be a series of meetings held in the Old Brick Tavern at Campville, or Camp's Mills, Conn., (where Bro L. Gunn resides,) on the Naugatuck R. R., about 20 miles south of Winsted, and 15 miles north of Waterbury, commencing Wednesday evening, Sept. 18th. Brn. P. C. Rodman, J. D. Brown and H. L. Hastings, and others, are expected to be present and preach the word. The Old Tavern will furnish plenty of room for cooking and lodging for all who will bring beds and provisions. Board and horse keeping can also be had at reasonable rates by such as desire it. In behalf of the brethren, H. L. HASTINGS.

Grove Meeting.

The brethren in this place who are looking for the return of their Lord have concluded to hold a grove meeting, commencing Sept. 16th, to continue through the week, over the following Lord's day, and as much longer as the Lord will. The meeting is about thirty-four miles north of New York city, five miles east of Sing Sing, and three-fourths of a mile west of Pleasantville Depot. Bro. H. Pratt and others are expected to be present and preach the word. All who love the appearing of our dear Lord we cheerfully invite to come and labor with us. Come, dear brethren, here is a new field to labor in.

For the brethren, WM H. WILD.

Appointments.

APPOINTMENTS FOR BOSTON.

Bro. Hiram Munger ... Sunday, Sept. 15.
Eld. J. Couch ... Sunday, Sept. 22.

Portsmouth ... Sept. 22d and 29th.
Portland ... Oct. 6.
Yarmouth ... Oct. 13.

If supplied, please notify me in season to comply with other requests. The two last weeks in Oct. not engaged. HIRAM MUNGER.

Portland, Me. ... Sept. 15.
J. COUCH.

East Hebron, N. Y. ... Sunday, Sept. 15.
S. W. BISHOP.

Bristol ... Sept. 15.
Plainville ... Evening, Sept. 15.
IRA MORGAN.

Bristol ... Sept. 29.
C. GOODRICH.

Cheshire Street ... Sept. 15.
WM. SUTHERLAND.

Dunsmore Hill, Hartland, Vt ... Sunday, Sept. 15.
JOSEPH KIMBALL.

Lake Village, N. H., Tuesday evening, 7 o'clock, Sept. 17th.
Meredith Neck, at 2 and 7 o'clock ... Sept. 18th.
Tuftonborough, at 2 and 7 o'clock ... Sept. 19th.
P. B. MORGAN.

Plainfield Pond, Mass. ... Sept. 16th and 17th.
Griswoldville ... Sept. 18th and 19th.
Vernon, Vt. ... Sept. 22d.
West Brattleboro, (where Bro. Charles Miller may appoint) ... Sept. 23d and 24th.
Williamsville, Vt., where Bro. Davis may appoint, a protracted meeting commencing Sept. 25th and continuing over the Sabbath.
GEO. A. OTIS.

APPOINTMENTS FOR WORCESTER.

P. B. Morgan ... Sunday, Sept. 15.
Geo. Champlain ... Sunday, Sept. 22.
W. Pratt ... Sunday, Sept. 29.
R. CURTIS.

Yarmouth, Me., Sept. 11th, at the Annual Conference, [illegible]
Litchfield, Robinson School House, Sept. 17th and 18th, in the evening.
Hollowell ... Sept. 29.
Augusta ... Sunday, Sept. 22d.
O. R. FASSETT.

Amherst, Mass. ... Sept. 19th and 20th.
Northfield ... Sept. 22.
Brattleboro, Vt., (where Bro. Miller may appoint) Sept. 24 h.
Newfane, Vt. ... Sept. 25th and 26th.
Vernon, Vt. ... Sept. 29.
Erving, Mass. ... Sept. 30.
GEO. A. STREETER.

Chesterville Village, Me. ... Sunday, Sept. 15.
T. M. PREBLE.

Central Village, R. I., evening ... Sept. 20.
River Point ... Sunday, Sept. 22.
Arnold's Bridge (as Bro. Wilson may arrange), evening, Sept. 23.
Lafayette, R. I. ... Sept. 24.
Rocky Brook ... Sunday, Sept. 29.
H. F. CARPENTER.

I will attend the Grove Meeting in South Hawley, commencing Sept. 11th.
Albany, Monday evening ... Sept. 16.
New York City ... Sunday, Sept. 27.
Newark, evenings ... Sept. 24th and 25th.
H. PRATT.

South Windsor, Conn., (Pleasant Valley School House) Sabbath, Sept. 15th.
S. P. BABCOCK.

Hartford, Ct. ... Sunday, Sept. 15.
RUFUS WENDELL.

Burlington, Me., (where Bro. S. C. Page may appoint) ... Sept. 15.
Will the friends be there from Lincoln and arrange for meetings in their vicinity?
D. A. JONES.

Massena, N. Y. ... Sunday, Sept. 15.
M. BATCHELOR.

Holderness, (Tabernacle) ... Sept. 15.
Barnstead, (Clark M. H.) ... Aug. 22.
T. W. PIPER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

M. C. Kendell: All right.
Chester Crawford: You have paid to No. 286—six months behind.
K. H. Simmons: Right now.
J&W. Simmons: All right.

Cash Receipts.

Stephen Parker 364, $2.26; R F Woodford 336, $3.00; D Hutchinson 361, $4.00; W W Taylor 318, $1.25; M L Nichols 321, 83 cts; S A A Pray 338, 80 cts; An. Gage 342, $3.00; L H Armstrong 390, $4.00; S F Mathews 315, $1.50.

Mrs. M A Clark 323, J F Slater 324, Mrs. M Forrester 315, A M Andrews 328, L S Ford 338, T J Wetherell 325, S F Hulburd 330, M S Orcutt 325, S S Campbell (overlooked) 318,—50 cents each.

Eld. H Soule 364, Jno. Saddler 256, E M Haggett 312, Benj. Ross 312, Dr. J Alexander 331, A H Robbins 307, R Plummer 338, Mrs. F Eaton 338, War. Dayton 338, O S Lee 338, D D Clark 338, A S Richards 338, Mrs. C Durkee 333, Geo. Brackett 329, Mrs. E Collins 338, T Pease 338, A B Andrews 275, Mrs. S Parsons 343, J R Brown 364, Wm. Brown 312, J H Piper 322, O D Pease 335, D Randall 338, M L Morgan 332, Benj. Snyder 327, J Canterbury 338, J B Walker 338, Mrs. I W Montague 336, I B Brown 312, E E Miles 280, B F Parsons 338, Aust. Smith 312, J W Houghton 338, M Fisk 329, J B Whitmore 316, Alb. Wright 324, E Marston 338, Z Whitney 346, Mrs. A E Smith 319, Jno. Woodward 338, D B Rogers 338, H S Hough 338, W O Hough 331, J P Blaisdell 312, H C Wilkinson 325, M L Blodgett 314, J S Beecher 338, Miss A Shaw 338, M W Cleveland 328, War. Howard 312, Mrs. D Perry 338, Jos. Ellmore 332, Sarah Ellmore 338, I Barnes 312, S Cooper 341, D D Chaffee 338, B T Weaver 338, S Goodsell 312, Em. Fanchier 338, Er. Hall 315, Alb. Jenny 286, E C Paine 356, M Merrill 312, J I Johnson 286, Jno. Brackett 348, Asa Ware 174, N D Wight 338, G L Rice 338, Am. Kingsbury 364, J R Morgan 286, D W Spear 312, E A Sackett 348, Elizth. Edson 342, Mrs. A Pease 338, H Cady 332,—$1.00 each.

☞ Owing to a deficiency of type, the remainder must be deferred till next week.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price, single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuhee as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 21 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $1.00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 116 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $3.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speeches of Christ at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred, 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 163 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 9 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. [illegible] per hundred,—8 cts. single.

ANTI-ETERNAL [illegible] Burnham. Price 1 [illegible] Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams [illegible] interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 8 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $4.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 5 cts.; postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price [illegible] $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract is relied on to prove endless misery [illegible] two hundred [illegible] Blain. Price 3 cents single; [illegible] Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that death and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the judgment. All texts on Future Punishment [illegible] and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 5 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of [illegible] Bacons, No. 8 [illegible]

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. White, Worcester [illegible]

The Harp, by [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Why wear Mourning?

Oh! wear for me no sable garb,
When low in dust I'm laid,
'Tis but the "mockery of woe,"
By "Fashion's" trammels made.

"A stranger intermeddleth not"
With all thy heart has known—
Of joy and grief, a mingled lot,
Along life's pathway strown.

How oft the world with hollow heart
The mourner's semblance bears,
While underneath the folds of crepe
A guise of joy she wears.

Then let no thoughts of outward show
Dispel stern lessons given,
When idols from our hearts are torn,
To draw us nearer heaven.

Perchance some child of penury,
Bereft of earthly stay,
Her bleeding heart cannot forego
This debt of love to pay.

She parts with all her little store
The badge of grief to gain,
Deeming the memory of the lost
May thus more fresh remain.

Ah! no; love's memory cannot die,—
Why should the mourner's heart
Parade before a heedless world
Symbols of sorrow's dart?

We're slaves of "custom" here below,
Ruled by his iron hand;
Why not dispute the power he claims
In a united band?

My friends in Christ, let one and all
Give Paul's example heed,
Who "to the weak became as weak,"
To bless a brother's need.

Davenport. AMY.

For the Crisis.

The following is the substance of a letter written by a nephew to his uncle. Its prolixity prevented its entire insertion.

What is Man?

DEAR UNCLE:—I received your kind letter of March 15th, and can truly say I am much gratified to be thus dealt with in a candid, christian-like manner. When I became an Adventist, those who should have labored to reclaim me, if they believed me to be in error, turned the cold shoulder, and seemed not to care whether I was saved or lost. But I am convinced such is not the case with yourself, and I hope that God will add his blessing to what you have written, and enable us to understand the true import of those texts of Scripture which you so kindly commend to my careful consideration. You stated that you did not wish to enter into controversy; neither do I; but I think if christians, followers of the same Lord, would freely exchange the light they receive from God through his word, they might greatly assist each other in understanding the chart he has given to guide us to eternal life.

The reason I write an answer to your letter is this: I have considered those texts, compared them with the Scriptures as to the conscious and unconscious state of the dead, and verily believe that I understand them. Now if I have the true light on this subject, it is my duty to let it shine to the glory of God. Believe me, I do not want to hold any sentiments which are not plainly spoken in the word of God, because his word alone is safe to trust in; "it is true from the beginning." By that word we must be judged, and he "is no respecter of persons." Then let us examine this subject fairly, remembering, as a rule in receiving evidence, that inferential evidence bears no weight except in accordance with positive testimony. Those texts under consideration do not prove that man is conscious in death, or that he has an immortal soul which departs at the dissolution of the body; unless we can first find a "thus saith the Lord" to establish the fact, all is vain. But, on the contrary, if we find no such testimony on that side of the question, but plenty on the unconscious side, as plain as language can speak it, then all is clear.

Then, in order to understand those texts correctly, let us appeal "to the law and to the testimony," holding ourselves in readi- [illegible] and submit to, God's [illegible] surely he knows and [illegible] us trust in him [illegible] and deceitful, and, [illegible] testimony to the [illegible] that God has said, "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be an abomination." "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Gen. 2: 7. "And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul;" . . "The first man is of the earth earthy;" . . "As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy." 1 Cor. 15: 45, 47, 48. This breath of life is not the man, nor any part of the man, but simply the breath of the Almighty. Job 33: 14. "The spirit (or word or breath, Ps. 33: 6) of God hath made [illegible], and the breath of the Almighty hath [illegible] me life." "All the while my breath [illegible] and the spirit of God is in my [nostrils]." Job 27: 3. (i. e., the breath which God gave him.) "For as the body without the spirit or breath is dead." Jas. 2: 26.

Now let us sum up the evidence and see if we can find a verdict. Job says, "The spirit (or breath) of God is in my nostrils." David says, "Thou takest away their breath (or spirit), they die." Solomon says, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit (or breath) shall return to [illegible] "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath (spirit) of life." James says, "The body without the spirit (or breath, margin,) is dead." Job says, "The breath (spirit) of the Almighty hath given me life." Now, then, Adam received the breath of life and lived; Job received spirit in his "nostrils," and says, "the breath of the Almighty gave life." David says, "his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." Solomon said, "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; . . all go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Now it is for you to give the verdict whether man received any thing more than breath at his beginning; if so, how can he lose any thing more than the breath of life at his death? The word spirit does not always mean breath of life, but has other significations, according to the connection in which it stands.

Let us examine the word soul. In Gen. 2: 7, it is said that man "became a living soul" (or person.) Lev. 4: 2, "If a soul (or person) sin through ignorance," etc. Lev. 22: 11, "But if the priest buy any soul (or person) with his money, he (the person) shall eat of it," etc. Psa. 78: 50, "He spared not their souls (persons) from death, but gave their life over to the pestilence." Ezek. 18: 4, . . "The soul (person) that sinneth it shall die." Mark 8: 36, "For what shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul," or "himself?" according to Luke 9: 25. Again soul is used in a secondary sense, and is applied to the mind, as in Deut. 11: 18. "Therefore shall ye lay up these my words . . . in your soul." It is applied to the blood, as in Isa. 53: 12; . . "because he hath poured out his soul unto death." The above may suffice.

Does God say anywhere in the Bible that man has an immortal, never-dying, deathless, ever-living, or eternal, soul, or spirit? I answer, he does not. Does God say that the soul shall die? I answer, he does. Ezek. 18: 4, "Behold all souls are mine; . . . the soul that sinneth it shall die." Psa. 73: 50, "He spared not their soul from death." Acts 2: 31. "He seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ; that his soul was left in hell, (or grave) neither did his flesh see corruption." Then if God has positively said that souls can, do, and shall die, we certainly ought not to understand the Bible to teach the contrary.

Having found it to be a fact that man is wholly mortal, we have a standard by which to try all texts of Scripture touching this subject. Let us now proceed to examine other texts on this point according to the above mentioned rule. 2 Cor. 5: 8, "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." I will endeavor to give my understanding of the above text and see if it will harmonize with the word of God. I consider that Paul by "earthly house" meant literally earthly houses, temples, or cities, made or built with hands. Walker defines tabernacle thus: "a tent," "place of worship," a "temporary habitation or dwelling." Peter says, "all these things shall be dissolved." Paul, by the word "we," means the members of Christ's mystical body, the church. See Rom. 12: 5; 1 Cor. 12: 27; Eph. 1: 22, 23, 24; 12: 17 and 5: 23–30; Col. 1: 24. "We (the church) know that if our earthly house (this temporary habitation) were dissolved, we have a building (city), an house of God not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." "For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house, which is from heaven, if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked." "For we that are in this tabernacle (temporary habitation or world) do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed, (or without a habitation) but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." As Paul says again, Rom. 8: 23, "But ourselves also which have the first fruits of the spirit . . . groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body;" which will take place when Jesus comes to redeem the church from death, and gather them into the city: mortality will then be swallowed up of life. 2 Cor. 5: 5. "Now he that hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God." "Therefore we are always confident (of what) of this, knowing that whilst we (the church) are at home in the body, (i. e., this mortal groaning state) we are absent from the Lord, for we walk by faith, not by sight." Then if "we hope for that which we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Rom. 8: 25. 8th verse, "We are confident, I say, and willing rather (rather than what? than to walk by faith and to groan and wait) to be absent from the body and be present with the Lord. Wherefore we labor, that whether present or absent, (when we are at the judgment, or while walking by faith,) we may be accepted of him." 10th verse, "For we must all appear at the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things (the reward) done in his body (or person, see Prov. 5: 11) according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." "Yea, I think it meet as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you always in remembrance; knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shown me." Christ showed Peter that when he should be old he should glorify God by martyrdom, which Peter denominates putting off his tabernacle. So that Peter literally died and went to the grave, where he awaits the "appearing of the chief Shepherd, to receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." "For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep we should live together with him."

Now, in conclusion, let me entreat you to consider and examine this subject carefully and impartially, for if we love our dear Lord Jesus, who died that we might live with him in his kingdom, we ought to be willing to bear reproach for his name, and he said that if we are ashamed of him or his word, he will be ashamed of us when he comes in the glory of his father and of the holy angels. The Saviour has said, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." This is literally fulfilled, and we are encouraged and do rejoice, and why should we not? Jesus our Lord made himself of no reputation, and surely we can afford to lose our reputation for him.

I now bid you farewell, dear uncle, hoping I have not wearied your patience.

Yours, THOMAS G. BURPEE.

For the Crisis.

The Camp Meeting.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—In accordance with your suggestion, and in agreement with my own desire, I offer a brief sketch of the Wilbraham Camp Meeting. Some brother will doubtless present a more complete report.

The weather was delightful beyond my expectation, and called forth expressions of gratitude and praise to our heavenly Father from many pious souls.

The boarding arrangements were excellent, entitling the managers of that department to the many encomiums which were uttered. I was much pleased with Bro. Grant's Graham system, which was partially carried out, and believe its general philosophy is correct.

The preaching was good, and some of it excellent. Bro. P. B. Morgan delivered a solid discourse on Faith Bro. Mathewson's sermon on Rom. 12: 21, was instructive and timely. I pray that God will assist me by his Spirit to lay it to heart. I was much blessed while listening to the affecting utterances of Bro. Brewer on the Coming of Christ. God strengthen the aged pilgrim. Bro. Himes gave a stirring and suggestive dissertation on the same subject. In the course of his remarks he noticed Ten Signs which have been fulfilled and all indicating that the end "is nigh, even at the doors." Bro. Berick's sermon based on Rev. 3: 11 was argumentative, eloquent and convincing. I heard many expressions of satisfaction at the close of the service. Bro. Wendell proved that "we are dust." Ps. 103: 14. A Methodist preacher, at the close of the sermon, asked a few questions, which were well answered by Bro. Wendell. The Methodist brother thought that Watson and Clarke (from whom Bro. W. had quoted) were not the exponents of the belief of the Methodists as a body, concerning man's nature. He was evidently driven to this position by Bro. W.'s crushing argument and masterly exposure of the theological lameness of Watson and Clarke with reference to the considered subject. Bro. Hastings preached eloquently from the 10th chapter of Hebrews. The practical portion of the discourse (about two-thirds) was very good. It was well calculated to encourage and strengthen those who are tried. I heard one man say that it was the best sermon he ever heard. Bro. Grant preached from Acts 26: 8, and showed the absolute necessity of a resurrection of the dead in order to obtain future life. He dwelt on the promises of a resurrection in the word of God. He also propounded the questions in 1 Cor. 15: 35, and traced out and commented on Paul's answer in the following verses. I was well satisfied with his argument. With regard to his cup illustration I have nothing to say. I do not believe any one can understand how God will raise the dead. He has said he will do it, and I rest on his word. Some sermons I did not hear.

The social meetings were good, and some of them abundantly refreshing. Those who witnessed the exercises in the Springfield tent will agree with me in this. I cannot speak particularly of any other tent exercises, as I did not attend them. But from the statements of others I judge they were all good. The love feasts at the stand were first rate.

The children's meetings, under the conduct of Bro. Wendell, were highly entertaining. Bro. W. has that happy and rare gift which makes some men pre-eminently successful in the instruction of the young. The children were much pleased and no doubt profited.

To sum up, all who attended will agree, I think, in pronouncing the Camp Meeting as a whole very good. I heard some say it was the best one ever held on the ground. For myself, I feel that I have enjoyed a great and precious privilege. I trust I have entered into friendly relations with many whom I shall greet in the kingdom of Jesus Christ. May God preserve us all blameless unto the appearing of our Lord.

JOSEPH T. CURRY.

Springfield, Sept. 3d, '61.

For the Crisis.

My Furlough.

BY P. D. M.

Sept. 3d. Now, after nearly a year's confinement in the city, I have a furlough, and am once more on the cars—going, God willing, to look how my brethren fare, and may be speak to them some words of good cheer. But oh! oh! how we ride! After travelling tens of thousands of miles, one could well believe he had quite overcome the novelty of a ride in the cars. But I now perceive this is not the case with myself. We are on the express train—the chariots run like lightning; my flesh crawls all over me, and I feel as if I was being hurled through the air by the hands of the fairies. Yet the sensation is pleasurable; we know all is right; God's hand is discerned in railroad matters—for it is the day of his preparation. And we certainly know we shall not be lost on the prairies to-night; the track is laid clear through; we are all in a hurry, so please you, then, put on the steam. The city is now far behind; we leap valleys, and, rattling and thundering as if bedlam was let loose, we pass the rocky gorge in the hill-side; we get just a glimpse of a small village and station, but no matter; the accommodation train will care for you,—this is the New York Express!—blow the whistle—clear the track—go ahead. We pass a curve; the cars' curve; you feel dizzy; you ask yourself, Are we going over? But all's right—go ahead. And now the country is fairly before us—undulating, variegated, beautiful! The news is unimportant today, and to think is more pleasant than to read. And who can help thinking when riding after this manner? How many lessons has God for us to learn every day! And yet what a melancholy appearance we make in working out the providential, and life problems handed out to us.

Men, it seems to me, are like the country before me. Some are cold, dignified, but distant and unapproachable, like yon hill; vaunting itself, perhaps, that its head is nearer heaven than is the valley below. But what matters that it its heart is not there also? We admire them, not for any thing they ever did, or will do, but simply for what they are. They are good to admire, and most admirable when the coldest—covered with snow. But who does not admire more such men as are like yon humble, laughing valley below—where the sun's rays dance 'mid the rose and violet, and the dew-drops, like diamonds, charm and dazzle the eye!—where the bubbling brooks, gay fields, and warbling songsters join in holy and happy concert to praise God, and the corn stalk and wheat sheaf preach good news to the hungry children and half-starved widowed mothers—saying, "we have food for you." Yes, here they are—more than the inanimate: the lowing kine, the bleating sheep, the whistling plowboy—and ah! tiny voices I almost hear—prattling children. And then comes the orchard, the garden, and the "cot beneath the hill"—I had almost said "sweet home." But faith whispers "We seek a better country." Oh, exiled Paradise, how I long for thee! But God grant, while in this world, I may be like the valley—humble, kind, (and shall I not say social,) and full of good fruits!

Other men I see seem to me like yon sterile, unfruitful field—unfruitful in every thing but weeds and stone. They are indolent and uncultivated; unwittingly, it may be, but self-willed. They say they are willing, and even pretend they desire to be useful. But God sends his servant to dig out and carry off the stone, to cut down and burn up those ugly briers and good-for-nothing brush, and they cry out lustily, "The sacrifice is too great"! God sends his plowman to them, and they are in an agony. They cry—they protest—they say, "This seems to us contrary to nature"; "you hurt our feelings"; "you deface our beauty"; "you disturb us"; "you make us prematurely old"; "you cover us with furrows." And the plowman says, "That is just what I propose to do." But here the matter ends; for it is written that only "the willing and the obedient shall eat the good of the land." There is no other way. And until men can willingly let the fallow ground be broken up, and submit to God's plow and harrow, they can never become as a fruitful field; and shall I add, NEVER hear it said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant"! Oh ye who wonder when Christians rejoice that ye are left barren and cold as yon hill-top, learn ye a lesson from nature! And know ye now why, in the day of judgment, ye shall be condemned. My brother, "ye cannot serve God and mammon." You need all the long summer to make ready for the harvest; and now soon it shall be said, "The summer is passed, the harvest is ended." Oh, God, make us ready for the harvest time!

But now it is just six o'clock, P. M., and we are at the Wilbraham Station—just three hours from Boston; an hour and a half less than it required last week on the accommodation train when we came to this place to Camp meeting. This week the disciples of the venerable Wesley have their camp meeting, only a little way across the railroad from the ground we occupied last week. I see through the hemlock boughs their white tents, and would like to stop, but cannot. Yet I meditate the day when "the camp of the saints" will comprehend all the faithful. "Hail, happy day!" Fifteen minutes more and we are at Springfield, the place of my first appointment.

Selections.

Modern Infidelity.

HOW TO DEAL WITH IT.

There is much cause to fear that infidelity is rapidly on the increase in our land, and it is a question of some importance how the church shall most successfully oppose the scepticism of the age. Different answers have been given to this question.

One class would have us believe that a well-educated ministry is a sufficient remedy for this evil. They suppose that were the ministers of the gospel all learned and talented men, they might reason the skeptic out of his infidelity. Learning is a valuable acquisition to the minister, but history proves that infidelity may grow and flourish under the ministrations of divines of great talent and learning, and that the pride of intellect that is apt to accompany unsanctified learning, when possessed by those who minister at the altars of the church, is far from forwarding the cause of God. It was when the ministers of the primitive church became ashamed of the simplicity of the gospel, and commenced to teach from the pulpit the philosophical systems of their age, that the church began to lose her real power to oppose error. There were not a few learned and eloquent divines in the Church of England when Wesley and his fellow-laborers commenced preaching the doctrine of justification by faith, yet infidelity prevailed to an alarming extent in Great Britain. In fact not a few of these divines helped to spread the infidelity which they were bound by their ordination vows to oppose. It was no extraordinary thing for one of them to join in that beautiful prayer of their liturgy: "Almighty God, unto whom all hearts be open, all desires known, and from whom no secrets are hid, cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of thy Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love thee, and worthily magnify thy holy name, through Christ, our Lord," and then attempt to prove in their sermon that none but fanatics and enthusiasts ever dreampt of enjoying the influence of the Holy Spirit in their hearts. These instances prove, most clearly, that however useful a learned ministry may be in many respects, that it is not of itself a sufficient barrier against skepticism.

Another class of persons appear to think that if the church possessed a certain amount of worldly respectability, she would then be fitted to battle successfully against error. Could she build splendid temples, and throw around her worship the pomp and grandeur worldly wealth can purchase, the great ones of the earth might then be persuaded to smile upon christianity, which they now despise, and that infidels would then respectfully listen to the preaching of that gospel which they now consider as foolishness? Very unfortunately for this theory, the experiment has been tried and has proved a sad failure. The periods of the church's greatest worldly prosperity have been the very periods when she has met with her most signal defeats in her contests with error. It was when the world's great ones frowned upon her, and the civil powers were arrayed against her, that the primitive church gained her greatest victories. The moment when she became the favorite of kings and princes, when her bishops became the inmates of emperors' palaces and the familiar counsellors of Victoria's generals, she became ashamed of the simple truths of the gospel, and formed a league with error. Perhaps no church ever possessed more worldly wealth and respectability than belonged to that of France at the time when Voltaire and Rousseau were sowing the seeds of infidelity among all classes. If these facts prove anything, they prove that a church's ability to oppose skepticism is not always in proportion to the degree of wealth and worldly influence that she pos[sesses].

What is most needed to fit the church for this work, is more of the spirit of Christ than now belongs to her. Christianity claims to be a practical matter, and the most efficient argument that can be produced to prove her divine origin is found in her power to purify the hearts and regulate the lives of her disciples. Her advocates may picture her as an angel of mercy, who, finding man the slave of vice and the embodiment of selfishness, breaks the chains of his slavery, and sends him forth as a good Samaritan, to engage in untiring efforts for the amelioration of human suffering; but all their eloquence will avail but little, unless they can point to those upon whom the preaching of the gospel has produced such effects. The parent, who, while he claims with his lips to have his affections set upon things above, shows, by his conduct, that he places more value upon his gold than he does upon the spiritual welfare of his fellow-men—has no cause for surprise when his children doubt the divinity of the religion which he has so foully disgraced. The religious society which has nothing of piety but the mere profession, has no reason to wonder that the neighborhood in which it is found should be filled with infidels. On the other hand, there is a power in the life of the consistent christian which cannot be resisted; and this consistency can only belong to those who possess much of the spirit of Christ.

Joy and Praise.

What was the spirit of the gospel as it existed in the experience of believers in the apostolic age? It was pre-eminently a glad and joyous spirit. They had received by faith a gospel which brought them glad tidings of great joy, and their daily walk was in the fear of the Lord and in the comforts of the Holy Ghost. A natural and with them, the habitual expression of this joy was praise. No sooner was the Lord parted from his disciples, and carried up to heaven, than they returned to Jerusalem with great joy, and "were continually in the temple praising and blessing God." Praise was a part of the daily expression of that pentecostal gladness with which thousands of new converts at Jerusalem received the first great outpouring of the Spirit. "And they did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God." At midnight, in the inner prison at Phillippi, two prisoners with their feet fast in the stocks, were overheard praying and singing to God. The peace which passeth all understanding kept their hearts, and One who never sleeps, and who has promised never to forsake them, was near. Both they and their companions in the faith were often in tribulation; but as the sufferings of Christ abounded in them, so their consolation also abounded by Christ. They knew how to be abased, and how to abound; how to be full, and how to be hungry; and in whatsoever state they were, therewith to be content. Whether they were in favor with all the people, or were led forth to prison and to death, they went out with peace. They knew not what a day may bring forth; but they were careful for nothing, casting all care on Him who cared for them.

Blessed be God! the joy which prison walls, and chains, and midnight darkness could not extinguish, was not confined to the apostolic age. The history of christianity, down to the time of Constantine, presents the great body of believers as being pervaded, to an extent never yet realized, with the spirit of religious joy expressed by praise. The living spring of gladness which had been opened in their hearts, poured itself forth in exuberant, never-failing streams of sacred melody. It sent these streams winding and purling along all the paths of life, making them like the garden of the Lord, a perpetual delight. In their social gatherings, in their houses, and in their daily private walks, the early christians lived and moved in an atmosphere of praise. Generally, no season of household worship was without it. The reading of the Scriptures, prayer, and sacred song, besides opening and closing the active labors of the day, accompanied their ordinary meals. Through a portion, at least, of the period which we are now contemplating, the notes of tuneful worship might have been heard ascending from their happy dwellings four times in a day. And there were those who, like a psalmist, rose at midnight to give thanks—a custom which is said to have originated in those persecuting days in which christian assemblies were compelled to seek the cover of night for safety. "Songs dedicated to the praise of God," says Jameson, "formed their pastime in private, and their favorite recreations at their family and friendly meetings." When the family group dispersed from the loved household altar, each to his daily occupation, their songs still cheered them in their toils. Jerome writing from the rural retirement, which he had sought as a "peaceful port," after a stormy life, says:—"Here, rustic though we are, we are all christians. Psalms alone break the pervading stillness. The ploughman is singing hallelujahs while he turns his furrow. The reaper solaces his toil with hymns. The vineyard dresser, as he prunes his vines, chants something from the strains of David. These are our songs, and such the notes with which our love is vocal."—Hymns and Choirs.

Dr. Miller's Duck Story.

The late Dr. Miller, of Princeton, as all his students will remember, abounded in anecdotes, which he related to his classes from year to year, to illustrate the points made in his lectures. One of them occurs to us just now, as specially applicable to the new converts which have recently come into the churches within the bounds of our circulation. A celebrated Judge in Virginia was in his earliest years skeptical as to the truth of the Bible, and especially as to the reality of experimental religion. He had a favorite servant who accompanied him in his travels. As they passed round from court house to court house, they frequently conversed on the subject of religion, the servant, Harry, venturing at times to remonstrate with his master against his infidelity. As the Judge had confidence in Harry's honesty and sincerity, he asked him a great many questions as to how he felt and what he thought on various points. Amongst other things, Harry told his master that he was often very sorely tempted and tried by the devil. The Judge asked Harry to explain to him how it happened that the devil attacked him, (Harry) who was so pious a man, whilst he allowed himself, who was an infidel and a sinner, to pass unnoticed and untempted. Harry asked,—

"Are you right sure, master, that he does let you pass without troubling you?"

"Certainly I am," replied the Judge; "I have no dealings with him at all. I do not even so much as know that there is any such being in existence as the devil. If there is any such being, he never troubles me."

"Well," said Harry, "I know that there is a devil, and that he tries me sorely at times."

A day or two afterwards the Judge concluded to go on a hunt for wild ducks on one of the streams which lay across his road homeward. Harry accompanied him. As they approached the river they espied a flock of ducks quietly floating on its surface. The Judge stealthily crept up the bank and fired upon them, killing two or three, and wounding as many others. He at once threw down his gun and made strenuous efforts, with the aid of clubs and stones, to secure the wounded ducks, whilst he permitted the dead ones to float on, for the time unnoticed by him. Harry, as he sat on the seat of the carriage, watched his master's movements with deep interest, and when he returned, said to him:

"Massa, whilst you was a splashin' in de water after dem wounded ducks, and lettin' de dead ones float on, it just come into my mind why it is dat de debil troubles me so much, whilst he lets you alone. You are like the dead ducks; he's got you safe. I'm like de wounded ones, trying to get away from him, and he's afraid I'll do it, so he makes all de fuss after me, and just lets you float on de stream. He knows he can git you any time; but he knows it's now or never wid me. If you were to begin to flutter a little, and show signs like you were agoin' to git away from him, he would make jist as big a splashin' after you as he does after me."

The illustration struck the learned judge with great force, and led him to re-investigate the grounds of his skepticism, and through Harry's instrumentality he was finally brought to sit with him at the feet of Jesus and to learn of him. The illustration is a homely one, but it sets forth a great truth in the experience of those who set out in the christian course. They must expect to be assailed by Satan as they never were before. If he fails of success in causing their fall by the use of one form of temptation, he will try another. He is a cunning old fox. He has tried so long, and had so much to do with men, that he is now an adept in devising means to ruin them, and make them as miserable and degraded as himself. Young christians, therefore, should not think it strange concerning the fiery trials which are to try them, as though some strange thing had happened to them, when they are assailed in new, and to them hitherto unknown methods of assault. As long as the devil feels that sinners are safe, and that he is sure to get them at last, he allows them to float on quietly upon an unruffled current; but the moment they attempt to throw off his yoke, and to assert their independence of him, they must expect his wrath to wax exceeding hot, and his assaults to fall thick and fast upon their heads. They should not be ignorant of his devices. He goes about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour.—Pres. Herald.

Money.

Perhaps no word has more of a magic spell in it than this. Being the representative of accumulated property, it has attractions which no other single article possesses. Powerful for good or evil, it is coveted by all who have lived long enough to know the convenience of a sufficient supply to meet all demands. An inordinate love of other property may be productive of various evils, but we learn from an inspired writer that "the love of money is the root of all evil." The very metal, called precious, of which it it composed exercises a sort of bewitching charm which lures on thousands to forsake home and to encounter dangers and even death to obtain a little more than ordinary industry will secure. It has long been said of our neighbors that "Cotton is King" and that the government would have to submit to the dictates of that monarch; but it is far more correct to say that Capital is King and the country that has the most credit, or owns the greatest amount of money, must rule.

In private life what a continual struggle is made to obtain money.

Amongst public men how much is sacrificed for money. If places of honor were without emolument how few would seek to occupy them. There would be a far better chance of discovering the true patriot, if "the loaves and fishes" were put out of the question.

The proper application of money is a problem which deserves the attention of every christian man. A man's family has claims upon him. Next to an unsullied reputation and christian example, a liberal education is the most valuable inheritance that can be left to son or daughter. Let these be given and it is very doubtful if any other possessions are real advantages; they may become far otherwise. A parent who leaves to his children nothing but wealth, or money,—no legacy of love, respect and friends,—dies a poor man indeed. And yet we must not despise money, for we know it may be made the instrument of great good in both commerce and benevolence. It should never be supposed that, to be enabled to promote the welfare of our fellowmen, or to be beloved by them, it is necessary to be rich in this world's goods. A wise and judicious use of what we have may assist in accomplishing these objects, but the wealth of the heart has more to do with this matter than the state of the pocket.

Whilst christian philanthropy presents so many fields for cultivation, there are abundant opportunities of using money well, and of putting it out to usury till the Master comes. A return of large interest is promised to those who forsake all for Christ's sake and the gospel's—"an hundred fold in this life and in the world to come eternal life."

CHRIST KNOCKING AT THE DOOR.—To see a prince entreat a beggar to receive an alms, would be a strange sight; but to see a king entreat the traitor to accept of mercy, would be a stranger sight than that; but to see God entreat a sinner—to hear Christ say, "I stand at the door and knock," with a heart full and a heaven full of grace to bestow upon him that opens—this is such a sight as dazzles the eyes of angels.—Bunyan.

☞ We can only walk with God in comfort, as we view him as our Father in Jesus Christ.

☞ The best way to do ourselves good is to be doing good to others; the best way to gather is to scatter.

☞ Example moves more than homily, though it be less clamorous.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year.........$1.00
For a single copy 6 months.........1.00
For a single copy 3 months.........50
Five copies to one address for 6 months...4.00
Ten copies to one address for 6 months...8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months...15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months...21.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; in that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications no note at this office, should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, BOSTON, MASS.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts and 26 cents a year to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to pre-pay their postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for [illegible] numbers, or $1.25 a year. [illegible] Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 312. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1861. | VOL. XIV. NO. 1.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.
GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

☞ For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Christ is all the World to Me.

TUNE—Annie Laurie.

My soul is now united
To Christ the living Vine;
His mercy long I slighted,
But now I feel him mine.
CHORUS.
Christ is all the world to me,
And his glory I shall see,
And for Jesus Christ my Saviour
I would lay me down and die.

I feel no condemnation,
My sins He washed away,
And blessed with His salvation,
I'm glad from day to day.
CHORUS.

With Jesus as my treasure,
What can I want beside?
His smile is all my pleasure,
In Him I'm satisfied.
CHORUS.

His hand my cares shall lighten,
Till I can care no more;
His joy my path shall brighten,
Till all my grief is o'er.
CHORUS.

And O! to live forever
In the Paradise of God,—
My friendship cease—no, never,
In the midst of that abode!
CHORUS.
Christ is all the world to me,
And his glory I shall see,
And for Jesus Christ my Saviour
I would lay me down and die.

For the Crisis.

The Message of Elijah.

MAL. 4: 5, 6.—"Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."

The short history of Elijah is one of great importance. It shadows forth a two-fold message, to be fulfilled before the first and second advents of our Lord. When John the Baptist was asked if he were that prophet, he denied and said he was not; but when our Lord spake of John, he said, "if ye will receive it, this is Elijah that was to come." The only way to reconcile the testimonies of our Lord and John the Baptist is, that John speaks of the fulfillment of Elijah's mission in its primary sense, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, while our Lord speaks of it in its secondary sense, as the messenger going before his first advent.

Before John was born, an angel appeared unto his father, Zacharias, and told him that John should go before the Lord in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just. Notwithstanding this plain application of the fulfillment of Elijah's mission to John the Baptist, the great burden of his typical history has its fulfillment from the rise of popery to the end of the gospel dispensation. The first we hear of him, he makes a prayer at a time when Israel is given over to idolatry; this prayer was, that it should not rain for the space of three years and six months. Ahab, king of Israel, contrary to the law of God, married Jezebel, a heathen woman, who brought into the church a flood of idolatry, and caused the true prophets of God to be put to death. It is easy to see the antitype of this first movement of Elijah, both of the period and the circumstances. The woman that John saw sit upon a scarlet-colored beast, contrary to the law of God, married the kings of the earth, which marriage brought a flood of idolatry into the christian church, and caused the true prophets of God, wherever they could be found, to suffer death. For fear we should misunderstand who this woman is, John has given her name in plain language, addressed to the church of Thyatira, which church we apply to the persecuting reign of popery. Rev. 2: 20. "Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols." John not only refers to mystical Jezebel as the cause of the millions being slaughtered under her bloody reign, but also (in Rev. 11: 3) to the period of 1260 days, during which time the church was clothed in sackcloth, he speaks (in the 6th verse) of the witnesses having power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy, which is undoubtedly the antitype of Elijah's prayer. During three years and a half prophetic, which is 1260 years mystical, Jezebel had the victory over the true prophets of God; they were either hidden in caves, as in the type, or if found, put to the sword and literally slaughtered. Here we have a part of Elijah's mission fulfilled under the gospel, which is too plain to be misunderstood. When the children of Israel were about to leave Egypt, they were commanded to have their loins girt about, ready at a moment's warning to start on their journey. Elijah was a hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins, (2 Ki. 1. 8.) and the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leather girdle about his loins. (Matt. 3: 4.) "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he shall return from the wedding." (Luke 12: 35.) "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth." (Eph. 6: 14.) "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind; be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." The two last quotations plainly prove to us what the girdle is which we require. In the first place, it is "this all-important truth of the Lord's immediate coming," and the concentration of our minds upon this truth, so that nothing can move us.

The office of Elijah was "to turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." The fathers will acknowledge all to be their children who have the spirit of Elijah, that inspired their hearts to write unto us, and our hearts to sit at their feet and learn the sacred truth. Peter said, "all the prophets, as many as have spoken, foretold of these days; ye are the children of the prophets." The prophecies which were fulfilled at the first advent are few in comparison with those that encircle the second; and if our hearts and ears are circumcised to hear (like those in Peter's day) the voice of the prophets, we shall be their legitimate children. They seem to be very strange children who have no interest at all in the all-important letters sent to them from their fathers. There is one thing very certain; they have never been to Elijah's school, or he would have turned their hearts to the study of the message sent to them by their venerable seers. Malachi says, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; but who may abide the day of his coming, and who shall stand when he appeareth?" When John the Baptist raised his voice in the wilderness, all Jerusalem and Judea, and all the region round about Jordan flocked to his baptism; but how few out of that vast multitude could bear the sharp edge of truth brought out by John and his Master, "Who shall abide the day of his coming?" So also in our day, when this message was first proclaimed, vast multitudes flocked to hear it, and were captivated with the first lessons of Elijah; but we have lived to see that mighty army fall, like men in battle, until there is hardly enough left to tell the dismal tale. "But who may abide the day of his coming?"

In the short history of Elijah, we have a clear type of the changes through which the church has passed during this movement. At one time he seemed clothed with omnipotent power, and at another time he showed the weakness of a man; so also has it been with those who delivered this message. At one time they seemed more than men (when clothed with the spirit and power of Elijah); but at other times (when brought into a trial of their faith) they were found either slumbering or sleeping, or seen on the streets of this great city, without the signs of spiritual life. When the time came for Elijah's translation, it seemed the matter was no secret, but well understood by all the sons of the prophets; and, more than probable, a great many more understood all about it from the fact that even the little children had learned the taunt, "Go up thou bald head." It would seem also that the event was very unpopular, as no one followed to witness the grand scene but Elisha; and while he and his master moved from place to place, expecting translation at every call, the great mass stood gazing at a distance, unwilling to be identified with his several movements. So in this movement, which has also been unpopular, the great mass have been alarmed, and stood trembling and gazing on, at a distance, unwilling to be identified with the last message of Elijah. Elijah ended his short history in this world by translation; this part of his typical mission is peculiar to those who shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump.

Why has the prophet Malachi called the attention of the church to Elijah the prophet, before the great and dreadful day of the Lord, if his mission affords her no light, finished as it was (like the living church when Christ comes) with translation? The three places to which the Lord sent Elijah, before his translation, I have no doubt, typified the three movements through which we have passed. The church has been divinely called, by the spirit and power of Elijah, to deliver these three messages in order to fulfill the law and the prophets. Why did the Lord call the prophet to travel such a strange route, before his translation, if he did not design it for a type? He called Elijah to Bethel, which is fifteen miles from Jordan; the place from which he called him was only three miles distant from Jordan. In this fifteen miles the prophet had three distinct calls; the first to Bethel, the second to Jericho, and the third to Jordan, which was the end of the fifteen miles. At this place all those who were standing at a distance and looking on, were left in darkness. In fifteen years (in place of fifteen miles) the church has made three distinct movements; one in 1844, another in 1854, and the last in 1859, at which time, like Elijah, she passed out of sight until the third day, when she, like Jesus, will rise again in immortal beauty and glory that will never fade away. This third day is shadowed forth by the church, coming out of Egypt, upon the same day the Lamb was slain, and also the 430 years ended. At the same time they marched from Ramesis to Succoth, and from Succoth to Etham, where they encamped for the first time. Their second encampment was at Pihahiroth, which was near the Red sea. On the third night, about the morning watch, the church of God received a shadow of the resurrection from the Red sea, when her enemies that pursued her were all drowned. This is the first example of deliverance on the third day.

When the seventy years of Babylonish captivity had ended, in the first year of Darius the Mede, Daniel understood by books that the Lord would accomplish seventy years in the desolation of Jerusalem. If the seventy years did not end at the fall of Babylon, why did Daniel set his face unto the Lord, to seek by prayer and fasting, in sackcloth and ashes, that the desolation should be removed without delay from Jerusalem? It is very evident that Daniel knew the time had expired when he prayed that the Lord would defer not, but hearken and do. The burden of his prayer was to remove the desolations from Jerusalem. This evidence of the seventy years ending in the first year of Darius the Mede, is also supported by the testimony of Jer. 25: 11, 12,—"And these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years; and it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon." All the prophecy points to the fall of Babylon, but the church was not delivered till the third year after. Darius reigned two years, and in the first year of Cyrus they were released from their captivity.

We have one more prophetic period which has a third day at the end of it; that is the sixty-nine weeks of Dan. 9: 25. Peter says this period reached to the "sufferings of Christ," and was followed by a resurrection from the dead the third day after. The analogy of the church, coming out of Egypt, sustains this point as well as the testimony of Peter. There, the very day the Lamb was slain, the prophetic period of 430 years terminated, and was followed by the shadow of a resurrection from the Red sea on the third day following. See 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2. On the same day the Lamb of God hung upon the cross, the prophetic period of 483 years ended, and was followed by a literal resurrection from the dead the third day after.

We shall close our evidence on the third day by simply stating our position without giving the proof. We believe the seven times, the second woe, the 2300 days and the 1335 days, all ended at the passover in 1859, and in the third year after, at the feast of tabernacles, we come, according to the type, to the resurrection of the dead. We believe also that the short history of Elijah is typical of the church, from the rise of popery to the time of her translation, and that the three places to which he was called before his translation are typical of the three movements through which we have passed in fifteen years. The third message in 1859 agrees with Elijah's crossing Jordan, the shadow of death, which brought the church into an hour of temptation and darkness, shadowed forth by the three days coming out of Egypt, the three years coming out of Babylon, and the three days at the resurrection of Christ. That there were many more times appointed during this movement, besides the three referred to, for the coming of Christ, we do not dispute; but we are fully satisfied that there are only three marked out in prophecy, and that the spirit and power of Elijah accompanied only those three messages on time. Some suppose that it is limiting the fulfillment of prophecy too much to confine it to this country, but we think this nation was wisely selected by Providence for this very purpose. Here we have all people represented, with the freedom of speech and of the press, so that all nations have heard the sound from this land, shadowing with wings. The second message of Elijah is not the voice of one crying in the wilderness of Judea, but the voices of thousands in this western wilderness proclaiming the advent of our coming King. But if we doubt this country's being the place from which the last message was to go forth, we may doubt also the darkening of the sun as being a sign, and we may doubt the whole movement, and then doubt our own doubts. The message of Elijah, with all the other portions of the law and the prophets which refer to these movements of the church behind us, conspire to prove the vast importance of our experience in this dispensational truth. It is designed as the last great light to the church, which none of the wicked will understand. ABRAHAM FLAVELL.

Newark, N. J.

For the Crisis.

Mr. Landis's Motto.

In my "Reviewers Reviewed," pp. 21, 22, I remark upon Mr. Landis's book as follows:

"A passage in his title page is very suggestive. We translate it thus: 'All souls are immortal, even those of the ungodly; for which it were better not to be imperishable. For, punished in unquenchable fire with limitless punishment, and dying not, they can find no end to their misery.'

"We have looked for this morsel paraded thus without a name, but do not find it. It may have been written in the darkening ages; we are confident it is not from the earlier Fathers. So apt a motto, supported by a great and good name, would weigh something. And if, of its four unequivocal expressions of the immortality or of the eternal misery of the wicked, a single one had been found in the Scriptures, there might be an end of controversy. But, though our author speaks of 'a few of the texts' 'in which the soul is declared to be immortal' (p. 179), he offers no similar expression from the blessed volume." Etc.

Four weeks ago I found some clue to the passage in question. Conversing with a Catholic priest, he appealed, in support of the doctrine of eternal suffering, to Perrone, on The Future Life of Man, c. 6; Works, Vol. I. p. 831. Here Perrone gives the passage as from Clement of Rome, without naming the place, but with a general reference to Petavius, De Angelis, l. 2, c. 8.

This gave me no fear that I had been hasty; for I knew that the passage could be found in no genuine work of Clement. Indeed, we have only one short epistle that he wrote; and if the passage were found there, all Christendom would know it.

But the reference to Petavius (the ablest of the Jesuits, and who lived about 200 years ago) enabled me to inquire about the passage, and from a competent scholar I have just received the following note, which may be of literary interest to the readers of the Crisis. I translate a few expressions, as in one instance above, from the Latin.

"An examination of the matter which you wished me to look up does not lead to any conclusions which will be very damaging to your literary reputation, or to your peculiar theological view. I have looked into Petavius, Theol. Dogm., De Angelis, Lib. III. c. 8, § 5, in Vol. III. p. 113 of his Theol. Dogm. Antwerp, 1700, fol., and there find 'Clement of Rome, cited by Damascenus in his Selections, declaring the eternity of the punishments of the lost, says thus:' which is followed by a Latin translation of Mr. Landis's motto. This is given in Greek in a note with the following reference:—'Clemens apud Damasc. litera X. Tit. 1.'

"Joannes Damascenus, who is thus referred to, wrote, as you know, in the eighth century. His 'Eclogæ' or 'Sacra Parallela' consist of a collection of extracts from Scripture and the writings of the various Fathers under various heads, which are arranged in alphabetical order. There are two of these collections in the best edition of Damascenus, that of Le Quien; one contained in a manuscript belonging to the Vatican Library, and another termed the 'Rupefucaldine Parallels,' being found in a manuscript which formerly belonged to the Cardinal François de la Rochefoucauld (Lat. Rupefucaldus). The latter are believed to be the work of a compiler older than Damascenus, one who lived probably in the seventh century. But neither of these as edited by Le Quien, contains the alleged extract from Clement! In the list of writers from which extracts are given in the Eclogæ or Parallela published from the Vatican MS., the name of Clement of Rome does not appear. In the Rupefucaldine Parallels, the spurious 2d Epistle to the Corinthians ascribed to him is cited several times. But the Landis motto is not found. Under the letter X. Tit. 1, 'Of the Soul and the Mind,' there is merely a citation from Irenæus. The edition of Le Quien was published at Paris in 1712, in 2 vols. fol.

"Probably Petavius found this citation either in some edition or some manuscript of Damascenus. But its absence from Le Quien's edition leads one to doubt whether it really belongs to his Eclogæ; it may have been added by some later and unknown hand, as a work of that kind was peculiarly liable to interpolations. If taken from any work ascribed to Clement of Rome, it seems not unlikely to have been derived from the spurious 2d Epistle to the Corinthians, which is several times quoted in the Rupefucaldine Parallels, the genuine Epistle never. So much for the motto!"

I have read the 2d Epistle just referred to, and it contains nothing like the passage. (See Debt and Grace, p. 290.)

Whether Mr. Landis gave the passage without a name because he could find no one responsible for it, he can tell, perhaps, better than any of his readers. But since he has become sponsor and god-father to it, it behoves him to trace it to its source, if that can be done. Whether he shall discover it to be from one of the later Fathers, or from some pseudo-Father, or from the Father of lies (Gen. 3: 4), he is welcome to make the most of it.

C. F. H.

For the Crisis.

The Scriptural Use of the Second Personal Pronoun.

Jesus said to the high priest, "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Matt. 26: 64.

There is no proof here, that the high priest, to whom this language was spoken, will be alive when the Lord comes, or that he in person will ever see the Lord. This passage fails to show that there will ever be a resurrection from the dead of either good or bad. All through the Bible we find the second person used to designate a class. See the 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th chapters of Deut. "When ye shall pass over Jordan." Then Moses goes on to tell them what they should do after they should come into the land, using the words thee, thou, ye and you, extending them on for nearly two thousand years. Not you individuals who hear me speak to-day, but ye, or you—the Jews. So in the New Testament. Matt. 24: 33,—"So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near." 44th verse,—"Therefore be ye also ready." Matt. 28: 20,—"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Luke 21: 31,—"So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." 1 Thess. 5: 4,—"But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." That is, ye, or you brethren who may be alive at that time. So Christ spoke to the high priest as a Jew,—"Hereafter shall ye—Jews—my persecutors, see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven." This passage will be strictly fulfilled though that priest should never have a resurrection.

Rev. 1: 7,—"Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him." This also will be strictly fulfilled, though that one soldier who pierced Christ should never live again. The Jews as a people pierced Christ, and they as a people will be here, as they ever have been, when Christ comes, and of course will see him coming. For this generation is not to pass away till all these things are fulfilled. J. S. W.

For the Crisis.

S. S. Books and Papers.

BRO. WENDELL:—I notice in the last Crisis an inquiry by Bro. Mansfield about Sunday school books, and am glad that some of the brethren are waking up to the importance of Sabbath school instruction. I wish to say, for the information of brethren and others, that the Mass. Sabbath School Society have a large assortment of books, from which I think there could be a library selected that would suit our Advent brethren. They also frequently have second-hand books, sent them from schools that have got new ones. These they give to destitute, or mission schools. They are some worn, but with good usage will last as long as they have been used. They also publish a Sunday school paper—the "Well Spring"—at 38cts. a year, weekly; three copies for $1.00; 20 copies and upwards, 25 cts. a year. There may be some errors in the doctrine they contain, but it is an easy task for our scrutinizing brethren to point them out, if the children themselves cannot detect them; and I think the lessons in Natural History, Geography, and other sciences, poetry and religious instruction they contain, more than counterbalance the defects. I have received from them, for ten years past, at least one thousand copies a year of back numbers for gratuitous distribution. There is also the "Child's Paper," "Child at Home," "Reaper," (Baptist,) "Sunday School Banner," "S. S. Advocate," (Methodist,) and others, all of which are furnished at a low rate.

And I will say, in conclusion, that any service I can render in furnishing books or papers I can get as donations, or in purchasing new books, I will cheerfully give. There is also a great variety of S. S. Hymn books, and music adapted to children, at all the S. S. depositories in this city. Some with thirty-two pages as low as one cent, each, and but few over twelve-and-a-half cts. I, however, like the suggestion that the brethren take hold of this subject themselves, and compose their own hymns and music, for there must be talent in the church for this as well as for all other exercises. Yours, &c., D. N. SMITH.

74 Franklin St., Boston.

For the Crisis.

"I don't want to love Jesus."

Such was the answer given at a prayer meeting, a few evenings ago, by a young lady whom I had asked if she loved Jesus. "I don't want to love Jesus." I was so astonished at such an answer, that for a moment I knew not what to reply. I could only remark that there may be a time when she would wish that she had loved Jesus. That is an interesting question; and an unanswerable one. Had Jesus not died for her? Had he refused to receive her graciously, and pardon her freely? Had he said that none of his many glorious promises were for her? There is no reason, no, nor the shadow of one, for not loving Jesus.

"Do not want to love Jesus!" How sad the condition of a soul who feels thus. Not love Jesus! He who is the "fairest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely." Is there anything in his character so repulsive that any one should not love him? I think—

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ears."

And how different the feelings of the christian as he exclaims—

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

But what saith the word of God. If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema—Maranatha (accursed at his appearing.) Fearful sentence—yet just.

The christian loves Jesus. He loves his precepts, his commands, his promises, his appearing. Jesus will not compel any one to love him. Man is a free agent, and an accountable being. God has offered every inducement to man to love him, and his Son Jesus Christ. But men will not—not that they can not, but do not want to love God and the Redeemer; like the Jews, to whom Jesus said, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." Mankind will love the world, but not Jesus; they will yield to the flesh, but will not obey Jesus. Happy day when all who live on the earth will delight in loving and serving the Master. Happy day when our hearts will not be pained by such awful words as "I don't want to love Jesus."

It is painful to think there is any mortal man who does not love Jesus—much more so to think that there is any who do not want to. How sublime the answer of Peter to the Master's query, "Lovest thou me?" "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee." And we can all answer the same inquiry as it addresses us:—

"Yes, we love thee and adore,
Oh, for grace to love thee more."

Amen. T. W. S.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2nd, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Thin-edged Devil—A Dream.

Deacon M——, a very good man, long since fallen asleep, had the following dream, as near as I can remember.

He dreamed he saw a body of men marching in close phalanx, led by the singing of a beautiful dove; he noticed they all sang in concert with the dove. He observed behind them a thin-edged devil trying to squeeze in between them; but he could not succeed for some time, for they all kept such perfect step, and walked so close together, that it was impossible for him to find any place. At length one of the company stumbled, just enough to lose one step, which made a very small opening, into which the thin-edged devil instantly darted. His presence caused such commotion that those nearest immediately stopped singing, and fell out of the ranks; then others looked around to see what they were doing, when they too lost the step, and thus made place for the thin-edged devil, who lost no time in following up the advantage of their confusion, till he succeeded in breaking up the entire company,—for he observed that they were so disturbed by the presence of this intruder, that they could not, or did not, attend to the song of the dove, and when they stopped singing with him, they immediately left the ranks. He then turned to see what they were doing who first fell out and stopped by the way; and, to his astonishment, he saw them throwing stones and clubs at each other, each supposing the other most to blame for the accident that first disturbed their [illegible]. The rest of the company looked very sad and grieved, and appeared fearful lest the dove should leave them altogether, and they seemed to invite his stay; at this he stopped and hovered over them, so low as to gain the attention of those who were engaged in strife; whereupon he perched on a tree near by, and again struck up a beautiful tune, which made the sad ones look very happy, and they too began again to sing, and immediately to form into a column, so close that the thin-edged devil was completely excluded.

What seemed most remarkable was, their place in the ranks and all seemed to depend upon their singing in concert with the dove; for, as soon as the contending parties listened to the dove, they left off contention, began the tune, and then took their places in the ranks. The music was perfect, melodious, heavenly harmony; the words may be found in Gal. 5: 22.

Palmer, July 20th, 1861. [illegible]

For the Crisis.

The Present State of Things.

The present is a year productive of surprising events. It is one prolific of revolution, and abounding in great and startling realities. Our own once united and prosperous country is distracted, and resounding with war's alarms, and half a million of Northern and Southern men are preparing to engage in a deadly conflict. Meanwhile all Europe is threatened with one tremendous revolution, growing out of our own, which will shake thrones to their foundation. Russia, China and Japan are ready for revolt, and all the kingdoms of the earth must partake of the wine cup; and old Babylon will come up in remembrance before God, to give unto her her portion of the wrath of God.

The signs of the times are portentous enough, if we remember the words of the Saviour concerning those events which are to come to pass before the end of all things; and also, "be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." We are at least entering upon an important epoch in the history of the world. But thanks be to God, we are not in darkness concerning these things. Prophecy is as a light to the church of God, and we know from the fulfillment of the word the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Lift up your heads, and be glad, ye weary pilgrims. Soon the rightful heir to David's throne will take possession of the earth and reign king of kings forever.

J. E. [illegible]

A Living Faith.

The key to Paul's ministry, upon the human side, is given in these few words, We believe, and therefore speak. His earnestness, boldness, self-denial, his patience, perseverance, enterprise, his fervor in preaching the gospel, are at once accounted for by the fact that he believed it;—believed it as the revelation of God in Christ to save men from their sins; believed it as attested by miracles, by its internal evidences, and by its own effects; believed it as [illegible] to his conscience; believed it as in harmony with the highest, best [illegible] of his intellectual nature, and as adapted to the deepest and most urgent wants of the spiritual being; believed it as a system of truth accordant with the character of God and worthy of his infinite wisdom and love; believed his faith, though lying so much without the sphere of common earthly experience; believed that truths so momentous were worthy to be accompanied by supernatural signs; believed its doctrines, though transcending or contradicting all the wisdom of men—for what man knoweth the things of God? believed its promises reaching forth into the infinite, whither Christ hath entered for us within the vail.

When the genuineness of Paul's apostleship was [illegible] church at Corinth, he [illegible] the testimony of his ministry [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 312. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1861. VOL. XIV. NO. 1.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Christ is all the World to Me.

TUNE.—Annie Laurie.

My soul is now united
To Christ the living Vine;
His mercy long I slighted,
But now I feel him mine.
CHORUS.
Christ is all the world to me,
And his glory I shall see,
And for Jesus Christ my Saviour
I would lay me down and die.

I feel no condemnation,
My sins He washed away,
And blessed with His salvation,
I'm glad from day to day.
CHORUS.

With Jesus as my treasure,
What can I want beside?
His smile is all my pleasure,
In Him I'm satisfied.
CHORUS.

His hand my cares shall lighten,
Till I can care no more;
His joy my path shall brighten,
Till all my grief is o'er.
CHORUS.

And O! to live forever
In the Paradise of God,—
My friendship cease—no, never,
In the midst of that abode!
CHORUS.
Christ is all the world to me,
And his glory I shall see,
And for Jesus Christ my Saviour
I would lay me down and die.

For the Crisis.

The Message of Elijah.

MAL. 4: 5, 6.—"Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."

The short history of Elijah is one of great importance. It shadows forth a two-fold message, to be fulfilled before the first and second advents of our Lord. When John the Baptist was asked if he were that prophet, he denied and said he was not; but when our Lord spake of John, he said, "if ye will receive it, this is Elijah that was to come." The only way to reconcile the testimonies of our Lord and John the Baptist is, that John speaks of the fulfillment of Elijah's mission in its primary sense, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, while our Lord speaks of it in its secondary sense, as the messenger going before his first advent.

Before John was born, an angel appeared unto his father, Zacharias, and told him that John should go before the Lord in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just. Notwithstanding this plain application of the fulfillment of Elijah's mission to John the Baptist, the great burden of his typical history has its fulfillment from the rise of popery to the end of the gospel dispensation. The first we hear of him, he makes a prayer at a time when Israel is given over to idolatry; this prayer was, that it should not rain for the space of three years and six months. Ahab, king of Israel, contrary to the law of God, married Jezebel, a heathen woman, who brought into the church a flood of idolatry, and caused the true prophets of God to be put to death. It is easy to see the antitype of this first movement of Elijah, both of the period and the circumstances. The woman that John saw sit upon a scarlet-colored beast, contrary to the law of God, married the kings of the earth, which marriage brought a flood of idolatry into the christian church, and caused the true prophets of God, wherever they could be found, to suffer death. For fear we should misunderstand who this woman is, John has given her name in plain language, addressed to the church of Thyatira, which church we apply to the persecuting reign of popery. Rev. 2: 20. "Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols." John not only refers to mystical Jezebel as the cause of the millions being slaughtered under her bloody reign, but also (in Rev. 11: 3) to the period of 1260 days, during which time the church was clothed in sackcloth, he speaks (in the 6th verse) of the witnesses having power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy, which is undoubtedly the antitype of Elijah's prayer. During three years and a half prophetic, which is 1260 years mystical, Jezebel had the victory over the true prophets of God; they were either hidden in caves, as in the type, or if found, put to the sword and literally slaughtered. Here we have a part of Elijah's mission fulfilled under the gospel, which is too plain to be misunderstood. When the children of Israel were about to leave Egypt, they were commanded to have their loins girt about, ready at a moment's warning to start on their journey. Elijah was a hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins, (2 Ki. 1. 8.) and the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leather girdle about his loins. (Matt. 3: 4.) "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he shall return from the wedding." (Luke 12: 35.) "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth." (Eph. 6: 14.) "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind; be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." The two last quotations plainly prove to us what the girdle is which we require. In the first place, it is "this all-important truth of the Lord's immediate coming," and the concentration of our minds upon this truth, so that nothing can move us.

The office of Elijah was "to turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." The fathers will acknowledge all to be their children who have the spirit of Elijah, that inspired their hearts to write unto us, and our hearts to sit at their feet and learn the sacred truth. Peter said, "all the prophets, as many as have spoken, foretold of these days, ye are the children of the prophets." The prophecies which were fulfilled at the first advent are few in comparison with those that encircle the second; and if our hearts and ears are circumcised to hear (like those in Peter's day) the voice of the prophets, we shall be their legitimate children. They seem to be very strange children who have no interest at all in the all-important letters sent to them from their fathers. There is one thing very certain; they have never been to Elijah's school, or he would have turned their hearts to the study of the message sent to them by their venerable seers. Malachi says, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; but who may abide the day of his coming, and who shall stand when he appeareth?" When John the Baptist raised his voice in the wilderness, all Jerusalem and Judea, and all the region round about Jordan flocked to his baptism; but how few out of that vast multitude could bear the sharp edge of truth brought out by John and his Master, "Who shall abide the day of his coming?" So also in our day, when this message was first proclaimed, vast multitudes flocked to hear it, and were captivated with the first lessons of Elijah; but we have lived to see that mighty army fall, like men in battle, until there is hardly enough left to tell the dismal tale. "But who may abide the day of his coming?"

In the short history of Elijah, we have a clear type of the changes through which the church has passed during this movement. At one time he seemed clothed with omnipotent power, and at another time he showed the weakness of a man; so also has it been with those who delivered this message. At one time they seemed more than men (when clothed with the spirit and power of Elijah); but at other times (when brought into a trial of their faith) they were found either slumbering or sleeping, or seen on the streets of this great city, without the signs of spiritual life. When the time came for Elijah's translation, it seemed the matter was no secret, but well understood by all the sons of the prophets; and, more than probable, a great many more understood all about it from the fact that even the little children had learned the taunt, "Go up thou bald head." It would seem also that the event was very unpopular, as no one followed to witness the grand scene but Elisha; and while he and his master moved from place to place, expecting translation at every call, the great mass stood gazing at a distance, unwilling to be identified with his several movements. So in this movement, which has also been unpopular, the great mass have been alarmed, and stood trembling and gazing on, at a distance, unwilling to be identified with the last message of Elijah. Elijah ended his short history in this world by translation; this part of his typical mission is peculiar to those who shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump.

Why has the prophet Malachi called the attention of the church to Elijah the prophet, before the great and dreadful day of the Lord, if his mission affords her no light, finished as it was (like the living church when Christ comes) with translation? The three places to which the Lord sent Elijah, before his translation, I have no doubt, typified the three movements through which we have passed. The church has been divinely called, by the spirit and power of Elijah, to deliver these three messages in order to fulfill the law and the prophets. Why did the Lord call the prophet to travel such a strange route, before his translation, if he did not design it for a type? He called Elijah to Bethel, which is fifteen miles from Jordan; the place from which be called him was only three miles distant from Jordan. In this fifteen miles the prophet had three distinct calls; the first to Bethel, the second to Jericho, and the third to Jordan, which was the end of the fifteen miles. At this place all those who were standing at a distance and looking on, were left in darkness. In fifteen years (in place of fifteen miles) the church has made three distinct movements; one in 1844, another in 1854, and the last in 1859, at which time, like Elijah, she passed out of sight until the third day, when she, like Jesus, will rise again in immortal beauty and glory that will never fade away. This third day is shadowed forth by the church, coming out of Egypt, upon the same day the Lamb was slain, and also the 430 years ended. At the same time they marched from Ramesis to Succoth, and from Succoth to Etham, where they encamped for the first time. Their second encampment was at Pihahiroth, which was near the Red sea. On the third night, about the morning watch, the church of God received a shadow of the resurrection from the Red sea, when her enemies that pursued her were all drowned. This is the first example of deliverance on the third day.

When the seventy years of Babylonish captivity had ended, in the first year of Darius the Mede, Daniel understood by books that the Lord would accomplish seventy years in the desolation of Jerusalem. If the seventy years did not end at the fall of Babylon, why did Daniel set his face unto the Lord, to seek by prayer and fasting, in sackcloth and ashes, that the desolation should be removed without delay from Jerusalem? It is very evident that Daniel knew the time had expired when he prayed that the Lord would defer not, but hearken and do. The burden of his prayer was to remove the desolations from Jerusalem. This evidence of the seventy years ending in the first year of Darius the Mede, is also supported by the testimony of Jer. 25. 11, 12,—"And these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years, and it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon." All the prophecy points to the fall of Babylon, but the church was not delivered till the third year after. Darius reigned two years, and in the first year of Cyrus they were released from their captivity.

We have one more prophetic period which has a third day at the end of it; that is the sixty-nine weeks of Dan. 9: 25. Peter says this period reached to the "sufferings of Christ," and was followed by a resurrection from the dead the third day after. The analogy of the church, coming out of Egypt, sustains this point as well as the testimony of Peter. There, the very day the Lamb was slain, the prophetic period of 430 years terminated, and was followed by the shadow of a resurrection from the Red sea on the third day following. See 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2. On the same day the Lamb of God hung upon the cross, the prophetic period of 483 years ended, and was followed by a literal resurrection from the dead the third day after.

We shall close our evidence on the third day by simply stating our position without giving the proof. We believe the seven times, the second woe, the 2300 days and the 1335 days, all ended at the passover in 1859, and in the third year after, at the feast of tabernacles, we come, according to the type, to the resurrection of the dead. We believe also that the short history of Elijah is typical of the church, from the rise of popery to the time of her translation, and that the three places to which he was called before his translation are typical of the three movements through which we have passed in fifteen years. The third message in 1859 agrees with Elijah's crossing Jordan, the shadow of death, which brought the church into an hour of temptation and darkness, shadowed forth by the three days coming out of Egypt, the three years coming out of Babylon, and the three days at the resurrection of Christ. That there were many more times appointed during this movement, besides the three referred to, for the coming of Christ, we do not dispute; but we are fully satisfied that there are only three marked out in prophecy, and that the spirit and power of Elijah accompanied only those three messages on time. Some suppose that it is limiting the fulfillment of prophecy too much to confine it to this country, but we think this nation was wisely selected by Providence for this very purpose. Here we have all people represented, with the freedom of speech and of the press, so that all nations have heard the sound from this land, shadowing with wings. The second message of Elijah is not the voice of one crying in the wilderness of Judea, but the voices of thousands in this western wilderness proclaiming the advent of our coming King. But if we doubt this country's being the place from which the last message was to go forth, we may doubt also the darkening of the sun as being a sign, and we may doubt the whole movement, and then doubt our own doubts. The message of Elijah, with all the other portions of the law and the prophets which refer to these movements of the church behind us, conspire to prove the vast importance of our experience in this dispensational truth. It is designed as the last great light to the church, which none of the wicked will understand.

ABRAHAM FLAVELL.

Newark, N. J.

For the Crisis.

Mr. Landis's Motto.

In my "Reviewers Reviewed," pp. 21, 22, I remark upon Mr. Landis's book as follows:

"A passage in his title page is very suggestive. We translate it thus: 'All souls are immortal, even those of the ungodly; for which it were better not to be imperishable. For, punished in unquenchable fire with limitless punishment, and dying not, they can find no end to their misery.'

"We have looked for this morsel paraded thus without a name, but do not find it. It may have been written in the darkening ages; we are confident it is not from the earlier Fathers. So apt a motto, supported by a great and good name, would weigh something. And if, of its four unequivocal expressions of the immortality or of the eternal misery of the wicked, a single one had been found in the Scriptures, there might be an end of controversy. But, though our author speaks of 'a few of the texts' 'in which the soul is declared to be immortal' (p. 179), he offers no similar expression from the blessed volume." Etc.

Four weeks ago I found some clue to the passage in question. Conversing with a Catholic priest, he appealed, in support of the doctrine of eternal suffering, to Perrone, on The Future Life of Man, c. 6; Works, Vol. I. p. 831. Here Perrone gives the passage as from Clement of Rome, without naming the place, but with a general reference to Petavius, De Angelis, l. 2, c. 8.

This gave me no fear that I had been hasty; for I knew that the passage could be found in no genuine work of Clement. Indeed, we have only one short epistle that he wrote; and if the passage were found there, all Christendom would know it.

But the reference to Petavius (the ablest of the Jesuits, and who lived about 200 years ago) enabled me to inquire about the passage, and from a competent scholar I have just received the following note, which may be of literary interest to the readers of the Crisis. I translate a few expressions, as in one instance above, from the Latin.

"An examination of the matter which you wished me to look up does not lead to any conclusions which will be very damaging to your literary reputation, or to your peculiar theological view. I have looked into Petavius, Theol. Dogm., De Angelis, Lib. III. c. 8, § 5, in Vol. III. p. 113 of his Theol. Dogm. Antwerp, 1700, fol., and there find 'Clement of Rome, cited by Damascenus in his Selections, declaring the eternity of the punishments of the lost, says thus:' which is followed by a Latin translation of Mr. Landis's motto. This is given in Greek in a note with the following reference:—'Clemens apud Damasc. litera X. Tit. 1.'

"Joannes Damascenus, who is thus referred to, wrote, as you know, in the eighth century. His 'Eclogæ' or 'Sacra Parallela' consist of a collection of extracts from Scripture and the writings of the various Fathers under various heads, which are arranged in alphabetical order. There are two of these collections in the best edition of Damascenus, that of Le Quien; one contained in a manuscript belonging to the Vatican Library, and another termed the 'Rupefucaldine Parallels,' being found in a manuscript which formerly belonged to the Cardinal François de la Rochefoucauld (Lat. Rupefucaldus). The latter are believed to be the work of a compiler older than Damascenus, one who lived probably in the seventh century. But neither of these as edited by Le Quien, contains the alleged extract from Clement! In the list of writers from which extracts are given in the Eclogæ or Parallels published from the Vatican MS., the name of Clement of Rome does not appear. In the Rupefucaldine Parallels, the spurious 2d Epistle to the Corinthians ascribed to him is cited several times. But the Landis motto is not found. Under the letter X. Tit. 1, 'Of the Soul and the Mind,' there is merely a citation from Irenæus. The edition of Le Quien was published at Paris in 1712, in 2 vols. fol.

"Probably Petavius found this citation either in some edition or some manuscript of Damascenus. But its absence from Le Quien's edition leads one to doubt whether it really belongs to his Eclogæ; it may have been added by some later and unknown hand, as a work of that kind was peculiarly liable to interpolations. If taken from any work ascribed to Clement of Rome, it seems not unlikely to have been derived from the spurious 2d Epistle to the Corinthians, which is several times quoted in the Rupefucaldine Parallels, the genuine Epistle never. So much for the motto!"

I have read the 2d Epistle just referred to, and it contains nothing like the passage. (See Debt and Grace, p. 290.)

Whether Mr. Landis gave the passage without a name because he could find no one responsible for it, he can tell, perhaps, better than any of his readers. But since he has become sponsor and god-father to it, it behoves him to trace it to its source, if that can be done. Whether he shall discover it to be from one of the later Fathers, or from some pseudo-Father, or from the Father of lies (Gen. 3: 4), he is welcome to make the most of it.

C. F. H.

For the Crisis.

The Scriptural Use of the Second Personal Pronoun.

Jesus said to the high priest, "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Matt. 26: 64.

There is no proof here, that the high priest, to whom this language was spoken, will be alive when the Lord comes, or that he in person will ever see the Lord. This passage fails to show that there will ever be a resurrection from the dead of either good or bad. All through the Bible we find the second person used to designate a class. See the 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th chapters of Deut. "When ye shall pass over Jordan." Then Moses goes on to tell them what they should do after they should come into the land, using the words thee, thou, ye and you, extending them on for nearly two thousand years. Not you individuals who hear me speak to-day, but ye, or you—the Jews. So in the New Testament. Matt. 24: 33,—"So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near." 44th verse,—"Therefore be ye also ready." Matt. 28: 20,—"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Luke 21: 31,—"So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." 1 Thess. 5: 4,—"But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." That is, ye, or you brethren who may be alive at that time. So Christ spoke to the high priest as a Jew,—"Hereafter shall ye—Jews—my persecutors, see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven." This passage will be strictly fulfilled though that priest should never have a resurrection.

Rev. 1: 7,—"Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him." This also will be strictly fulfilled, though that one soldier who pierced Christ should never live again. The Jews as a people pierced Christ, and they as a people will be here, as they ever have been, when Christ comes, and of course will see him coming. For this generation is not to pass away till all these things are fulfilled.

J. S. W.

For the Crisis.

S. S. Books and Papers.

BRO. WENDELL:—I notice in the last Crisis an inquiry by Bro. Mansfield about Sunday school books, and am glad that some of the brethren are waking up to the importance of Sabbath school instruction. I wish to say, for the information of brethren and others, that the Mass. Sabbath School Society have a large assortment of books, from which I think there could be a library selected that would suit our Advent brethren. They also frequently have second-hand books, sent them from schools that have got new ones. These they give to destitute, or mission schools. They are some worn, but with good usage will last as long as they have been used. They also publish a Sunday school paper—the "Well Spring"—at 38cts. a year, weekly; three copies for $1.00; 20 copies and upwards, 25 cts. a year. There may be some errors in the doctrine they contain, but it is an easy task for our scrutinizing brethren to point them out, if the children themselves cannot detect them; and I think the lessons in Natural History, Geography, and other sciences, poetry and religious instruction they contain, more than counterbalance the defects. I have received from them, for ten years past, at least one thousand copies a year of back numbers for gratuitous distribution. There is also the "Child's Paper," "Child at Home," "Reaper," (Baptist,) "Sunday School Banner," "S. S. Advocate," (Methodist,) and others, all of which are furnished at a low rate.

And I will say, in conclusion, that any service I can render in furnishing books or papers I can get as donations, or in purchasing new books, I will cheerfully give. There is also a great variety of S. S. Hymn books, and music adapted to children, at all the S. S. depositories in this city. Some with thirty-two pages as low as one cent, each, and but few over twelve-and-a-half cts. I, however, like the suggestion that the brethren take hold of this subject themselves, and compose their own hymns and music, for there must be talent in the church for this as well as for all other exercises. Yours, &c., D. N. SMITH.

74 Franklin St., Boston.

For the Crisis.

"I don't want to love Jesus."

Such was the answer given at a prayer meeting, a few evenings ago, by a young lady whom I had asked if she loved Jesus. "I don't want to love Jesus." I was so astonished at such an answer, that for a moment I knew not what to reply. I could only remark that there may be a time when she would wish that she had loved Jesus. That is an interesting question; and an unanswerable one. Had Jesus not died for her? Had he refused to receive her graciously, and pardon her freely? Had he said that none of his many glorious promises were for her? There is no reason, no, nor the shadow of one, for not loving Jesus.

"Do not want to love Jesus!" How sad the condition of a soul who feels thus. Not love Jesus! He who is the "fairest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely." Is there anything in his character so repulsive that any one should not love him? I think—

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ears."

And how different the feelings of the christian as he exclaims—

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

But what saith the word of God. If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema—Maranatha (accursed at his appearing.) Fearful sentence—yet just.

The christian loves Jesus. He loves his precepts, his commands, his promises, his appearing. Jesus will not compel any one to love him. Man is a free agent, and an accountable being. God has offered every inducement to man to love him, and his Son Jesus Christ. But men will not—not that they can not, but do not want to love God and the Redeemer; like the Jews, to whom Jesus said, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." Mankind will love the world, but not Jesus; they will yield to the flesh, but will not obey Jesus. Happy day when all who live on the earth will delight in loving and serving the Master. Happy day when our hearts will not be pained by such awful words as "I don't want to love Jesus."

It is painful to think there is any mortal man who does not love Jesus—much more so to think that there is any who do not want to. How sublime the answer of Peter to the Master's query, "Lovest thou me?" "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee." And we can all answer the same inquiry as it addresses us:—

"Yes, we love thee and adore,
Oh, for grace to love thee more."

Amen. T. W. S.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2nd, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Thin-edged Devil—A Dream.

Deacon M——, a very good man, long since fallen asleep, had the following dream, as near as I can remember.

He dreamed he saw a body of men marching in close phalanx, led by the singing of a beautiful dove; he noticed they all sang in concert with the dove. He observed behind them a thin-edged devil trying to squeeze in between them; but he could not succeed for some time, for they all kept such perfect step, and walked so close together, that it was impossible for him to find any place. At length one of the company stumbled, just enough to lose one step, which made a very small opening, into which the thin-edged devil instantly darted. His presence caused such consternation that those nearest immediately stopped singing, and fell out of the ranks; then others looked around to see what they were doing, when they too lost the step, and thus made place for the thin-edged devil, who lost no time in following up the advantage of their confusion, till he succeeded in breaking up the entire company,—for he observed that they were so disturbed by the presence of this intruder, that they could not, or did not, attend to the song of the dove, and when they stopped singing with him, they immediately left the ranks. He then turned to see what they were doing who first fell out and stopped by the way; and, to his astonishment, he saw them throwing dust and clubs at each other, each supposing the other most to blame for the accident that first disturbed their pleasant march. The rest of the company looked very sad and grieved, and appeared fearful lest the dove should leave them altogether, and they seemed to invite his stay; at this he stopped and hovered over them, so low as to gain the attention of those who were engaged in strife; whereupon he perched on a tree near by, and again struck up a beautiful tune, which made the sad ones look very happy, and they too began again to sing, and immediately to form into a column, so close that the thin-edged devil was completely excluded.

What seemed most remarkable was, their place in the ranks and all seemed to depend upon their singing in concert with the dove; for, as soon as the contending parties listened to the dove, they left off contention, began the tune, and then took their places in the ranks. The music was perfect, melodious, heavenly harmony; the words may be found in Gal. 5: 22.

Palmer, July 20th, 1861. S. J. H.

For the Crisis.

The Present State of Things.

The present is a year productive of surprising events. It is one prolific of revolution, and abounding in great and startling realities. Our own once united and prosperous country is distracted, and resounding with war's alarms, and half a million of Northern and Southern men are preparing to engage in a deadly conflict. Meanwhile all Europe is threatened with one tremendous revolution, growing out of our own, which will shake thrones to their foundation. Russia, China and Japan are ready for revolt, and all the kingdoms of the earth must partake of the wine cup; and old Babylon will come up in remembrance before God, to give unto her her portion of the wrath of God.

The signs of the times are portentous enough, if we remember the words of the Saviour concerning those events which are to come to pass before the end of all things; and also, "be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." We are at least entering upon an important epoch in the history of the world. But thanks be to God, we are not in darkness concerning these things. Prophecy is as a light to the church of God, and we know from the fulfillment of the word the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Lift up your heads, and be glad, ye weary pilgrims. Soon the rightful heir to David's throne will take possession of the earth and reign king of kings forever.

J. E. CLARK.

A Living Faith.

The key to Paul's ministry, upon the human side, is given in these four words, We believe, and therefore speak. His earnestness, boldness, self-denial, his patience, perseverance, enterprise, his fervor in preaching the gospel, are at once accounted for by the fact that he believed it,—believed it as the revelation of God in Christ to save men from their sins; believed it as attested by miracles, by its internal evidences, and by its own moral effects; believed it as commending itself to his conscience; believed it as in harmony with the highest, best judgments of his intellectual nature, and as adapted to the deepest and most urgent wants of his spiritual being; believed it as a system of truth accordant with the character of God, and worthy of his infinite wisdom and love; believed its facts, though lying so much without the sphere of common earthly experience; believed that truths so momentous were worthy to be accompanied by supernatural signs; believed its doctrines, though transcending or contradicting all the wisdom of men—for what man knoweth the things of God? believed its promises reaching forth into the invisible and the infinite, whither Christ hath entered for us within the vail.

When the genuineness of Paul's apostleship was assailed by false teachers in the church at Corinth, he threw himself upon the testimony of his ministry. Why should he everywhere encounter the hostility of the Jew, the contempt of the world? Why face mobs and governors and kings? Why endure scourging and stoning and imprisonment for the testimony of Jesus? He sought neither to found a sect, nor to propagate a system of his own. He is even grieved that certain weak and [illegible] said "I am of Paul." He [illegible] no followers. "We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord." We believe, and therefore speak,—believe in the dying of the Lord Jesus for our sins, believe in the resurrection of Jesus for our justification [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 312. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1861. VOL. XIV. NO. 1.

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING AT No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Christ is all the World to Me.

TUNE.—Annie Laurie.

My soul is now united
To Christ the living Vine;
His mercy long I slighted,
But now I feel him mine.
CHORUS.
Christ is all the world to me,
And his glory I shall see,
And for Jesus Christ my Saviour
I would lay me down and die.

I feel no condemnation,
My sins He washed away,
And blessed with His salvation,
I'm glad from day to day.
CHORUS.

With Jesus as my treasure,
What can I want beside?
His smile is all my pleasure,
In Him I'm satisfied.
CHORUS.

His hand my cares shall lighten,
Till I can care no more;
His joy my path shall brighten,
Till all my grief is o'er.
CHORUS.

And O! to live forever
In the Paradise of God,—
My friendship cease—no, never,
In the midst of that abode!
CHORUS.
Christ is all the world to me,
And his glory I shall see,
And for Jesus Christ my Saviour
I would lay me down and die.

For the Crisis.

The Message of Elijah.

MAL. 4: 5, 6.—"Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."

The short history of Elijah is one of great importance. It shadows forth a two-fold message, to be fulfilled before the first and second advents of our Lord. When John the Baptist was asked if he were that prophet, he denied and said he was not; but when our Lord spake of John, he said, "if ye will receive it, this is Elijah that was to come." The only way to reconcile the testimonies of our Lord and John the Baptist is, that John speaks of the fulfillment of Elijah's mission in its primary sense, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, while our Lord speaks of it in its secondary sense, as the messenger going before his first advent.

Before John was born, an angel appeared unto his father, Zacharias, and told him that John should go before the Lord in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just. Notwithstanding this plain application of the fulfillment of Elijah's mission to John the Baptist, the great burden of his typical history has its fulfillment from the rise of popery to the end of the gospel dispensation. The first we hear of him, he makes a prayer at a time when Israel is given over to idolatry; this prayer was, that it should not rain for the space of three years and six months. Ahab, king of Israel, contrary to the law of God, married Jezebel, a heathen woman, who brought into the church a flood of idolatry, and caused the true prophets of God to be put to death. It is easy to see the antitype of this first movement of Elijah, both of the period and the circumstances. The woman that John saw sit upon a scarlet-colored beast, contrary to the law of God, married the kings of the earth, which marriage brought a flood of idolatry into the christian church, and caused the true prophets of God, wherever they could be found, to suffer death. For fear we should misunderstand who this woman is, John has given her name in plain language, addressed to the church of Thyatira, which church we apply to the persecuting reign of popery. Rev. 2: 20. "Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols." John not only refers to mystical Jezebel as the cause of the millions being slaughtered under her bloody reign, but al[illegible] (in Rev. 11: 3) to the period of 1260 days, during which time the church was clothed in sackcloth, he speaks (in the 6th verse) of the witnesses having power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy, which is undoubtedly the antitype of Elijah's prayer. During three years and a half prophetic, which is 1260 years mystical, Jezebel had the victory over the true prophets of God; they were either hidden in caves, as in the type, or if found, put to the sword and literally slaughtered. Here we have a part of Elijah's mission fulfilled under the gospel, which is too plain to be misunderstood. When the children of Israel were about to leave Egypt, they were commanded to have their loins girt about, ready at a moment's warning to start on their journey. Elijah was a hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins, (2 Ki. 1. 8.) and the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leather girdle about his loins. (Matt. 3: 4.) "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he shall return from the wedding." (Luke 12: 35.) "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth." (Eph. 6: 14.) "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind; be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." The two last quotations plainly prove to us what the girdle is which we require. In the first place, it is "this all-important truth of the Lord's immediate coming," and the concentration of our minds upon this truth, so that nothing can move us.

The office of Elijah was "to turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." The fathers will acknowledge all to be their children who have the spirit of Elijah, that inspired their hearts to write unto us, and our hearts to sit at their feet and learn the sacred truth. Peter said, "all the prophets, as many as have spoken, foretold of these days; ye are the children of the prophets." The prophecies which were fulfilled at the first advent are few in comparison with those that encircle the second; and if our hearts and ears are circumcised to hear (like those in Peter's day) the voice of the prophets, we shall be their legitimate children. They seem to be very strange children who have no interest at all in the all-important letters sent to them from their fathers. There is one thing very certain; they have never been to Elijah's school, or he would have turned their hearts to the study of the message sent to them by their venerable seers. Malachi says, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; but who may abide the day of his coming, and who shall stand when he appeareth?" When John the Baptist raised his voice in the wilderness, all Jerusalem and Judea, and all the region round about Jordan flocked to his baptism; but how few out of that vast multitude could bear the sharp edge of truth brought out by John and his Master, "Who shall abide the day of his coming?" So also in our day, when this message was first proclaimed, vast multitudes flocked to hear it, and were captivated with the first lessons of Elijah; but we have lived to see that mighty army fall, like men in battle, until there is hardly enough left to tell the dismal tale. "But who may abide the day of his coming?"

In the short history of Elijah, we have a clear type of the changes through which the church has passed during this movement. At one time he seemed clothed with omnipotent power, and at another time he showed the weakness of a man; so also has it been with those who delivered this message. At one time they seemed more than men (when clothed with the spirit and power of Elijah); but at other times (when brought into a trial of their faith) they were found either slumbering or sleeping, or seen on the streets of this great city, without the signs of spiritual life. When the time came for Elijah's translation, it seemed the matter was no secret, but well understood by all the sons of the prophets; and, more than probable, a great many more understood all about it from the fact that even the little children had learned the taunt, "Go up thou bald head." It would seem also that the event was very unpopular, as no one followed to witness the grand scene but Elisha; and while he and his master moved from place to place, expecting translation at every call, the great mass stood gazing at a distance, unwilling to be identified with his several movements. So in this movement, which has also been unpopular, the great mass have been alarmed, and stood trembling and gazing on, at a distance, unwilling to be identified with the last message of Elijah. Elijah ended his short history in this world by translation; this part of his typical mission is peculiar to those who shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump.

Why has the prophet Malachi called the attention of the church to Elijah the prophet, before the great and dreadful day of the Lord, if his mission affords her no light, finished as it was (like the living church when Christ comes) with translation? The three places to which the Lord sent Elijah, before his translation, I have no doubt, typified the three movements through which we have passed. The church has been divinely called, by the spirit and power of Elijah, to deliver these three messages in order to fulfill the law and the prophets. Why did the Lord call the prophet to travel such a strange route, before his translation, if he did not design it for a type? He called Elijah to Bethel, which is fifteen miles from Jordan; the place from which he called him was only three miles distant from Jordan. In this fifteen miles the prophet had three distinct calls; the first to Bethel, the second to Jericho, and the third to Jordan, which was the end of the fifteen miles. At this place all those who were standing at a distance and looking on, were left in darkness. In fifteen years (in place of fifteen miles) the church has made three distinct movements; one in 1844, another in 1854, and the last in 1859, at which time, like Elijah, she passed out of sight until the third day, when she, like Jesus, will rise again in immortal beauty and glory that will never fade away. This third day is shadowed forth by the church, coming out of Egypt, upon the same day the Lamb was slain, and also the 430 years ended. At the same time they marched from Rameses to Succoth, and from Succoth to Etham, where they encamped for the first time. Their second encampment was at Pihahiroth, which was near the Red sea. On the third night, about the morning watch, the church of God received a shadow of the resurrection from the Red sea, when her enemies that pursued her were all drowned. This is the first example of deliverance on the third day.

When the seventy years of Babylonish captivity had ended, in the first year of Darius the Mede, Daniel understood by books that the Lord would accomplish seventy years in the desolation of Jerusalem. If the seventy years did not end at the fall of Babylon, why did Daniel set his face unto the Lord, to seek by prayer and fasting, in sackcloth and ashes, that the desolation should be removed without delay from Jerusalem? It is very evident that Daniel knew the time had expired when he prayed that the Lord would defer not, but hearken and do. The burden of his prayer was to remove the desolations from Jerusalem. This evidence of the seventy years ending in the first year of Darius the Mede, is also supported by the testimony of Jer. 25: 11, 12,—"And these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years; and it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon." All the prophecy points to the fall of Babylon, but the church was not delivered till the third year after. Darius reigned two years, and in the first year of Cyrus they were released from their captivity.

We have one more prophetic period which has a third day at the end of it; that is the sixty-nine weeks of Dan. 9: 25. Peter says this period reached to the "sufferings of Christ," and was followed by a resurrection from the dead the third day after. The analogy of the church, coming out of Egypt, sustains this point as well as the testimony of Peter. There, the very day the Lamb was slain, the prophetic period of 430 years terminated, and was followed by the shadow of a resurrection from the Red sea on the third day following. See 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2. On the same day the Lamb of God hung upon the cross, the prophetic period of 483 years ended, and was followed by a literal resurrection from the dead the third day after.

We shall close our evidence on the third day by simply stating our position without giving the proof. We believe the seven times, the second woe, the 2300 days and the 1335 days, all ended at the passover in 1859, and in the third year after, at the feast of tabernacles, we come, according to the type, to the resurrection of the dead. We believe also that the short history of Elijah is typical of the church, from the rise of popery to the time of her translation, and that the three places to which he was called before his translation are typical of the three movements through which we have passed in fifteen years. The third message in 1859 agrees with Elijah's crossing Jordan, the shadow of death, which brought the church into an hour of temptation and darkness, shadowed forth by the three days coming out of Egypt, the three years coming out of Babylon, and the three days at the resurrection of Christ. That there were many more times appointed during this movement, besides the three referred to, for the coming of Christ, we do not dispute; but we are fully satisfied that there are only three marked out in prophecy, and that the spirit and power of Elijah accompanied only those three messages on time. Some suppose that it is limiting the fulfillment of prophecy too much to confine it to this country, but we think this nation was wisely selected by Providence for this very purpose. Here we have all people represented, with the freedom of speech and of the press, so that all nations have heard the sound from this land, shadowing with wings. The second message of Elijah is not the voice of one crying in the wilderness of Judea, but the voices of thousands in this western wilderness proclaiming the advent of our coming King. But if we doubt this country's being the place from which the last message was to go forth, we may doubt also the darkening of the sun as being a sign, and we may doubt the whole movement, and then doubt our own doubts. The message of Elijah, with all the other portions of the law and the prophets which refer to these movements of the church behind us, conspire to prove the vast importance of our experience in this dispensational truth. It is designed as the last great light to the church, which none of the wicked will understand.

ABRAHAM FLAVELL.

Newark, N. J.

For the Crisis.

Mr. Landis's Motto.

In my "Reviewers Reviewed," pp. 21, 22, I remark upon Mr. Landis's book as follows:

"A passage in his title page is very suggestive. We translate it thus: 'All souls are immortal, even those of the ungodly, for which it were better not to be imperishable. For, punished in unquenchable fire with limitless punishment, and dying not, they can find no end to their misery.'

"We have looked for this morsel paraded thus without a name, but do not find it. It may have been written in the darkening ages; we are confident it is not from the earlier Fathers. So apt a motto, supported by a great and good name, would weigh something. And if, of its four unequivocal expressions of the immortality or of the eternal misery of the wicked, a single one had been found in the Scriptures, there might be an end of controversy. But, though our author speaks of 'a few of the texts' 'in which the soul is declared to be immortal' (p. 179), he offers no similar expression from the blessed volume." Etc.

Four weeks ago I found some clue to the passage in question. Conversing with a Catholic priest, he appealed, in support of the doctrine of eternal suffering, to Perrone, on The Future Life of Man, c. 6; Works, Vol. I. p. 831. Here Perrone gives the passage as from Clement of Rome, without naming the place, but with a general reference to Petavius, De Angelis, l. 2, c. 8.

This gave me no fear that I had been hasty, for I knew that the passage could be found in no genuine work of Clement. Indeed, we have only one short epistle that he wrote; and if the passage were found there, all Christendom would know it.

But the reference to Petavius (the ablest of the Jesuits, and who lived about 200 years ago) enabled me to inquire about the passage, and from a competent scholar I have just received the following note, which may be of literary interest to the readers of the Crisis. I translate a few expressions, as in one instance above, from the Latin.

"An examination of the matter which you wished me to look up does not lead to any conclusions which will be very damaging to your literary reputation, or to your peculiar theological view. I have looked into Petavius, Theol. Dogm., De Angelis, Lib. III. c. 8, § 5, in Vol. III. p. 113 of his Theol. Dogm. Antwerp, 1700, fol., and there find 'Clement of Rome, cited by Damascenus in his Selections, declaring the eternity of the punishments of the lost, says thus:' which is followed by a Latin translation of Mr. Landis's motto. This is given in Greek in a note with the following reference:—'Clemens apud Damasc. litera X. Tit. 1.'

"Joannes Damascenus, who is thus referred to, wrote, as you know, in the eighth century. His 'Eclogæ' or 'Sacra Parallela' consist of a collection of extracts from Scripture and the writings of the various Fathers under various heads, which are arranged in alphabetical order. There are two of these collections in the best edition of Damascenus, that of Le Quien; one contained in a manuscript belonging to the Vatican Library, and another termed the 'Rupefucaldine Parallels,' being found in a manuscript which formerly belonged to the Cardinal François de la Rochefoucauld (Lat. Rupefucaldus). The latter are believed to be the work of a compiler older than Damascenus, one who lived probably in the seventh century. But neither of these as edited by Le Quien, contains the alleged extract from Clement! In the list of writers from which extracts are given in the Eclogæ or Parallela published from the Vatican MS., the name of Clement of Rome does not appear. In the Rupefucaldine Parallels, the spurious 2d Epistle to the Corinthians ascribed to him is cited several times. But the Landis motto is not found. Under the letter X. Tit. 1, 'Of the Soul and the Mind,' there is merely a citation from Irenæus. The edition of Le Quien was published at Paris in 1712, in 2 vols. fol.

"Probably Petavius found this citation either in some edition or some manuscript of Damascenus. But its absence from Le Quien's edition leads one to doubt whether it really belongs to his Eclogæ; it may have been added by some later and unknown hand, as a work of that kind was peculiarly liable to interpolations. If taken from any work ascribed to Clement of Rome, it seems not unlikely to have been derived from the spurious 2d Epistle to the Corinthians, which is several times quoted in the Rupefucaldine Parallels, the genuine Epistle never. So much for the motto!"

I have read the 2d Epistle just referred to, and it contains nothing like the passage. (See Debt and Grace, p. 290.)

Whether Mr. Landis gave the passage without a name because he could find no one responsible for it, he can tell, perhaps, better than any of his readers. But since he has become sponsor and god-father to it, it behoves him to trace it to its source, if that can be done. Whether he shall discover it to be from one of the later Fathers, or from some pseudo-Father, or from the Father of lies (Gen. 3: 4), he is welcome to make the most of it.

C. F. H.

For the Crisis.

The Scriptural Use of the Second Personal Pronoun.

Jesus said to the high priest, "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Matt. 26: 64.

There is no proof here, that the high priest, to whom this language was spoken, will be alive when the Lord comes, or that he in person will ever see the Lord. This passage fails to show that there will ever be a resurrection from the dead of either good or bad. All through the Bible we find the second person used to designate a class. See the 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th chapters of Deut. "When ye shall pass over Jordan." Then Moses goes on to tell them what they should do after they should come into the land, using the words thee, thou, ye and you, extending them on for nearly two thousand years. Not you individuals who hear me speak to-day, but ye, or you—the Jews. So in the New Testament. Matt. 24: 33,—"So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near." 44th verse,—"Therefore be ye also ready." Matt. 28: 20,—"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Luke 21: 31,—"So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." 1 Thess. 5: 4,—"But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." That is, ye, or you brethren who may be alive at that time. So Christ spoke to the high priest as a Jew,—"Hereafter shall ye—Jews—my persecutors, see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven." This passage will be strictly fulfilled though that priest should never have a resurrection.

Rev. 1: 7,—"Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him." This also will be strictly fulfilled, though that one soldier who pierced Christ should never live again. The Jews as a people pierced Christ, and they as a people will be here, as they ever have been, when Christ comes, and of course will see him coming. For this generation is not to pass away till all these things are fulfilled.

J. S. W.

For the Crisis.

S. S. Books and Papers.

BRO. WENDELL:—I notice in the last Crisis an inquiry by Bro. Mansfield about Sunday school books, and am glad that some of the brethren are waking up to the importance of Sabbath school instruction. I wish to say, for the information of brethren and others, that the Mass. Sabbath School Society have a large assortment of books, from which I think there could be a library selected that would suit our Advent brethren. They also frequently have second-hand books, sent them from schools that have got new ones. These they give to destitute, or mission schools. They are some worn, but with good usage will last as long as they have been used. They also publish a Sunday school paper—the "Well Spring"—at 38cts. a year, weekly; three copies for $1.00; 20 copies and upwards, 25 cts. a year. There may be some errors in the doctrine they contain, but it is an easy task for our scrutinizing brethren to point them out, if the children themselves cannot detect them; and I think the lessons in Natural History, Geography, and other sciences, poetry and religious instruction they contain, more than counterbalance the defects. I have received from them, for ten years past, at least one thousand copies a year of back numbers for gratuitous distribution. There is also the "Child's Paper," "Child at Home," "Reaper," (Baptist,) "Sunday School Banner," "S. S. Advocate," (Methodist,) and others, all of which are furnished at a low rate.

And I will say, in conclusion, that any service I can render in furnishing books or papers I can get as donations, or in purchasing new books, I will cheerfully give. There is also a great variety of S. S. Hymn books, and music adapted to children, at all the S. S. depositories in this city. Some with thirty-two pages as low as one cent, each, and but few over twelve-and-a-half cts. I, however, like the suggestion that the brethren take hold of this subject themselves, and compose their own hymns and music, for there must be talent in the church for this as well as for all other exercises. Yours, &c., D. N. SMITH.

74 Franklin St., Boston.

For the Crisis.

"I don't want to love Jesus."

Such was the answer given at a prayer meeting, a few evenings ago, by a young lady whom I had asked if she loved Jesus. "I don't want to love Jesus." I was so astonished at such an answer, that for a moment I knew not what to reply. I could only remark that there may be a time when she would wish that she had loved Jesus. That is an interesting question; and an unanswerable one. Had Jesus not died for her? Had he refused to receive her graciously, and pardon her freely? Had he said that none of his many glorious promises were for her? There is no reason, no, nor the shadow of one, for not loving Jesus.

"Do not want to love Jesus!" How sad the condition of a soul who feels thus. Not love Jesus! He who is the "fairest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely." Is there anything in his character so repulsive that any one should not love him? I think—

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ears."

And how different the feelings of the christian as he exclaims—

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

But what saith the word of God. If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema—Maranatha (accursed at his appearing.) Fearful sentence—yet just.

The christian loves Jesus. He loves his precepts, his commands, his promises, his appearing. Jesus will not compel any one to love him. Man is a free agent, and an accountable being. God has offered every inducement to man to love him, and his Son Jesus Christ. But men will not—not that they can not, but do not want to love God and the Redeemer; like the Jews, to whom Jesus said, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." Mankind will love the world, but not Jesus; they will yield to the flesh, but will not obey Jesus. Happy day when all who live on the earth will delight in loving and serving the Master. Happy day when our hearts will not be pained by such awful words as "I don't want to love Jesus."

It is painful to think there is any mortal man who does not love Jesus—much more so to think that there is any who do not want to. How sublime the answer of Peter to the Master's query, "Lovest thou me?" "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee." And we can all answer the same inquiry as it addresses us:—

"Yes, we love thee and adore,
Oh, for grace to love thee more."

Amen. T. W. S.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2nd, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Thin-edged Devil—A Dream.

Deacon M——, a very good man, long since fallen asleep, had the following dream, as near as I can remember.

He dreamed he saw a body of men marching in close phalanx, led by the singing of a beautiful dove; he noticed they all sang in concert with the dove. He observed behind them a thin-edged devil trying to squeeze in between them; but he could not succeed for some time, for they all kept such perfect step, and walked so close together, that it was impossible for him to find any place. At length one of the company stumbled, just enough to lose one step, which made a very small opening into which the thin-edged devil instantly darted. His presence caused such consternation that those nearest immediately stopped singing, and fell out of the ranks; then others looked around to see what they were doing, when they too lost the step, and thus made place for the thin-edged devil, who lost no time in following up the advantage of their confusion, till he succeeded in breaking up the entire company,—for he observed that they were so disturbed by the presence of this intruder, that they could not, or did not, attend to the song of the dove, and when they stopped singing with him, they immediately left the ranks. He then turned to see what they were doing who first fell out and stopped by the way; and, to his astonishment, he saw them throwing dust and clubs at each other, each supposing the other most to blame for the accident that first disturbed their pleasant march. The rest of the company looked very sad and grieved, and appeared fearful lest the dove should leave them altogether, and they seemed to invite his stay; at this he stopped and hovered over them, so low as to gain the attention of those who were engaged in strife; whereupon he perched on a tree near by, and again struck up a beautiful tune, which made the sad ones look very happy, and they too began again to sing, and immediately to form into a column, so close that the thin-edged devil was completely excluded.

What seemed most remarkable was, their place in the ranks and all seemed to depend upon their singing in concert with the dove; for, as soon as the contending parties listened to the dove, they left off contention, began the tune, and then took their places in the ranks. The music was perfect, melodious, heavenly harmony; the words may be found in Gal. 5: 22.

Palmer, July 20th, 1861. S. F. H.

For the Crisis.

The Present State of Things.

The present is a year productive of surprising events. It is one prolific of revolution, and abounding in great and startling realities. Our own once united and prosperous country is distracted, and resounding with war's alarms, and half a million of Northern and Southern men are preparing to engage in a deadly conflict. Meanwhile all Europe is threatened with one tremendous revolution, growing out of our own, which will shake thrones to their foundation. Russia, China and Japan are ready for revolt, and all the kingdoms of the earth must partake of the wine cup; and old Babylon will come up in remembrance before God, to give unto her her portion of the wrath of God.

The signs of the times are portentous enough, if we remember the words of the Saviour concerning those events which are to come to pass before the end of all things; and also, "be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." We are at least entering upon an important epoch in the history of the world. But thanks be to God, we are not in darkness concerning these things. Prophecy is as a light to the church of God, and we know from the fulfillment of the word the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Lift up your heads, and be glad, ye weary pilgrims. Soon the rightful heir to David's throne will take possession of the earth and reign king of kings forever.

J. E. CLARK.

A Living Faith.

The key to Paul's ministry, upon the human side, is given in these few words, We believe, and therefore speak. His earnestness, boldness, self-denial, his patience, perseverance, enterprise, his fervor in preaching the gospel, are at once accounted for by the fact that he believed it;—believed it as the revelation of God in Christ to save men from their sins; believed it as attested by miracles, by its internal evidences, and by its own moral effects; believed it as commending itself to his conscience; believed it as in harmony with the highest, best judgments of his intellectual nature, and as adapted to the deepest and most urgent wants of his spiritual being; believed it as a system of truth accordant with the character of God, and worthy of his infinite wisdom and love; believed its facts, though lying so much without the sphere of common earthly experience; believed that truths so momentous were worthy to be accompanied by supernatural signs; believed its doctrines, though transcending or contradicting all the wisdom of men—for what man knoweth the things of God? believed its promises, reaching forth into the invisible and the infinite, whither Christ hath entered for us within the vail.

When the genuineness of Paul's apostleship was mooted by false teachers in the church at Corinth, he threw himself upon the testimony of his ministry. Why should he everywhere encounter the hostility of the Jew, the contempt of the world? [illegible]

tion; believe in things not seen and eternal." This "spirit of faith," as the apostle styles it, moved and sustained him; this gave him courage and victory. This is the faith that every missionary needs; that every minister needs; that every christian needs; a faith that clothes Christ's words with reality, and makes them as it were a tangible basis of action. With such a faith in Christ and his truth manifested by all professors, how many would be won by it to believe the gospel; how soon would the gospel be a living, conquering power in all the earth!

For the Crisis.

From Illinois.

Bro. Wendell:—With a full heart I would say to those of like precious faith, the Crisis is a great comfort to us, situated as we are, with scarce any to sympathize with us in our views of Bible truths. Through it we learned that Bro. and Sr. Henry (whom we had never seen) were within twenty miles of us; we wept, we rejoiced, resolved on searching them out the first opportunity, and have had the privilege. Like cold water to a thirsty soul, thank God, we found them not only laboring for the needful things of life, but letting their light shine, and proclaiming the soon coming of Jesus, to give life and immortality to the Israel of God. Within six miles of them we found several other families, and saw several numbers of the "Millenial Harbinger."

Sunday we had the privilege of hearing Sr. H. (as she had an appointment) speak on the blessed hope of the christian, contrasted with the hope of the hypocrite which doth perish. In the forenoon attended the Methodist meeting. The minister very faithfully warned his congregation against listening to, or in any way getting contaminated with, the strange doctrines, as he termed them, that were being promulgated. He labored with all his energy to show that we all have immortality, and we, by patient continuance in well doing, are to seek for it, that we may obtain eternal life. He says Jesus comes at death and rewards his people, and the least of the disembodied spirits know more than all our fraternity. Strange doctrines sure, but to the word and the testimony. Psalms 115: 17, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." 46: 4, "His breath goeth forth; he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Blessed be God for the hope of the resurrection. In consequence of his course, and some of the leading members, their house was closed against this last message to a lost and guilty world. "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." We were forcibly reminded of these words of the Master, "None of those that were bidden shall taste of my supper, neither go in themselves, nor suffer those that would enter to go in." We occupied the school-house opposite the closed church, which was filled, and a goodly number found seats as best they could around the house, and listened with almost breathless silence. Another appointment was given out, by Sr. H. for Tuesday evening. A Baptist minister present kindly offered his house, and an appointment was given out for a meeting in two weeks. May the Lord bless him for this kind deed, and give him the word that will be meat in due season to the household, that he also may proclaim this last message.

We often think of the dear brethren in the eastern states with whom we have formerly often met, and taken sweet counsel together; should rejoice to be with you in your tent meetings. When we think of the distance that separates us, we sometimes weep, and pray God to bless you, and convert souls to go forth into his vineyard, for truly the harvest is great and the laborers few. The Presbyterian minister in our place preaches the soon coming of Jesus, the literal resurrection and the new earth, and the final abode of the saints; for his faithfulness many have turned away, and have another meeting. We feel that there are many honest souls in this region, who, if they should see the evidence, would love the coming of Jesus. We pray the Lord to send some of his faithful servants here, that are wise as serpents and harmless as doves, rightly dividing the word of truth. Your Sister, patiently waiting the return of Jesus to claim his waiting bride.

L. B. Braley.

Carlinville, Macoupin Co., Ill., Aug. 26.

For the Crisis.

Cancer Cure—an Inquiry.

Bro. Wendell:—In behalf of the afflicted will you make the following inquiry? Will some one please inform us who or where the brother is that sometime since advertised in the Crisis that he would cure a cancer? My husband has one on his under lip, and it is very painful and growing fast. We would be glad to get the remedy as soon as possible. If this should meet the eye of the brother that performs the cure, will he please to send us the remedy immediately, and we will send him the sum of money required as soon as we learn his address.

Hiram and L. Mekker[?].

Cleveland, Le Sueur[?] Co., Minn., Sept. 2.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 18, 1861.

Mathematics and Theology.

With the exception of a single section, we have as yet had time to bestow but a cursory glance upon the new work of Bro. Hastings, entitled "Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust." It was the suggestion, we believe, of Dean Swift that it were better to review a book first and read it afterwards, on the ground that reading it first would "prejudice' the mind of the critic! We think there is "a more excellent way," and do not wish prematurely to give our opinion respecting the general character of the work in question. The subject discussed in its pages is one of solemn importance, and since it is, so far as we know, the first work that has appeared having for its specific object the demonstration of the doctrine that all the unholy dead, whose final and irrevocable doom will be literal destruction, are to live again that they may be judged and endure greater or less degrees or periods of suffering,—we bespeak for it the careful and candid attention of all into whose hands it may fall. Long since aware that Bro. H. had begun a work of this kind, and knowing that the views against which it was directed were spreading in every direction among the believers in no immortality out of Christ, we have not always disguised our suspicion that Bro. H.'s omission to put his work to press was to some extent to be accounted for by an unwillingness on his part to submit his arguments to such an investigation as their publication would invite. But the book is now before the public, and the delay in its appearance is explained to have resulted from causes other than the one we have named.

The only section of "Retribution" which we have examined carefully contains references of stinging disparagement to one whom we tenderly love, and who we believe shares largely in the esteem of multitudes of those whom we now address. Justice to an honored servant of God, is only one of the considerations impelling us to notice this matter; our other reasons are, first, a desire to remove what might otherwise prove a hindrance to an impartial investigation of the theme discussed in this new work, and, secondly, to bear our humble testimony against that style of argument which seeks to make capital in its own behalf by pouring contempt upon the advocates of adverse sentiments. In his Preface the author of "Retribution" says: "If I have written earnestly, it is because I am in earnest." So we say in regard to our strictures at this time: we believe, and therefore speak; and though we speak "earnestly," we would do it in christian kindness. We will now give, entire and "verbatim," the 13th section of "Part II" of "Retribution," leaving the emphatic portions as we find them; we quote from pp. 134–138:—

"XIII. It is asserted that if all men are to give account of themselves to God, for every idle word they speak, and every act that they do, 'Then the day of judgment will be a period of more than ten thousand million of years, if we allow only thirty minutes to each individual judged.' Hence it is argued that there can be no retribution to the ungodly, or resurrection and judgment on the unjust.

This quotation, which is made verbatim from the writings of the ablest defender of the doctrine that to the wicked 'death is an eternal sleep;' will show what shifts men are put to when they undertake to contradict the plain, simple statements of the Word of God. The gray hairs of such a man should shield him from contempt, but nothing but the largest charity can excuse or palliate such a statement as that.

Suppose it were true that it would take so long as this, 'if we allow only thirty minutes to each individual judged.' Where does the Scripture say that it will take 'thirty minutes' to judge each individual? Who ever supposed that to be the case? It would seem that the writer's idea of the judgment was formed from a civil tribunal, where juries are empannelled, indictments read, pleadings entered, witnesses examined, and lawyers' wrangling done. And yet many a case is tried there in less than thirty minutes. But who supposes that this time will be required for each individual. Men may be judged by classes, all of a class together. The saints too, shall judge the world, and though this may be understood in the sense of ruling, yet it would hardly agree with the expression that 'we shall judge angels,' and with the fact that Paul, in the connection, is speaking of judging in courts, and of 'going to law before the unjust.'

In God's judgment there will be no lies, no concealment, no hindrance, no false pleadings, no lawyers, arguments, and nothing to cause delay. All will plead guilty who are guilty. And as God can hear a million prayers at once, so he can condemn a million sinners at once. It has been stated by persons who were drowning, or falling from a precipice, that the acts of their whole lives would flash upon their minds in a moment of time; so that every sin they had committed would present itself instantly before them. And if such a review could be taken by finite man, how much more by the infinite God! His ways are not as our ways, nor his thoughts like our thoughts. It would take 'ten thousand million years' for all the men of this world to raise one dead saint to life; shall we then deny that the Lord will raise tens of thousands 'in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.'

But to show the looseness of the statement that, allowing thirty minutes to each person, it would take 'more than ten thousand million of years' to judge each individual, let us look at the facts and figures. There are at present about a thousand million, i. e. a billion of inhabitants in the world. If there had been that number in the earth at the beginning, and if the number had continued undiminished to this day, there being three successive generations in a century for six thousand years, the number of men would have been ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY BILLION; and it would require that number of half hours, on this large supposition, to judge the race. There are SEVENTEEN THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED and [illegible]-two half hours in a year. In one hundred and eighty billion half hours there are contained TEN MILLION, TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX THOUSANDS, NINE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS. The number of leap year days, i. e. one day each four years, in 'ten thousand million years' would give two-thirds enough half hours, for the judgment of the race, allowing the half an hour claimed to each person.

In the 'ten thousand million of years' there is time enough to give each of the race half an hour in which to be judged, and then there will be left a few odd half hours, namely, one hundred and seventy-five trillions, nine hundred and thirty-seven billions, nine hundred and ninety-nine millions, eight hundred and eighty thousand and four ODD HALF HOURS, not needed for the purpose of judging the race. A slight error of time amounting to NINE BILLION, NINE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-NINE MILLION, SEVEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY THREE THOUSAND, AND FORTY-SEVEN YEARS!! This I believe, if I have reckoned right, (and an error of a million of years would be small in comparison with the whole amount,) is the slight mistake in figures committed by this religious teacher who publicly writes, and stereotypes prints with emphasis the statement that 'the day of judgment will a period of more than ten thousand million of years, if we allow only thirty minutes to each individual judged.'

It is said 'figures will not lie,' but that persons may not always tell the truth about figures, is quite evident.

This statement and argument reminds me of a similar one which is often presented by infidels to disprove a resurrection of the dead. A friend* was preaching a few years ago, in a village in Massachusetts upon the resurrection of the dead, when a sceptic, with characteristic impudence, interrupted him in his discourse, and told him that the resurrection of the dead was an impossibility, as there would not be room enough on the earth for the whole race to stand at one time!

It so happened that there was near the desk a blackboard, which had been used in teaching a singing school. The preacher requested them to raise it up, so that all could see it, and when they had done so, he told them he would soon show them how much the man knew about his subject. He then proceeded to say, in substance as follows: 'I will allow for arguments' sake that the world is thirteen thousand two hundred years old; that there have been three generations in each century; that there have consequently been four hundred generations on the earth; and that each generation has numbered as many as the present one, or about eight hundred millions.' He then commenced his figuring, and while the congregation sat, with eyes, and ears, and mouth open, he proceeded to show, first, that upon his very large supposition, there would be only about three hundred and twenty billion of people in all; and second, that every person could find a place in the one State of New York, and have more than four square feet of ground to stand upon. The sceptic looked unutterable things, and made no more speeches in that meeting. The calculation was needlessly large, as I believe all the persons who really have ever lived on the earth, could stand together upon the State of Vermont, and indeed, I think I once calculated that they all could stand within about seventy-five miles of a given point, or within a circle one hundred and fifty miles in diameter.

Such monstrous mathematical blunders are bad enough in infidels, but worse in men who profess to understand and teach Christianity. But the calculations and criticisms in both cases are equally correct and equally worthy of the causes they are used to sustain. Multitudes of people who neither calculate or think will perhaps receive both statements when presented to them, without a question or a doubt.

The sentence quoted in the first paragraph of the foregoing extract is from the writings of Bro. Geo. Storrs, and the history of the passage is as follows. In the Bible Examiner for Oct. 1, 1855, Bro. H. Grew published an article headed, "Will the wicked dead live again?" To this there was a response in the same number by the Editor (Bro. S.), one paragraph of whose article we here give:—

"If the literal construction of this text, and others of similar import, is the true one, then the day of judgment will be a period of more than ten thousand million of years, if we allow only thirty minutes to each individual judged. The sense of the text would seem to be, that none of the wickedness of men is so trifling as to be passed by with indiffrence by our righteous Judge; and that men should live under the influence of that fact."

About one year from this time Bro. S. "wrote, stereotyped and printed" his Essay, "Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again," in which, on p. 60, after citing "Mat. 12: 36, 37," he says: "If the literal construction of this text, and others of similar import, is the true one, then the day of judgment will be a period of more than ten thousand million of years, if we only allow thirty minutes to each individual judged." (Then follows the sentence contained in the fuller citation above.) Thus it will be seen that Bro. S. affirmed that the judgment "period of more than ten thousand million of years" would result, not from the fact that "all men are to give account of themselves to God," but from "the literal construction" of certain texts! We believe it is a settled principle in debate that we have no right to impute to an opponent sentiments which he disclaims, although we may deem them legitimate inferences from positions which he avows. Paul declares, Rom. 14: 12, "every one of us shall give account of himself to God." Bro. S. believes this scripture to be true, though he may believe Bro. H.'s interpretation of it to be false. It also appears from the citations given from Bro. S. that he is unjustly accused as having "argued that there can be no retribution to the ungodly." If being dead eternally is "no retribution to the ungodly," Bro. H.'s representation on this point would have an ample excuse; in which case, however, universal salvation or endless misery—both alike repudiated by him—would follow. In view of the actual fact, viz., that S. and H. both maintain that "eternal death in the literal sense is eternal punishment," we are sorry that the latter "stereotypes" the injurious allegation which erroneously imputes to the former the position "that there can be no retribution to the ungodly." "I have not, I confess," says Bro. H. in his Preface, "that charity which is entirely indifferent to how men think or act; but rather the charity that 'rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the TRUTH.'" We incline, however, to the opinion that if he does not promptly recall some things which his book contains, many of our readers, if not his own, will think him to some extent "indifferent" to "the TRUTH," since there is not a shadow of foundation for the remark which we are now criticizing. Bro. H.'s view of the final and eternal extinction of the wicked will not permit him, as a shelter from rebuke on this point, to assert that the denial of a post-resurrection "judgment on the unjust" involves their entire escape from "retribution." He very well knows that this is not the fact.

* Joseph D. Brown.

We are pained by the insinuation contained in the following remark of Bro. H., "It is said 'figures will not lie,' but that persons may not always tell the truth about figures is quite evident." The plain English of this is, that Bro. S. has done what "it is said figures will not" do! That we do not mistake the animus of this statement, is evident from the previous remark—"The gray hairs of such a man should shield him from contempt, but nothing but the largest charity can excuse or palliate such a statement as that." "Contempt!" Let Mr. Webster tell us what this word means:—"The act of despising; the act of viewing or considering and treating as mean, vile and worthless; disdain; hatred of what is mean or deemed vile. This word is one of the strongest expressions of a mean opinion which the language affords." And from all this "the gray hairs" of Bro. Storrs are to be his only "shield"! Can any one doubt longer that the charge of willful untruth against Bro. S. is intended by the sentence which we have ventured above to interpret? On any other supposition, what need of so much "charity" to "palliate" his "mathematical blunder"? or what propriety in giving him an unenviable pre-eminence over the "sceptic" whose "impudence" furnished Bro. H.'s "friend" an opportunity to show up error on the blackboard? It would be agreeable to our feelings to place in contrast with this estimate of Bro. S.'s character remarks concerning him that were recently made by the Editor of a religious paper in this city, who knows him well, but who differs from him more widely than even Bro. H. on the subject of "retribution." But we pass that to remark upon the error in figures which Bro. H. exposes. In the Examiner for July, 1853, Bro. S. published an article on "The Judgment," in which, calling the number of Adam's posterity, to the end of 6000 years, one hundred and sixty thousand millions, he estimates that the period required to judge the race, allowing one hour to each person, would be "twenty-one millions six hundred thousand years." This article he republished, by request, in the Examiner for March, 1861. Now these facts alone suggest that the "monstrous mathematical blunder" which has now been "stereotyped" the second time, was simply the result of a treacherous memory at the time of replying to Bro. Grew. If this be the true explanation, the "blunder," large as it manifestly is, involves no moral obliquity and in no wise militates against the ability of its perpetrator "to understand and teach Christianity." Probably Bro. H.'s book or this article will give Bro. S. the first intimation of his erroneous reckoning. Why did not Bro. Grew set him right six years ago? Because he did not discover the mistake, we presume. Why did not the writer of this article do it? Because we accepted the statement as correct. Why did not Bro. Hastings himself cause the error to be corrected where it appeared, long before it was embalmed in a "stereotype" plate? Did he prefer to treasure it as a precious morsel, for six years, in order that he might employ it for the purpose which it is now made to serve in his book? Did he think, more recently, that we would be "forbidden by (our) position to speak fully upon" such proceedings in the Crisis? We would remind him that he told us at the late meeting of the "C. P. S." that "books were public property." It appears to us that the mistake in question should have been pointed out to Bro. S., long ago, by the author of "Retribution;" there would still have remained ample materials for as large a book as it can be desirable to print in these hard times. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness." Gal. 6: 1. We do not suppose Bro. H.'s library contains a translation of this text which can be tortured into a justification of his course in the extended extract which we publish from his book.

But enough on this point. We have spoken in behalf of one who has not written us a line since "Retribution" has been published, and who knows nothing of our purpose to notice the book. We ask not his gratitude, for we have only done what seemed to be our duty in this matter, and for the same reason we have no apologies to offer for what we have written. The wise man says: "The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness;" and so long as we revere such instruction, we hope the "gray hairs" of George Storrs will protect him from even a thought on our part of doing anything to deprive him of the place he occupies in the hearts and confidence of thousands who, through his abundant labors, are rejoicing in the truth of "NO IMMORTALITY, NOR ENDLESS LIFE, EXCEPT THROUGH JESUS CHRIST ALONE."

"People who live in glass houses should throw no stones." This aphorism will force itself into our pen as we come to write of the sarcasm which the author of "Retribution" finds it to his purpose to employ in his own reckoning upon long periods. Here, surely, there should be, on his part, no "looseness of statement," and, considering the purpose of his undertaking, "an error of a million of years" may be justly accounted very large. Now we do not wish our readers to spend time in reviewing their knowledge of arithmetic which would be better employed in praying; but if a man possessing Bro. H.'s abilities "to understand and teach Christianity" has been guilty of "monstrous mathematical blunders," and the fact can be made to appear, it will help the readers of his book to think kindly of the error of "ten thousand million of years" in "calculation," even if it fail to establish anything pro or con concerning scripture "criticisms" emanating from the same source. A period of ten years spent in a calling having much to do with figures, has shown us that the most accurate (to which we do not claim to belong,) sometimes make egregious mistakes, and this liability is increased when the numbers embraced in calculations are so enormously large that a glance at the figures will not aid us in detecting errors. When we come to talk of "millions," "billions," and "trillions," the mind can grasp the import of the words only about as well as it can the duration of eternity. Bro. H. is welcome to the benefit of these mitigating circumstances—our regret is that he seems so wanting in leniency towards another whose claim to it is not a whit inferior to his own. But "let us look at the facts and figures":

Bro. Hastings says on p. 136, with an "emphasis" even more emphatic than that which Bro. Storrs employed, that—

"In one hundred and eighty billion half hours there are contained TEN MILLION, TWO HUNDRED and SIXTY-SIX THOUSANDS, NINE HUNDRED and FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS."

We give it as our opinion that this statement contains an error amounting to SEVENTEEN YEARS and that fraction of a year which has 9612 for a numerator and 17,532 for a denominator.

Again: Bro. Hastings says—

"In the 'ten thousand million of years' there is time enough to give each of the race half an hour in which to be judged, and then there will be left a few odd half hours, namely, one hundred and seventy-five trillions, nine hundred and thirty-seven billions, nine hundred and ninety-nine millions, eight hundred and eighty thousand and four ODD HALF HOURS, not needed for the purpose of judging the race."

We give it as our opinion that this statement contains "a slight error of time amounting to" SEVEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SEVEN BILLIONS NINE HUNDRED AND NINETY-NINE MILLIONS EIGHT HUNDRED AND EIGHTY THOUSAND AND FOUR HALF HOURS.

Once more: Bro. Hastings says—

"A slight error of time amounting to NINE BILLION, NINE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY NINE MILLION, SEVEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-THREE THOUSAND, AND FORTY SEVEN YEARS!!"

We give it as our opinion that this statement contains a "blunder" of precisely FORTY-FIVE MILLIONS FIVE HUNDRED AND SIXTEEN THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS and that fraction of a year having 700 for a numerator and 17,532 for a denominator.

If Bro. Hastings be wrong in the particulars we have enumerated, nothing should "shield" him from this correction of his figures;—if we are wrong, we wish our mistakes pointed out to us that we may recall them without delay. Those who are competent to "calculate" as well as "think," will judge between us,—but since neither of us has "gray hairs" to protect him from odium, we may crave the forbearance of all who can appreciate the wide difference between an unchristian motive and a mere "mathematical blunder."

The Camp Meeting.—Bro. Munger informs us that a careful estimate made by himself showed that not less than seven thousand persons were on the ground at Wilbraham, at one time, within the sound of the preacher's voice, on Sunday P. M., 1st inst. It appears, therefore, that the figure we named last week (5000) was much too low: Bro. M.'s long experience in such matters renders his opinion reliable. He says the attendance was never before so large at W. He also communicates the gratifying fact that of the vast concourse of people not one person needed speaking to for disorderly conduct.

"Go thou and do likewise."—On the 13th inst. we received a letter from Eld. J. Hemenway, dated No. Searsport, Me., containing the names of six new subscribers. From this conduct of our dear brother we draw two inferences, viz., 1. that he is himself a good friend to the paper, and 2. that he has a rare gift for making others feel as he does and give a practical form to their feelings. Thank you, James; we hope your example will provoke others to similar good works.

S. S. Papers.—Will Bro. D. N. Smith please send Bro. Phineas White, Jun., New Bedford, samples of newspapers for children. We will pay the postage. See Bro. W.'s letter in another column.

The Hymn—"Christ is all the world to me"—on our first page was sung at the Wilbraham Camp Meeting, and many will be glad to have it in print. It was procured for the Crisis from Bro. Curry by Bro. Ladd.

☞ We are sorry to learn by the last Crisis that our dear Bro. John Howell, of Poultney, Vt., was not expected to live. Bro. Howell has for many long years, labored hard to awaken a slumbering world to the awful fact that the coming of the Lord was drawing nigh, and never being of a robust constitution, we were fully persuaded that it would ere long give way; we were not however, prepared for so severe a blow. If it be the Lord's will we hope that he may live till the dividing heavens reveal Jesus.—Harbinger.

☞ Our latest intelligence concerning Bro. Howell came in a letter of the 11th inst. from Bro. C. S. Sherman, of Castleton, who said that he (Bro. H.) was "slowly improving" but was "very feeble."

The Snare.

"For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth."

The subject of the foregoing passage is the sudden and unexpected character of the coming of Jesus Christ. This event is spoken of as coming "as a thief," and as the lightning, which shows that it will not only come unexpectedly, but suddenly. The various representations of the coming of the "Day of God" show clearly that the masses of mankind will be unprepared—that it will come "as a snare." We should hardly expect this when we consider how much God has done to enlighten the world of the approach of the day of judgment. The various lines of prophecy are designed to set forth clearly this great fact, namely, the time of the "great day" of the Lord. So evident is this, that, unless we shut our eyes to all the developments of God's purpose, as seen in the fulfillment of prophecy, we shall see plainly that the end of time is approaching. What other view can we take of this matter? Consider, for one moment, the rise and fall of the kingdoms of earth, as brought to view in the prophecy of Daniel and John; and is it not plain that, inasmuch as the empires have risen and passed away, and the fourth and last has been divided and subdivided, and its crumbling form is ready to vanish away, that the kingdom of the Redeemer is about to be revealed, when it will smite the image—the kingdoms of earth—breaking them to pieces, thus putting an end to the dynasties of earth, preparatory to commencing his everlasting reign?

The coming of the Saviour is compared to the coming of the flood. And hence the Saviour says, "As it was in the days of Noah," or, "as the days of Noah were," so so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. By days of Noah, is meant the days preceding the flood, during which the world was being warned of the approaching deluge. Noah was a preacher of righteousness, and the presumption is, that the topic on which he dwelt was the destruction of the world of the ungodly. God had told him that man's days should be an "hundred and twenty years," by which he must have understood the length of time by which the existence of that generation was to be bounded. Now, "as it was, so shall it be." The Saviour says "the flood came, and they knew it not." They were taken in the snare. Those who knew not, were taken away, but those who knew, were not taken away. By this we discover that an exemption from the evil depended on the relation indicated by knowing or understanding the purpose of God.

Now, as this history of Noah is referred to, to show it will be in the days "wherein the Son of man cometh," we see the force of the declaration of Christ, "As a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." The class upon whom it shall come as a snare, sustain the same relation to the truth that the antediluvians sustained to the preaching of Noah. And as the ungodly did not know—believe and understand—the truth declared by Noah, and not understanding were taken away, so shall it be with the world of mankind in the days of Christ; they will refuse to believe and obey the truth, and hence, like the antediluvians, shall be destroyed. They will continue to do as always, "eating and drinking"; and in consequence of being overcharged with "surfeiting, drunkenness, and the cares of this life, that day will come upon them unawares. It will be to them what the shower of fire was to the cities of the plain. Indeed, the Saviour says it shall be as in the days of Lot: "But the same day Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." All were lost but Lot and his two daughters. "Even thus shall it be." The comparison is not as to numbers, but to show that those who shall be found ignorant of the truth applicable to their time, or to the days just preceding the coming of the Son of man, will, as in the case of the antediluvians, be destroyed. The knowledge referred to is not simply theoretical, but practical. It is a faith that produces or developes moral character, in harmony with God's law—a faith that makes men, as in the case of Noah, righteous, and hence insures the blessing of God. The ground of the exemption from evil is, an adherence to the admonition, "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." To watch is to escape; to fail in this duty is, or will be, fatal. If vigilant, we shall escape the "things"—the snare; hence, "Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame."

The church are not in "darkness, that that day should overtake them as a thief." They are "the children of the light, and the children of the day. Therefore, let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober." As a snare shall it come. Notwithstanding the proclamation of His coming is heard—the sound has gone forth that the day of vengeance is at hand—that the hour of "his judgment has come,"—yet it shall come as a snare. Notwithstanding the faithful servant will be found giving meat in due season, and the saints will lift up the head, knowing their redemption draweth nigh, yet, it will come as a snare. Notwithstanding the signs in the sun, moon and stars, the "distress of nations with perplexity," the consumption of the "man of sin," the abounding of iniquity, the love of many growing cold, yet these signs being disregarded, the day shall come as "a snare on all that dwell on the face of the whole earth." The farmer, at his market; the merchant, engaged in trade; the miser, counting his gold; the formalist, saying his prayers; the evil servant, smiting;—when suddenly the "voice of the archangel and the trump of God" shall arrest the millions of earth, while they shall "see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with power and great glory." The shouts of triumph of those who, like righteous Noah, stand justified in the sight of God, will welcome the descending Redeemer, while the "evil servant," and those who have been "led away with the error of the wicked," are taken in the snare.

P. H. B.

For the Crisis.

The National Fast.

"If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift." Matt. 5: 23, 24.

Such is the holy and imperative requisition of the Son of God, through whose mediation only our offerings of worship are acceptable to our Father in heaven. He who is welcomed to ascend the holy hill with his offering to the Arbiter of all the nations of the earth, is "he that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness," etc. Ps. 15: 1, 2. Here, then, in the Word which abideth forever, is the duty of the nation plainly announced, before it presumes to come before the Holy One with its offering of fasting and prayer. The nation must remember that four millions of the human brotherhood have somewhat against it. Somewhat! Alas! who can adequately portray the dark scenery of the nation's guilt of vile oppression, protracted in defiance to divine command and long-suffering, until Mercy herself consents that eternal Justice shall be avenged on such a nation as this!

Is it possible that we can be so morally blind and infatuated as to expect the Almighty to repent himself of the evil he has appointed, while we refuse to repent of the sins which require the infliction of the evil? Do we not hear his solemn declaration that "he that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination"?—Prov. 28: 9. Do we not know that his law is to "proclaim liberty throughout all the land to all the inhabitants thereof"?—Lev. 25: 10. "Is not this the fast which I have chosen? (saith the Lord) to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke"?—Isa. 58: 6. "For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy, now will I arise saith the Lord;" etc.—Ps. 12: 5. "Behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."—Isa. 26: 21. Is not this now fulfilled in this guilty land? How then are we to obey the divine injunction to be reconciled to our brother, before we offer our gift of fasting and prayer, that our Father in heaven may turn away his anger from us?

It is most manifest that these commandments of righteousness demand the immediate deliverance from bondage of every slave in the District of Columbia, and in every State of the northern confederacy. The public announcement, also, that God's law shall be obeyed, that no slave shall be delivered unto his master which has escaped from his master unto us. Deut. 23: 15. This is the imperative duty of the people and their rulers. Thus ought we to be reconciled to our outraged brother, before our gift of fasting and prayer is offered to the just and righteous God, who has assured us that "to OBEY is better than sacrifice, and to HEARKEN, than the fat of rams." 1 Sam. 15: 22.

If we refuse, as is to be feared, then while our unholy prayers are presented to the Lord of Sabaoth, the cries of the victims of our oppression, and the clanking of their galling chains, will enter into his ears as a protest against a gracious answer. "We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us." Gen. 42: 21. We may conquer armies; but if, by the grace of God, we do not conquer our sin of oppression, we shall not prosper; for "righteousness (only) exalteth a nation." "We lie down in our shame, and our confusion covereth tion; believe in things not seen and eternal." This "spirit of faith," as the apostle styles it, moved and sustained him; this gave him courage and victory. This is the faith that every missionary needs; that every minister needs; that every christian needs; a faith that clothes Christ's words with reality, and makes them as it were a tangible basis of action. With such a faith in Christ and his truth manifested by all professors, how many would be won by it to believe the gospel; how soon would the gospel be a living, conquering power in all the earth!

For the Crisis.

From Illinois.

Bro. Wendell:—With a full heart I would say to those of like precious faith, the Crisis is a great comfort to us, situated as we are, with scarce any to sympathise with us in our views of Bible truths. Through it we learned that Bro. and Sr. Henry (whom we had never seen) were within twenty miles of us, we wept, we rejoiced, resolved on searching them out the first opportunity, and have had the privilege. Like cold water to a thirsty soul, thank God, we found them not only laboring for the needful things of life, but letting their light shine, and proclaiming the soon coming of Jesus, to give life and immortality to the Israel of God. Within six miles of them we found several other families, and saw several numbers of the "Millenial Harbinger."

Sunday we had the privilege of hearing Sr. H. (as she had an appointment) speak on the blessed hope of the christian, contrasted with the hope of the hypocrite which doth perish. In the forenoon attended the Methodist meeting. The minister very faithfully warned his congregation against listening to, or in any way getting contaminated with, the strange doctrines, as he termed them, that were being promulgated. He labored with all his energy to show that we all have immortality, and we, by patient continuance in well doing, are to seek for it, that we may obtain eternal life. He says Jesus comes at death and rewards his people, and the least of the disembodied spirits know more than all our fraternity. Strange doctrines sure, but to the word and the testimony. Psalms 115 17, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." 46 4. "His breath goeth forth; he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Blessed be God for the hope of the resurrection. In consequence of his course, and some of the leading members, their house was closed against this last message to a lost and guilty world. "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." We were forcibly reminded of these words of the Master, "None of those that were bidden shall taste of my supper, neither go in themselves, nor suffer those that would enter to go in." We occupied the school-house opposite the closed church, which was filled, and a goodly number found seats as best they could around the house, and listened with almost breathless silence. Another appointment was given out, by Sr. H. for Tuesday evening. A Baptist minister present kindly offered his house, and an appointment was given out for a meeting in two weeks. May the Lord bless him for this kind deed, and give him the word that will be meat in due season to the household, that he also may proclaim this last message.

We often think of the dear brethren in the eastern states with whom we have formerly often met, and taken sweet counsel together; should rejoice to be with you in your tent meetings. When we think of the distance that separates us, we sometimes weep, and pray God to bless you, and convert souls to go forth into his vineyard, for truly the harvest is great and the laborers few. The Presbyterian minister in our place preaches the soon coming of Jesus, the literal resurrection and the new earth, and the final abode of the saints; for his faithfulness many have turned away, and have another meeting. We feel that there are many honest souls in this region, who, if they should see the evidence, would love the coming of Jesus. We pray the Lord to send some of his faithful servants here, that are wise as serpents and harmless as doves, rightly dividing the word of truth. Your Sister, patiently waiting the return of Jesus to claim his waiting bride.

L. B. Braley.

Carlinville, Macoupin Co., Ill., Aug. 26.

For the Crisis.

Cancer Cure—an Inquiry.

Bro. Wendell:—In behalf of the afflicted will you make the following inquiry? Will some one please inform us who or where the brother is that sometime since advertised in the Crisis that he would cure a cancer? My husband has one on his under lip, and it is very painful and growing fast. We would be glad to get the remedy as soon as possible. If this should meet the eye of the brother that performs the cure, will he please to send us the remedy immediately, and we will send him the sum of money required as soon as we learn his address.

Hiram and L. Merken.

Cleveland, Le Sueur Co., Minn., Sept. 1.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 18, 1861.

Mathematics and Theology.

With the exception of a single section, we have as yet had time to bestow but a cursory glance upon the new work of Bro. Hastings, entitled "Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust." It was the suggestion, we believe, of Dean Swift that it were better to review a book first and read it afterwards, on the ground that reading it first would "prejudice' the mind of the critic! We think there is "a more excellent way," and do not wish prematurely to give our opinion respecting the general character of the work in question. The subject discussed in its pages is one of solemn importance, and since it is, so far as we know, the first work that has appeared having for its specific object the demonstration of the doctrine that all the unholy dead, whose final and irrevocable doom will be literal destruction, are to live again that they may be judged and endure greater or less degrees or periods of suffering,—we bespeak for it the careful and candid attention of all into whose hands it may fall. Long since aware that Bro. H. had begun a work of this kind, and knowing that the views against which it was directed were spreading in every direction among the believers in no immortality out of Christ, we have not always disguised our suspicion that Bro H.'s omission to put his work to press was to some extent to be accounted for by an unwillingness on his part to submit his arguments to such an investigation as their publication would invite. But the book is now before the public, and the delay in its appearance is explained to have resulted from causes other than the one we have named.

The only section of "Retribution" which we have examined carefully contains references of stinging disparagement to one whom we tenderly love, and who we believe shares largely in the esteem of multitudes of those whom we now address. Justice to an honored servant of God, is only one of the considerations impelling us to notice this matter, our other reasons are, first, a desire to remove what might otherwise prove a hindrance to an impartial investigation of the theme discussed in this new work, and, secondly, to bear our humble testimony against that style of argument which seeks to make capital in its own behalf by pouring contempt upon the advocates of adverse sentiments. In his Preface the author of "Retribution" says: "If I have written earnestly, it is because I am in earnest." So we say in regard to our strictures at this time: we believe, and therefore speak, and though we speak "earnestly," we would do it in christian kindness. We will now give, entire and "verbatim," the 13th section of "Part II" of "Retribution," leaving the emphatic portions as we find them, we quote from pp 134–138:—

"XIII It is asserted that if all men are to give account of themselves to God, for every idle word they speak, and every act that they do, 'Then the day of judgment will be a period of more than ten thousand million of years, if we allow only thirty minutes to each individual judged.' Hence it is argued that there can be no retribution to the ungodly, or resurrection and judgment on the unjust.

This quotation, which is made verbatim from the writings of the ablest defender of the doctrine that to the wicked 'death is an eternal sleep,' will show what shifts men are put to when they undertake to contradict the plain, simple statements of the Word of God. The gray hairs of such a man should shield him from contempt, but nothing but the largest charity can excuse or palliate such a statement as that.

Suppose it were true that it would take so long as this, 'if we allow only thirty minutes to each individual judged.' Where does the Scripture say that it will take 'thirty minutes' to judge each individual? Who ever supposed that to be the case? It would seem that the writer's idea of the judgment was formed from a civil tribunal, where juries are empannelled, indictments read, pleadings entered, witnesses examined, and lawyers wrangling done. And yet many a case is tried there in less than thirty minutes. But who supposes that this time will be required for each individual. Men may be judged by classes, all of a class together. The saints too, shall judge the world, and though this may be understood in the sense of ruling, yet it would hardly agree with the expression that 'we shall judge angels,' and with the fact that Paul, in the connection, is speaking of judging in courts, and of 'going to law before the unjust.'

In God's judgment there will be no lies, no concealment, no hindrance, no false pleadings, no lawyers arguments, and nothing to cause delay. All will plead guilty who are guilty. And as God can hear a million prayers at once, so he can condemn a million sinners at once. It has been stated by persons who were drowning, or falling from a precipice, that the acts of their whole lives would flash upon their minds in a moment of time; so that every sin they had committed would present itself instantly before them. And if such a review could be taken by finite man, how much more by the infinite God! His ways are not as our ways, nor his thoughts like our thoughts. It would take 'ten thousand million years' for all the men of this world to raise one dead saint to life; shall we then deny that the Lord will raise tens of thousands 'in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.'

But to show the looseness of the statement that, allowing thirty minutes to each person, it would take 'more than ten thousand million of years' to judge each individual, let us look at the facts and figures. There are at present about a thousand million, i. e. a billion of inhabitants in the world. If there had been that number in the earth at the beginning, and if the number had continued undiminished to this day, there being three successive generations in a century for six thousand years, the number of men would have been ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY BILLION; and it would require that number of half hours, on this large supposition, to judge the race. There are SEVENTEEN THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-TWO half hours in a year. In one hundred and eighty billion half hours there are contained TEN MILLION, TWO HUNDRED SIXTY-SIX THOUSANDS, NINE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS. The number of leap year days, i. e. one day each four years, in 'ten thousand million years' would give two-thirds enough half hours, for the judgment of the race, allowing the half an hour claimed to each person.

In the 'ten thousand million of years' there is time enough to give each of the race half an hour in which to be judged, and then there will be left a few odd half hours, namely, one hundred and seventy-five trillions, nine hundred and thirty-seven billions, nine hundred and ninety-nine millions, eight hundred and eighty thousand and four ODD HALF HOURS, not needed for the purpose of judging the race. A slight error of time amounting to NINE BILLION, NINE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-NINE MILLION, SEVEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY THREE THOUSAND, AND FORTY-SEVEN YEARS!! This I believe, if I have reckoned right, (and an error of a million of years would be small in comparison with the whole amount,) is the slight mistake in figures committed by this religious teacher who publicly writes, and stereotypes prints with emphasis the statement that 'the day of judgment will a period of more than ten thousand million of years, if we allow only thirty minutes to each individual judged.'

It is said 'figures will not lie,' but that persons may not always tell the truth about figures, is quite evident.

This statement and argument reminds me of a similar one which is often presented by infidels to disprove a resurrection of the dead. A friend* was preaching a few years ago, in a village in Massachusetts upon the resurrection of the dead, when a sceptic, with characteristic impudence, interrupted him in his discourse, and told him that the resurrection of the dead was an impossibility, as there would not be room enough on the earth for the whole race to stand at one time!

It so happened that there was near the desk a blackboard, which had been used in teaching a singing school. The preacher requested them to raise it up, so that all could see it, and when they had done so, he told them he would soon show them how much the man knew about his subject. He then proceeded to say, in substance as follows: 'I will allow for arguments' sake that the world is thirteen thousand two hundred years old, that there have been three generations in each century, that there have consequently been four hundred generations on the earth, and that each generation has numbered as many as the present one, or about eight hundred millions.' He then commenced his figuring, and while the congregation sat, with eyes, and ears, and mouth open, he proceeded to show, first, that upon his very large supposition, there would be only about three hundred and twenty billion of people in all, and second, that every person could find a place in the one State of New York, and have more than four square feet of ground to stand upon. The sceptic looked unutterable things, and made no more speeches in that meeting. The calculation was needlessly large, as I believe all the persons who really have ever lived on the earth, could stand together upon the State of Vermont, and indeed, I think I once calculated that they all could stand within about seventy-five miles of a given point, or within a circle one hundred and fifty miles in diameter.

Such monstrous mathematical blunders are bad enough in infidels, but worse in men who profess to understand and teach Christianity. But the calculations and criticisms in both cases are equally correct and equally worthy of the causes they are used to sustain. Multitudes of people who neither calculate or think will perhaps receive both statements when presented to them, without a question or a doubt."

The sentence quoted in the first paragraph of the foregoing extract is from the writings of Bro. Geo. Storrs, and the history of the passage is as follows. In the Bible Examiner for Oct 1, 1855, Bro. H. Grew published an article headed, "Will the wicked dead live again?" To this there was a response in the same number by the Editor (Bro S.), one paragraph of whose article we here give:—

"If the literal construction of this text, and others of similar import, is the true one, then the day of judgment will be a period of more than ten thousand million of years, if we allow only thirty minutes to each individual judged. The sense of the text would seem to be, that none of the wickedness of men is so trifling as to be passed by with indifference by our righteous Judge, and that men should live under the influence of that fact."

About one year from this time Bro. S. "wrote, stereotyped and printed" his Essay, "Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again," in which, on p. 60, after citing "Mat. 12: 36, 37," he says: "If the literal construction of this text, and others of similar import, is the true one, then the day of judgment will be a period of more than ten thousand million of years, if we only allow thirty minutes to each individual judged." (Then follows the sentence contained in the fuller citation above.) Thus it will be seen that Bro. S. affirmed that the judgment "period of more than ten thousand million of years" would result, not from the fact that "all men are to give account of themselves to God," but from "the literal construction" of certain texts! We believe it is a settled principle in debate that we have no right to impute to an opponent sentiments which he disclaims, although we may deem them legitimate inferences from positions which he avows. Paul declares, Rom. 14: 12, "every one of us shall give account of himself to God." Bro. S. believes this scripture to be true, though he may believe Bro. H.'s interpretation of it to be false. It also appears from the citations given from Bro. S. that he is unjustly accused as having "argued that there can be no retribution to the ungodly." If being dead eternally is "no retribution to the ungodly," Bro. H.'s representation on this point would have an ample excuse; in which case, however, universal salvation or endless misery—both alike repudiated by him—would follow. In view of the actual fact, viz., that S. and H. both maintain that "eternal death in the literal sense is eternal punishment," we are sorry that the latter "stereotypes" the injurious allegation which erroneously imputes to the former the position "that there can be no retribution to the ungodly." "I have not, I confess," says Bro. H. in his Preface, "that charity which is entirely indifferent to how men think or act; but rather the charity that 'rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the TRUTH.'"

We incline, however, to the opinion that if he does not promptly recall some things which his book contains, many of our readers, if not his own, will think him to some extent "indifferent" to "the TRUTH," since there is not a shadow of foundation for the remark which we are now criticizing. Bro. H.'s view of the final and eternal extinction of the wicked will not permit him, as a shelter from rebuke on this point, to assert that the denial of a post-resurrection "judgment on the unjust" involves their entire escape from "retribution." He very well knows that this is not the fact.

We are pained by the insinuation contained in the following remark of Bro. H., "It is said 'figures will not lie,' but that persons may not always tell the truth about figures is quite evident." The plain English of this is, that Bro. S. has done what "it is said figures will not" do! That we do not mistake the animus of this statement, is evident from the previous remark—"The gray hairs of such a man should shield him from contempt, but nothing but the largest charity can excuse or palliate such a statement as that." "Contempt!" Let Mr. Webster tell us what this word means:—"The act of despising; the act of viewing or considering and treating as mean, vile and worthless, disdain; hatred of what is mean or deemed vile. This word is one of the strongest expressions of a mean opinion which the language affords." And from all this "the gray hairs" of Bro. Storrs are to be his only "shield"! Can any one doubt longer that the charge of willful untruth against Bro. S. is intended by the sentence which we have ventured above to interpret? On any other supposition, what need of so much "charity" to "palliate" his "mathematical blunder"? or what propriety in giving him an unenviable pre-eminence over the "sceptic" whose "impudence" furnished Bro. H.'s "friend" an opportunity to show up error on the blackboard? It would be agreeable to our feelings to place in contrast with this estimate of Bro. S.'s character remarks concerning him that were recently made by the Editor of a religious paper in this city, who knows him well, but who differs from him more widely than even Bro. H. on the subject of "retribution." But we pass that to remark upon the error in figures which Bro H. exposes. In the Examiner for July, 1853, Bro. S. published an article on "The Judgment," in which, calling the number of Adam's posterity, to the end of 6000 years, one hundred and sixty thousand millions, he estimates that the period required to judge the race, allowing one hour to each person, would be "twenty-one millions six hundred thousand years." This article he republished, by request, in the Examiner for March, 1861. Now these facts alone suggest that the "monstrous mathematical blunder" which has now been "stereotyped" the second time, was simply the result of a treacherous memory at the time of replying to Bro. Grew. If this be the true explanation, the "blunder," large as it manifestly is, involves no moral obliquity and in no wise militates against the ability of its perpetrator "to understand and teach Christianity." Probably Bro. H.'s book or this article will give Bro. S. the first intimation of his erroneous reckoning. Why did not Bro. Grew set him right six years ago? Because he did not discover the mistake, we presume. Why did not the writer of this article do it? Because we accepted the statement as correct. Why did not Bro. Hastings himself cause the error to be corrected where it appeared, long before it was embalmed in a "stereotype" plate? Did he prefer to treasure it as a precious morsel, for six years, in order that he might employ it for the purpose which it is now made to serve in his book? Did he think, more recently, that we would be "forbidden by (our) position to speak fully upon" such proceedings in the Crisis? We would remind him that he told us at the late meeting of the "C. P. S." that "books were public property." It appears to us that the mistake in question should have been pointed out to Bro. S., long ago, by the author of "Retribution;" there would still have remained ample materials for as large a book as it can be desirable to print in these hard times. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness." Gal. 6: 1. We do not suppose Bro. H.'s library contains a translation of this text which can be tortured into a justification of his course in the extended extract which we publish from his book.

But enough on this point. We have spoken in behalf of one who has not written us a line since "Retribution" has been published, and who knows nothing of our purpose to notice the book. We ask not his gratitude, for we have only done what seemed to be our duty in this matter, and for the same reason we have no apologies to offer for what we have written. The wise man says: "The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness;" and so long as we revere such instruction, we hope the "gray hairs" of George Storrs will protect him from even a thought on our part of doing anything to deprive him of the place he occupies in the hearts and confidence of thousands who, through his abundant labors, are rejoicing in the truth of "NO IMMORTALITY, NOR ENDLESS LIFE, EXCEPT THROUGH JESUS CHRIST ALONE."

"People who live in glass houses should throw no stones." This aphorism will force itself into our pen as we come to write of the sarcasm which the author of "Retribution" finds it to his purpose to employ in his own reckoning upon long periods. Here, surely, there should be, on his part, no "looseness of statement," and, considering the purpose of his undertaking, "an error of a million of years" may be justly accounted very large. Now we do not wish our readers to spend time in reviewing their knowledge of arithmetic which would be better employed in praying; but if a man possessing Bro. H.'s abilities "to understand and teach Christianity" has been guilty of "monstrous mathematical blunders," and the fact can be made to appear, it will help the readers of his book to think kindly of the error of "ten thousand million of years" in "calculation," even if it fail to establish anything pro or con concerning scripture "criticisms" emanating from the same source. A period of ten years spent in a calling having much to do with figures, has shown us that the most accurate (to which we do not claim to belong,) sometimes make egregious mistakes, and this liability is increased when the numbers embraced in calculations are so enormously large that a glance at the figures will not aid us in detecting errors. When we come to talk of "millions," "billions," and "trillions," the mind can grasp the import of the words only about as well as it can the duration of eternity. Bro. H. is welcome to the benefit of these mitigating circumstances—our regret is that he seems so wanting in leniency towards another whose claim to it is not a whit inferior to his own. But "let us look at the facts and figures":

Bro. Hastings says on p. 136, with an "emphasis" even more emphatic than that which Bro. Storrs employed, that—

"In one hundred and eighty billion half hours there are contained TEN MILLION, TWO HUNDRED and SIXTY SIX THOUSANDS, NINE HUNDRED and FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS."

We give it as our opinion that this statement contains an error amounting to SEVENTEEN YEARS and that fraction of a year which has 9612 for a numerator and 17,532 for a denominator.

Again: Bro. Hastings says—

"In the 'ten thousand million of years' there is time enough to give each of the race half an hour in which to be judged, and then there will be left a few odd half hours, namely, one hundred and seventy-five trillions, nine hundred and thirty-seven billions, nine hundred and ninety-nine millions, eight hundred and eighty thousand and four ODD HALF HOURS, not needed for the purpose of judging the race."

We give it as our opinion that this statement contains "a slight error of time amounting to" SEVEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SEVEN BILLIONS NINE HUNDRED AND NINETY-NINE MILLIONS EIGHT HUNDRED AND EIGHTY THOUSAND AND FOUR HALF HOURS.

Once more: Bro. Hastings says—

"A slight error of time amounting to NINE BILLION, NINE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY NINE MILLION, SEVEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-THREE THOUSAND, AND FORTY SEVEN YEARS!!!"

We give it as our opinion that this statement contains a "blunder" of precisely FORTY-FIVE MILLIONS FIVE HUNDRED AND SIXTEEN THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS and that fraction of a year having 700 for a numerator and 17,532 for a denominator.

If Bro. Hastings be wrong in the particulars we have enumerated, nothing should "shield" him from this correction of his figures;—if we are wrong, we wish our mistakes pointed out to us that we may recall them without delay. Those who are competent to "calculate" as well as "think," will judge between us,—but since neither of us has "gray hairs" to protect him from odium, we may crave the forbearance of all who can appreciate the wide difference between an unchristian motive and a mere "mathematical blunder."

The Camp Meeting.—Bro. Munger informs us that a careful estimate made by himself showed that not less than seven thousand persons were on the ground at Wilbraham, at one time, within the sound of the preacher's voice, on Sunday P. M., 1st inst. It appears, therefore, that the figure we named last week (5000) was much too low: Bro. M.'s long experience in such matters renders his opinion reliable. He says the attendance was never before so large at W. He also communicates the gratifying fact that of the vast concourse of people not one person needed speaking to for disorderly conduct.

"Go thou and do likewise."—On the 13th inst. we received a letter from Eld. J. Hemenway, dated No. Searsport, Me., containing the names of six new subscribers. From this conduct of our dear brother we draw two inferences, viz., 1. that he is himself a good friend to the paper, and 2. that he has a rare gift for making others feel as he does and give a practical form to their feelings. Thank you, James; we hope your example will provoke others to similar good works.

S. S. Papers.—Will Bro. D. N. Smith please send Bro. Phineas White, Jun., New Bedford, samples of newspapers for children. We will pay the postage. See Bro. W.'s letter in another column.

The Hymn—"Christ is all the world to me"—on our first page was sung at the Wilbraham Camp Meeting, and many will be glad to have it in print. It was procured for the Crisis from Bro. Curry by Bro. Ladd.

☞ We are sorry to learn by the last Crisis that our dear Bro. John Howell, of Poultney, Vt., was not expected to live. Bro. Howell has for many long years, labored hard to awaken a slumbering world to the awful fact that the coming of the Lord was drawing nigh, and never being of a robust constitution, we were fully persuaded that it would ere long give way; we were not however, prepared for so severe a blow. If it be the Lord's will we hope that he may live till the dividing heavens reveal Jesus.—Harbinger.

☞ Our latest intelligence concerning Bro. Howell came in a letter of the 11th inst. from Bro. C. S. Sherman, of Castleton, who said that he (Bro. H.) was "slowly improving" but was "very feeble."

The Snare.

"For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth."

The subject of the foregoing passage is the sudden and unexpected character of the coming of Jesus Christ. This event is spoken of as coming "as a thief," and as the lightning, which shows that it will not only come unexpectedly, but suddenly. The various representations of the coming of the "Day of God" show clearly that the masses of mankind will be unprepared—that it will come "as a snare." We should hardly expect this when we consider how much God has done to enlighten the world of the approach of the day of judgment. The various lines of prophecy are designed to set forth clearly this great fact, namely, the time of the "great day" of the Lord. So evident is this, that, unless we shut our eyes to all the developments of God's purpose, as seen in the fulfillment of prophecy, we shall see plainly that the end of time is approaching. What other view can we take of this matter? Consider, for one moment, the rise and fall of the kingdoms of earth, as brought to view in the prophecy of Daniel and John; and is it not plain that, inasmuch as the empires have risen and passed away, and the fourth and last has been divided and subdivided, and its crumbling form is ready to vanish away, that the kingdom of the Redeemer is about to be revealed, when it will smite the image—the kingdoms of earth—breaking them to pieces, thus putting an end to the dynasties of earth, preparatory to commencing his everlasting reign?

The coming of the Saviour is compared to the coming of the flood. And hence the Saviour says, "As it was in the days of Noah," or, "as the days of Noah were," so so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. By days of Noah, is meant the days preceding the flood, during which the world was being warned of the approaching deluge. Noah was a preacher of righteousness, and the presumption is, that the topic on which he dwelt was the destruction of the world of the ungodly. God had told him that man's days should be an "hundred and twenty years," by which he must have understood the length of time by which the existence of that generation was to be bounded. Now, "as it was, so shall it be." The Saviour says "the flood came, and they knew it not." They were taken in the snare. Those who knew not, were taken away, but those who knew, were not taken away. By this we discover that an exemption from the evil depended on the relation indicated by knowing or understanding the purpose of God.

Now, as this history of Noah is referred to, to show it will be in the days "wherein the Son of man cometh," we see the force of the declaration of Christ, "As a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." The class upon whom it shall come as a snare, sustain the same relation to the truth that the antediluvians sustained to the preaching of Noah. And as the ungodly did not know—believe and understand—the truth declared by Noah, and not understanding were taken away, so shall it be with the world of mankind in the days of Christ; they will refuse to believe and obey the truth, and hence, like the antediluvians, shall be destroyed. They will continue to do as always, "eating and drinking"; and in consequence of being overcharged with "surfeiting, drunkenness, and the cares of this life, that day will come upon them unawares. It will be to them what the shower of fire was to the cities of the plain. Indeed, the Saviour says it shall be as in the days of Lot: "But the same day Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." All were lost but Lot and his two daughters. "Even thus shall it be." The comparison is not as to numbers, but to show that those who shall be found ignorant of the truth applicable to their time, or to the days just preceding the coming of the Son of man, will, as in the case of the antediluvians, be destroyed. The knowledge referred to is not simply theoretical, but practical. It is a faith that produces or developes moral character, in harmony with God's law—a faith that makes men, as in the case of Noah, righteous, and hence insures the blessing of God. The ground of the exemption from evil is, an adherence to the admonition, "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." To watch is to escape; to fail in this duty is, or will be, fatal. If vigilant, we shall escape the "things"—the snare; hence, "Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame."

The church are not in "darkness, that that day should overtake them as a thief." They are "the children of the light, and the children of the day. Therefore, let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober." As a snare shall it come. Notwithstanding the proclamation of His coming is heard—the sound has gone forth that the day of vengeance is at hand—that the hour of "his judgment has come,"—yet it shall come as a snare. Notwithstanding the faithful servant will be found giving meat in due season, and the saints will lift up the head, knowing their redemption draweth nigh, yet, it will come as a snare. Notwithstanding the signs in the sun, moon and stars, the "distress of nations with perplexity," the consumption of the "man of sin," the abounding of iniquity, the love of many growing cold, yet these signs being disregarded, the day shall come as "a snare on all that dwell on the face of the whole earth." The farmer, at his market; the merchant, engaged in trade; the miser, counting his gold; the formalist, saying his prayers; the evil servant, smiting;—when suddenly the "voice of the archangel and the trump of God" shall arrest the millions of earth, while they shall "see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with power and great glory." The shouts of triumph of those who, like righteous Noah, stand justified in the sight of God, will welcome the descending Redeemer, while the "evil servant," and those who have been "led away with the error of the wicked," are taken in the snare.

F. H. B.

For the Crisis.

The National Fast.

"If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift." Matt. 5: 23, 24.

Such is the holy and imperative requisition of the Son of God, through whose mediation only our offerings of worship are acceptable to our Father in heaven. He who is welcomed to ascend the holy hill with his offering to the Arbiter of all the nations of the earth, is "he that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness," etc. Ps. 15: 1, 2. Here, then, in the Word which abideth forever, is the duty of the nation plainly announced, before it presumes to come before the Holy One with its offering of fasting and prayer. The nation must remember that four millions of the human brotherhood have somewhat against it. Somewhat! Alas! who can adequately portray the dark scenery of the nation's guilt of vile oppression, protracted in defiance to divine command and long-suffering, until Mercy herself consents that eternal Justice shall be avenged on such a nation as this!

Is it possible that we can be so morally blind and infatuated as to expect the Almighty to repent himself of the evil he has appointed, while we refuse to repent of the sins which require the infliction of the evil? Do we not hear his solemn declaration that "he that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination"?—Prov. 28: 9. Do we not know that his law is to "proclaim liberty throughout all the land to all the inhabitants thereof"?—Lev. 25: 10. "Is not this the fast which I have chosen? (saith the Lord) to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke"?—Isa. 58: 6. "For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy now will I arise saith the Lord;" etc.—Ps. 12: 5. "Behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."—Isa. 26: 21. Is not this now fulfilled in this guilty land? How then are we to obey the divine injunction to be reconciled to our brother, before we offer our gift of fasting and prayer, that our Father in heaven may turn away his anger from us?

It is most manifest that these commandments of righteousness demand the immediate deliverance from bondage of every slave in the District of Columbia, and in every State of the northern confederacy. The public announcement, also, that God's law shall be obeyed, that no slave shall be delivered unto his master which has escaped from his master unto us. Deut. 23 15. This is the imperative duty of the people and their rulers. Thus ought we to be reconciled to our outraged brother, before our gift of fasting and prayer is offered to the just and righteous God, who has assured us that "to OBEY is better than sacrifice, and to HEARKEN than the fat of rams." 1 Sam. 15: 22.

If we refuse, as is to be feared, then while our unholy prayers are presented to the Lord of Sabaoth, the cries of the victims of our oppression, and the clanking of their galling chains, will enter into his ears as a protest against a gracious answer. "We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us." Gen. 42: 21. We may conquer armies; but if, by the grace of God, we do not conquer our sin of oppression, we shall not prosper; for "righteousness (only) exalteth a nation." "We lie down in our shame, and our confusion covereth us: for we have sinned against the Lord our God, we and our fathers from our youth even unto this day, and have not obeyed the voice of our God." Jer. 3: 25.

* Joseph D. Brown.

HENRY GREW.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10, 1861.

For the Crisis.

That New Book, "Retribution,"

For which there were so many inquiries at Wilbraham, but which was unavoidably delayed, is now ready. It is a neat 12mo, of nearly 160 pages, stereotyped from new type, and bound in stiff enamelled paper covers. None are bound in cloth at present. Some may be by and by.

The book is in two parts; the first simply presents the Scripture doctrine of Retribution, or God's repayment for sin, without controversy, and in a form adapted to general circulation. The second part takes up the special mistakes and errors of the "no resurrection of the wicked" theory, and applies the sword of the spirit to them.

I have been driven to publish this by the constant efforts made to press the matter upon those who preferred peace to contention. The substance of the book was written in 1857, and has since lain in the drawer in the hope that there would be no need of going into the controversy. Advantage has been taken of this pacific disposition. It has been claimed that no one could answer the arguments, and they dare not try, and I have been told I dare not publish my argument. So when convinced that duty required it, I have published the book, praying for God's blessing on it. I do not do it for controversy's sake. I heard of one man who thought controversy was God's means of preserving truth in the world, and proved it by Paul's disputing in the school of one Tyrannus. Well, I don't believe it, but have it so, if you will, and if you please to turn Pharisees, heathens, or philosophers, like those in the school of Tyrannus, I will dispute with you as Paul did with them, and teach what he taught, "righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come," and "the resurrection of the dead, just and unjust." But those who fought Paul did not claim to be his dear brethren, nor to be teachers of Christ's gospel. I prefer Testimony to controversy. I have here employed both. But the book will speak for itself. I have got the means to publish it partly by borrowing, partly by selling rare and valuable books from my own library, and partly I am in debt for it now. I have done this because I thought it duty. I wish to dispose of the whole edition speedily, hence I offer it at the following rates:—

To all deniers of the resurrection of the unjust who will send to me for it, pay postage on it, (about 10 cts) and read it, I will send it FREE. To God's poor and to preachers unable to buy it conveniently, I will send it FREE.

To those able to pay, single copies, post paid, will be 38 cts.

"	Three copies, post paid,	$1.00.
"	Four copies, by express.	1.00.
"	Thirteen copies, by express	3 00
"	Fifty " "	10.00
"	One hundred " "	18.00

Send orders, with the cash, to H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

Sept. 7th, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Bro. Reimer and his Tracts.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—As I have moved to Manayunk lately, I wish you would let the readers of your "Crisis" know it, in case some of them should send in orders for my "German tract." They may address Mr. Chas. Sutton, Manayunk, as this Bro. lives next door to me but one.

I would be very glad if some readers of the Crisis could help me to publish my second Tract. I have four or five more ready for publication. Fifteen dollars would cover the expenses. I know times are very hard, but if any one who feels an interest in having spread the true gospel of Jesus Christ among the German population of this country, could send in a mite, a great deal of good might be done for the thousands of Germans in this country. Next week or so, I shall send the money which I owe for my Crisis, and some other brethren, which I send in as subscribers. I am very poor at present. Yours in Christ,

L. REIMER.

Philadelphia, Aug. 24, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Light Wanted.

BRO. WENDELL:—In a little work by our dear brother, Henry Grew, entitled, "An examination of the Divine Testimony on the Nature and Character of the Son of God," in a foot note, page 32, I find the following passage: "'The first born of every creature,' the 'first begotten' was a spirit, 'the image of the invisible God.' This Spirit, or Word, was made flesh, i. e., united to the body 'prepared' for him, and in connection therewith, humbled himself, was 'made like unto his brethren.'" Now I do not know that I clearly or correctly apprehend Bro. Grew. Please allow me to ask him, through the Crisis, am I to understand that it was this uniting of spirit and body that constituted his "being made like," etc.; or did his being "susceptible of our feelings and infirmities," and his being "tempted in all points as we are," constitute the likeness? If the latter, then all is clear, easy and harmonious with our views; but if the former, then, inasmuch as his spirit or HE was a conscious, acting, intelligent being, independent of that body, or before he was "united to it," how shall I deny what some affirm, that his brethren, (i. e., their spirits,) are not also conscious, acting, intelligent beings, after they are separated from the bodies to which they have been united? On the Sonship I should have no controversy with Bro G.; but on the above named point of "being made like," it strikes me there is a principle involved that we should look to. If true in the first sense, it would not, by parity of reason, prove immortality, because Paul says, "it was Christ that died;" therefore we (in spirit) might also die. But would it not be a very strong inferential argument of the condition of man's spirit between death and the judgment, and have a direct bearing on the case of the thief on the cross, Stephen, Paul's being "unclothed," "desire to depart," "be with Christ," etc.

Olena, Ohio. G. W. STETSON.

For the Crisis.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—I enclose an article which I cut from the Boston Journal called "a curious calculation." I do not think it very curious, because I have seen one very similar before, but I think it answers an argument which I have heard brought against the beautiful truth that the saints of God will ultimately dwell upon the "new earth." One man scoffingly said that he should "hate to be in the ground tier." I thought that perhaps you might think favorably of inserting the article in the Crisis, with some remarks of your own. I have not seen much upon this subject very lately. Yours respectfully,

C. E. SCRIBNER.

Topsham, Me., Aug. 24, 1861.

CURIOUS CALCULATION.—The vast number of inhabitants who do live, and have lived, upon the face of the earth, appear, at first sight, to defy the powers of calculation. But if we suppose the world to have existed six thousand years, that there now exist one thousand million; that a generation passes away in thirty years, that every past generation averages the present, and that four individuals may stand on one square yard, we find that the whole number will not occupy a compass so great as one-fourth the extent of England. Allowing six thousand years since the creation, and a generation to pass away in thirty years, we shall have two hundred generations, which, at one thousand millions each, will be two hundred thousand millions, which being divided by four persons to a square yard, will leave fifty thousand millions of square yards; there are in a square mile three millions, ninety-seven thousand, six hundred square yards, by which if the former sum be divided, it will give sixteen thousand one hundred and thirty-three square miles, the root of which, in whole numbers, is about one hundred and twenty-seven, so that one hundred and twenty-seven miles square will be found sufficient to contain the immense and almost inconceivable number of two hundred thousand millions of human beings.

Death of Eld. Wm. G. Proctor.

This estimable brother died at Cicero, Indiana, on the 15th of Aug., after a painful illness of several weeks, in the full possession of his mental faculties, and strong in the faith for which he had for many years been a distinguished advocate.

Bro. Proctor was one of the best of men, and his loss will be seriously felt by the brethren in Indiana. The writer of this obituary knew him long and intimately, and can bear testimony to his sterling integrity and moral worth. He was a kind, affectionate, and forgiving christian, modest and unostentatious in his manner, but firm and uncompromising in his principles. He would stand by the right, and do his duty regardless of consequences. No man ever possessed a larger amount of moral courage than Bro. Proctor. He was bold, frank and fearless in the avowal of his convictions; and though all might differ from him and oppose him, he would not yield his conscientious opinions to popular clamor. He took deep interest in the dissemination of the distinctive views we hold, and his labor in the ministry contributed greatly to consolidate and systematize our cause in Indiana. He was a fellow laborer in whom I could confide under all circumstances, who would make any sacrifice for the truth. Sincerely do I deplore his loss; but the will of the Lord be done.

—N. FIELD.—Harbinger.

Troubles Abroad.

The Boston Journal of the 17th inst. has an editorial on this subject which will be perused with interest by our readers. We give the article entire:—

"It is no relief from our own national troubles to turn to those of other countries, but it gives us juster views and a more patient spirit to reflect that ours is no exceptional case, but that apprehension and disturbance constitute the rule among the nations of the earth, rather than security and tranquility.

To the South of us, Mexico lies in her chronic condition of internal warfare. Her capital, lately invaded, has been freed from the immediate danger of attack by hard fighting on all sides; but success in the field seems only to lead to feuds among the victors, so that security is never to be reckoned among the fruits of triumph. Farther on, New Granada has just gone through with a revolution, somewhat bloody, but probably bootless. Among the States of South America there is hardly one but has its internal troubles, although they are of so little concern to the rest of the world as, in general, to pass unnoticed.

Looking upon Europe we behold the two great governments of England and France in a state of apparent peace and professed security—and yet the former is bristling with riflemen and steel-plated frigates, and the latter bears the tramp of more soldiers and army horses than this country does at this moment, having added within twelve months six millions of dollars to her warlike expenditures. Some nations had rather be plunged into actual fighting than to be subjected to such onerous preparations.

The great empire of Austria is drifting upon dissolution, or upon the bloody assertion of its despotic claims. Of its thirty five millions of subjects, sixteen millions refuse to accept the new constitution and to send members to the Imperial Council. Italy will wait no longer than spring for the release of Venetia, by sale or otherwise, from the grasp of the Hapsburgs; and if Hungary postpones open revolt to that period, it will only be from motives of policy. The estrangement seems to have gone beyond remedy, but the prospect of a combined attack on two sides of Austria is a great inducement to patience on the part of the Hungarian leaders.

In Italy, Cialdini is crushing out brigandage and reactionary demonstrations with a vigor which the friends of the union in this country may well emulate. The Pope's troubles continue, and may be immensely aggravated some morning by the withdrawal of that staff of the French military support, on which he has hitherto leaned for his existence as a sovereign. In the north of Europe, the Russian difficulties with Poland threaten momentarily to break out into conflict, and the commotions excited by the Emperor's emancipation scheme are unabated. The Holstein quarrel is so far from being composed, that it was noticeable that the last public declaration of the King of Denmark was the first implication of expected war that has passed his lips. In the eastern part of the continent, Omar Pasha is carrying on a vigorous warfare against the insurgents of Montenegro.

And so it is the world over—a world, if not "lying in wickedness," yet surely not exempt anywhere from troubles and all the dangers of bloodshed. Even the "gorgeous East" is passing through the ordeal of terrible revolution. Japan is the theatre of the conflict between the powers of light and friendly intercourse. China is prolific in mysterious disturbances, and our last advices tell us of a new insurrection near Pekin, and of the breaking up of commerce beneath the fitful blows of imperial and rebel successes. While, then, we behold the nations of the earth subject to the extremes of afflicting plagues—to the fire running along the ground, or the darkness that may be felt—why should we wonder that our long and unexampled prosperity has at last been interrupted for a season? It is only to try our manhood and to temper all the qualities which enter into the composition of a great and useful people—and let us see that we abide the test."

Correspondence.

From Sr. S. E. Daggett.

BRO. WENDELL:—I seat myself to drop a line to the readers of the Crisis. I am led to rejoice as I read of the dealings of God with friends in different parts of the land. I for one expect the speedy coming of our Lord to set up his kingdom on the earth, and I thank God that I ever heard this glad news. We need on the whole armor in these trying times. Are we doing all we can for the cause of God? Are we all ready to face a scoffing world? I pray God that you and I, dear reader, may not be ashamed to let the world know that we are for Christ. I am living where I never hear the soon coming of Christ preached. Here at Fisherville there are only two Adventists beside me, so all that we have to cheer us on beside the word of God is what we gather from the columns of the Crisis. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for me that we may all meet in the kingdom at last. I feel a sweet peace in my soul that the world cannot give. Let us prove faithful a little longer for we shall soon reach home and be at rest. Yours looking for Jesus' coming.

Fisherville, Ct.

From Sister H. E. Wright.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—We appreciate the Crisis very much. It has been our only preacher of the present truth, until Bro. Chandler came here last May. His coming greatly rejoiced our hearts, and comforted us. His preaching here has taken deep hold of the minds of many. Many eyes have been opened to see the truth, and some hearts to receive it. We hope and expect he will be with us again soon, to minister to our many wants. I feel that we are living in perilous times, but for one I can say, my hope and trust is still in God. His promise is sure, and I know if I am faithful he will take care of me, and at last take me home to rest. Pray for me, that my faith fail not. Your sister in hope.

Cascade, Iowa.

From Bro. T. W. Smith.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—Enclosed please find stamps for Bro. Hudson's tract. I wish I had ability to send for a hundred. I believe it would be my delight did I possess the means to puchase and scatter like "autumnal leaves" these precious little [illegible]. As soon as possible I will remit you some money for the Crisis. I like the Crisis; could not possibly do without it. I never appreciated a religious paper as I do it. I have read a large number of the different papers published in our land. But I can truly say, the Crisis is the best. I can scarcely wait until it comes. May the Lord grant you grace to discharge your arduous duties successfully; and may the Crisis live and grow until Jesus comes. Yours truly and fraternally.

Philadelphia.

From Bro. P. White, Jr.

BRO. WENDELL:—I would be glad to get some good Child's paper for our Sabbath School, and would like to see some of the best there are published. Will you be kind enough to collect a few specimens and send me for samples to examine? or send me what you think is the best one of all for our people, and oblige your brother.

P. S.—Sister Hazzard told me you contemplated making us a visit. We shall be extremely glad to see you, and hope you will find it convenient to come soon. P. W.

New Bedford, Sept. 12, 1861.

Selections by J. S. White.

TWO CHRISTIANS.—Two good men on some occasion had a warm dispute; and remembering the exhortation of the apostle, "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath," just before sunset, one of them went to the other, and knocking at the door, his offended friend came and opened it, and seeing who it was, started back in astonishment and surprise; the other at the same time, cried out, "The sun is almost down." This unexpected salutation softened the heart of his friend into affection, and he returned for answer, "Come in, brother, come in." What a happy method of conciliating matters, of redressing grievances, and of reconciling brethren!

ANECDOTE.—James I, of England, went out of his way to hear a noted preacher. The clergyman, seeing the king enter, left his text to declaim against swearing, for which the king was notorious. When done, James thanked him for his sermon; but asked him what connection swearing had with his text. He answered, "since your majesty came out of your way through curiosity to meet me, I could not, in complaisance, do less than go out of mine to meet you."

WRONG WAY OF FLYING.—There is a good moral in Lessing's short dialogue between the young eagle and the owl.

"I have something more to ask you," said a young eagle to a learned melancholy owl. "Men say there is a bird, by name Merops, who, when he rises in the air, flies with his tail upward, and his head towards the ground. Is that true?"

"Certainly not!" answered the owl; "it is only a foolish tradition of man; he is himself a Merops, for he would fly to heaven without for a moment losing sight of the earth."

Editorial Items.

Errata in Hudson's Tract.

On page 7, line 5, for "altitude" read "attitude", page 6, line 6 from bottom, read "dismal reward of infidelity", page 13, line 19, for "even" read "men", page 19, line 4 from bottom, read "Chrysostom." Those who take the Tract by the quantity are requested to correct as above before they distribute.

OLD POSTAGE STAMPS.—Don't send them to us; we cannot use them, but are obliged to return them to the sender. Will our friends please bear this in mind?

"THIN-EDGED DEVIL."—The "Dream" related by Sister Higgins has a most excellent moral, which we hope our readers will appreciate.

Obituary Notices.

Sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, in Rutland, Vt., Sept. 3d, Bro Simeon, son of Eld M. Batchelor, aged thirty-three years, leaving a father and mother, brothers and sisters to mourn, but not as those who have no hope.

The subject of this notice embraced religion when a lad of ten years, and from that time felt it his duty to become a preacher of the gospel. He afterwards, for some cause, lost his interest in a measure, but at the age of about fifteen, in the fall of 1842, was renewed in the spirit of his mind, and has ever since till the day of his death maintained a strictly christian deportment. In pursuance of his desire to prepare to preach the word of life, he went through his academic course, and was on his second year in Williams College, when his constitution failed under too severe application, and he was finally obliged to relinquish his long cherished scheme. This was to him a greater trial than all his physical sufferings. In his Diary at about this time occurs the remark, "I feel like a bird with its wings clipped." From the first he has borne his privations with great patience. The blessed hope of the Saviour's coming and a holy trust in Divine Providence was his constant theme.

The disease which at length wore him out was epilepsy, consequently his sufferings must have been great, but he "has fought a good fight, and finished his course, and kept the faith," and now awaits him the crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give him at that day. May this event of Providence be sanctified to the good of the various members of the family, especially the mother, who is in a very feeble state of health.

Words of consolation on the funeral occasion were administered by the writer, from Ps. 17: 15,—"As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, in thy likeness." A. ROSS.

Died, in Newbury, N. H., Aug. 26th, Sister MORSE, widow of Deacon Timothy Morse, in the ninety-second year of her age.

Sister Morse experienced religion in one of the first Freewill Baptist revivals in that part of the State, and was baptised by Eld. [illegible], the founder of that denomination. She was a faithful and exemplary christian from the time of her conversion to her death. Having her heart truly wedded to Christ, she was ready to receive joyfully the glad tidings that the day of grace was at hand; and, although disappointed in not seeing him as soon as she expected, yet she remained firm in the faith to the end of her trial that Christ's long looked for and glorious advent is near, even at the door.

Sister Morse was endowed by nature with a very amiable and pleasant disposition, which, refined and polished by grace, made her society desirable and profitable to all who associated with her. She left a numerous circle of friends, who mourn not as those who have no hope, for her death to them was as the setting of the sun, leaving a confident expectation of a glorious rising.

J. C.

Married.

In Union, Wakefield, N. H., Sept. 1st, 1861, by Eld. Joseph Spinney, Mr. J. FRANKLIN AYERS, of Portsmouth, to Miss HATTIE L. DOWNS, of Union.

Notices, &c.

Conference at No. Dana, Mass.

The Lord willing, there will be a Conference at North Dana, Mass. to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 9th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over Sunday. Brn. Champlin and Otis are expected to assist in preaching the word. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend. This is mostly a new field. No meeting of the kind has ever been held here. Board and horse keeping on reasonable terms for those who wish. Come, brethren and sisters, we will make you as comfortable as we can. Come in the name of the good Lord, with the expectation of seeing his power displayed in the conversion of sinners and the return of backsliders. Come one, come all. We expect to have a good meeting in the name of the Lord.

ELD GEO A STREETER.

N. B. The above does not exclude any of the preaching brethren who may a desire to come. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer. G. A. S.

Conference at Tuftonborough.

The Lord will, there will be a Conference at Melvin Village, Tuftonborough, N. H., commencing Thursday, September 26th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., to continue over the Sabbath. Bro. J. Couch is expected, and others are invited to come and labor together with the Lord for the salvation of men. Brethren and sisters and all are invited to the feast. Come, brethren—not to contend about hobbies, but to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Come, to seek for holiness of heart, without which we shall not hail our returning Lord with joy. T. W. PIPER.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times, and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

EXPLANATION.—"A. C. Association" means the ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, and "C. P. Society" means CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Notice.

The Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin Christian Conference will be held at Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, to commence Thursday evening, Sept. 26th, and continue over Lord's day. The meeting is expected to be held in the New England Mission tent, after which there is partial arrangement made for a debate between Bro. Sheldon and a Universalist. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers, delegates and brethren. Those who cannot come are expected to send letters, that we may know how the cause moves on.

WM. SWEET,
WM. SHELDON,
PETER S. W. DAYO, } Evangelists.

Strawberry Point, Aug. 25th, '61.

Harbinger, please copy.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference at the Clark Meeting House in Barnstead, N. H., to commence Sept. 20th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. Brethren J. Billings and P. B. Morgan are to attend, also Brethren Bishop, Brown and Britton are expected, all are invited. Come, brethren and sisters, praying that the Lord may bless the labors of the meeting.

J. G. SMITH.

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.

English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we get them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line, but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1.25; postage 14 cts.
Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1.50; postage 15 cts.
Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.62; postage 15 cts.
Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50; postage 21 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.
Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75; postage 26 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50; postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollar's worth; for twelve dollars, four dollar's worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

H. WENDELL, by order of Publishing Committee.

Notice.

The next Rhode Island Quarterly Conference will meet at Rocky Brook, R. I., the last Wednesday in September. An invitation has been extended to the Conference from Exeter, and Lafayette and Rocky Brook churches. According to my instructions from the Conference, I have located it at Rocky Brook. M. R. PHETTEPLACE, Clerk.

Notice.

It is expected there will be a meeting at Bro. Asahel Judd Mix's, in Bristol, commencing Oct. 2d, 1861, to continue five days. Bro. Levi R. Temple is expected to preach, as the Lord may direct. Whosoever will may come.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Lynn .... Sunday, Sept. 22

RUFUS WENDELL.

APPOINTMENT FOR BOSTON.

Eld. J. Couch .... Sunday, Sept. 22.

I propose to meet with the friends as follows:—

Portsmouth .... Sept. 25
Kennebunk Port .... Sept. 26.
Biddeford .... Sept. 27.
Portland .... Sunday, Sept. 29
Poland. .... Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.
Lewiston. .... Oct. 3.
Yarmouth. .... Sunday, Oct. 6.

J. S. WHITE.

South Farms, Ct .... Sept. 24.
Roxbury .... Sept. 25.
Newtown, at Bro. Kelly's .... Sept. 26.
North Salem, N. Y., Bro. Bailey's .... Sept. 29
Brooklyn, L. I .... Oct. 2.

J. K. BELLOWS.

Bangor, Me. .... Sunday, Sept. 29.

D. A. JONES.

Portsmouth .... Sept. 22d and 29th
Portland .... Oct. 6.
Yarmouth. .... Oct. 13.

If supplied, please notify me in season to comply with other requests. The two last weeks in Oct. not engaged. HIRAM MUNGER.

Bristol .... Sept. 29

C. GOODRICH.

Vernon, Vt. .... Sept. 22d.
West Brattleboro, (where Bro. Charles Miller may appoint) .... Sept. 23d and 24th

Williamsville, Vt., where Bro Davis may appoint, a protracted meeting commencing Sept. 25th and continuing over the Sabbath.

GEO. A. OTIS.

APPOINTMENTS FOR WORCESTER.

Geo. Champlain .... Sunday, Sept. 22
W. Pratt. .... Sunday, Sept. 29

R. CURTIS.

Hollowell. .... Sept. 20th.
Augusta .... Sunday, Sept. 22d.

O. R. FASSETT.

Amherst, Mass. .... Sept. 19th and 20th
Northfield .... Sept. 22.
Brattleboro, Vt., (where Bro. Miller may appoint) Sept. 24th
Newfane, Vt .... Sept. 25th and 26th.
Vernon, Vt .... Sept. 29
Erving, Mass .... Sept. 30.

GEO. A. STREETER.

Central Village, R. I., evening .... Sept. 20.
River Point .... Sunday, Sept. 22.
Arnold's Bridge (as Bro. Wilson may arrange,) evening, Sept. 23.
Lafayette, R. I .... Sept. 24.
Rocky Brook .... Sunday, Sept. 29.

H. F. CARPENTER.

New York City .... Sunday, Sept. 27.
Newark, evenings .... Sept. 24th and 25th.

H. PRATT.

South Windsor, Conn., (Pleasant Valley School House) Sabbath, Sept. 15th.

S. P. BABCOCK.

Barnstead, (Clark N. H.) .... Sept. 22.

T. W. PIPER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

A. V. G. Smith, Poultney, Vt. All right.
J. M. Jenness, Alton, N. H.: paid to last No. 312.

Cash Receipts.

Hach. Bailey, six copies, 334, $5.40; J W Austin 338, $3.00, Wm. Fox 309, $160; J Underhind 304, $3.00; J P Saunders 312, $3.00.

Benj. Hitchcock 297, P A Bronson 338, G F Chapman 338, Mrs. S Robbins 342, L Storrs 312, C F Clough 338, Philo Clark 351, M Alderman 338, L W Pierce 325, Mrs. T E Clough 338, L D Merrill 338, L Shurtleff 338, Robert Allen 338, P Howard 338, N L Curtis 312, W J Cady 329, N Mather 338, Wm. Hale 322, D S King 312, Sarah Steele 338, L Morin 338, S Shaw 263, Mrs. L Howard 338, C H Hudson 338, Hannah Butler 312, Eld. F Burr, Wm. Lees 315, J McKee 312, E G Emmons 338, L Haskell 348, Jeff. Higgins 286, H B Winch 338, S Tucker 238, do. for the poor, J B Parris 338, Ruth Dickens 316, M E Gavit 314, Jed. Raymond 312, N Clark, Jr., 331, Jno. Chambers 331, Danl. Brewster 338, J P Barnes 312, Jas. Thorp 312, Jno. Thorp 332, Mrs. E Knox 316, Jas. Haresign 286, G H Waite 330, A Richardson 338, S P Goodsell 312, Morris Smith 298, E A Prescott 315, P Pfeil 338, W Vreeland 338, T B Weeks 338, Wm. Bassford 306, Miss A W Smith 340, A G Stockey 338, Wm. Collier 312, D. Bonnell 338, W B Rose 338, T W Haskins 329, I S Potter 338, J McLeod 316,—$1.00 each.

Isaac Wight 334, E Pritchard 343, G H Rich 312, Em. Ayres 338, H Patten 312, H O Page 390, R Severy 331, Mrs. R S Robinson 370, J D Maranville 329, T Glover 380, G Wood 312, Edwin Phelps 323, Mrs. J A Smith 338, Mrs. S Orcutt 345, S Titus 286, J M Stone 364, R A Sherman 338, M W Benham 338, Mrs. L Osborne 314, Amasa Morse 364, Miss A Burr 298, L Hall 348, J C Safford 340, Chs. Perry 312, N Hoyt 312, Mrs. H E Wright 358, J Wiswell 345, T Parkhurst 349, Mrs. E Wood 338, Mrs. C Warner 336, W York 351, Abm. Libby 302, S Bliss, two copies, 338, N Allen 364, H Little 374, I M Chaffee 318, J S Heath 364, Eld. H Grew 409, El. Burnham 294, A B Reed 312, S B Colton 302, M Bogardus 318, R Pendleton 358, H C Benton 312, J A Stickney 322, R Avery 312, J H Hall 325, T H Knowles 306, L L Tuttle 342, J H Sutliff 338, Mrs. P C Chandler 369, S Warner 316, R Taylor 314, Dr. A G W Smith 338, E A Egleston 305, J C Burnham 290, R W Neal 371, O D Woodruff 312, D Ellinwood 338, M Pepper 294, C Newell 364, S H Nichols 195, G Gillet 265, L Tiffany 338, Ol. Loomis 300, L J Beach 325, C R Crossett 312, R E Ladd 316, C Benton 312, E B Boynton 364, A H Doolittle 371, L Newcomb 322, A Allen 323, Maria Drury 364, S Marsh 330, Abm. Flavel extra copies, Al. Tomlinson 319, J B Barker 312, H W Farmer 324, N Fenton 304, D S Cables 356, Ali Andrews 320, Benj. Young 338,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

Dr. A M Higgins $4.35, Eld. F Burr $0.80, W W Taylor 75 cts, M L Nichols 17 cts, [illegible]

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, post paid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of Immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 5 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.60. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 5 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 163 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 259 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Elwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 5 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms; or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of the world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $4.00 per hundred, 50 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, [illegible] $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 3 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cts. single. $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. [illegible] two hundred [illegible] quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 [illegible]. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings; or Bible proof [illegible]

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Bacon, No. 5 [illegible].

☞ The following [illegible] be had of J. B. Waite, [illegible]

us: for we have sinned against the Lord our God, we and our fathers from our youth even unto this day, and have not obeyed the voice of our God." Jer. 3: 25.

HENRY GREW.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10, 1861.

For the Crisis.

That New Book, "Retribution,"

For which there were so many inquiries at Wilbraham, but which was unavoidably delayed, is now ready. It is a neat 12mo, of nearly 160 pages, stereotyped from new type, and bound in stiff enamelled paper covers. None are bound in cloth at present. Some may be by and by.

The book is in two parts; the first simply presents the Scripture doctrine of Retribution, or God's repayment for sin, without controversy, and in a form adapted to general circulation. The second part takes up the special mistakes and errors of the "no resurrection of the wicked" theory, and applies the sword of the spirit to them.

I have been driven to publish this by the constant efforts made to press the matter upon those who preferred peace to contention. The substance of the book was written in 1857, and has since lain in the drawer in the hope that there would be no need of going into the controversy. Advantage has been taken of this pacific disposition. It has been claimed that no one could answer the arguments, and they dare not try, and I have been told I dare not publish my argument. So when convinced that duty required it, I have published the book, praying for God's blessing on it. I do not do it for controversy's sake. I heard of one man who thought controversy was God's means of preserving truth in the world, and proved it by Paul's disputing in the school of one Tyrannus. Well, I don't believe it, but have it so, if you will, and if you please to turn Pharisees, heathens, or philosophers, like those in the school of Tyrannus, I will dispute with you as Paul did with them, and teach what he taught, "righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come," and "the resurrection of the dead, just and unjust." But those who fought Paul did not claim to be his dear brethren, nor to be teachers of Christ's gospel. I prefer Testimony to controversy. I have here employed both. But the book will speak for itself. I have got the means to publish it partly by borrowing, partly by selling rare and valuable books from my own library, and partly I am in debt for it now. I have done this because I thought it duty. I wish to dispose of the whole edition speedily; hence I offer it at the following rates:—

To all deniers of the resurrection of the unjust who will send to me for it, pay postage on it, (about 10 cts.) and read it, I will send it FREE. To God's poor and to preachers unable to buy it conveniently, I will send it FREE.

To those able to pay, single copies, post paid, will be .... 38 cts.

"	"	Three copies, post paid,	$1.00.
"	"	Four copies, by express	1.00.
"	"	Thirteen copies, by express	3.00
"	"	Fifty " "	10.00
"	"	One hundred " "	18.00

Send orders, with the cash, to H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

Sept. 7th, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Bro. Reimer and his Tracts.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—As I have moved to Manayunk lately, I wish you would let the readers of your "Crisis" know it, in case some of them should send in orders for my "German tract." They may address Mr. Chas. Sutton, Manayunk, as this Bro. lives next door to me but one.

I would be very glad if some readers of the Crisis could help me to publish my second Tract. I have four or five more ready for publication. Fifteen dollars would cover the expenses. I know times are very hard, but if any one who feels an interest in having spread the true gospel of Jesus Christ among the German population of this country, could send in a mite, a great deal of good might be done for the thousands of Germans in this country. Next week or so, I shall send the money which I owe for my Crisis, and some other brethren, which I send in as subscribers. I am very poor at present. Yours in Christ,

L. REIMER.

Philadelphia, Aug. 24, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Light Wanted.

BRO. WENDELL:—In a little work by our dear brother, Henry Grew, entitled, "An examination of the Divine Testimony on the Nature and Character of the Son of God," in a foot note, page 32, I find the following passage: "'The first born of every creature,' the 'first begotten' was a spirit, 'the image of the invisible God.' This Spirit, or Word, was made flesh, i. e., united to the body 'prepared' for him, and in connection therewith, humbled himself, was 'made like unto his brethren.'" Now I do not know that I clearly or correctly apprehend Bro. Grew. Please allow me to ask him, through the Crisis, am I to understand that it was this uniting of spirit and body that constituted his "being made like," etc.; or did his being "susceptible of our feelings and infirmities," and his being "tempted in all points as we are," constitute the likeness? If the latter, then all is clear, easy and harmonious with our views; but if the former, then, inasmuch as his spirit or HE was a conscious, acting, intelligent being, independent of that body, or before he was "united to it," how shall I deny what some affirm, that his brethren, (i. e., their spirits,) are not also conscious, acting, intelligent beings, after they are separated from the bodies to which they have been united? On the Sonship I should have no controversy with Bro G.; but on the above named point of "being made like," it strikes me there is a principle involved that we should look to. If true in the first sense, it would not, by parity of reason, prove immortality, because Paul says, "it was Christ that died;" therefore we (in spirit) might also die. But would it not be a very strong inferential argument of the condition of man's spirit between death and the judgment, and have a direct bearing on the case of the thief on the cross, Stephen, Paul's being "unclothed," "desire to depart," "be with Christ," etc.

Olena, Ohio. G. W. STETSON.

For the Crisis.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—I enclose an article which I cut from the Boston Journal called "a curious calculation." I do not think it very curious, because I have seen one very similar before, but I think it answers an argument which I have heard brought against the beautiful truth that the saints of God will ultimately dwell upon the "new earth." One man scoffingly said that he should "hate to be in the ground tier." I thought that perhaps you might think favorably of inserting the article in the Crisis, with some remarks of your own. I have not seen much upon this subject very lately. Yours respectfully,

C. E. SCRIBNER.

Topsham, Me., Aug. 24, 1861.

CURIOUS CALCULATION.—The vast number of inhabitants who do live, and have lived, upon the face of the earth, appear, at first sight, to defy the powers of calculation. But if we suppose the world to have existed six thousand years; that there now exist one thousand million; that a generation passes away in thirty years; that every past generation averages the present, and that four individuals may stand on one square yard, we find that the whole number will not occupy a compass so great as one-fourth the extent of England. Allowing six thousand years since the creation, and a generation to pass away in thirty years, we shall have two hundred generations, which, at one thousand millions each, will be two hundred thousand millions, which being divided by four persons to a square yard, will leave fifty thousand millions of square yards; there are in a square mile three millions, ninety-seven thousand, six hundred square yards, by which if the former sum be divided, it will give sixteen thousand one hundred and thirty-three square miles, the root of which, in whole numbers, is about one hundred and twenty-seven, so that one hundred and twenty-seven miles square will be found sufficient to contain the immense and almost inconceivable number of two hundred thousand millions of human beings.

Death of Eld. Wm. G. Proctor.

This estimable brother died at Cicero, Indiana, on the 15th of Aug., after a painful illness of several weeks, in the full possession of his mental faculties, and strong in the faith for which he had for many years been a distinguished advocate.

Bro. Proctor was one of the best of men, and his loss will be seriously felt by the brethren in Indiana. The writer of this obituary knew him long and intimately, and can bear testimony to his sterling integrity and moral worth. He was a kind, affectionate, and forgiving christian, modest and unostentatious in his manner, but firm and uncompromising in his principles. He would stand by the right, and do his duty regardless of consequences. No man ever possessed a larger amount of moral courage than Bro. Proctor. He was bold, frank and fearless in the avowal of his convictions; and though all might differ from him and oppose him, he would not yield his conscientious opinions to popular clamor. He took deep interest in the dissemination of the distinctive views we hold, and his labor in the ministry contributed greatly to consolidate and systematize our cause in Indiana. He was a fellow laborer in whom I could confide under all circumstances, who would make any sacrifice for the truth. Sincerely do I deplore his loss; but the will of the Lord be done.

—N. FIELD.—Harbinger.

Troubles Abroad.

The Boston Journal of the 17th inst. has an editorial on this subject which will be perused with interest by our readers. We give the article entire:—

"It is no relief from our own national troubles to turn to those of other countries, but it gives us juster views and a more patient spirit to reflect that ours is no exceptional case, but that apprehension and disturbance constitute the rule among the nations of the earth, rather than security and tranquility.

To the South of us, Mexico lies in her chronic condition of internal warfare. Her capital, lately invaded, has been freed from the immediate danger of attack by hard fighting on all sides; but success in the field seems only to lead to feuds among the victors, so that security is never to be reckoned among the fruits of triumph. Farther on, New Granada has just gone through with a revolution, somewhat bloody, but probably bootless. Among the States of South America there is hardly one but has its internal troubles, although they are of so little concern to the rest of the world as, in general, to pass unnoticed.

Looking upon Europe we behold the two great governments of England and France in a state of apparent peace and professed security—and yet the former is bristling with riflemen and steel-plated frigates, and the latter bears the tramp of more soldiers and army horses than this country does at this moment, having added within twelve months six millions of dollars to her warlike expenditures. Some nations had rather be plunged into actual fighting than to be subjected to such onerous preparations.

The great empire of Austria is drifting upon dissolution, or upon the bloody assertion of its despotic claims. Of its thirty-five millions of subjects, sixteen millions refuse to accept the new constitution and to send members to the Imperial Council. Italy will wait no longer than spring for the release of Venetia, by sale or otherwise, from the grasp of the Hapsburgs; and if Hungary postpones open revolt to that period, it will only be from motives of policy. The estrangement seems to have gone beyond remedy, but the prospect of a combined attack on two sides of Austria is a great inducement to patience on the part of the Hungarian leaders.

In Italy, Cialdini is crushing out brigandage and reactionary demonstrations with a vigor which the friends of the union in this country may well emulate. The Pope's troubles continue, and may be immensely aggravated some morning by the withdrawal of that staff of the French military support, on which he has hitherto leaned for his existence as a sovereign. In the north of Europe, the Russian difficulties with Poland threaten momentarily to break out into conflict, and the commotions excited by the Emperor's emancipation scheme are unabated. The Holstein quarrel is so far from being composed, that it was noticeable that the last public declaration of the King of Denmark was the first implication of expected war that has passed his lips. In the eastern part of the continent, Omar Pasha is carrying on a vigorous warfare against the insurgents of Montenegro.

And so it is the world over—a world, if not "lying in wickedness," yet surely not exempt anywhere from troubles and all the dangers of bloodshed. Even the "gorgeous East" is passing through the ordeal of terrible revolution. Japan is the theatre of the conflict between the powers of light and friendly intercourse. China is prolific in mysterious disturbances, and our last advices tell us of a new insurrection near Pekin, and of the breaking up of commerce beneath the fitful blows of imperial and rebel successes. While, then, we behold the nations of the earth subject to the extremes of afflicting plagues—to the fire running along the ground, or the darkness that may be felt—why should we wonder that our long and unexampled prosperity has at last been interrupted for a season? It is only to try our manhood and to temper all the qualities which enter into the composition of a great and useful people—and let us see that we abide the test."

Correspondence.

From Sr. S. E. Daggett.

BRO. WENDELL:—I seat myself to drop a line to the readers of the Crisis. I am led to rejoice as I read of the dealings of God with friends in different parts of the land. I for one expect the speedy coming of our Lord to set up his kingdom on the earth, and I thank God that I ever heard this glad news. We need on the whole armor in these trying times. Are we doing all we can for the cause of God? Are we all ready to face a scoffing world? I pray God that you and I, dear reader, may not be ashamed to let the world know that we are for Christ. I am living where I never hear the soon coming of Christ preached. Here at Fisherville there are only two Adventists beside me, so all that we have to cheer us on beside the word of God is what we gather from the columns of the Crisis. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for me that we may all meet in the kingdom at last. I feel a sweet peace in my soul that the world cannot give. Let us prove faithful a little longer for we shall soon reach home and be at rest. Yours looking for Jesus' coming.

Fisherville, Ct.

From Sister H. E. Wright.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—We appreciate the Crisis very much. It has been our only preacher of the present truth, until Bro. Chandler came here last May. His coming greatly rejoiced our hearts, and comforted us. His preaching here has taken deep hold of the minds of many. Many eyes have been opened to see the truth, and some hearts to receive it. We hope and expect he will be with us again soon, to minister to our many wants. I feel that we are living in perilous times, but for one I can say, my hope and trust is still in God. His promise is sure, and I know if I am faithful he will take care of me, and at last take me home to rest. Pray for me, that my faith fail not. Your sister in hope.

Cascade, Iowa.

From Bro. T. W. Smith.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—Enclosed please find stamps for Bro. Hudson's tract. I wish I had ability to send for a hundred. I believe it would be my delight did I possess the means to purchase and scatter like "autumnal leaves" these precious little messengers. As soon as possible I shall remit you some money for the Crisis. I like the Crisis; could not possibly do without it. I never appreciated a religious paper as I do it. I have read a large number of the different papers published in our land. But I can truly say, the Crisis is the best. I can scarcely wait until it comes. May the Lord grant you grace to discharge your arduous duties successfully; and may the Crisis live and grow until Jesus comes. Yours truly and fraternally.

Philadelphia.

From Bro. P. White, Jr.

BRO. WENDELL:—I would be glad to get some good Child's paper for our Sabbath School, and would like to see some of the best there are published. Will you be kind enough to collect a few specimens and send me for samples to examine? or send me what you think is the best one of all for our people, and oblige your brother.

P. S.—Sister Hazzard told me you contemplated making us a visit. We shall be extremely glad to see you, and hope you will find it convenient to come soon. P. W.

New Bedford, Sept. 12, 1861.

Selections by J. S. White.

TWO CHRISTIANS.—Two good men on some occasion had a warm dispute; and remembering the exhortation of the apostle, "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath," just before sunset, one of them went to the other, and knocking at the door, his offended friend came and opened it, and seeing who it was, started back in astonishment and surprise; the other at the same time, cried out, "The sun is almost down." This unexpected salutation softened the heart of his friend into affection, and he returned for answer, "Come in, brother, come in." What a happy method of conciliating matters, of redressing grievances, and of reconciling brethren!

ANECDOTE.—James I., of England, went out of his way to hear a noted preacher. The clergyman, seeing the king enter, left his text to declaim against swearing, for which the king was notorious. When done, James thanked him for his sermon; but asked him what connection swearing had with his text. He answered, "since your majesty came out of your way through curiosity to meet me, I could not, in complaisance, do less than go out of mine to meet you."

WRONG WAY OF FLYING.—There is a good moral in Lessing's short dialogue between the young eagle and the owl.

"I have something more to ask you," said a young eagle to a learned melancholy owl. "Men say there is a bird, by name Merops, who, when he rises in the air, flies with his tail upward, and his head towards the ground. Is that true?"

"Certainly not!" answered the owl; "it is only a foolish tradition of man; he is himself a Merops, for he would fly to heaven without for a moment losing sight of the earth."

Editorial Items.

Errata in Hudson's Tract.

On page 7, line 5, for "altitude" read "attitude", page 6, line 6 from bottom, read "dismal reward of infidelity"; page 13, line 19, for "even" read "men"; page 19, line 4 from bottom, read "Chrysostom." Those who take the Tract by the quantity are requested to correct as above before they distribute.

OLD POSTAGE STAMPS.—Don't send them to us; we cannot use them, but are obliged to return them to the sender. Will our friends please bear this in mind?

"THIN-EDGED DEVIL."—The "Dream" related by Sister Higgins has a most excellent moral, which we hope our readers will appreciate.

Obituary Notices.

Sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, in Rutland, Vt., Sept. 3d, Bro. Simeon, son of Eld. M. Batchelor, aged thirty-three years, leaving a father and mother, brothers and sisters to mourn, but not as those who have no hope.

The subject of this notice embraced religion when a lad of ten years, and from that time felt it his duty to become a preacher of the gospel. He afterwards, for some cause, lost his interest in a measure, but at the age of about fifteen, in the fall of 1842, was renewed in the spirit of his mind, and has ever since till the day of his death maintained a strictly christian deportment. In pursuance of his desire to prepare to preach the word of life, he went through his academic course, and was on his second year in Williams College, when his constitution failed under too severe application, and he was finally obliged to relinquish his long cherished scheme. This was to him a greater trial than all his physical sufferings. In his Diary at about this time occurs the remark, "I feel like a bird with its wings clipped." From the first he has borne his privations with great patience. The blessed hope of the Saviour's coming and a holy trust in Divine Providence was his constant theme.

The disease which at length wore him out was epilepsy, consequently his sufferings must have been great; but he "has fought a good fight, and finished his course, and kept the faith," and now awaits him the crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give him at that day. May this event of Providence be sanctified to the good of the various members of the family, especially the mother, who is in a very feeble state of health.

Words of consolation on the funeral occasion were administered by the writer, from Ps. 17: 15,—"As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, in thy likeness." A. ROSS.

Died, in Newbury, N. H., Aug. 26th, Sister MORSE, widow of Deacon Timothy Morse, in the ninety-second year of her age.

Sister Morse experienced religion in one of the first Freewill Baptist revivals in that part of the State, and was baptized by Eld. Randell, the founder of that denomination. She was a faithful and exemplary christian from the time of her conversion to her death. Having her heart truly wedded to Christ, she was ready to receive joyfully the glad tidings that the day of grace was at hand; and, although disappointed in not seeing him as soon as she expected, yet she remained firm in the faith to the end of her trial that Christ's long looked for and glorious advent is near, even at the door.

Sister Morse was endowed by nature with a very amiable and pleasant disposition, which, refined and polished by grace, made her society desirable and profitable to all who associated with her. She left a numerous circle of friends, who mourn not as those who have no hope, for her death to them was as the setting of the sun, leaving a confident expectation of a glorious rising.

J. C.

Married.

In Union, Wakefield, N. H., Sept. 1st, 1861, by Eld. Joseph Spinney, Mr. J. FRANKLIN AYERS, of Portsmouth, to Miss HATTIE I. DOWNS, of Union.

Notices, &c.

Conference at No. Dana, Mass.

The Lord willing, there will be a Conference at North Dana, Mass. to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 9th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over Sunday. Brn. Champlin and Otis are expected to assist in preaching the word. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend. This is mostly a new field. No meeting of the kind has ever been held here. Board and horse keeping on reasonable terms for those who wish. Come, brethren and sisters, we will make you as comfortable as we can. Come in the name of the good Lord, with the expectation of seeing his power displayed in the conversion of sinners and the return of backsliders. Come one, come all. We expect to have a good meeting in the name of the Lord.

Eld. GEO. A. STREETER.

N. B. The above does not exclude any of the preaching brethren who may a desire to come. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer. G. A. S.

Conference at Tuftonborough.

The Lord will, there will be a Conference at Melvin Village, Tuftonborough, N. H., commencing Thursday, September 26th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., to continue over the Sabbath. Bro. J. Couch is expected, and others are invited to come and labor together with the Lord for the salvation of men. Brethren and sisters and all are invited to the feast. Come, brethren—not to contend about hobbies, but to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Come, to seek for holiness of heart, without which we shall not hail our returning Lord with joy. T. W. PIPER.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times, and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

EXPLANATION.—"A. C. Association" means the ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, and "C. P. Society" means CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Notice.

The Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin Christian Conference will be held at Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, to commence Thursday evening, Sept. 26th, and continue over Lord's day. The meeting is expected to be held in the New England Mission tent; after which there is partial arrangement made for a debate between Bro. Sheldon and a Universalist. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers, delegates and brethren. Those who cannot come are expected to send letters, that we may know how the cause moves on.

WM. SWEET,
WM. SHELDON,
PETER S. W. DEYO, } Evangelists.

Strawberry Point, Aug. 25th, '61.

Harbinger, please copy.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference at the Clark Meeting House in Barnstead, N. H., to commence Sept. 20th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. Brethren J. Billings and P. B. Morgan are to attend, also Brethren Bishop, Brown and Britton are expected; all are invited. Come, brethren and sisters, praying that the Lord may bless the labors of the meeting.

J. G. SMITH.

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.

English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we get them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line; but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1.25; postage 14 cts.
Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1.50; postage 15 cts.
Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.62; postage 15 cts.
Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50; postage 21 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.
Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75; postage 26 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50; postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollar's worth; for twelve dollars, four dollar's worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

R. WENDELL, per order of Publishing Committee.

Notice.

The next Rhode Island Quarterly Conference will meet at Rocky Brook, R. I., the last Wednesday in September. An invitation has been extended in the Conference from Exeter, and Lafayette and Rocky Brook churches. According to my instructions from the Conference, I have located it at Rocky Brook. M. R. PRESTERLACK, Clerk.

Notice.

It is expected there will be a meeting at Bro. Asahel Judd Mix's, in Bristol, commencing Oct. 2d, 1861, to continue five days. Bro. Levi R. Temple is expected to preach, as the Lord may direct. Whosoever will may come.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Lynn .... Sunday, Sept. 22.
RUFUS WENDELL.

APPOINTMENT FOR BOSTON.

Eld. J. Couch .... Sunday, Sept. 22.

I propose to meet with the friends as follows:—

Portsmouth .... Sept. 25
Kennebunk Port .... Sept. 26.
Biddeford .... Sept. 27.
Portland .... Sunday, Sept. 29.
Poland .... Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.
Lewiston .... Oct. 2.
Yarmouth .... Sunday, Oct. 6.
J. S. WHITE.

South Farms, Ct .... Sept. 24.
Roxbury .... Sept. 25.
Newtown, at Bro. Kelly's .... Sept. 26.
North Salem, N. Y., Bro. Bailey's .... Sept. 29.
Brooklyn, L. I. .... Oct. 2.
J. K. BELLOWS.

Bangor, Me. .... Sunday, Sept. 29.
D. A. JONES.

Portsmouth .... Sept. 22d and 29th.
Portland .... Oct. 6
Yarmouth .... Oct. 13.

If supplied, please notify me in season to comply with other requests. The two last weeks in Oct. not engaged. HIRAM MUNGER.

Bristol .... Sept. 29.
C. GOODRICH.

Vernon, Vt. .... Sept. 22d.
West Brattleboro, (where Bro. Charles Miller may appoint) .... Sept. 23d and 24th.

Williamsville, Vt., where Bro. Davis may appoint, a protracted meeting commencing Sept. 25th and continuing over the Sabbath.
GEO. A. OTIS.

APPOINTMENTS FOR WORCESTER.

Geo. Champlain .... Sunday, Sept. 22
W. Pratt .... Sunday, Sept. 29
R. CURTIS.

Hollowell .... Sept. 20th.
Augusta .... Sunday, Sept. 22d.
O. R. FASSETT.

Amherst, Mass. .... Sept. 19th and 20th
Northfield .... Sept. 22.
Brattleboro, Vt., (where Bro. Miller may appoint) Sept. 24th.
Newfane, Vt .... Sept. 25th and 26th.
Vernon, Vt .... Sept. 29.
Erving, Mass .... Sept. 30.
GEO. A. STREETER.

Central Village, R. I., evening .... Sept. 20.
River Point .... Sunday, Sept. 22.
Arnold's Bridge (as Bro. Wilson may arrange,) evening, Sept. 23.
Lafayette, R. I .... Sept. 24.
Rocky Brook .... Sunday, Sept. 29.
H. F. CARPENTER.

New York City .... Sunday, Sept. 27.
Newark, evenings .... Sept. 24th and 25th.
H. PRATT.

South Windsor, Conn., (Pleasant Valley School House) Sabbath, Sept. 15th.
S. P. BABCOCK.

Barnstead, (Clark N. H.) .... Sept. 22.
T. W. PIPER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

A. V. G. Smith, Poultney, Vt.: All right.
J. M. Jenness, Alton, N. H.: paid to last No. 312.

Cash Receipts.

Hach. Bailey, six copies, 334, $5.40; J W Austin 338, $3.00; Wm. Fox 309, $160; J Underhind 304, $3.00; J P Saunders 312, $3.00.

Benj. Hitchcock 297, P A Bron on 338, G F Chapman 338, Mrs. S Robbins 342, L Storrs 312, C F Clough 338, Philo. Clark 351, M Alderman 338, L W Pierce 325, Mrs. T E Clough 338, L D Merrill 338, L Shurtleff 338, Robert Allen 338, P Howard 338, N L Curtis 312, W J Cady 329, N Mather 338, Wm. Hale 322, D S King 312, Sarah Steele 338, L Morin 338, S Shaw 263, Mrs. L Howard 338, C H Hudson 338, Hannah Butler 312, Eld. F Burr, Wm. Lees 315, J McKee 312, E G Emmons 338, L Haskell 338, Jeff. Higgins 286, H B Winch 338, S Tucker 338, do. for the poor, J B Pains 338, Ruth Dickens 316, M E Gavit 314, Jed. Raymond 312, N Clark, Jr., 331, Jno. Chambers 331, Danl. Brewster 338, J P Barnes 312, Jas. Thorp 312, Jno. Thorp 332, Mrs. E Knox 316, Jas. Haresign 286, G H Waite 330, A Richardson 338, S P Goodsell 312, Morris Smith 298, E A Prescott 315, P Pfeil 338, W Vreeland 338, T B Weeks 338, Wm. Bassford 306, Miss A W Smith 340, A G Slockey 338, Wm. Collier 312, Dl. Bonnell 338, W B Rose 338, T W Haskins 329, I S Potter 338, J McLeod 316,—$1.00 each.

Isaac Wight 334, E Pritchard 343, G H Rich 312, Em. Ayres 338, H Patten 312, H O Page 390, B Severy 331, Mrs. R S Robinson 370, J D Maranville 329, T Glover 380, G Wood 312, Edwin Phelps 323, Mrs. J A Smith 338, Mrs. S Orcutt 345, S Titus 286, J M Stone 364, E A Sherman 338, M W Benham 338, Mrs. L Osborne 314, Amasa Morse 364, Miss A Burr 298, L Hall 348, J C Safford 340, Chs. Perry 312, N Hoyt 312, Mrs. H E Wright 358, J Wiswell 345, T Parkhurst 349, Mrs. E Wood 338, Mrs. C Warner 386, W York 351, Abm. Libby 302, S Bliss, two copies, 338, N Allen 364, H Little 374, I M Chaffee 310, J S Heath 364, Eld. H Grew 400, El. Burnham 294, A B Reed 312, S B Colton 302, M Bogardus 318, R Pendleton 358, H C Benton 312, J A Stickney 322, R Avery 312, J H Hall 325, T H Knowles 306, L L Tuttle 347, J H Sutliff 333, Mrs. P C Chandler 369, S Warner 316, R Taylor 314, Dr. A G W Smith 338, E A Egleston 395, J C Burnham 299, R W Neal 371, O D Woodruff 312, D Ellinwood 338, M Pepper 394, C Newell 364, S H Nichols 186, G Gillet 265, L Tiffany 338, Ol. Loomis 360, L J Beach 325, C R Crossett 312, R E Ladd 316, C Benton 312, E B Boynton 364, A H Doolittle 371, L Newcomb 322, A Allen 333, Maria Drury 364, S Marsh 330, Abm. Flavel extra copies, Al. Tomlinson 319, J B Barker 312, H W Farmer 334, N Fenton 304, D S Cables 316, All Andrews 330, Benj. Young 338,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

Dr. A M Higgins $2.00, Eld. F Burr $3.40, W W Taylor 75 cts, M L Nichols 17 cts, Asa Bishop 25 cts, Eld. H Grew 6 cts, Eld. J B Fitch $4.00, A Allen 25 cts, M Drury $1.00, [illegible] 27 cts, T Wheeler 8 cts, T W Smith 8 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts.; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts.; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruah and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 163 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 269 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological [illegible] of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Elkin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; [illegible]. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, [illegible]. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms; or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $4.00 per hundred, [illegible] 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 8 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, [illegible]. $1, postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 3 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. [illegible] $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. [illegible] two hundred [illegible] quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 5 cents single; [illegible]. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings; or Bible proof [illegible]

☞ The above tracts and books may be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. [illegible], No. 5 [illegible] street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.

The Harp, by Elder Himes; [illegible]

Foster's Letter and Tract on [illegible]

For the Crisis.

My Boyhood's Home.

(AT MANAYUNK, PA.)

I.

O pleasing Pennsylvania scene!
Where hills of strength and beauty rise,
Where Schuylkill's waters glide between,
And feast the wond'ring traveler's eyes.

II.

I seem beside my parents' door,
And listen to the murm'ring dam;
I hear the hill-side railroad's roar,
And view the rushing chariot's flame.

III.

Methinks I hear—as oft I've heard—
That plaintive, deep, mysterious strain,
Which once my youthful spirit stirred,—
"Oh, boatman, sound that horn again!"

IV.

I think of factory girls and boys,
'Mid spools and spin'les, wheels and looms;
Their hours of toil, their play-day joys—
Their frugal fare, their lowly homes.

V.

What quiet Sabbath hours were those
When Peace her mantle spread abroad,
And filled the weary with repose,
And led their thoughts to Nature's God!

VI.

Days of my youth, you've long since pass'd,
And given place to sadder years!
Life's cup hath not a changeless taste,
'Tis intermix'd with smiles and tears!

VII.

And now behold Columbia weeps,
Crush'd down by hordes of treach'rous men:
Perhaps her proud, majestic steps,
Shall never more be heard again!

VIII.

Weep not, my soul, thy anchor, Hope,
Rests not where mortal vessels sail;
'Tis firm on Christ,—look up, look up,
Where Jesus stands within the veil!

IX.

Soon shall the great Deliverer come
And chase earth's bitter curse away:
Then saints shall find a changeless home,—
Hail, happy day! hail, happy day!

Newark, N. J. J. L.

For the Crisis.

Ought Christians under any Circumstances to use Carnal Weapons?

BY S. W. BISHOP.

This question, at the present time, seems to be of deep practical importance to us as a people. And when we attempt to answer it, it will amount to nothing that we urge our opinions, or make an effort to frame our prejudices into arguments, or twist our notions into logical conclusions. Such efforts will only produce sophisms, and will avail nothing with such as have "the spirit of a sound mind." We come then to the question and remark: if it is right for christians under certain circumstances to bear arms, it must be duty for them thus to do. For example: if my life is in danger from the hand of the midnight assassin, it is clearly an atrocious wrong for him thus to put my life in jeopardy; and as God has in his system of divine jurisprudence enacted that all wrong shall receive its legitimate punishment, nothing is clearer than that, if God has appointed an agency in administering that punishment, we can only discharge our duty to him as christians by unflinchingly acting the part assigned us. None will question but I should, under the above named circumstances, be justified in the sight of God in taking any course not forbidden me to take in the law of Christ to save my life. If it be just for me thus to do, it certainly is duty, provided my life is worth anything to the cause of God or the good of my fellow-men. If, therefore, under extreme circumstances, like those named above, the exigency of the case makes fighting justifiable, and that too in the sight of a just and holy God, and in the light of the gospel of his dear Son, no opposite course can be just under the same class of circumstances. And as it is always duty in every system of action to choose the right, and turn our feet from the wrong course, whatever course is strictly just in the sight of God it is plainly our duty to follow that course; and if we would stand justified before him, that duty must be discharged with the utmost faithfulness.

To take any other view of this question is to say, virtually, that the system of ethics given us in the gospel of Christ is a mere chance plan or system of expediency, left wholly at the mercy or to the disposal of circumstances. If it is duty under any circumstances for christians to fight, we must expect the same will be stated in clear and unequivocal language. To suppose otherwise is to impeach the wisdom of the Infinite God. If obedience is required to any law, wisdom and justice would require that such law shall be given in the clearest language to those on whom its requirements are binding. God has always acted on this principle, both as respects positive and negative commandments. The requisitions of God's law not only read plainly "Thou shalt," etc., but they just as distinctly read "Thou shalt not." With respect to this, as every other matter where truth and duty are concerned, our only resort, if we would bring the question to a successful conclusion, is THE WORD OF THE LORD. And when we seek to the word of God for instruction, we are not to resort to an abrogated system, but to that perfect code of divine laws contained in the glorious gospel of the Son of God. No matter, so far as this question is concerned, what may have been the practices or personal experience of any one or more individuals under the old covenant dispensation. If we admit that that old dispensation has passed away [illegible] by being superseded by a "new and better covenant," and to them only, can we refer this question for a lawful and righteous decision. If it is duty for christians to fight under some circumstances, and under others to refrain, we shall find on the one hand not simply a permit, but distinctly stated as a command, this duty made known in the New Testament; and on the other hand a positive prohibition. That is, God must tell us plainly in the new covenant when to fight, and when not to; under what circumstances to use the sword, the musket, the cannon, the bludgeon, or our fists, as the case may require, and when to refrain. It does not become a God of infinite wisdom to ordain rules and regulations by which we are to be governed under particular circumstances, and then leave us in doubt concerning their practical application. Matters of duty are never given in the law of Christ by implication, but in the character of positive commandments. We call attention then to the gospel of Christ, and ask, Can there be pointed out in all that comprehensive system a single requirement enforcing the duty of fighting, under any circumstances whatever? The only answer that can in truth be given is, that no such commandment exists; consequently no such duty is binding on christians. But to carry the matter to its utmost limit, where is there in the law of Christ a command not to fight, qualified with a "provided nevertheless" etc.? I answer, none can be found. The matter is, therefore, put forever at rest, that no such duty is even implied.

But it is urged that the gospel plainly recognizes the fact that earthly governments will exist, and that God recognizes the fact of their existence, as an agency employed by himself in the accomplishment of definite purposes named. This we cheerfully admit. We are most fully aware of the fact that all events, to a certain extent, are under the supervision of the great "I AM." We have no particular faith in the doctrine of chance. God has designed that, up to a certain time, earthly governments shall exist. But surely none will contend that therefore every distinctive feature embodied in all forms of government that shall exist in our world's history are ordained of God! On that supposition the southern doctrine of the divinity of human slavery is the true doctrine. It is a peculiar fact that every nation under heaven that knows anything about God, supposes that God has a strong regard for their particular form of government. This accounts, in a measure at least, for the supposed "divine right of kings," attempted to be forced into King James' translation of the Bible. It is barely possible that certain inferences that are sometimes drawn from particular portions of Paul's writings concerning "divine appointment" with respect to earthly governments generally, would be materially modified provided the work of translating had been done by men wholly unbiassed on this subject. The idea, however, contained in the word of God is simply this: God knew, as he knows all things else, that earthly governments would exist, and he acted on the knowledge of that fact in such a manner as shall result in the accomplishment of his own purposes concerning this world, and shall be for the good of the church. God ordained that the despotic government of Turkey, and the dark and damnable system of Popery should exist, on the same principle that he ordained that other definite forms of government should exist. To say that God has ordained that a certain form of government should exist, is to establish "the divine right of kings." That doctrine being true, the American government is contrary to God's appointment.

It no more follows, because God has ordained that "the powers that be" shall subserve his purpose, that therefore we as christians are required to be identified with, and fight to sustain earthly governments, than it follows that because Christ was delivered by the "determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God," therefore the Jews obeyed a divine requirement, making it duty for them thus to do, when they crucified the Son of God. The same requirements that are in the New Testament today, were there in the 10th century. "The powers that be" were at that time, in that part of the world where the great body of the church lived, constituted principally by that form of government denominated by Paul "the Man of sin." The command to "be subject to the powers that be," was, in its true import, just as much binding on christians under that form of government as any other. Mark: Paul does not say that "the powers that be are ordained of God" provided they are constituted by the establishment of a republican form of government. He makes no discriminations or qualifications. The principle, therefore, laid down in Rom 13, applies indiscriminately to every form of government under which christians may live, at all times, and in every locality. If, therefore, Paul's doctrine in the 13th of Romans is that God requires that christians, in order to discharge their duties to earthly governments, must become fully identified with them, and fight to sustain them,—it follows, as a matter of course, that every revolt against any form of government has been in the past, is now in the present, and will be in the future, an open violation of a positive requisition of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Not only so, but all christians, in all ages, are bound by the most solemn obligations to take up arms, and not only assist in putting down such revolt, but do all in their power to establish the government under which they live, no matter what may be its character, on a firm basis. This principle would apply badly in the days of papal, bloody rule. On this principle the men of '76, who "fought the battles of the free," and succeeded in dissolving the union between the American colonies and the mother country, not only did an act of great injustice to the British government, but by persisting in that act, this government has, during all the years of its existence, stood out defiantly in open violation of the law of God. Disobedience long continued does not, on account of its age, change its character in such a manner as to make it an act of obedience to perpetuate the wrong. Therefore to fight to sustain a government established by successful revolution, is to attempt to make treason lawful—treason not only against "the powers that be," but treason against that God who "ordained" them.

The only reasonable position we can take is that, if God has ordained a particular form of government, and required christians to sustain it by fighting for it, etc., etc., to attempt to sustain any other form of government, though our inclinations or prejudices may be gratified by so doing, is an open violation of the law of God. No man can gather from the New Testament the first intimation that the inspired writers ever thought of a republic. The only form of government distinctly named is kingly. Consequently, if Paul refers to any particular form of government in Rom. 13, that government is a kingdom, and not a republic. To fight to sustain a republican form of government on this supposition is, therefore, to fight against God's ordination. But if, (which is the only reasonable conclusion,) Paul in this part of his writings lays down principles that apply equally and indiscriminately to every form of government that shall exist throughout the gospel dispensation, we must put such a construction upon his language as shall be in harmony with reason, righteousness and truth.

It cannot be true that christians are required by Paul to sustain principles of wrong by force of arms, or any other way, though those principles be incorporated into the organic laws of "the powers that be." A government whose foundation is laid in cruelty and injustice, no man can sustain without violating every principle of righteousness and equity contained in the law of Christ. As, therefore, whatever requisition contained in the law of Christ, as given by Paul in Rom. 13, is equally binding at all times, and under every form of government, whether good or bad, it cannot be so construed as to make it duty for christians to fight to sustain earthly governments without doing violence to gospel, common sense, and every man's inherent principle of right. It is true that it is for the good of christians even that government organizations should exist, and God has not only recognized this fact himself, but bid us do the same. But all men, even civil rulers, are free agents; the distinct form that earthly governments will assume is left, in a great measure, if not wholly, dependent upon the whims, caprices, prejudices, education, judgment, etc., etc., of the men who form these governments. To deny this is to make God responsible for every bad government that has cursed our world from its beginning to the present time.

When we manifest a spirit of haughty defiance, and speak in contempt of the blessings that are secured to us by the best government on earth, we are acting in open violation of the clear requirements of the gospel. If we possess the right frame of mind, we shall feel a deep sense of gratitude to God that his providence has placed us under a government in whose organic law are incorporated so many principles of justice and goodness. To all the bad features we are required to submit, provided that such submission does not involve a personal act on our part, which act shall violate some requirement of the gospel. Beyond this, no command of Paul, or any other inspired writer, requires the christian to go. On this principle is the exhortation of Paul in 1 Tim. 2: 1, 2, which reads: "I exhort therefore that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men: for kings, and for all that are in authority." For what are we to pray? Paul tells distinctly. Not that all men should be saved, for God has told us plainly that this never can be. To suppose that in one part of the inspired book we are exhorted to pray for a work to be done, which in another part of the book we are positively assured never can be done, is simply absurd. It is not true, therefore, that we are exhorted to pray that kings and rulers may become christians, for we are exhorted to pray for all men in the sense and for the same purpose that we are exhorted to pray for kings, and all that are in authority. To what intent, then, are we to pray? Let Paul answer. He says we are to pray for these men, that we (christians) may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godliness and honesty. That is, we are to pray to God so to restrain these men in authority—yes, all men—that we may be permitted to lead quiet and peaceable lives, etc.

But what if the government under which we live is cruel and exacting, and in its laws prohibits the carrying out the principles named above? The only gospel answer must be, obey God and leave the consequences with him. But under these extreme circumstances are we not justified in taking up arms to defend ourselves? Listen: "If they persecute you in one city, flee into another." But it is cowardly to run! Well, let it be so; if the Master says run, our only safe course is to obey. Jesus does not say, if they persecute you kill them. No, no. Again—"Pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." This does not sound much like fighting, does it? Again, Rom. 12: 14—"Bless (not kill) them which persecute you; bless, and CURSE NOT." When we assist in waging war on our fellow men, we certainly curse them, for war is one of the greatest curses that ever visited this earth. Again, read verse 17th,—"Recompense to no man evil for evil." Suppose rebellion is an evil. We admit that it is; yea, more, we believe that the treason of Jeff. Davis and his associates is in open violation of every principle of right. But are we therefore to disobey God, and pay him back evil for evil? God says to us, "Recompense to no man (not even traitors) evil for evil." Verse 18th,—"As much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." I ask, does not the choice lie with you always whether to take up arms or refrain? Certainly. Then it lies with you to refrain from fighting if you choose thus to do. "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." It may not be possible for you to prevent others from manifesting a disposition to fight, even towards yourself; but, so far as yourself is concerned, you can do just as you please, and God commands you to be at peace with all men. To this end pray, as exhorted above. Verse 19,—"Beloved, avenge not yourselves." Why? Because it is written, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." Here we have an utter prohibition of all acts of resistance, in language so plain that none need misunderstand. It is best for us to bow in humble submission to the plain injunctions of the new covenant of God, though it be contrary to our feelings and inclinations. I must say that I have been greatly surprised that people who have been so thoroughly enlightened as we in the doctrines of the New Testament, should suppose that christians could be justified in using carnal weapons. "Our weapons," says Paul, "are not carnal." But he closes his instructions in Rom. 12, in the following language: "Therefore, if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink. . . . Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

Is it to be supposed that, after Paul has laid down principles, rules, regulations, and laws by which gospel believers are to be governed at all times, and under every class of circumstances, that he will at the very next breath advocate a system of policy exactly the opposite? Can we suppose that, in that part of his teaching contained in the 12th chapter, he will inculcate the doctrine of peace, and entire practical non-resistance, and then in the 13th chapter turn a complete somersault, and advocate war and bloodshed? I trow not. The Son of God, in the most positive language, as also by every act of his life, enforces the doctrine of peace. See Matt. 5: 34, where, in contrasting the old and new dispensations, he says: "Ye have heard it hath been said, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: but I say unto you that ye resist not evil." And then, to make the matter unmistakably plain, he adds, as a sort of explanatory comment, "But whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." Go, now, to Gethsemane's garden, to Pilate's judgment hall, and the cross of Calvary, and see how in silent, perfect submission he lived—just as he taught. Then read, "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind.—1 Pet. 4: 1. If we do this, we shall have the "mind of Christ," (1 Cor. 2: 16,) and like as the mind of Christ dictated him, so shall we be dictated by an intuitive principle in all the ways of peace. Again read—"For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps." . . . "Who, when he was reviled, REVILED NOT AGAIN; when he suffered, HE THREATENED NOT; but committed himself (margin—his cause) to him who judgeth righteously." We are here taught that Christ is our great example, and we are required to follow his steps. If we do follow his steps, we shall always walk in the path of peace.

Every thing in the gospel is on the principle of cause and effect. The doctrine is there clearly maintained that every act of our lives which involves a moral principle, is the legitimate result of a certain condition of mind. On the truthfulness of this proposition depends the doctrine of all experimental religion. Let us try the war question on this principle. This we shall do in a very brief manner. Read James 4: 1. "From whence come wars and fightings?" This question covers the whole ground. In the phrase "wars and fightings" is comprehended every conflict of man with his fellow man, from the vast battle field where millions are arrayed in deadly strife, and thrones and crowns are lost and won, down to the midnight broil where drunken frenzy buries the dagger deep in the heart of his rum-crazed companion. Whatever, therefore, the answer given to this question may be, the source from which every scene of strife has emanated, that has cursed the world during all its years of blood and carnage, is infallibly fixed. Hear the answer given by inspiration:—"Come they not from your own lusts, that war in your members?" Thus inspiration has unalterably fixed the conclusion, that all wars and fightings are the legitimate promptings of a lustful, carnal mind. The same idea is distinctly stated in Gal. 5: 20, where hatred, variance, wrath and strife are placed by Paul among the works of the flesh. Shall we be justified in following the conceivings of our lusts? Hearken: "Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth DEATH."—James 1: 15. Again, "If we live after the flesh, we SHALL DIE."—Rom. 8: 13. Jesus tells us plainly that every tree will bear its own natural fruit. The moral character of every man is known by the spontaneous gushings of his heart, manifested in words and deeds. "The fruit of righteousness," says James, "is sown in peace of them that make peace."—James 3: 18. Paul says, Gal. 5: 22, that the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, etc. In 1 Cor. 14: 4, we are told that charity suffereth long and is KIND. The principles here laid down as the fruits of righteousness, charity and the Spirit of God, are opposed to war, and consequently the heart that is wholly under the influence of the Spirit of God, and a principle of divine love and righteousness, cannot fight. We appeal to every christian heart, whether in the hour when the blood of Jesus Christ first was made efficacious to the cleansing you from all sin, you could have engaged in slaughtering your fellow men? We venture the assertion that every regenerate soul was, when first converted, possessed of an intuitive principle that loathed all war and strife. To no point in our history, as christians, can we more appropriately refer to learn what were the intuitive beatings of a regenerate heart, than to that hour when, stainless and pure, it came forth from the fountain opened for all uncleanness, and begun the life of God. At that point we were "made partakers of the divine nature." Then we were possessed of "the mind of Christ"—were "filled with the Spirit." Then that covenant was written on our hearts, which is "peace on earth and good will towards men."

Dear brethren, fall not out by the way. "As you have received Christ Jesus, so walk ye in him." Then shall "the peace of God rule in your hearts." Then you will bear "the fruits of the Spirit"; and when the Prince of Zion shall establish his reign of perpetual peace, in righteousness and equity forevermore, you may walk in the light of the city of God, and "delight yourselves in the abundance of peace," so long as eternal ages roll. The last storm is gathering. O, then, dear brethren, "be diligent, that you may be found of Him in peace, without spot and blameless." While the nations are mustering to the last conflict, may God keep us in "the peace of the gospel," and bring us safe to the promised rest of his people. Amen.

Selections.

Secret Prayer.

There is no christian duty more important than secret prayer. And yet there is, perhaps, none more neglected. Every christian who would "grow in grace" must pray to God; and he must pray in secret. A person may gather his family around the family altar, morning and evening, and lead them in prayer. He may go to the social prayer meeting, and there take his part in leading the prayers of that meeting. He may go to the sanctuary, and even enter the sacred desk, and there conduct the prayers of the great congregation. He may do all this, and yet seldom be found alone, wrestling with God in secret prayer. We suppose there is no better test, by which a person may determine his standing with God. If one truly delights in being alone, and holding communion with his God, it is, we think, good evidence that he has some claim to the privileges of the children of God. On the other hand, if he has no delight in this part of devotional service, he has reason to doubt the genuineness of his piety.

The excitement of the services in the house of God may stimulate him. He may, with great apparent earnestness, take part in the duty of prayer, under such stimulus. At the family altar, also, there may be much to cause him to seem even to delight in prayer. But put him in a different position. Take away from him all those surroundings, and place him alone with his God, where there is nothing around him to excite, except the thought that God is there, and how does he relish religion? Does he delight, under such circumstances, to hold communion with God? The question is not, does he pray, or say prayers, in secret, but does he delight in such intercourse with God?

God certainly teaches the duty of secret prayer both by precept and example. "Enter thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret." And Jesus retired alone to pray. Now we do not suppose it is an absolute necessity, that every one should have some secret room into which he could retire, in order that he may engage in secret prayer. This is often impossible. A person may engage in this duty, even when employed in the busy scenes of life. He may lift up the silent secret prayer to God. . . .

But while secret prayer may be acceptably offered to God, under such circumstances, still we think that under ordinary circumstances, each one should aim to be alone, and spend a portion of each day in prayer. And especially where parents are raising a family of children, does this seem important. And we think that while prayer is to be in secret, still they should not aim to keep the fact that they engage in it, a secret from their children. On the contrary, these devotions should be so managed, that the children may know that their parents spend a portion of each day in secret prayer. This is important for the benefit of their children. Example has a much greater influence upon their minds than precept. A little incident, which will illustrate our meaning, just occurs to mind. A little boy, of about four years, was once, in our hearing, repeating his evening prayer to his father. After finishing his prayer, he innocently looked up at his father, and said: "Pa, do you say your prayers in bed?" The little fellow had never noticed his father saying his prayers, and he supposed he must do it in bed.—Christian Instructor.

The Guillotine.

Louis Blanc, in the recently issued eleventh volume of his History of the French Revolution, tells the following interesting story of the invention of the guillotine:

Under the old regime it had been one of the privileges of the noblesse, when condemned to death, to have their heads cut off instead of being hung, as was the case with the commonalty. From a desire to render the punishments of all classes equal and similar, as well as from an inclination to abridge the sufferings of the patient, arose the guillotine. The problem submitted on the 10th of October, 1789, to the constituent assembly, by Dr. Guillotine, one of its members, was a problem which he flattered himself he had resolved, and was, "how to inflict capital punishment in a uniform manner by means of a simple machine." The discussion of the subject was adjourned until the 1st of December, when it was first of all objected by Abbe Maury that the act of decapitation might have the effect of depraving the people by familiarizing them with the sight of blood; upon which Guillotine exclaimed: "With my machine, I could cut off your head in the twinkling of an eye, and without giving you the least pain." A loud burst of laughter followed this remark—tragic laughter! when one reflects that the guillotine, that horrible machine, which, as yet, had neither shape nor name, was destined to destroy the greater number of those whom it caused to laugh! And what is not less tragic is, that the joke, spreading beyond the walls of the assembly, caused Dr. Guillotine's remark to become the source of innumerable pleasantries. The idea of taking off a man's head in the twinkling of an eye, out of pure philanthropy, was so irresistibly comic . . . Couplets were written on the doctor and his machine, which it was thought right to baptize with a feminine form of his own name, Guillotine; and the result was, that while the instrument owed its origin to a sentiment of humanity, it derived its name from a song!

In a novel of Dumas, M. Guillotine is made a luxurious amateur in the art of execution. M. Louis Blanc, setting aside the old romantic materials, shows that the popular notion of M. Guillotine perishing by the knife he was supposed to have brought into fashion arose from the circumstances of his having been imprisoned during the Reign of Terror, the fact being that he survived the Revolution, and died in his bed in 1814. He not only deprives M. Guillotine of his glory as a martyr to the new engine of death, but of the honor which appertains to an inventor. He did sketch a suggestion of such an instrument, but the first machine was actually fabricated by M. Louis, Secretary to the College of Surgeons; and the society in the midst of which arose this ghastly symbol was scarcely less light-hearted outside the prisons than inside of them.

Covetousness in the Church.

It is beyond question that the crying sin of Israel to-day is covetousness; stinginess, in the church, is the prevailing epidemic. We can hardly think of another evil so huge and monstrous as this, which exists in well nigh every congregation. It paralyzes faith, impairs charity, and nullifies hope. It is the real, hard, obstinate heresy with which God's ministry is obliged to contend. It hinders all evangelical efforts at home and abroad. It cripples the exertions of pastors in every attempt to do good. It renders the growth of personal piety impossible in its victim. A stingy church member will let his heart go after its covetousness, while listening to the most animating discourse, and his tight fist will choke his conscience, even while it is gasping for a breath of vital air. He may admire his minister, and feel an attachment for the church in which he is wont to worship; and yet the moment he is required to show his love for Christ by proper works of benevolence or charity, he straightway takes counsel of his stinginess, and is seized with a spasm of economy, which shuts up his heart as closely as a vault, from which the light of day is excluded.

Many professors are, perhaps, unconscious of their meanness in religious matters. If they were, no doubt they would repent, and do works meet for repentance. But until they can be shown, and made, by the grace of the Holy Spirit, to feel how great their sin in this regard truly is, there can be little hope of reformation. Let us, therefore, propose a few questions which professors may ponder, with a view of covetousness, and chargeable with inexcusable stinginess.

1. Do you believe that you and all you possess belong to Christ? Were you saved by the precious blood of redemption, only that you might the more indulge your own selfishness, or that you might no longer live for yourself, but for Him who died in your stead? A careful and honest answer to this inquiry will go far toward determining your duty with respect to religious efforts for the salvation of others.

2. Are your gifts for church purposes a single tithe of the amount of your expenditures for luxuries in your own home? If you have sufficient means to comply with the demands of fashion, or with the claims of an increasing business, can you give these as reasons for diminishing or withholding your contributions for religious purposes? It is an indisputable fact, that many professors expend so much upon [illegible] that they have little to bestow in charity. But are they blameless? Is this course consistent with the claims of an enlightened christian conscience?

3. Do you place yourself in debt in order to grow richer than you now are, and then plead that because you are in debt you have nothing to give? This is a subterfuge very commonly resorted to among farmers. They add farm to farm, and while the gains are all the while increasing, still they grow more and more reluctant to aid religious efforts. If there is a little debt on the church, they are unable to help in removing it; if the parsonage needs repairing, it must remain untouched until individual greed has done its perfect work; if missions want assistance, or charitable interests plead for aid, they must be sent empty away from him, who offers in excuse the existence of debt, which is, in fact, but a real advance toward increasing wealth. Every pastor knows very well how the subtle devil of covetousness entrenches himself in the human heart under the above named pretexts.

4. Have you made it a principle to live for others, as well as for yourself? If you have, then you will find little difficulty in so managing your affairs as to save a portion of your weekly gains for the service of God. If you have not, then beware lest you fall into the error and condemnation of Balaam, the son of Beor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness.—Christian Intelligencer.

Jewish Anecdote.

The following anecdote is translated from an interesting work published in Paris, written by G. Ben. Levi, for the use of the Israelitish youth of France:

David in the Wilderness—A Legend.—When King David was flying across the desert of Ziph, pursued by Saul, he grew impatient at the quantity of spiders' webs which he had to break, when he was pricked by a worm, and he cried out in a passion, "Great God! why hast thou created flies and spiders which are of no use, and only serve to hurt me?" "I will make you understand," cried a prophetic voice.

Some time afterwards he descended Mount Achild, and ventured by night into the camp of Saul, to deprive him, while asleep, of his arms and cap. After having succeeded in this project, he was about to retire, when his foot became entangled in the legs of the faithful Abner, who slept beside Saul. Great was the embarassment of David how he should disengage his foot from the hold of Abner, without awakening this valiant servant, and to find him surprised thus alone in the camp of the enemy.

David's anxiety was at its height, when a fly bit Abner on the leg, and the pain which the warrior felt made him make a movement, of which David availed himself to withdraw his foot. He fled quickly, thanking God for having made flies.

Saul, however, pursued him into the desert, and to escape him, David had slipped into a cavern, where God sent a spider, which wove its web across the entrance of the rock. Saul and Abner were quickly on the footsteps of the fugitive, and Abner having said, "he is doubtless concealed in the hollow of this rock, let us go and seek him there."

"It is useless," answered Saul, "do you not see that the entrance of the cavern is covered with a spider's web, and that no one could have entered without breaking that delicate tissue?"

"You are right," answered Abner, and they retired to continue their search in another part of the desert.

Then David cast himself upon the ground and cried, "Lord, pardon me for having doubted thy wisdom—henceforth my feeble understanding shall not cease to humble itself before the sublime harmonies of thy creation. Lord, the smallest of thy creatures is of use to man; the spiders and flies themselves have a part to perform in nature. Lord, what thou sayest is well, what thou doest is just."—Selected by J. S. W.

MANNERS.—Manners are the shadows of virtues—the momentary display of those qualities which our fellow creatures love and respect. If we strive to become, then, what we strive to appear, manners may often be rendered useful guides in the performance of our duties.

☞ There exists in human nature a disposition to murmur at the disappointments and calamities incident to it, rather than to acknowledge with gratitude the blessings by which they are more than counterbalanced.

☞ Envy, like cold poison, benumbs and stupefies, and thus, as if conscious of its own impotence, it folds its arms in despair, and sits cursing in a corner.

☞ Did universal Charity prevail, earth would be a heaven, hell a fable.

☞ One forgives everything to him who forgives himself nothing.

☞ Where a man's business is, there is the place for his religion to manifest itself.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications on sale at this office, should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of [illegible] cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ [illegible]

For the Crisis.

My Boyhood's Home.

(AT MANAYUNK, PA.)

I.

O pleasing Pennsylvania scene!
Where hills of strength and beauty rise,
Where Schuylkill's waters glide between,
And feast the wand'ring traveler's eyes.

II.

I seem beside my parents' door,
And listen to the murm'ring dam;
I hear the hill-side railroad's roar,
And view the rushing chariot's flame.

III.

Methinks I hear—as oft I've heard—
That plaintive, deep, mysterious strain,
Which once my youthful spirit stirred,—
"Oh, boatmen, sound that horn again!"

IV.

I think of factory girls and boys,
'Mid spools and spin·les, wheels and looms;
Their hours of toil, their play-day joys—
Their frugal fare, their lowly homes.

V.

What quiet Sabbath hours were those
When Peace her mantle spread abroad,
And filled the weary with repose,
And led their thoughts to Nature's God!

VI.

Days of my youth, you've long since pass'd,
And given place to sadder years!
Life's cup hath not a changeless taste,
'Tis intermix'd with smiles and tears!

VII.

And now behold Columbia weeps,
Crush'd down by hordes of treach'rous men:
Perhaps her proud, majestic steps,
Shall never more be heard again!

VIII.

Weep not, my soul, thy anchor, Hope,
Rests not where mortal vessels sail;
'Tis firm on Christ,—look up, look up,
Where Jesus stands within the veil!

IX

Soon shall the great Deliverer come
And chase earth's bitter curse away:
Then saints shall find a changeless home,—
Hail, happy day! hail, happy day!

Newark, N. J. J. L.

For the Crisis.

Ought Christians under any Circumstances to use Carnal Weapons?

BY S. W. BISHOP.

This question, at the present time, seems to be of deep practical importance to us as a people. And when we attempt to answer it, it will amount to nothing that we urge our opinions, or make an effort to frame our prejudices into arguments, or twist our notions into logical conclusions. Such efforts will only produce sophisms, and will avail nothing with such as have "the spirit of a sound mind." We come then to the question and remark: if it is right for christians under certain circumstances to bear arms, it must be duty for them thus to do. For example: if my life is in danger from the hand of the midnight assassin, it is clearly an atrocious wrong for him thus to put my life in jeopardy; and as God has in his system of divine jurisprudence enacted that all wrong shall receive its legitimate punishment, nothing is clearer than that, if God has appointed an agency in administering that punishment, we can only discharge our duty to him as christians by unflinchingly acting the part assigned us. None will question but I should, under the above named circumstances, be justified in the sight of God in taking any course not forbidden me to take in the law of Christ to save my life. If it be just for me thus to do, it certainly is duty, provided my life is worth anything to the cause of God or the good of my fellow-men. If, therefore, under extreme circumstances, like those named above, the exigency of the case makes fighting justifiable, and that too in the sight of a just and holy God, and in the light of the gospel of his dear Son, no opposite course can be just under the same class of circumstances. And as it is always duty in every system of action to choose the right, and turn our feet from the wrong course, whatever course is strictly just in the sight of God it is plainly our duty to follow that course; and if we would stand justified before him, that duty must be discharged with the utmost faithfulness.

To take any other view of this question is to say, virtually, that the system of ethics given us in the gospel of Christ is a mere chance plan or system of expediency, left wholly at the mercy or to the disposal of circumstances. If it is duty under any circumstances for christians to fight, we must expect the same will be stated in clear and unequivocal language. To suppose otherwise is to impeach the wisdom of the infinite God. If obedience is required to any law, wisdom and justice would require that such law shall be given in the clearest language to those on whom its requirements are binding. God has always acted on this principle, both as respects positive and negative commandments. The requisitions of God's law not only read plainly "Thou shalt," etc., but they just as distinctly read "Thou shalt not." With respect to this, as every other matter where truth and duty are concerned, our only resort, if we would bring the question to a successful conclusion, is THE WORD OF THE LORD. And when we seek to the word of God for instruction, we are not to resort to an abrogated system, but to that perfect code of divine laws contained in the glorious gospel of the Son of God. No matter, so far as this question is concerned, what may have been the practices or personal experience of any one or more individuals under the old covenant dispensation. If we admit that that old dispensation has passed away by being superseded by a "new and better covenant," to the requisitions of that new covenant, and to them only, can we refer this question for a lawful and righteous decision. If it is duty for christians to fight under some circumstances, and under others to refrain, we shall find on the one hand not simply a permit, but distinctly stated as a command, this duty made known in the New Testament; and on the other hand a positive prohibition. That is, God must tell us plainly in the new covenant when to fight, and when not to; under what circumstances to use the sword, the musket, the cannon, the bludgeon, or our fists, as the case may require, and when to refrain. It does not become a God of infinite wisdom to ordain rules and regulations by which we are to be governed under particular circumstances, and then leave us in doubt concerning their practical application. Matters of duty are never given in the law of Christ by implication, but in the character of positive commandments. We call attention then to the gospel of Christ, and ask, Can there be pointed out in all that comprehensive system a single requirement enforcing the duty of fighting, under any circumstances whatever? The only answer that can in truth be given is, that no such commandment exists; consequently no such duty is binding on christians. But to carry the matter to its utmost limit, where is there in the law of Christ a command not to fight, qualified with a "provided nevertheless" etc.? I answer, none can be found. The matter is, therefore, put forever at rest, that no such duty is even implied.

But it is urged that the gospel plainly recognizes the fact that earthly governments will exist, and that God recognizes the fact of their existence, as an agency employed by himself in the accomplishment of definite purposes named. This we cheerfully admit. We are most fully aware of the fact that all events, to a certain extent, are under the supervision of the great "I AM." We have no particular faith in the doctrine of chance. God has designed that, up to a certain time, earthly governments shall exist. But surely none will contend that therefore every distinctive feature embodied in all forms of government that shall exist in our world's history are ordained of God! On that supposition the southern doctrine of the divinity of human slavery is the true doctrine. It is a peculiar fact that every nation under heaven that knows anything about God, supposes that God has a strong regard for their particular form of government. This accounts, in a measure at least, for the supposed "divine right of kings," attempted to be forced into King James' translation of the Bible. It is barely possible that certain inferences that are sometimes drawn from particular portions of Paul's writings concerning "divine appointment" with respect to earthly governments generally, would be materially modified provided the work of translating had been done by men wholly unbiassed on this subject. The idea, however, contained in the word of God is simply this: God knew, as he knows all things else, that earthly governments would exist, and he acted on the knowledge of that fact in such a manner as shall result in the accomplishment of his own purposes concerning this world, and shall be for the good of the church. God ordained that the despotic government of Turkey, and the dark and damnable system of Popery should exist, on the same principle that he ordained that other definite forms of government should exist. To say that God has ordained that a certain form of government should exist, is to establish "the divine right of kings." That doctrine being true, the American government is contrary to God's appointment.

It no more follows, because God has ordained that "the powers that be" shall subserve his purpose, that therefore we as christians are required to be identified with, and fight to sustain earthly governments, than it follows that because Christ was delivered by the "determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God," therefore the Jews obeyed a divine requirement, making it duty for them thus to do, when they crucified the Son of God. The same requirements that are in the New Testament to-day, were there in the 10th century. "The powers that be" were at that time, in that part of the world where the great body of the church lived, constituted principally by that form of government denominated by Paul "the Man of sin." The command to "be subject to the powers that be," was, in its true import, just as much binding on christians under that form of government as any other. Mark: Paul does not say that "the powers that be are ordained of God" provided they are constituted by the establishment of a republican form of government. He makes no discriminations or qualifications. The principle, therefore, laid down in Rom 13, applies indiscriminately to every form of government under which christians may live, at all times, and in every locality. If, therefore, Paul's doctrine in the 13th of Romans is that God requires that christians, in order to discharge their duties to earthly governments, must become fully identified with them, and fight to sustain them,—it follows, as a matter of course, that every revolt against any form of government has been in the past, is now in the present, and will be in the future, an open violation of a positive requisition of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Not only so, but all christians, in all ages, are bound by the most solemn obligations to take up arms, and not only assist in putting down such revolt, but do all in their power to establish the government under which they live, no matter what may be its character, on a firm basis. This principle would apply badly in the days of papal, bloody rule. On this principle the men of '76, who "fought the battles of the free," and succeeded in dissolving the union between the American colonies and the mother country, not only did an act of great injustice to the British government, but by persisting in that act, this government has, during all the years of its existence, stood out defiantly in open violation of the law of God. Disobedience long continued does not, on account of its age, change its character in such a manner as to make it an act of obedience to perpetuate the wrong. Therefore to fight to sustain a government established by successful revolution, is to attempt to make treason lawful—treason not only against "the powers that be," but treason against that God who "ordained" them.

The only reasonable position we can take is that, if God has ordained a particular form of government, and required christians to sustain it by fighting for it, etc., etc., to attempt to sustain any other form of government, though our inclinations or prejudices may be gratified by so doing, is an open violation of the law of God. No man can gather from the New Testament the first intimation that the inspired writers ever thought of a republic. The only form of government distinctly named is kingly. Consequently, if Paul refers to any particular form of government in Rom. 13, that government is a kingdom, and not a republic. To fight to sustain a republican form of government on this supposition is, therefore, to fight against God's ordination. But if, (which is the only reasonable conclusion,) Paul in this part of his writings lays down principles that apply equally and indiscriminately to every form of government that shall exist throughout the gospel dispensation, we must put such a construction upon his language as shall be in harmony with reason, righteousness and truth.

It cannot be true that christians are required by Paul to sustain principles of wrong by force of arms, or any other way, though those principles be incorporated into the organic laws of "the powers that be." A government whose foundation is laid in cruelty and injustice, no man can sustain without violating every principle of righteousness and equity contained in the law of Christ. As, therefore, whatever requisition contained in the law of Christ, as given by Paul in Rom. 13, is equally binding at all times, and under every form of government, whether good or bad, it cannot be so construed as to make it duty for christians to fight to sustain earthly governments without doing violence to gospel, common sense, and every man's inherent principle of right. It is true that it is for the good of christians even that government organizations should exist, and God has not only recognized this fact himself, but bid us do the same. But all men, even civil rulers, are free agents; the distinct form that earthly governments will assume is left, in a great measure, if not wholly, dependent upon the whims, caprices, prejudices, education, judgment, etc., etc., of the men who form these governments. To deny this is to make God responsible for every bad government that has cursed our world from its beginning to the present time.

When we manifest a spirit of haughty defiance, and speak in contempt of the blessings that are secured to us by the best government on earth, we are acting in open violation of the clear requirements of the gospel. If we possess the right frame of mind, we shall feel a deep sense of gratitude to God that his providence has placed us under a government in whose organic law are incorporated so many principles of justice and goodness. To all the bad features we are required to submit, provided that such submission does not involve a personal act on our part, which act shall violate some requirement of the gospel. Beyond this, no command of Paul, or any other inspired writer, requires the christian to go. On this principle is the exhortation of Paul in 1 Tim. 2: 1, 2, which reads: "I exhort therefore that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men: for kings, and for all that are in authority." For what are we to pray? Paul tells distinctly. Not that all men should be saved, for God has told us plainly that this never can be. To suppose that in one part of the inspired book we are exhorted to pray for a work to be done, which in another part of the book we are positively assured never can be done, is simply absurd. It is not true, therefore, that we are exhorted to pray that kings and rulers may become christians, for we are exhorted to pray for all men in the sense and for the same purpose that we are exhorted to pray for kings, and all that are in authority. To what intent, then, are we to pray? Let Paul answer. He says we are to pray for these men, that we (christians) may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godliness and honesty. That is, we are to pray to God so to restrain these men in authority—yea, all men—that we may be permitted to lead quiet and peaceable lives, etc.

But what if the government under which we live is cruel and exacting, and in its laws prohibits the carrying out the principles named above? The only gospel answer must be, obey God and leave the consequences with him. But under these extreme circumstances are we not justified in taking up arms to defend ourselves? Listen: "If they persecute you in one city, flee into another." But it is cowardly to run! Well, let it be so; if the Master says run, our only safe course is to obey. Jesus does not say, if they persecute you kill them. No, no. Again—"Pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." This does not sound much like fighting, does it? Again, Rom. 12: 14—"Bless (not kill) them which persecute you; bless, and CURSE NOT." When we assist in waging war on our fellow men, we certainly curse them, for war is one of the greatest curses that ever visited this earth. Again, read verse 17th,—"Recompense to no man evil for evil." Suppose rebellion is an evil. We admit that it is; yea, more, we believe that the treason of Jeff. Davis and his associates is in open violation of every principle of right. But are we therefore to disobey God, and pay him back evil for evil? God says to us, "Recompense to no man (not even traitors) evil for evil." Verse 18th,—"As much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." I ask, does not the choice lie with you always whether to take up arms or refrain? Certainly. Then it lies with you to refrain from fighting if you choose thus to do. "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." It may not be possible for you to prevent others from manifesting a disposition to fight, even towards yourself; but, so far as yourself is concerned, you can do just as you please, and God commands you to be at peace with all men. To this end pray, as exhorted above. Verse 19,—"Beloved, avenge not yourselves." Why? Because it is written, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." Here we have an utter prohibition of all acts of resistance, in language so plain that none need misunderstand. It is best for us to bow in humble submission to the plain injunctions of the new covenant of God, though it be contrary to our feelings and inclinations. I must say that I have been greatly surprised that people who have been so thoroughly enlightened as we in the doctrines of the New Testament, should suppose that christians could be justified in using carnal weapons. "Our weapons," says Paul, "are not carnal." But he closes his instructions in Rom. 12, in the following language: "Therefore, if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink. . . . Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

Is it to be supposed that, after Paul has laid down principles, rules, regulations, and laws by which gospel believers are to be governed at all times, and under every class of circumstances, that he will at the very next breath advocate a system of policy exactly the opposite? Can we suppose that, in that part of his teaching contained in the 12th chapter, he will inculcate the doctrine of peace, and entire practical non-resistance, and then in the 13th chapter turn a complete somersault, and advocate war and bloodshed? I trow not. The Son of God, in the most positive language, as also by every act of his life, enforces the doctrine of peace. See Matt. 5: 34, where, in contrasting the old and new dispensations, he says: "Ye have heard it hath been said, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: but I say unto you that ye resist not evil." And then, to make the matter unmistakably plain, he adds, as a sort of explanatory comment, "But whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." Go, now, to Gethsemane's garden, to Pilate's judgment hall, and the cross of Calvary, and see how in silent, perfect submission he lived—just as he taught. Then read, "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind.—1 Pet. 4: 1. If we do this, we shall have the "mind of Christ," (1 Cor. 2: 16,) and like as the mind of Christ dictated him, so shall we be dictated by an intuitive principle in all the ways of peace. Again read—"For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps." . . . "Who, when he was reviled, REVILED NOT AGAIN; when he suffered, HE THREATENED NOT; but committed himself (margin—his cause) to him who judgeth righteously." We are here taught that Christ is our great example, and we are required to follow his steps. If we do follow his steps, we shall always walk in the path of peace.

Every thing in the gospel is on the principle of cause and effect. The doctrine is there clearly maintained that every act of our lives which involves a moral principle, is the legitimate result of a certain condition of mind. On the truthfulness of this proposition depends the doctrine of all experimental religion. Let us try the war question on this principle. This we shall do in a very brief manner. Read James 4: 1. "From whence come wars and fightings?" This question covers the whole ground. In the phrase "wars and fightings" is comprehended every conflict of man with his fellow man, from the vast battle field where millions are arrayed in deadly strife, and thrones and crowns are lost and won, down to the midnight broil where drunken frenzy buries the dagger deep in the heart of his rum-crazed companion. Whatever, therefore, the answer given to this question may be, the source from which every scene of strife has emanated, that has cursed the world during all its years of blood and carnage, is infallibly fixed. Hear the answer given by inspiration:—"Come they not from your own lusts, that war in your members?" Thus inspiration has unalterably fixed the conclusion, that all wars and fightings are the legitimate promptings of a lustful, carnal mind. The same idea is distinctly stated in Gal. 5: 20, where hatred, variance, wrath and strife are placed by Paul among the works of the flesh. Shall we be justified in following the conceivings of our lusts? Hearken: "Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth DEATH."—James 1: 15. Again, "If we live after the flesh, we SHALL DIE."—Rom. 8: 13. Jesus tells us plainly that every tree will bear its own natural fruit. The moral character of every man is known by the spontaneous gushings of his heart, manifested in words and deeds. "The fruit of righteousness," says James, "is sown in peace of them that make peace."—James 3: 18. Paul says, Gal. 5: 22, that the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, etc. In 1 Cor. 14: 4, we are told that charity suffereth long and is KIND. The principles here laid down as the fruits of righteousness, charity and the Spirit of God, are opposed to war, and consequently the heart that is wholly under the influence of the Spirit of God, and a principle of divine love and righteousness, cannot fight. We appeal to every christian heart, whether in the hour when the blood of Jesus Christ first was made efficacious to the cleansing you from all sin, you could have engaged in slaughtering your fellow men? We venture the assertion that every regenerate soul was, when first converted, possessed of an intuitive principle that loathed all war and strife. To no point in our history, as christians, can we more appropriately refer to learn what were the intuitive beatings of a regenerate heart, than to that hour when, stainless and pure, it came forth from the fountain opened for all uncleanness, and begun the life of God. At that point we were "made partakers of the divine nature." Then we were possessed of "the mind of Christ"—were "filled with the Spirit." Then that covenant was written on our hearts, which is "peace on earth and good will towards men."

Dear brethren, fall not out by the way. "As you have received Christ Jesus, so walk ye in him." Then shall "the peace of God rule in your hearts." Then you will bear "the fruits of the Spirit"; and when the Prince of Zion shall establish his reign of perpetual peace, in righteousness and equity forevermore, you may walk in the light of the city of God, and "delight yourselves in the abundance of peace," so long as eternal ages roll. The last storm is gathering. O, then, dear brethren, "be diligent, that you may be found of Him in peace, without spot and blameless." While the nations are mustering to the last conflict, may God keep us in "the peace of the gospel," and bring us safe to the promised rest of his people. Amen.

Selections.

Secret Prayer.

There is no christian duty more important than secret prayer. And yet there is, perhaps, none more neglected. Every christian who would "grow in grace" must pray to God; and he must pray in secret. A person may gather his family around the family altar, morning and evening, and lead them in prayer. He may go to the social prayer meeting, and there take his part in leading the prayers of that meeting. He may go to the sanctuary, and even enter the sacred desk, and there conduct the prayers of the great congregation. He may do all this, and yet seldom be found alone, wrestling with God in secret prayer. We suppose there is no better test, by which a person may determine his standing with God. If one truly delights in being alone, and holding communion with his God, it is, we think, good evidence that he has some claim to the privileges of the children of God. On the other hand, if he has no delight in this part of devotional service, he has reason to doubt the genuineness of his piety.

The excitement of the services in the house of God may stimulate him. He may, with great apparent earnestness, take part in the duty of prayer, under such stimulus. At the family altar, also, there may be much to cause him to seem even to delight in prayer. But put him in a different position. Take away from him all those surroundings, and place him alone with his God, where there is nothing around him to excite, except the thought that God is there, and how does he relish religion? Does he delight, under such circumstances, to hold communion with God? The question is not, does he pray, or say prayers, in secret, but does he delight in such intercourse with God?

God certainly teaches the duty of secret prayer both by precept and example. "Enter thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret." And Jesus retired alone to pray. Now we do not suppose it is an absolute necessity, that every one should have some secret room into which he could retire, in order that he may engage in secret prayer. This is often impossible. A person may engage in this duty, even when employed in the busy scenes of life. He may lift up the silent secret prayer to God. * * *

But while secret prayer may be acceptably offered to God, under such circumstances, still we think that under ordinary circumstances, each one should aim to be alone, and spend a portion of each day in prayer. And especially where parents are raising a family of children, does this seem important. And we think that while prayer is to be in secret, still they should not aim to keep the fact that they engage in it, a secret from their children. On the contrary, these devotions should be so managed, that the children may know that their parents spend a portion of each day in secret prayer. This is important for the benefit of their children. Example has a much greater influence upon their minds than precept. A little incident, which will illustrate our meaning, just occurs to mind. A little boy, of about four years, was once, in our hearing, repeating his evening prayer to his father. After finishing his prayer, he innocently looked up at his father, and said: "Pa, do you say your prayers in bed?" The little fellow had never noticed his father saying his prayers, and he supposed he must do it in bed.—Christian Instructor.

The Guillotine.

Louis Blanc, in the recently issued eleventh volume of his History of the French Revolution, tells the following interesting story of the invention of the guillotine:

Under the old regime it had been one of the privileges of the noblesse, when condemned to death, to have their heads cut off instead of being hung, as was the case with the commonalty. From a desire to render the punishments of all classes equal and similar, as well as from an inclination to abridge the sufferings of the patient, arose the guillotine. The problem submitted on the 10th of October, 1789, to the constituent assembly, by Dr. Guillotine, one of its members, was a problem which he flattered himself he had resolved, and was, "how to inflict capital punishment in a uniform manner by means of a simple machine." The discussion of the subject was adjourned until the 1st of December, when it was first of all objected by Abbe Maury that the act of decapitation might have the effect of depraving the people by familiarizing them with the sight of blood; upon which Guillotine exclaimed: "With my machine, I could cut off your head in the twinkling of an eye, and without giving you the the least pain." A loud burst of laughter followed this remark—tragic laughter! when one reflects that the guillotine, that horrible machine, which, as yet, had neither shape nor name, was destined to destroy the greater number of those whom it caused to laugh! And what is not less tragic is, that the joke, spreading beyond the walls of the assembly, caused Dr. Guillotine's remark to become the source of innumerable pleasantries. The idea of taking off a man's head in the twinkling of an eye, out of pure philanthropy, was so irresistibly comic . . . Couplets were written on the doctor and his machine, which it was thought right to baptize with a feminine form of his own name, Guillotine; and the result was, that while the instrument owed its origin to a sentiment of humanity, it derived its name from a song!

In a novel of Dumas, M. Guillotine is made a luxurious amateur in the art of execution. M. Louis Blanc, setting aside the old romantic materials, shows that the popular notion of M. Guillotine perishing by the knife he was supposed to have brought into fashion arose from the circumstances of his having been imprisoned during the Reign of Terror, the fact being that he survived the Revolution, and died in his bed in 1814. He not only deprives M. Guillotine of his glory as a martyr to the new engine of death, but of the honor which appertains to an inventor. He did sketch a suggestion of such an instrument, but the first machine was actually fabricated by M. Louis, Secretary to the College of Surgeons; and the society in the midst of which arose this ghastly symbol was scarcely less light-hearted outside the prisons than inside of them.

Covetousness in the Church.

It is beyond question that the crying sin of Israel to-day is covetousness; stinginess, in the church, is the prevailing epidemic. We can hardly think of another evil so huge and monstrous as this, which exists in well nigh every congregation. It paralyzes faith, impairs charity, and nullifies hope. It is the real, hard, obstinate heresy with which God's ministry is obliged to contend. It hinders all evangelical efforts at home and abroad. It cripples the exertions of pastors in every attempt to do good. It renders the growth of personal piety impossible in its victim. A stingy church member will let his heart go after its covetousness, while listening to the most animating discourse, and his tight fist will choke his conscience, even while it is gasping for a breath of vital air. He may admire his minister, and feel an attachment for the church in which he is wont to worship; and yet the moment he is required to show his love for Christ by proper works of benevolence or charity, he straightway takes counsel of his stinginess, and is seized with a spasm of economy, which shuts up his heart as closely as a vault, from which the light of day is excluded.

Many professors are, perhaps, unconscious of their meanness in religious matters. If they were, no doubt they would repent, and do works meet for repentance. But until they can be shown, and made, by the grace of the Holy Spirit, to feel how great their sin in this regard truly is, there can be little hope of reformation. Let us, therefore, propose a few questions which professors may ponder, with a view of covetousness, and chargeable with inexcusable stinginess.

1. Do you believe that you and all you possess belong to Christ? Were you saved by the precious blood of redemption, only that you might the more indulge your own selfishness, or that you might no longer live for yourself, but for Him who died in your stead? A careful and honest answer to this inquiry will go far toward determining your duty with respect to religious efforts for the salvation of others.

2. Are your gifts for church purposes a single tithe of the amount of your expenditures for luxuries in your own home? If you have sufficient means to comply with the demands of fashion, or with the claims of an increasing business, can you give these as reasons for diminishing or withholding your contributions for religious purposes? It is an indisputable fact, that many professors expend so much upon dress, and furniture, and other luxuries, that they have little to bestow in charity. But are they blameless? Is this course consistent with the claims of an enlightened christian conscience?

3. Do you place yourself in debt in order to grow richer than you now are, and then plead that because you are in debt you have nothing to give? This is a subterfuge very commonly resorted to among farmers. They add farm to farm, and while the gains are all the while increasing, still they grow more and more reluctant to aid religious efforts. If there is a little debt on the church, they are unable to help in removing it; if the parsonage needs repairing, it must remain untouched until individual greed has done its perfect work; if missions want assistance, or charitable interests plead for aid, they must be sent empty away from him, who offers in excuse the existence of debt, which is, in fact, but a real advance toward increasing wealth. Every pastor knows very well how the subtle devil of covetousness entrenches himself in the human heart under the above named pretexts.

4. Have you made it a principle to live for others, as well as for yourself? If you have, then you will find little difficulty in so managing your affairs as to save a portion of your weekly gains for the service of God. If you have not, then beware lest you fall into the error and condemnation of Balaam, the son of Beor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness.—Christian Intelligencer.

Jewish Anecdote.

The following anecdote is translated from an interesting work published in Paris, written by G. Ben. Levi, for the use of the Israelitish youth of France:

David in the Wilderness—A Legend.—When King David was flying across the desert of Ziph, pursued by Saul, he grew impatient at the quantity of spiders' webs which he had to break, when he was pricked by a worm, and he cried out in a passion, "Great God! why hast thou created flies and spiders which are of no use, and only serve to hurt me?" "I will make you understand," cried a prophetic voice.

Some time afterwards he descended Mount Achild, and ventured by night into the camp of Saul, to deprive him, while asleep, of his arms and cap. After having succeeded in this project, he was about to retire, when his foot became entangled in the legs of the faithful Abner, who slept beside Saul. Great was the embarassment of David how he should disengage his foot from the hold of Abner, without awakening this valiant servant, and to find him surprised thus alone in the camp of the enemy.

David's anxiety was at its height, when a fly bit Abner on the leg, and the pain which the warrior felt made him make a movement, of which David availed himself to withdraw his foot. He fled quickly, thanking God for having made flies.

Saul, however, pursued him into the desert, and to escape him, David had slipped into a cavern, where God sent a spider, which wove its web across the entrance of the rock. Saul and Abner were quickly on the footsteps of the fugitive, and Abner having said, "he is doubtless concealed in the hollow of this rock, let us go and seek him there."

"It is useless," answered Saul, "do you not see that the entrance of the cavern is covered with a spider's web, and that no one could have entered without breaking that delicate tissue?"

"You are right," answered Abner, and they retired to continue their search in another part of the desert.

Then David cast himself upon the ground and cried, "Lord, pardon me for having doubted thy wisdom—henceforth my feeble understanding shall not cease to humble itself before the sublime harmonies of thy creation. Lord, the smallest of thy creatures is of use to man; the spiders and flies themselves have a part to perform in nature. Lord, what thou sayest is well, what thou doest is just."—Selected by J. S. W.

MANNERS.—Manners are the shadows of virtues—the momentary display of those qualities which our fellow creatures love and respect. If we strive to become, then, what we strive to appear, manners may often be rendered useful guides in the performance of our duties.

☞ There exists in human nature a disposition to murmur at the disappointments and calamities incident to it, rather than to acknowledge with gratitude the blessings by which they are more than counterbalanced.

☞ Envy, like cold poison, benumbs and stupefies, and thus, as if conscious of its own impotence, it folds its arms in despair, and sits cursing in a corner.

☞ Did universal Charity prevail, earth would be a heaven, hell a fable.

☞ One forgives everything to him who forgives himself nothing.

☞ Where a man's business is, there is the place for his religion to manifest itself.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year............$2.00
For a single copy 6 months............1.00
For a single copy 3 months..............50
Five copies to one address for 6 months...4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months...8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months...15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months...22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications on sale at this office, should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, BOSTON, MASS.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year in any part of Massachusetts; and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to pay their postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The [illegible] to all the [illegible] Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 313. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1861. | VOL. XIV. NO. 2.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Pilgrim, Arouse!

Awake! ye drowsy souls, awake!
Your life, your hope, your all's at stake;
Gird on your armor, watch and pray,
Be ready for that glorious day.

The last day perils thicken fast,
The day of grace will soon be past;
The enemy in wrath is here,
Knowing the day of God is near.

The world is arming for the fight,
With carnal weapons, sharp and bright;
The nations, angry, now appear,
The day of God's great wrath is near.

Arouse! ye soldiers of the cross,
Stand up for Jesus, scorn the loss
Of friends or reputation dear,—
The Lord's thy friend, O do not fear.

There's foes without and foes within,—
The world, the flesh, the fruits of sin;
But with the Saviour on our side,
We'll conquer foes and storms outride.

Then fight for Jesus with thy might,
Put all these enemies to flight;
The victory's thine, the crown is sure
For all that to the end endure.

Then when the last great struggle's o'er,
And we have reached that blissful shore,
With shouts of vict'ry through our King,
We'll make the heavenly arches ring.

Springfield, Mass. G. L. RICE.

For the Crisis.

"To the Churches" awaiting the Reign of "the Prince of the Kings of the Earth."

BY E. S. WILLARD.

"All the way in which the Lord our God hath led us."

The following communication is written, not that "we should appear approved," but that God's name may be honored, and his dear children assisted to take and keep the right position in this, "the last time," "though we be as reprobates."

In our experience here, it has been demonstrated to us that sectarianism, as personified in the various denominations in Christendom, with Spiritualism to bring up the rear, (but soon to take the van,) is set in deadly array against a coming Christ and his chosen instruments, "to gather out a people for His name,"—yea, as deadly as was that of the Jews at the first advent. They would sooner distrust their own senses, (as in the case of the blind man healed,) than to believe that Jesus of Nazareth, God's then chosen instrument of blessing to them, had been favored of God to do a miracle. So also in the case of the lame man healed by the apostles—God's then appointed agents to the world. Though "they could say nothing against it," yet, because it came not through them, they would not believe, but "cast him out," thus branding the whole as spurious, notwithstanding five thousand were converted on the occasion. Even so has it been here, as it may appear from the following Reminiscence, at the close of the years 1860 and '61.

"What shall we render to our God for all his benefits to us" during this past year! "Surely goodness and mercy hath followed us," and we have the hope that "we shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever." Blessed be the name of the Lord forever, who, in this year, 1860, directed our steps from our western home, where we resided nineteen years, to again make a home in our native East. We arrived May 23d. Found the place new, but fast settling, and prosperous. Our language on coming was, "Lord, what wilt thou have us do?" During the first few months our way spiritually seemed shut up to every thing but "strong crying and tears," and the unflinching worship of God in our family, and on Lord's days gathering in a circle to read the holy Scriptures in the morning, and in the afternoon to "brake bread." We scattered the good seed in the form of tracts, as we had opportunity. By and by the way was opened for us to [illegible] Baptists. As we found our [illegible] with much feeling how solicitous he had been, ever since hearing of our arrival, to know what we were—fearing we were Spiritualists. We now thanked God "and took courage."

We soon found that mysticism was the bane of the place,—that all hearts quailed before it. They had even made their boasts that Hammonton should be to them what Salt Lake is to the Mormons. As ancient Israel quailed before the giant of Gath, so did modern Israel here quail before this modern Goliath, in his defiance of everything that came in his way. Thus we found things—"all hands hung down, and all knees feeble"; but we "encouraged ourselves in the Lord our God." We contemplated no direct attack upon him, but thought to "fetch a compass behind" him, and then wait until we "heard the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees." He had the ground in a Sunday School, and was making sad havoc in the one long established by the Methodists. It was understood that he only used the Bible as a bow to public opinion—that another book was his choice, and would soon be used. We, seeing this, fetched our compass by throwing open our doors, and inviting all who wished to come in, and join with us in the study of God's word. We commenced with Genesis, and studied the Bible by subjects. The "Creation," the "Fall," the "Penalties," the merciful intimation of a Saviour, the "Call of Abraham," the "Gospel" or "good news of the kingdom" preached to him in the promise of the land of Canaan, the nucleus of the future kingdom of God, soon to be established upon the earth under his seed—the future "Son of David," as so beautifully set forth by Daniel and all the prophets, and the "Revelator." Here we dwelt long and largely, for this is the "field" wherein is hid the treasure "which, when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth" it. By and by, some began to discover this treasure, and gave signs of a desire to purchase it. We encouraged them by telling them how we obtained it, and of what inestimable value it had been to us, from youth to gray hairs. They besought us with tears to intercede for them, which we did with a "hearty good will."

We now began to "hear the sound of a going," to "bestir ourselves" by sending for help, and preparing for the combat. Like Gideon, we had hidden ourselves, and went to threshing wheat; and with him we felt poor, and the least in our Father's house; yet He seemed to say to us, "Go in this thy might, and I will be with thee." We went, and we cried, not, "the sword of the Lord and of Gideon,'" but the sword of the Lord, his "Holy Word," which is more "quick and powerful" than any sword of Gideon, yea, "sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." All fell before it. Shouting and weeping were mingled. Those who had made up their minds before to obtain the "pearl of great price," at the loss of all things, now arose and testified to it with gushing tears; while a number of others, who would have been at a ball that night had it not been for this meeting, sobbed aloud and entreated prayers; while others still, who had been searching the "field" with us, besought our aid in obtaining its "treasure." It was on this occasion that we received a favorable response to our call for help, which we hailed with joy.

The "sound of the gong" still urged us on to another combat. Here we met "the men of Israel," and some of them said, "Why hast thou served us thus, that thou calledst us not when thou wentest out to fight?" We congratulated them upon their readiness to come up "to the help of the Lord against the mighty," and that the bitter curse of Meroz could not fall upon them, etc. Thus they were appeased. We further told them, on this occasion, that we were expecting a reinforcement. This we did with great trembling, fearing their displeasure. They made no response, and there we left it with the great "Captain of our salvation." We found, on this occasion, they had taken the whole into their own hands, and had appointed a general rendezvous a mile distant, in the form of a union prayer-meeting, and invited all to come. We, with our little company, who, even in this meeting, voluntarily distinguished themselves by all joining in concert in the Lord's prayer, (thus shewing their respect for the pearl they had found, by making it their first petition,) not knowing what else to do, followed on, and met with them. Here were [illegible] leanings in the fiery ordeal through which we were called to pass. For a time we seemed lost in the numbers that were about us, but our little train was the life of the meeting. Their new-born hopes and aspirations, so freely expressed in every meeting, were "like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

Thus things passed on for ten successive nights, and then our already advertised reenforcement came, in the person of an experienced under-officer, whose locks had whitened in the service. We modestly submitted it to them, asking if they would accept his services. By vote, the answer came to us, 16 to 17, No! We reported accordingly; but our brother had gone through too many wars to be daunted at this rebuff. "O!" said he, "I will lay aside my officials, and go in as one of you, and take part with the rest." To this they could not object. When his three minutes came they told, every one. "The weapons of our warfare" were used with such skill, that all could but see that he was "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The house was crowded night after night, expecting to hear him preach, but in vain. At last a lady, who made no profession, went to the "rulers of the synagogue," and asked if he might not preach, saying all were desirous to hear him. After much going to and fro, and whispering, they gave out that the motion of the three minutes should be rescinded, so far as he was concerned, and that he should be allowed thirty, and be invited to take the stand. We felt now, for the first time, like taking a long breath since coming among them. "The sword of the spirit"—the word of God—was now wielded with power, saints were comforted and sinners warned.

The next evening he took the same privilege, (no man forbidding him,) and for the time prejudice seemed to melt away as snow before the fire. Two or three rose at once, as he closed, to let their brimming vessels run over, and truly delectable were some of these streams. One of the rulers of the synagogue knelt by his side, and thanked God that, "Apostle-like, he had come among us to help us in this our time of need," and closed up with the Lord's prayer—the first time that it had been offered in all these meetings, except by the speaker and our little train. O bless God! we were in the third heaven, but soon to be cast down to hades, if that be dark!

The next night, the 14th, and last of this union, was a perfect antipode to the foregoing—as if every light had been stricken out, and every voice hushed; and a crowded house, left to sit two long hours in "durance vile," was this, our closing night. One of the rulers (who was absent the two previous nights) took the chair, and announced that this evening must be spent wholly in prayer, to make up for what we had lost the two past evenings! The whole assembly was amazed, and looked one on the other to divine the cause. Not a word of Scripture was read—only "languishing hosannahs" and forced prayers drove the wheelless chariot. Near its close a few "sparks" were emitted, in one or two formally rising for prayers; thus, it may be, they recovered what they had lost.

As they thus "opposed themselves," we announced at the close that we would be obliged to accept the kind offer of one of the aliens of his Hall, and meet there at ten in the morning, (Lord's day) and invited all to attend who wished to hear preaching. They went on and gave out their prayer meetings as usual, for the entire day and evening, there being no preacher in the place. We met, and had a full house. Subject, "What is truth?" God's holy word was held up as the embodiment of truth. The hideous mask that had so long covered it here was torn off, and its beautiful face shone out upon the gazing audience, until with one voice they seemed ready to cry out, "Long live the Word of God!" Men unaccustomed to weep, now seemed to feel it a luxury, and we felt glad to be counted worthy to be believers and honorers of such a book. At the close a Mystic arose and eulogized the speaker, but utterly opposed his literality.

Again in the evening we were regaled. Subject, "Why do we believe?" The answer was, because the blessed God, in his loving condescension, challenges our every sense to faith. This was impressively illustrated by Scripture examples. On this occasion his fidelity and valor were challenged to testify against the crying sin of this place—Mysticism. He did it with such care and consummate skill that every arrow stuck, yet without apparently aiming once in that direction; at the close, however, [illegible] sorted to. We began now to see where "the sound of a going" had led us—even to face the enemy upon his own ground—yea, in his own temple! The spirit of the giant was chafed, and he was arming for the combat. We looked to our "Great Captain," and met boldly in His name. His great plan of siege for the recovery of a revolted world from the "powers of darkness" was spread before us in a masterly manner, as it had been made "plain upon tables," and the "hour of its accomplishment come!" Oh! glory. The champion of Mysticism was on hand, with his "tongue whet like a sword," and his bow bent to shoot his "arrows, even bitter words." His "suit" was also about him, and marked was their impatience; yet our "Captain" commanded peace, and peace there was; not only until our brother was through, but until we could arise and testify before them all that these meetings in this place, at this time, were the result of the honor which God had shown to the exaltation and study of his literal word—the holy Bible! We then invited all to join us in this who would. Privilege was then given for any to arise who wished to honor Christ in baptism, when two of our little company had the boldness, in these trying circumstances, to arise, bless God! Several times was our adversary commanded to his seat before the meeting could be closed, after which the winds were let loose. For the space of three hours they staid, contradicting and blaspheming—saying, among other things too dark for these pages, that "it was a good thing Jesus Christ learned the carpenter's trade while on earth; he can have the New Jerusalem all built by the time he comes back;" "Jesus Christ will be our next president." O how it grieves us to write such things! May He soon be avenged. Thus closed the labors of our brother, having been with us six days and nights, and only having had the privilege of preaching three times!

(Concluded next week.)

For the Crisis.

Compensation—Justice.

The "hard times" are upon us; in a greater or lesser degree we all feel it. We have only to witness the general suspension of business in our manufactories, and the wanderings of the unemployed in our large cities, and the observance of the little home in the town, to be well satisfied of the fact. Now it is that a general question must arise in the minds of those who have, for a long period of years, been in possession of full employment, and during which time they have not been subjected to any material loss, i. e., no calamity beyond the incidental events of life have overtaken them—they can reflect, and say that they have been well remunerated for the time and labor they have expended; perfect satisfaction was ever afforded them from their employers, and altogether the years passed pleasingly; but by these persons there has been too little regard paid to the future; they seem as though the present was all they cared for, and every dollar they earned they thought it their privilege to spend.

Improvidence is a ruling feature of our times, to say nothing of extravagance; and to hear persons use that scripture "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," and to see the manner in which they appropriate it to their own lusts, you could but be thoroughly satisfied that they are honest in the appropriation. Now I have little to say to those of the world who use this scripture, for it is evident they live unto themselves, in that they sow to the flesh, for which sowing they will have the pleasurable satisfaction of reaping corruption; but I have a word or two with those who professedly call upon the name of the Lord, and style themselves Christians.

Compensation is a recompense, and all who labor are justly entitled thereto. No man labors with other thoughts than that, when the labor is performed, the payment will follow; this is correct; and, seeing I have earned so much, the question should arise, how shall I spend it so as to do so providently? Now this, I fear, is a question that too little intrudes itself upon the reflection of those who are only stewards of another's wealth. "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." All we have and enjoy comes from God. "Every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning"; therefore, "as the stewards of the manifold grace of God," Christians should be very careful how they spend that which is simply given for good use.

I have heard the inquiry made, "Why are we here, and what good is there in our being here?" [illegible] there is a day in the future that shall declare even this. That day, it hasteth greatly!

Christians, I ask your attention. Can you reflect on the good times you have enjoyed, of uninterrupted success in your pursuits after the bread that perishes, of the long continued health of yourselves and family, of the pleasure you have enjoyed in thinking and talking on the name of the Lord, with all other mercies, too many and too great to mention,—can you reflect on these things and say you have used them—not abused them? There are none among us who can say I am wholly clean and free from censure! The very nature we possess is so treacherous that, when we would do good, evil is present with us; it therefore is incumbent upon us to bring into subjection this law of the flesh, and make it subservient to the law of God. To provide things honestly in the sight of all men is as great a duty as "thou shalt not steal," and He who blesses us with ALL and more than we need, will compensate us with eternal life and glory if we use the mercies dispensed so liberally.

All that God does by way of compensation is done in justice. He proposes to reward those who seek for glory, honor and immortality, with eternal life; he proposes to call us his children if we will be adopted into his family; he proposes as a compensation that, if we suffer for Christ, we shall also reign with him; he proposes if we do his will we shall inherit the promises. Behind all these, and many more proposals beside, there is such an evident exhibition of justice that I am quite in love with all God proposes, for I am well assured that the proposer will be the disposer. Justice is that essential perfection in God whereby he is infinitely righteous and just in his nature and works; the character he bears is so opposed to that which man manifests, that the contrast is the more apparent. In justice to God's own character he must perform all he proposes to. Contrasted with justice as viewed by man, (judging from what we see and experience,) how truly great the contrast! To-day man engages to perform some duty or obligation, and to-morrow fails, either wantonly or of necessity; man is mortal and cannot be depended upon. To do justly is what God requires of us. We can do it if we will, for he has never required that from man he cannot perform. Therefore let us be slow to promise, lest, failing to perform, we are found exactors and unrighteous. That man who intends to do justly, must promise little and perform that little. "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth." G. W. Y.

New York.

For the Crisis.

Will the wicked Dead live again?

In our last, we referred to Psa. 9: 17 and Dan. 12: 2, in proof that the wicked dead will live again; not, however, to live eternally, but to die a second death.

We will now proceed to notice a few passages in the New Testament to prove the wicked will live again. The first passage to claim attention is John 5: 28, 29. "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." Now, what is said in this passage in regard to the resurrection of the good, is said also of the resurrection of the bad; the original being the same in both cases, viz., "eis anastasin" of life, and "eis anastasin" of damnation, or judgment. If, therefore, the good or righteous come forth "unto the resurrection of life," the same is declared of the bad, or wicked; for it is said they will come forth "unto the resurrection of damnation." Both classes live again; but what is the difference in the life they live? Why, the righteous come forth unto eternal life, and the wicked to die again, or to be turned back again into sheol or hades, as in Psa. 9: 17, as shown in our last. In order to make this plain, we will first notice the fact that there are several different words in the Greek, which are rendered "life," "shall live," "quickeneth," and "live again," etc. Two of these words deserve particular attention. 1. The word rendered life is from zoee. The meaning, according to Greenfield, is—"life, i. e., animated existence, state of being alive, eternal life, immortality." 2. The word rendered "live again" is from anazao, and is defined by Greenfield to mean—"to live again, recover life," etc., and occurs five times in the New Testament. Examples: Luke 15: 24, 32, Rom. 14: 9, and Rev. 20: [illegible] "the rest of the dead lived (anazao) not again until the thousand years were finished." This is a strong point, for the same word rendered lived (not) again, here in Rev. 20: 5, is found in Rom. 14: 9, where it is said of our Saviour: "Christ both died, and rose and revived," etc. Now, if Christ died and revived, or lived again, then will the wicked be revived, or live again! But what is the difference? Plainly this: Christ declares, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold I am alive forevermore! (Rev. 1: 18); but of the wicked he says, they live again, (anazao) yet they will die a second death—they will not be "alive forevermore!" Therefore, as in John 5: 29, the righteous will come forth unto the resurrection of life—life eternal—(zoee), but the wicked will come forth unto the resurrection of damnation, or live again (anazao) to die a second death!

T. M. PREBLE.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 3d, '61.

Your Mission.

If you cannot on the ocean
Sail among the swiftest fleet,
Rocking on the highest billows,
Laughing at the storms you meet—
You can stand among the sailors,
Anchored yet within the bay,
You can lend a hand to help them,
When they launch their boats away.

If you are too weak to journey
Up the mountains steep and high,
You can stand within the valley
While the multitudes go by;
You can chant in happy measures
As they slowly pass along;
Though they might forget the singer,
They will not forget the song.

If you have not gold and silver
Ever ready at command;
If you cannot, toward the needy,
Reach an ever open hand;
You can visit the afflicted,
O'er the erring you can weep;
You can be a true disciple,
Sitting at the Saviour's feet.

If you cannot, in the conflict,
Prove yourself a soldier true;
If, where the fire and smoke are thickest,
There's no work for you to do;
When the battle-field is silent,
You can go with careful tread,
You can bear away the wounded,
You can cover up the dead.

Do not, then, stand idly waiting
For some greater work to do;
Fortune is a lazy goddess,
She will never come to you.
Go and toil in any vineyard,
Do not fear to do or dare;
If you want a field of labor,
You can find it anywhere.

For the Crisis.

Truth Evolved.

The proclamation of the Messiah, which has been sounding through the world for years, has caused such an investigation of the Scriptures as was seldom, if ever, known in the history of the world. A light burst upon the human mind from the word of God, which has been received independent of former creeds and views, and all must acknowledge that many most important truths have been evolved, which have for years been buried beneath the rubbish of doctrine and traditions of men, to which, in many instances, Popery itself gave birth. Among the truths brought to the surface may be mentioned, as of vital importance, the sleep of the dead until the resurrection, and the utter destruction of the wicked in the great and notable day of the Lord. These truths, unpopular and heretical as they may be in the estimation of the nominal church and the world, are nevertheless plainly taught in the word of God' so plainly that we are astonished that error, subtle as she is, has ever been able to obscure them. We are surely living at an important epoch—a time when truth should speak, and its influence be made to bear upon the hearts and consciences of men.

When we are convinced of truth ourselves, we should be fearless and decided in its proclamation. Here we are in the closing scenes of earth's eventful story, and the direful effects of Adam's fall Can the true watchman hold his peace? Never. With the old theory (or present belief of the church) that the soul at death goes to its reward, does it not do away with the need of a resurrection? How can men anxiously desire and long for it with such views? They should rather desire death, for that leads to the mansions of bliss, and in that they receive the consummation of their hope. But how contrary is this to the preaching of Christ and his apostles, and, in fact to the whole Bible. The Savior taught that well doing should be recompensed at the resurrection of the just. The apostles placed their hope in the resurrection from the dead. And so do we. All [illegible]

For the Crisis.

To the Discontented.

As few or none have their outward circumstances always to their minds, so they are more or less tempted to murmur, and many are actually guilty of sin. It is therefore a subject of some importance to know the remedy. Resignation to the will of God is the only radical cure; but yet there are proper means to be used, to effect an end so desirable. Be resolved then, through grace, to attend to the following advice.

Consider, whatever be your outward circumstances, they are far better than you deserve. You have rather deserved to be cut off from the enjoyment and hope of all mercy; and yet how many mercies surround you! No cup of affliction is so bitter, but has some mixture of mercy. Can you not see many who are more afflicted than yourselves? You may be denied of some of the smaller favors which God bestows upon others; yet he grants the gospel and its blessings, which are far greater. He thereby puts it in your power to have a well-founded hope that this life shall be your only state of suffering, and that the next will be a state of perfect enjoyment.

God administers to all with wise and benevolent hand; consequently, you have every possible reason to rest satisfied with his administration. Other circumstances might expose you to peculiar and almost resistless temptations; but all these are escaped by being placed as you are. Were you in any other circumstance, without a suitable frame of mind, it would not lessen your misery or increase your happiness. But with a right temper, you may be happy where you are, as far as happiness can consist with a state of trial.

Fervent prayer should be used under trials and on all occasions. It will be found eminently useful in every kind of trial, God has appointed it as a means of grace. The use of all other means of grace will prove ineffectual, if this be neglected. God has declared he will be sought unto, to do all these things. The more you are tempted not to pray so much, the more go to God in prayer. If tempted you cannot pray, be resolved to try, and ask that you may pray aright; if tempted it will be presumption to pray, tell Satan it is better to rely on the mercy of God in prayer, according to his command, than to rely simply on his justice. Whatever may be your temptations, do not neglect to pray. Check the first approach of evil by prayer. By so doing you will prevent evil from getting a place in the heart, as it would do if the duty were neglected. Much is often lost by allowing the mind to become so distressed with temptations, before going to God in prayer, that it is thereby unfitted for the duty, and it makes the victory much more difficult to be obtained. Therefore give the enemy no advantage, but pray without ceasing. He cannot withstand the prayer of faith. C. D.

Bangor, Me.

For the Crisis.

Down East.

I've been "away down East." I have been disappointed in the people there—as much so as some New Englanders have been with the Canadian people. I went to the Conference, expecting to see a dozen or so,—about five or six preachers; but there! the preachers made quite a congregation of themselves. They can preach too. They can give you the reasons of their hope just as quick as your Southern folks can.

The cause is in a good state there. It is a time now when people can hear. I thought the war had stopped all religious interest. It has not. The world is still the world, but the truth is rising. The church is rising. Those who are not in the war spirit, are getting filled with the Spirit of God.

Brethren, don't forget the churches in Maine. They have engaged a missionary there, an efficient one, I think—Bro. O. R. Fassett. I hope the friends in Mass. who are in the habit of spending the Lord's money foolishly, will send them some tracts. You can do them good, no mistake, these silent messengers are blessed of God to the good of souls. Let them be scattered far and near. Let them be paid for by some rich one in Israel, and then scattered free among the poor. MAINE.

☞ One of our greatest statesmen, when asked what was his wish, said, "I have no wish but peace, peace." I appeal to all who are absorbed in business—to all who are mixed up with various social, political and national relationships, [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 313. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1861. | VOL. XIV. NO. 2.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Pilgrim, Arouse!

Awake! ye drowsy souls, awake!
Your life, your hope, your all's at stake;
Gird on your armor, watch and pray,
Be ready for that glorious day.

The last day perils thicken fast,
The day of grace will soon be past;
The enemy in wrath is here,
Knowing the day of God is near.

The world is arming for the fight,
With carnal weapons, sharp and bright;
The nations, angry, now appear,
The day of God's great wrath is near.

Arouse! ye soldiers of the cross,
Stand up for Jesus, scorn the loss
Of friends or reputation dear,—
The Lord's thy friend, O do not fear.

There's foes without and foes within,—
The world, the flesh, the fruits of sin;
But with the Saviour on our side,
We'll conquer foes and storms outride.

Then fight for Jesus with thy might,
Put all these enemies to flight;
The victory's thine, the crown is sure
For all that to the end endure.

Then when the last great struggle's o'er,
And we have reached that blissful shore,
With shouts of vict'ry through our King,
We'll make the heavenly arches ring.

Springfield, Mass. G. L. RICE.

For the Crisis.

"To the Churches" awaiting the Reign of "the Prince of the Kings of the Earth."

BY E. S. WILLARD.

"All the way in which the Lord our God hath led us."

The following communication is written, not that "we should appear approved," but that God's name may be honored, and his dear children assisted to take and keep the right position in this, "the last time," "though we be as reprobates."

In our experience here, it has been demonstrated to us that sectarianism, as personified in the various denominations in Christendom, with Spiritualism to bring up the rear, (but soon to take the van,) is set in deadly array against a coming Christ and his chosen instruments, "to gather out a people for His name,"—yea, as deadly as was that of the Jews at the first advent. They would sooner distrust their own senses, (as in the case of the blind man healed,) than to believe that Jesus of Nazareth, God's then chosen instrument of blessing to them, had been favored of God to do a miracle. So also in the case of the lame man healed by the apostles—God's then appointed agents to the world. Though "they could say nothing against it," yet, because it came not through them, they would not believe, but "cast him out," thus branding the whole as spurious, notwithstanding five thousand were converted on the occasion. Even so has it been here, as it may appear from the following Reminiscence, at the close of the years 1860 and '61.

"What shall we render to our God for all his benefits to us" during this past year! "Surely goodness and mercy hath followed us," and we have the hope that "we shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever." Blessed be the name of the Lord forever, who, in this year, 1860, directed our steps from our western home, where we resided nineteen years, to again make a home in our native East. We arrived May 23d. Found the place new, but fast settling, and prosperous. Our language on coming was, "Lord, what wilt thou have us do?" During the first few months our way spiritually seemed shut up to every thing but "strong crying and tears," and the unflinching worship of God in our family, and on Lord's days gathering in a circle to read the holy Scriptures in the morning, and in the afternoon to "brake bread." We scattered the good seed in the form of tracts, as we had opportunity. By and by the way was opened for us to meet in the prayer circle with a few calling themselves Baptists. As we found ourselves thus favored, the long pent-up waters gushed forth, and we were baptized afresh with a heavenly influence. They responded cordially, and their minister expressed with much feeling how solicitous he had been, ever since hearing of our arrival, to know what we were—fearing we were Spiritualists. We now thanked God "and took courage."

We soon found that mysticism was the bane of the place,—that all hearts quailed before it. They had even made their boasts that Hammonton should be to them what Salt Lake is to the Mormons. As ancient Israel quailed before the giant of Gath, so did modern Israel here quail before this modern Goliath, in his defiance of everything that came in his way. Thus we found things—"all hands hung down, and all knees feeble"; but we "encouraged ourselves in the Lord our God." We contemplated no direct attack upon him, but thought to "fetch a compass behind" him, and then wait until we "heard the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees." He had the ground in a Sunday School, and was making sad havoc in the one long established by the Methodists. It was understood that he only used the Bible as a bow to public opinion—that another book was his choice, and would soon be used. We, seeing this, fetched our compass by throwing open our doors, and inviting all who wished to come in, and join with us in the study of God's word. We commenced with Genesis, and studied the Bible by subjects. The "Creation," the "Fall," the "Penalties," the merciful intimation of a Saviour, the "Call of Abraham," the "Gospel" or "good news of the kingdom" preached to him in the promise of the land of Canaan, the nucleus of the future kingdom of God, soon to be established upon the earth under his seed—the future "Son of David," as so beautifully set forth by Daniel and all the prophets, and the "Revelator." Here we dwelt long and largely, for this is the "field" wherein is hid the treasure "which, when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth" it. By and by, some began to discover this treasure, and gave signs of a desire to purchase it. We encouraged them by telling them how we obtained it, and of what inestimable value it had been to us, from youth to gray hairs. They besought us with tears to intercede for them, which we did with a "hearty good will."

We now began to "hear the sound of a going," to "bestir ourselves" by sending for help, and preparing for the combat. Like Gideon, we had hidden ourselves, and went to threshing wheat; and with him we felt poor, and the least in our Father's house; yet He seemed to say to us, "Go in this thy might, and I will be with thee." We went, and we cried, not, "the sword of the Lord and of Gideon,'" but the sword of the Lord, his "Holy Word," which is more "quick and powerful" than any sword of Gideon, yea, "sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." All fell before it. Shouting and weeping were mingled. Those who had made up their minds before to obtain the "pearl of great price," at the loss of all things, now arose and testified to it with gushing tears; while a number of others, who would have been at a ball that night had it not been for this meeting, sobbed aloud and entreated prayers; while others still, who had been searching the "field" with us, besought our aid in obtaining its "treasure." It was on this occasion that we received a favorable response to our call for help, which we hailed with joy.

The "sound of the gong" still urged us on to another combat. Here we met "the men of Israel," and some of them said, "Why hast thou served us thus, that thou calledst us not when thou wentest out to fight?" We congratulated them upon their readiness to come up "to the help of the Lord against the mighty," and that the bitter curse of Meroz could not fall upon them, etc. Thus they were appeased. We further told them, on this occasion, that we were expecting a reinforcement. This we did with great trembling, fearing their displeasure. They made no response, and there we left it with the great "Captain of our salvation." We found, on this occasion, they had taken the whole into their own hands, and had appointed a general rendezvous a mile distant, in the form of a union prayer-meeting, and invited all to come. We, with our little company, who, even in this meeting, voluntarily distinguished themselves by all joining in concert in the Lord's prayer, (thus shewing their respect for the pearl they had found, by making it their first petition,) not knowing what else to do, followed on, and met with them. Here were represented the principal names in modern Israel, with two or three classes of aliens. We now renewedly implored the aid of the divine Spirit, that we might still simply follow its lowly leanings in the fiery ordeal through which we were called to pass. For a time we seemed lost in the numbers that were about us, but our little train was the life of the meeting. Their new-born hopes and aspirations, so freely expressed in every meeting, were "like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

Thus things passed on for ten successive nights, and then our already advertised reenforcement came, in the person of an experienced under-officer, whose looks had whitened in the service. We modestly submitted it to them, asking if they would accept his services. By vote, the answer came to us, 16 to 17, No! We reported accordingly; but our brother had gone through too many wars to be daunted at this rebuff. "O!" said he, "I will lay aside my officials, and go in as one of you, and take part with the rest." To this they could not object. When his three minutes came they told, every one. "The weapons of our warfare" were used with such skill, that all could but see that he was "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The house was crowded night after night, expecting to hear him preach, but in vain. At last a lady, who made no profession, went to the "rulers of the synagogue," and asked if he might not preach, saying all were desirous to hear him. After much going to and fro, and whispering, they gave out that the motion of the three minutes should be rescinded, so far as he was concerned, and that he should be allowed thirty, and be invited to take the stand. We felt now, for the first time, like taking a long breath since coming among them. "The sword of the spirit"—the word of God—was now wielded with power, saints were comforted and sinners warned.

The next evening he took the same privilege, (no man forbidding him,) and for the time prejudice seemed to melt away as snow before the fire. Two or three rose at once, as he closed, to let their brimming vessels run over, and truly delectable were some of these streams. One of the rulers of the synagogue knelt by his side, and thanked God that, "Apostle-like, he had come among us to help us in this our time of need," and closed up with the Lord's prayer—the first time that it had been offered in all these meetings, except by the speaker and our little train. O bless God! we were in the third heaven, but soon to be cast down to hades, if that be dark!

The next night, the 14th, and last of this union, was a perfect antipode to the foregoing—as if every light had been stricken out, and every voice hushed; and a crowded house, left to sit two long hours in "durance vile," was this, our closing night. One of the rulers (who was absent the two previous nights) took the chair, and announced that this evening must be spent wholly in prayer, to make up for what we had lost the two past evenings! The whole assembly was amazed, and looked one on the other to divine the cause. Not a word of Scripture was read—only "languishing hosannahs" and forced prayers drove the wheelless chariot. Near its close a few "sparks" were emitted, in one or two formally rising for prayers; thus, it may be, they recovered what they had lost.

As they thus "opposed themselves," we announced at the close that we would be obliged to accept the kind offer of one of the aliens of his Hall, and meet there at ten in the morning, (Lord's day) and invited all to attend who wished to hear preaching. They went on and gave out their prayer meetings as usual, for the entire day and evening, there being no preacher in the place. We met, and had a full house. Subject, "What is truth?" God's holy word was held up as the embodiment of truth. The hideous mask that had so long covered it here was torn off, and its beautiful face shone out upon the gazing audience, until with one voice they seemed ready to cry out, "Long live the Word of God!" Men unaccustomed to weep, now seemed to feel it a luxury, and we felt glad to be counted worthy to be believers and honorers of such a book. At the close a Mystic arose and eulogized the speaker, but utterly opposed his literality.

Again in the evening we were regaled. Subject, "Why do we believe?" The answer was, because the blessed God, in his loving condescension, challenges our every sense to faith. This was impressively illustrated by Scripture examples. On this occasion his fidelity and valor were challenged to testify against the crying sin of this place—Mysticism. He did it with such care and consummate skill that every arrow stuck, yet without apparently aiming once in that direction; at the close, however, he was accosted in a very different tone from the morning. In return, he kindly attempted to reason from Scripture; but both were hurled to the dust and [illegible] them under foot, and the lowest [illegible] sorted to. We began now to see where "the sound of a going" had led us—even to face the enemy upon his own ground—yea, in his own temple! The spirit of the giant was chafed, and he was arming for the combat. We looked to our "Great Captain," and met boldly in His name. His great plan of siege for the recovery of a revolted world from the "powers of darkness" was spread before us in a masterly manner, as it had been made "plain upon tables," and the "hour of its accomplishment come!" Oh! glory. The champion of Mysticism was on hand, with his "tongue whet like a sword," and his bow bent to shoot his "arrows, even bitter words." His "suit" was also about him, and marked was their impatience; yet our "Captain" commanded peace, and peace there was; not only until our brother was through, but until we could arise and testify before them all that these meetings in this place, at this time, were the result of the honor which God had shown to the exaltation and study of his literal word—the holy Bible! We then invited all to join us in this who would. Privilege was then given for any to arise who wished to honor Christ in baptism, when two of our little company had the boldness, in these trying circumstances, to arise, bless God! Several times was our adversary commanded to his seat before the meeting could be closed, after which the winds were let loose. For the space of three hours they staid, contradicting and blaspheming—saying, among other things too dark for these pages, that "it was a good thing Jesus Christ learned the carpenter's trade while on earth; he can have the New Jerusalem all built by the time he comes back;" "Jesus Christ will be our next president." O how it grieves us to write such things! May He soon be avenged. Thus closed the labors of our brother, having been with us six days and nights, and only having had the privilege of preaching three times!

(Concluded next week.)

For the Crisis.

Compensation—Justice.

The "hard times" are upon us; in a greater or lesser degree we all feel it. We have only to witness the general suspension of business in our manufactories, and the wanderings of the unemployed in our large cities, and the observance of the little home in the town, to be well satisfied of the fact. Now it is that a general question must arise in the minds of those who have, for a long period of years, been in possession of full employment, and during which time they have not been subjected to any material loss, i. e., no calamity beyond the incidental events of life have overtaken them—they can reflect, and say that they have been well remunerated for the time and labor they have expended; perfect satisfaction was ever afforded them from their employers, and altogether the years passed pleasingly; but by these persons there has been too little regard paid to the future; they seem as though the present was all they cared for, and every dollar they earned they thought it their privilege to spend.

Improvidence is a ruling feature of our times, to say nothing of extravagance; and to hear persons use that scripture "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," and to see the manner in which they appropriate it to their own lusts, you could but be thoroughly satisfied that they are honest in the appropriation. Now I have little to say to those of the world who use this scripture, for it is evident they live unto themselves, in that they sow to the flesh, for which sowing they will have the pleasurable satisfaction of reaping corruption; but I have a word or two with those who professedly call upon the name of the Lord, and style themselves Christians.

Compensation is a recompense, and all who labor are justly entitled thereto. No man labors with other thoughts than that, when the labor is performed, the payment will follow; this is correct; and, seeing I have earned so much, the question should arise, how shall I spend it so as to do so providently? Now this, I fear, is a question that too little intrudes itself upon the reflection of those who are only stewards of another's wealth. "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." All we have and enjoy comes from God. "Every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning"; therefore, "as the stewards of the manifold grace of God," Christians should be very careful how they spend that which is simply given for good use.

I have heard the inquiry made, "Why are we here, and what good is there in our being here?" The answer presents itself thus:—You are here as a probationer for a life beyond the grave,—not in the theological sense. The good you do will show the good you are here for, or vice versa; there is a day in the future that shall declare even this. That day, it hasteth greatly!

Christians, I ask your attention. Can you reflect on the good times you have enjoyed, of uninterrupted success in your pursuits after the bread that perishes, of the long continued health of yourselves and family, of the pleasure you have enjoyed in thinking and talking on the name of the Lord, with all other mercies, too many and too great to mention,—can you reflect on these things and say you have used them—not abused them? There are none among us who can say I am wholly clean and free from censure! The very nature we possess is so treacherous that, when we would do good, evil is present with us; it therefore is incumbent upon us to bring into subjection this law of the flesh, and make it subservient to the law of God. To provide things honestly in the sight of all men is as great a duty as "thou shalt not steal," and He who blesses us with ALL and more than we need, will compensate us with eternal life and glory if we use the mercies dispensed so liberally.

All that God does by way of compensation is done in justice. He proposes to reward those who seek for glory, honor and immortality, with eternal life; he proposes to call us his children if we will be adopted into his family; he proposes as a compensation that, if we suffer for Christ, we shall also reign with him; he proposes if we do his will we shall inherit the promises. Behind all these, and many more proposals beside, there is such an evident exhibition of justice that I am quite in love with all God proposes, for I am well assured that the proposer will be the disposer. Justice is that essential perfection in God whereby he is infinitely righteous and just in his nature and works; the charter he bears is so opposed to that which man manifests, that the contrast is the more apparent. In justice to God's own character he must perform all he proposes to. Contrasted with justice as viewed by man, (judging from what we see and experience,) how truly great the contrast! To-day man engages to perform some duty or obligation, and to-morrow fails, either wantonly or of necessity; man is mortal and cannot be depended upon. To do justly is what God requires of us. We can do it if we will, for he has never required that from man he cannot perform. Therefore let us be slow to promise, lest, failing to perform, we are found exactors and unrighteous. That man who intends to do justly, must promise little and perform that little. "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth." G. W. Y.

New York.

For the Crisis.

Will the wicked Dead live again?

In our last, we referred to Psa. 9: 17 and Dan. 12: 2, in proof that the wicked dead will live again; not, however, to live eternally, but to die a second death.

We will now proceed to notice a few passages in the New Testament to prove the wicked will live again. The first passage to claim attention is John 5: 28, 29. "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." Now, what is said in this passage in regard to the resurrection of the good, is said also of the resurrection of the bad; the original being the same in both cases, viz., "eis anastasin" of life, and "eis anastasin" of damnation, or judgment. If, therefore, the good or righteous come forth "unto the resurrection of life," the same is declared of the bad, or wicked; for it is said they will come forth "unto the resurrection of damnation." Both classes live again; but what is the difference in the life they live? Why, the righteous come forth unto eternal life, and the wicked to die again, or to be turned back again into sheol or hades, as in Psa. 9: 17, as shown in our last. In order to make this plain, we will first notice the fact that there are several different words in the Greek, which are rendered "life," "shall live," "quickeneth," and "live again," etc. Two of these words deserve particular attention. 1. The word rendered life is from zoe. The meaning, according to Greenfield, is—"life, i. e., animated existence, state of being alive, eternal life, immortality." 2. The word rendered "live again" is from anazao, and is defined by Greenfield to mean—"to live again, recover life," etc., and occurs five times in the New Testament. Examples: Luke 15: 24, 32, Rom. 14: 9, and Rev. 20: 5. In the 4th verse of Rev. 20, it is said of the saints, they lived (zoe) and reigned, etc. In the 5th verse it is said, "the rest of the dead lived (anazao) not again until the thousand years were finished." This is a strong point, for the same word rendered lived (not) again, here in Rev. 20: 5, is found in Rom. 14: 9, where it is said of our Saviour: "Christ both died, and rose and revived," etc. Now, if Christ died and revived, or lived again, then will the wicked be revived, or live again! But what is the difference? Plainly this: Christ declares, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold I am alive forevermore! (Rev. 1: 18); but of the wicked he says, they live again, (anazao) yet they will die a second death—they will not be "alive forevermore!" Therefore, as in John 5: 29, the righteous will come forth unto the resurrection of life—life eternal—(zoce), but the wicked will come forth unto the resurrection of damnation, or live again (anazao) to die a second death!

T. M. PREBLE.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 3d, '61.

Your Mission.

If you cannot on the ocean
Sail among the swiftest fleet,
Rocking on the highest billows,
Laughing at the storms you meet—
You can stand among the sailors,
Anchored yet within the bay;
You can lend a hand to help them,
When they launch their boats away.

If you are too weak to journey
Up the mountains steep and high,
You can stand within the valley
While the multitudes go by;
You can chant in happy measures
As they slowly pass along;
Though they might forget the singer,
They will not forget the song.

If you have not gold and silver
Ever ready at command;
If you cannot, toward the needy,
Reach an ever open hand;
You can visit the afflicted,
O'er the erring you can weep;
You can be a true disciple,
Sitting at the Saviour's feet.

If you cannot, in the conflict,
Prove yourself a soldier true;
If, where the fire and smoke are thickest,
There's no work for you to do;
When the battle-field is silent,
You can go with careful tread,
You can bear away the wounded,
You can cover up the dead.

Do not, then, stand idly waiting
For some greater work to do;
Fortune is a lazy goddess,
She will never come to you.
Go and toil in any vineyard,
Do not fear to do or dare;
If you want a field of labor,
You can find it anywhere.

For the Crisis.

Truth Evolved.

The proclamation of the Messiah, which has been sounding through the world for years, has caused such an investigation of the Scriptures as was seldom, if ever, known in the history of the world. A light burst upon the human mind from the word of God, which has been received independent of former creeds and views, and all must acknowledge that many most important truths have been evolved, which have for years been buried beneath the rubbish of doctrine and traditions of men, to which, in many instances, Popery itself gave birth. Among the truths brought to the surface may be mentioned, as of vital importance, the sleep of the dead until the resurrection, and the utter destruction of the wicked in the great and notable day of the Lord. These truths, unpopular and heretical as they may be in the estimation of the nominal church and the world, are nevertheless plainly taught in the word of God' so plainly that we are astonished that error, subtle as she is, has ever been able to obscure them. We are surely living at an important epoch—a time when truth should speak, and its influence be made to bear upon the hearts and consciences of men.

When we are convinced of truth ourselves, we should be fearless and decided in its proclamation. Here we are in the closing scenes of earth's eventful story, and the direful effects of Adam's fall. Can the true watchman hold his peace? Never. With the old theory (or present belief of the church) that the soul at death goes to its reward, does it not do away with the need of a resurrection? How can men anxiously desire and long for it with such views? They should rather desire death, for that leads to the mansions of bliss, and in that they receive the consummation of their hope. But how contrary is this to the preaching of Christ and his apostles, and, in fact to the whole Bible. The Savior taught that well doing should be recompensed at the resurrection of the just. The apostles placed their hope in the resurrection from the dead. And so do we. All will enter upon their reward. They that have done evil will share the second death, according to God's word. Then how important that mankind have this great truth presented in a bold, fearless manner.

Tuftonboro. J. L. M.

For the Crisis.

To the Discontented.

As few or none have their outward circumstances always to their minds, so they are more or less tempted to murmur, and many are actually guilty of sin. It is therefore a subject of some importance to know the remedy. Resignation to the will of God is the only radical cure; but yet there are proper means to be used, to effect an end so desirable. Be resolved then, through grace, to attend to the following advice.

Consider, whatever be your outward circumstances, they are far better than you deserve. You have rather deserved to be cut off from the enjoyment and hope of all mercy; and yet how many mercies surround you! No cup of affliction is so bitter, but has some mixture of mercy. Can you not see many who are more afflicted than yourselves? You may be denied of some of the smaller favors which God bestows upon others; yet he grants the gospel and its blessings, which are far greater. He thereby puts it in your power to have a well-founded hope that this life shall be your only state of suffering, and that the next will be a state of perfect enjoyment.

God administers to all with wise and benevolent hand; consequently, you have every possible reason to rest satisfied with his administration. Other circumstances might expose you to peculiar and almost resistless temptations; but all these are escaped by being placed as you are. Were you in any other circumstance, without a suitable frame of mind, it would not lessen your misery or increase your happiness. But with a right temper, you may be happy where you are, as far as happiness can consist with a state of trial.

Fervent prayer should be used under trials and on all occasions. It will be found eminently useful in every kind of trial, God has appointed it as a means of grace. The use of all other means of grace will prove ineffectual, if this be neglected. God has declared he will be sought unto, to do all these things. The more you are tempted not to pray so much, the more go to God in prayer. If tempted you cannot pray, be resolved to try, and ask that you may pray aright; if tempted it will be presumption to pray, tell Satan it is better to rely on the mercy of God in prayer, according to his command, than to rely simply on his justice. Whatever may be your temptations, do not neglect to pray. Check the first approach of evil by prayer. By so doing you will prevent evil from getting a place in the heart, as it would do if the duty were neglected. Much is often lost by allowing the mind to become so distressed with temptations, before going to God in prayer, that it is thereby unfitted for the duty, and it makes the victory much more difficult to be obtained. Therefore give the enemy no advantage, but pray without ceasing. He cannot withstand the prayer of faith. C. D.

Bangor, Me.

For the Crisis.

Down East.

I've been "away down East." I have been disappointed in the people there—as much so as some New Englanders have been with the Canadian people. I went to the Conference, expecting to see a dozen or so,—about five or six preachers; but there! the preachers made quite a congregation of themselves. They can preach too. They can give you the reasons of their hope just as quick as your Southern folks can.

The cause is in a good state there. It is a time now when people can hear. I thought the war had stopped all religious interest. It has not. The world is still the world, but the truth is rising. The church is rising. Those who are not in the war spirit, are getting filled with the Spirit of God.

Brethren, don't forget the churches in Maine. They have engaged a missionary there, an efficient one, I think—Bro. O. R. Fassett. I hope the friends in Mass., who are in the habit of spending the Lord's money foolishly, will send them some tracts. You can do them good, no mistake, these silent messengers are blessed of God to the good of souls. Let them be scattered far and near. Let them be paid for by some rich one in Israel, and then scattered free among the poor. MARIA.

☞ One of our greatest statesmen, when asked what was his wish, said, "I have no wish but peace, peace." I appeal to all who are absorbed in business—to all who are mixed up with various social, political and national relationships, is not peace your desire and rest your hope—rest to you, and nothing to disturb or annoy? In that blessed rest to which we all aspire, its atmosphere shall be peace; God shall wave his hand, and all [illegible] will be stilled.

☞ Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole [illegible]

For the Crisis.

A Letter.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I take my pen for the first time to address a few lines to you through the medium of the Crisis, believing that christians should "speak often one to another," to strengthen and encourage each other while on our journey home, and so much the more as we see the last beacon lights appearing just ahead, which show plainly that we are entering the port which the lone pilgrim has long been sighing for. He has looked with trembling anxiety at the gathering clouds that have been looming up in the moral heavens, betokening the coming storm, which is about to burst with all its fury upon the deluded inhabitants of earth. It is these things that stimulate me to be more active in the service of my Master, although I have been long striving to do his will, and especially since 1842, I have believed in the near approach of our coming King.

For the last five years I have been afflicted by sickness, and have had more time to study the word of God, and trace out the fulfillment of prophecy. I have read over and over again the signs that were to precede the second coming of Christ. I have seen the situation of the nations, the confusion, the wars and rumors of wars, and the darkness and stupidity of the professed church of God on earth—its union with the world, with its pride, popularity—its lack of gospel faith, and, finally, its infidelity. I have often been led to exhort all within my reach to prepare for the judgment, remembering that Jesus said, When these things come to pass, "know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." But, O! how my heart is made to feel while I look around and see the carelessness of professed christians. Truly a deep sleep has fallen upon them, and I fear that many will not awake until the mighty thunders begin to roll through the heavens—when the Archangel's trumpet breaks forth in thunder tones that shall reverberate throughout the world, while the earth is shaken to its very centre, awakening the dead and calling them forth to judgment. O, the terrors of that judgment to a sleeping church and an ungodly world! To stand naked, with all their sins exposed before the piercing eye of Jehovah, from whose presence they cannot hide! O, what lamentation and wo, what disappointment and anguish, while the bitter cry shall resound throughout the enemy's ranks, "Lost, lost, eternally lost!" Alas! this is no fiction—no picture of the fancy, but a solemn scene soon to be realized.

O, my brethren and sisters, you that are looking for these things, are you ready for them? While you see the signs fulfilling, can you look up and rejoice that your redemption draweth nigh? Have you got on the whole armor of God, contending earnestly for the faith? O for a close examination of hearts throughout the advent ranks, that we may know whether we are the saved of the Lord or not. These are perilous times. Many are deceiving and being deceived. A form of godliness is passed off here for the reality. If we stand on the earth when the last trump shall sound—if we have the power as well as the form—if our lives are hid with Christ in God, what a thrill of joy will run through our hearts as the loud-toned trumpet sounds through the air, and a voice is heard saying, "Behold! he cometh; go ye out to meet him." Will not our longing eyes be upturned to catch a glimpse of Him who is our "Life"? for with him shall we appear in glory. O for a renewed exertion on the part of Christ's followers, that souls may be warned and saved. We have a work to do, and what is done must be done quickly. Let us make an entire consecration of ourselves to God, for without holiness no man shall see the Lord.

The world has suffered enough from what is called religion. We want that religion that involves the principle of love implanted in the heart, and carried out in all the walks of life; and a living, active faith, that takes hold upon the arm that moves the world. Thank God we have the same Lord that Elijah and Daniel had to pray to; then why not exercise the same faith, that the same power may be displayed? If we had the faith that we should have, we should see the salvation of God in many places where now all is darkness. Well might the Saviour say, should he now visit the earth, "O ye of little faith!" Let us look back but a little while, and we see men who had such faith in God that their prayers would move a nation. Look at John Knox, whose prayers made the Queen of Scots to tremble on her throne, and which she said she feared more than an army of ten thousand men. Many others I might mention, who talked with God almost as a man with his brother; and when they preached, it was with a holy unction, and the power of God was displayed among the people. This was because they held constant communion with God; they walked with him and talked with him; he was in all their sermons, exhortations and prayers. But is not the same God over us? Is it not our duty to have some of that same power? Notwithstanding the devil seems to have more power [illegible] than ever before, yet in the Lord Jesus [illegible] O, my brethren, if we lack faith, if our hearts are cold, and we are indifferent as to the situation of others, we have reason to tremble before God; the coming of Christ will bring no joy to us; and if, in examining our hearts, we find ourselves in this situation, let us go to the "fountain open for uncleanness," and make an entire consecration of ourselves to God. Let us plunge in that fountain, and wash all our sins away. Blessed promises are held out to us if we hunger and thirst after righteousness. Those promises are to us, for we do hunger and thirst, and we will claim the promises as ours.

Brethren, methinks I hear you say, We will awake; we will, in the strength of Israel's God, go forward. Holiness shall be our motto, and with Elijah's faith we will draw water from the well of salvation, and we will go up unitedly and possess the goodly land. Forward, then, brethren, in the name of the Lord, and victory is yours. Have faith in God, get acquainted with him, commune with him daily, yea, hourly; walk and talk with him. In this way we may feel that he is as a "wall of fire round about us, and a glory in our midst." Our union with him will be sweet; his words will abide in us, and we shall abide in him; then may we believe that whatsoever we ask for we receive; and when we get this power to prevail with God, we can prevail with men. O, for a united, all-prevailing faith in God! for more earnest, ardent, wrestling prayer in behalf of dying souls around us! Let every child of God exclaim with Isaiah, "For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake will I not rest, until the righteousness thereof goes forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth." "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice as a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions, and the house of Israel their sins." O, let us be faithful in these things; exhort, rebuke and entreat sinners to come to Christ, and in a little while we shall cease laboring—our work will be done, and Jesus will say, "Children, your Father calls, come home." S. C. Wellcome.

Garden City, Minn., Aug. 2, '61.

For the Crisis.

The Power of Religion.

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature."

"O, the transforming power of the religion of Jesus!" This thought has often come to my mind since hearing it uttered from the full heart of one who marvelled at the change wrought in a subject of divine grace. How often we notice what love has done for the sinful and erring. How it has reached into deep places, and drawn one after another upward to see and walk in the light of peace, joy and holiness. We who have sought peace and pardon, and have been trying to make progress in loving and serving our Redeemer, remember the pit from which we were taken, and with humble rejoicings believe in the "amazing grace" of our Savior. Before me now, comes a vision of a spot which a wretched family called home. It was a miserable dwelling, for its inmates were poor—poor in this world's goods, in knowledge, in respectability, in love and in faith. The parents lived unholy lives, and the children were not taught to shun evil. We who had not learned our Master's ways of reaching the perishing, almost shunned them,—doubting if there was any avenue to their hearts.

There was one who entered the lowly dwelling, and spoke words of kindness and cared for temporal wants, and talked in winning, earnest tones of a better life—a Savior's love—a home that had been purchased for them. And then there came a change. The mother's better feelings were touched; she loved the house of prayer, which had so long been neglected. She felt the importance of training her children in ways of usefulness and purity—of making life seem more valuable and true. Her home was no longer the disorderly, filthy place it had been. Her heart was filled with rejoicing, her eyes, that had looked so cold and stupid, now moistened with tears as she told us of the blessed new life she had found. And, though she sometimes said, "You do not know how hard it is for one who has lived so long in indolence and wrong to overcome and do right." Yet we felt that it was her joy to keep trying. It was now a pleasure to visit her. A sunbeam seemed to have lighted the dark walls. Her husband, not quite ready to yield all to Christ, yet acknowledged the power of religion, and seemed to have an appreciation of its value; and our hearts were affected when he said, "Some kind of religion reaches to the poor; it is good." We find that the pure principles of Jesus are good when carried into practice.

O, may the object of the gospel not be defeated, but may we be made better. A glorious light shines around us; should it not permeate our whole being? A kind, loving, tender Savior has gone before us; shall we not follow in his footsteps? Surely, what he requires of us shall be performed. What he wishes us to be we will be. We will be "new creatures in Christ Jesus." We will remember that we are called with an "holy calling." We will heed the apostle's sweet exhortation, "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice." "And be ye kind [illegible] one to another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Thus shall those who have known us long, and have seen the evil workings of our hearts, manifested in our lives, be constrained to say, "O, the transforming power of the religion of Jesus!" Julia E. Lloyd.

Hartford, Ct., Sept., 1861.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 25, 1861.

Absent.

Last Tuesday evening, we received a telegram, stating that our presence was needed at the Crisis Office. On going to Boston, we learned that Bro. Wendell had been called to attend a funeral in Vermont, and desired that we should take charge of the paper in his absence. F. H. B.

The Error of the Wicked.

"Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness."—2 Pet. 3 : 17.

The foregoing is another of the many admonitions given to us in the Bible, to put us on our guard against deception. To understand the importance of the matter, we should fully comprehend the nature of the "error of the wicked," referred to by the apostle. That we are to guard against error in all its forms is, no doubt, our duty,—a duty we owe to God, ourselves and community. But the admonition in the present case refers, not to error in general, but to the "error of the wicked" in particular, as if it were some specific thing. Perhaps if we consider the subject of the chapter, we may receive some light on this subject.

In the commencement of the chapter, the apostle has called our particular attention to a class of persons, who, in the "last days," shall scoffingly inquire, "Where is the promise of his (the Saviour's) coming?" thereby meaning to imply that the promise of his coming had "utterly failed," that it had not and would not be fulfilled. They affirmed that since the "fathers fell asleep" all things remained unchanged. The "error of the wicked," therefore, has to do with a mistaken view as to Christ, denying his second coming. "They evidently meant," says Dr. Barnes, "to imply that the promise had utterly failed; that there was not the slightest evidence that it would be accomplished; that they who had believed this were entirely deluded." The reference here to the fathers is evidently not to the prophets, but to the apostles and their immediate successors. "These old men," says the scoffing objector, "have died like others, and, notwithstanding their confident predictions, things now move on as they have from the beginning."

The time when these scoffers were to show themselves, is said to be the "last days." This phrase, by itself, does not give the exact time when this class of mockers should come, but the fact of their saying, "Since the fathers fell asleep all things continue," shows that considerable time had elapsed between the announcement of his coming by the fathers, and the time when these scoffers were manifested. This view is considerably strengthened by the reference to the "long-suffering of God, which certainly indicates a great length of time, otherwise there would be no pertinency in the declaration that "one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day"; and, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise," etc. This whole passage shows that many ages had passed between the death of the fathers and the rise of these scoffers; and the facts outside of the passage fully warrant us in believing that the passage has its fulfillment at this present time. Our time is marked above all others by scoffers, or mockers at Christ's second advent. If this truth could be torn from the Bible—could be blotted out of the Scriptures—could be effaced from the memory, or driven from the heart, then the devil would rejoice, and hades would have a jubilee. But no, it stands there; it is written, "I will come again," and the arguments used to show that he came at the destruction of Jerusalem, or that he comes at death, or that his coming is of a spiritual character, are unsound and untrue. On this truth hinges the resurrection of the dead, the judgment of the world, the establishment of God's everlasting kingdom, and the salvation of his people. If he does not come "our preaching is vain," "our faith is vain," "and they also who have fallen asleep in are perished." There is no compromise of this truth. Either Jesus Christ comes, or Christianity is a failure. It is equally true that we are living in the "last days," and that his coming is NIGH, "even at the doors." Indeed, the presumption is, that that which calls forth the scoffs of these mockers, is the proclamation of the Saviour's immediate coming. The coming of these scoffers is identical (in time) with the "evil servant's" saying "in his heart, "My Lord delayeth his coming." The apostle, without doubt, had his eye on this very time, when the hatred to the doctrine of the Saviour's coming would be more particularly manifested. Dr. Barnes remarks, "The eye of the apostle is evidently on a particular class of men, the special [illegible] a day of judgment; that the world would be consumed by fire."

The doctrine of the Saviour's coming assumes more and more importance as we proximate the end; and perhaps it is not assuming too much to say that, before the end, the Christian world will be either on one side of this great question or the other—not merely theoretically, but practically. A disbelief of the Saviour's coming will so influence and determine the actions of individuals, that they will, "involuntarily," be found "smiting" their fellows, and eating and drinking with the drunken; while those who believe will, from the very nature of the case, be drawn nearer to each other. The dangers of the hour are great. The whole outside influence is drawing from Christ. It is deceptive and blinding to the moral sense, and hence the force of this admonition, "Beware, lest ye, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness." We may rest assured that this error is pre-eminently connected with false views as to Christ's coming. It consists in a denial of his coming on one hand, and of its proximity on the other. This truth will test this generation as much as the preaching of Noah did that of the antediluvians, or the preaching of Christ that of the Jews at the first advent.

The ignorance that lowers, like a thick cloud, upon the mind as to the coming of the "Just One," is not of a passive character. The will has more to do with it than the judgment. The phrase, "willingly ignorant," indicates obstinacy and perverseness. It shows itself, or its real character, in the audacity with which it endeavors to wrest the words of truth. With daring effrontery it seeks to undermine the foundations of truth. It delights itself in explaining away the sacred word. It seeks to know what there is in the Bible which, when taken by itself, can be made to appear contradictory. It chuckles when, by its impudent recklessness, it has succeeded in staggering the faith of some professed Christian. Its contempt of the Scriptures as the standard of moral conduct, shows itself in word and deed. It ignores the fact that "the heavens and the earth which are now, are reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." With what force the words of Christ come to us at this time, "Hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown"! How important the admonition, "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness." Who will heed this admonition? "Who shall stand when he appeareth?" "Watch ye, therefore, that ye may escape all these things that shall come to pass, and stand before the Son of Man." F. H. B.

Keep it constantly before the People.

There is no subject so worthy of our particular attention as the speedy return of Christ to judge the quick and the dead. It should be kept before the mind at all times. It is the great truth of the age, and it demands our constant attention. There are many other truths which are important, but none so important as this. This truth has a power which always tells for good. It is comforting to the saint, and awfully impressive to the sinner. While it promises salvation to the people of God, it is equally certain to minister wrath to the ungodly. Nothing can make up for its lack. We may talk and preach every thing else, but if this be left out, there is something wanting. When this truth is vivid in the mind, the heart is light; but if it be omitted, our "preaching is vain." To be blessed with success, we must keep it before community. Let the cry, "The hour of his judgment has come," be heard at all times. Trials may afflict, poverty stare us in the face, friends forsake us, and scoffers mock; but for us there is no excuse. We must hold and preach this if we preach anything; to do otherwise, would be to seal our own destruction. There is no other course for us to pursue. We may shrink, dodge or evade the conclusion, but we can only do so; we cannot change the truth. To doubt our proximity to the "manifestation" of the "Son of God," is what we cannot do. We are urged on by the fulfillment of prophecy, and crowded, by the development of events, to the very verge of time. Then let the declaration, "Behold I come quickly," be ever ringing in our ears, while the cry is sounded, Behold, "the hour of his judgment is come." F. H. B.

The New Work.

"Retribution; or, the Doom of the Ungodly."—We have read about two-thirds of this work, and wish to say—This is a work just published, the main object of which is to show, from the Scriptures, that there is to be a future judgment, when all, both righteous and wicked, who have lived since Adam, shall receive their reward. I discover one fault, which, by the way, is a very common one, that of burdening, and perhaps sometimes weakening the position sought to be established, by adducing testimony which, to many minds, would be regarded as wholly irrelevant. But excepting this, which, by the majority, would not [illegible] ly, with an honest purpose to know and understand the truth. While we should give a large margin to those who differ from us, we should at the same time examine carefully for ourselves, and tenaciously hold and jealously guard what we believe to be the truth. As the doctrine of the non-resurrection of the wicked is believed by many persons associated with us, this work, one design of which is to controvert that theory, will be read with considerable interest. Let us "prove all things and hold fast that which is good." F. H. B.

☞ Will the Bro. who wrote from East Brimfield give us his name?

☞ Eld. P. B. Morgan will resume his labors with the Church at Chapman Hall, Boston, Sunday, Sept. 29th, D. V.

For the Crisis.

Retribution—The New Book.

I will endeavor to make all needful corrections, regarding figures or typographical errors, in "Retribution," and will try to insert the corrections in all copies, so far as practicable, or will send them, to those who order the book of me, free of charge.

H. L. Hastings.

Providence, R. I.

For the Crisis.

The State of Maine.

Brethren of the State of Maine looking for the second advent of our Lord at hand:—By the action of the State Conference just closed, I have been chosen the "State Missionary" for the ensuing year, and have accepted and already entered upon my work. I wish therefore to say to all the brethren abroad throughout the State, that the object of this mission is to publish "the gospel of the kingdom of God at hand" in all parts of our State, by the preaching of the Word, and the circulation of books and tracts treating upon all the distinguishing doctrines of our faith. While we shall endeavor to encourage and aid our cause where it is already established, and where churches exist in a measure of prosperity; yet our principle purpose is "to strengthen the things which remain that are ready to die"; and especially to "go into the highways and hedges, and compel," if possible, men to come in, that the Lord's house may be filled with guests;—to preach the gospel of the Kingdom where it has not been proclaimed, that they that have not heard may understand.

Now in this all-important work every living Adventist in our State is interested; and I therefore make an appeal to every such brother and sister, to come forward at once and aid us in our mission; that our fellow men may be warned to "flee from the wrath to come," now impending, and prepare to meet God in peace. Let the rich give of their abundance into the treasury of the Lord, and the poor according as they have ability; even the "widow's mite" will be most acceptable to God. By this united and combined effort, a large sum may be raised and contributed to the spread of the truth in all sections of our State, and we reap a rich harvest as a reward, and thousands of perishing souls be prepared for the coming of our Lord. If the brethren and sisters would come up to their duty in this our mission work, within the course of six months we might have two or more missionaries added and in the field, who would co-operate in this specific work.

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest." Who will not only pray for this, but give of their substance to aid in this our blessed work? Who? Those who are ready heartily to respond, let them give their names and the amount of their pledge, and forward to some one of the Committee, consisting of Brethren I. C. Wellcome, Richmond, Me.; Geo. Humphrey, Yarmouth; R. Harley, and E. M. Haggett, (whose places of residence I have not,) or forward to my address. Let not an Adventist in the State excuse themselves from doing something in this cause. Many of you have nobly adhered to the faith for years; generously consecrated and contributed of your means to the support of the truth; but who of us have done what we should, and what the Lord requires? Brethren, the Lord is at the door—the Kingdom of God at hand. Let us be ready to every good work, and when our Lord appears we shall "not be ashamed before him at his coming," but hail him with exceeding joy.

O. R. Fassett, State Missionary.

For the Crisis.

"Where is then the Blessedness ye spake of?"

This is a question that has rested with weight upon my mind, as I have thought over the past, connected with the Advent move. Father Miller, and others, held their meeting at Chicopee, in the fall of forty-two; there was then a feeling, deep and earnest, that took possession of all that embraced the doctrine of the soon coming of the Lord. They spake as though they had authority, which carried conviction to all that heard of the truthfulness of a second advent of the Lord Jesus Christ, and of a day of judgment near. Terror seized [illegible] awhile did prevail. I verily believe God was glorified in the conversion of many from sin to obey the gospel. The truth then was glorious; and with what zeal was the message proclaimed by old and young, high and low, rich and poor. In the churches, halls, school-houses, and private dwellings—yea, in the grove, and by the roadside, it was heard. New truths have since come to the understanding of our once dark minds; we now see through the Saviour's advent, the resurrection, and all that appertains thereto. We behold, at his appearing, the "graves open"; the loved ones that sleep in Jesus Christ come forth to receive immortality and eternal life.

O, glorious hope! How perfect should be our love to our heavenly Father, and to one another. As we have beheld and received new truths, should not our zeal increase with the light? If the truth, made known to us, of the Saviour's coming, filled the recipient with so much love, joy and peace, should not additional truths make our vessels to run over with love and benevolence? Are we trying to save all we can from destruction, that they may be jewels for our Master in the day of his appearing and kingdom?

Brethren and sisters, is it not high time to awake? As we profess to know about the time—that the "night is far spent and the day is at hand," let us walk in the light, laying aside strife and envying; and, as John was "the voice of one crying in the wilderness," to prepare a people for the first advent, let us, one and all, proclaim the Lord is near, by our words and lives. Let us be watching, yea, waiting, for soon our Lord will come.

Brethren in the ministry, let love dwell richly in all our hearts, and we, more than ever, be found giving "meat in due season." While the people say, "Watchman, what of the night?" may we all be in position to tell them, truly and emphatically, the "morning cometh." Glory to God, we are almost home. C. W. Baker.

Hazardville, Ct., Sept. 11, '61.

For the Crisis.

A Letter.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in the Lord:—As I fervently desire evidence that those who formerly witnessed for God are holding fast the profession of their faith, so I feel it duty to testify to others that, through grace, I am not moved away from the hope of the gospel, and that still

"I love the holy Son of God,
Who once this vale of sorrow trod,
And bore my sins, a heavy load,
Up Calvary's gloomy mountain."

And I desire to be like him—to be fully conformed to, and reflect his holy image, in my daily walk and conversation. I long to see a pure church—all its members "walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, blameless." Then would their light shine before men, and they seeing their good works, would glorify our Father which is in heaven.

Did all who profess the holy religion of Jesus, walk worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called, I doubt not that multitudes would be convinced of the reality of religion, and choose the way of life and salvation, who are now halting between two opinions. The kingdom is not promised to the multitude of professors, but to the "little flock," the true, whole-hearted, humble children of God, who maintain both the outward and inward life of holiness, seeking that honor which cometh from God only. They are ever waiting upon God, and their repeated inquiry is, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Their fellowship is with the Father and the Son; and the Spirit takes of the deep things of God, and shows unto them, and they eat of the hidden manna, the meat that the world knows not of. They walk with God, have the testimony that they please him, and are prepared to be translated at the coming and kingdom of Jesus. Thank God, even the inactive and secluded invalid is not deprived of these, the sweetest of all privileges; and to such the noise and theory of religion—though essential in their place—are of minor importance than the silent communion of the soul with God, and the sweet breathings of the Spirit to the heart. Said Jesus, "Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me." With such a prospect before us, who cannot glory in the cross of Christ, and patiently endure the "little while" we have to stay in this vale of sin and suffering?

Dear brethren and sisters, are you maintaining this intimate and sacred communion with God? In prosperity can you rejoice, because your names are written in heaven? And in adversity can you go and "tell Jesus," leave your burden before the Mercy-seat, and "bear a song away?" Oh, let us not live beneath our precious "blood-bought privilege," nor be remiss in any duty. Let us have on the whole armor of God—"praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." And may we be overcomers, that our names be not blotted out of the book of life, at last,—and to God be all the glory. Your sister in the hope of the gospel. Irena Perkins.

South Woodstock, Vt., Aug. 11th.

☞ Many drops make a shower; light gains make a heavy purse. [illegible]

Correspondence.

From Sr. Olive D. Tenny.

Dear Bro. Wendell:—How thankful I am for a truth that does "thoroughly furnish" us with words that all our adversaries "cannot gainsay nor resist;" which guides us, and is a "light to our path" in these perilous times. I feel thankful to God that I have been led by his Spirit to see the present truth. I thank him that he has given me a willing heart to come out and separate myself from the world; and it is my prayer that I may have more strength to overcome every "besetting sin," and live with an "eye single to the glory of God."

Years in the past, I deeply felt the need of something more durable and precious than the vanities and pleasures of this sinful world; for I was not only conscious that, while living the life of a sinner, my ways were displeasing to God, and to his dear Son, who had groaned, bled and died upon the cross; but, I knew, as I looked forward to the awful solemn hour of the judgment, that I had no preparation for that trying and heart-searching day. But in rendering submission and obedience to the teachings of this blessed Spirit, I found, to the joy of my soul, "him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write." And I resolved, with the help of the Lord, to set forward in the good cause; and, though trials and temptations press sorely upon me, and though all the wicked men on the earth were to rise in opposition' yet how securely can we go forward while the strong arm of God bears us up.

We have had some very severe trials to pass through here, but the Lord has been with and sustained us to the present. There are but few in this place who believe in the "present truth," and we meet with the bitterest opposition on all sides. The most of the teachings we have had, have been from God's word and the Crisis. The Crisis comes to us a welcome messenger. It rejoices our hearts to hear from those of like precious faith. Dearly beloved, I can assure you, that we can sympathize with you in your trials; let me entreat you to be faithful a little longer, for deliverance is at hand. I often fear on account of the danger we are in, of being overtaken with our sins upon us when Jesus comes. Then he which is "filthy will be filthy still," and he that is "righteous will be righteous still." Then, if we are of the righteous, with what joy shall we hail his appearing, when he shall descend in all his grandeur and power, with all his holy angels, "taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power." Oh, my friends, how I long for that time to come when "this corruptible," shall have "put on incorruption," and "this mortal, shall have put on immortality!" I am determined by the assistance of God's grace, to go through with the remnant. Let the battle be ever so hard to fight, yet I know that we shall triumph; for we shall overcome by "the blood of the Lamb and the word of our testimony." Oh! let us trust the promise, "I will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell on the earth.

Colerain, Ag. 17, 1861.

From Bro. Geo. W. Smith.

Bro. Wendell:—I now take my pen to write a few lines for the Crisis, and as I write, may the Spirit direct my thoughts. I am now at Mr. Buckingham's in Middlebury, where I lived so long and enjoyed myself so well in the things of religion. I now feel a good degree of the love of God in my heart, and can give glory to his name. I travelled most of the time from April to July, with Advent books and tracts, as some of the brethren know. I then concluded to come back, and here I am, striving, through the grace of God, to preach by my daily walk and conversation. I hope to live a christian here, and live for the glory of God, and gain "eternal life."

To my dear brethren, whom I met with last spring, I would say that my health is much the same as when I was with you; I am here trying to use means for the recovery of my health, for I hope, by the blessing of God, to get better. Yours, hoping for eternal life through Christ.

Middlebury, Aug. 17, '61.

From Wm. Lucas.

Bro. Wendell:—You will find enclosed three dollars, one dollar for Bro. Hudson's new tract, and two dollars for the Crisis, for another year. I don't know when my last year's subscription runs out, but I want the Crisis for another year. I hear nothing here but "immortalsoulism," and I am lonely without something to cheer me. I am persecuted, and denied fellowship in what is called Christian churches. I stand almost alone here, but I try to live a christian life, while the only thing they can say of me is "He is an infidel."

Peekskill, Aug. 18.

From Bro. S. E. Bowman.

Bro. Wendell:—Enclosed is one dollar for the World's Crisis. I am able to pay for my paper, but money is very hard to get. I like the Crisis, and so long as I [illegible]

From Bro. Jno. McKee.

Bro. Wendell:—Thinking that some of the loved ones, who are on their pilgrimage to the better land, with whom I formed acquaintance in the East, would like to know how their pilgrim brother is getting along in the good old way that leads to Mount Zion, the city of the living God, I write, to say I am still striving to walk in the narrow way—sometimes through tribulations deep, and at other times sailing peacefully and joyfully along. The bright hope of soon seeing the King in his beauty is cheering. Occasionally I gather a cluster by the way, as I meet with those whose hopes and prospects are the same as my own. We have been made cheerful by the presence of some of the watchmen who are preaching the word, such as Brethren Eld. Moses Chandler and Eld. Wm. Sweet. We have been greatly encouraged by their labors. May God bless their labors, wherever they go proclaiming the good news of the coming kingdom, which will be one of peace, to those who love the Lord and keep themselves unspotted from the scenes of earth. I pray God to keep us humble and prayerful until he comes. There are a few in this part (though scattered) who are expecting deliverance soon. We hope that the saints of the Living God will remember us at the throne of grace.

Hesper, Iowa.

From Sr. Maria L. Orcott.

Bro. Wendell:—I send you a subscriber for your paper, the Crisis, and am in hopes to send a few more names soon. There are some fifteen or twenty here who want the Crisis, but they cannot send for it just yet, but will soon. There is a mighty waking up in this region on the doctrine of Jesus Christ.

Amherst, Me., Aug. 30, '61.

From Sr. Mary Norton.

Bro. Wendell:—I have received the Crisis a long time, which I take great delight in reading, being away from those of like precious faith. I have paid a little for it when I could, and will still, if you continue to send it.

Prospect, Sept. 17th, 1861.

From Bro. G. Wright.

Bro. Wendell:—Sir, enclosed I send one dollar for the Crisis. I would have it continued. It is all the preaching we have that seems anything like the present truth. My husband and I are all the Second Adventists that I know of in the town of Oxford. We are "pilgrims and strangers;" but, in view of the signs of the times, we are enabled to lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that our "redemption draweth nigh." We would be glad to hear preaching that accorded with our views of the Bible, but our means are so limited, that I sometimes fear we never shall. May the blessing of God attend you in your labors as editor of the Crisis. Yours in hope of eternal life.

Oxford, Mass., Aug. 27.

From Bro. John B. Paine.

Bro. Wendell:—I believe the Crisis should be sustained in these "perilous times," when "men's hearts are failing them for fear" of what is "coming on the earth." All of God's children that take the paper should, if possible, pay for it promptly. I believe it contains "meat in due season." I therefore send you one dollar to pay for my paper, six months in advance, praying that God will give you, and all connected with the paper, wisdom from above, which is profitable to direct. We don't want our minds so much on the word, as on the coming of Jesus Christ and his kingdom in the new earth. "When the wicked are cut off thou shalt see it."

Suncook, N. H., Sept. 2d, '61.

From Sr. L. M. Plummer.

Bro. Wendell:—Feeling that I cannot do without the weekly visits of the Crisis, which come, laden with food, for those that are looking for the return of our dear Saviour, I enclose one dollar to pay for the Crisis for the next six months.

Windham, Aug. 17th, '61.

From Bro. D. D. Haines.

Bro. Wendell:—Enclosed I send you one dollar to pay for the Crisis. Money is hard to get, business is so dull here, but it gives me great pleasure to aid in supporting the "World's Crisis," for it contains more truth in harmony with the Bible than any other paper I know of. In Haverhill, there is much of the "war spirit" among professed christians, but, seemingly, very little of the Spirit of Christ. How important it is that we be humble followers of Jesus. That we should constantly have an unwavering confidence in God and his promises, that "when Christ who is our life shall appear, we may also appear with him in glory." May the Lord bless you in your labors of love to the salvation of many souls.

Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 19.

From Sr. A. P. Morrill.

Bro. Wendell:—I would say to my dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad, that I am still striving to live a life of faith. You have not heard from me through the Crisis, I think, for about two years, nevertheless, I have not forsaken the Lord. I have the evidence within my own soul that I am blessed. When I call to mind the experience of God's people in 1843, I often ask myself, where, O where are the people that are looking for their Lord? O, brethren and sisters, I do believe the signs of the times proclaim, in thunder tones, that the Lord is near, that the judgment will soon sit, and the books will be opened, and that every one whose name is written in the book of life, will be delivered. The inspired apostle says, "Ye have need of patience after ye have done the will of God, that ye might receive the promise." God forbid that we should slumber and sleep on the very verge of the judgment, for the "coming of our God draweth near." O let us be awake and in earnest, for God is in earnest with his people. He hath a controversy with them. His judgments, also, are already abroad in the land; "the sword is unsheathed, and the nations are angry." O may the Lord help us to be humble, watchful and prayerful, that we may be accounted worthy to escape those things that are coming on the earth, and stand before him acquitted, rejoicing that this is our God, that we have waited for him, and he will save us.

Wolcott, 1861.

Obituary Notices.

Bro. Wendell:—I received the following statement of the death of Sister Brown, from our venerable Bro. Abram Brown, of Grafton, Jersey Co., Illinois, with a request for me to write an obituary. W. Pratt.

"My dear wife died Aug. 25th, 1861. She was born in June, 1800. She embraced religion and joined the 'Regular Baptist' in 1824, and walked in good fellowship with that church until 1858, when her mind became more enlightened, by reading the Bible and other works. She then embraced the Second Advent doctrine, and her faith in that remained unshaken until the day of her death."

My dear Bro B., feeling that I am well acquainted with you and your late beloved wife, I cheerfully pen a few thoughts in behalf of that devoted mother in Israel, hoping by God's blessing it may, to some extent, assuage your grief.

From a letter, from a Brother in that vicinity, I make the following extract, as it will give all an idea of the character and moral worth of the deceased. "Through all her religious life, no person ever had aught to say but in her praise. Truly she has been a 'mother in Israel,' and will be greatly missed by all who knew her. I conversed with the good old mother in her last hours, and found her faith strong and her hope bright to the very last. Never did I before see such a heavenly smile on her countenance. Glory to God, she sleeps in Jesus, and will soon awake to die no more."

My dear Bro. Brown, my heart is sad. The painful news causes deep emotions. I feel for you. I can, to some extent, imagine your great loss. I would like to pen words of comfort, but words on the present occasion seem like bubbles on the water. I can, to some extent, realize how you feel, but who can pen words that can reach the depths of a wounded, broken, lacerated heart?

Your home, my dear Brother, was one of the best I have yet found in my pilgrimage. And the christian sympathy showed to me by yourself and your late beloved wife, while traveling in the west, I trust I shall not soon forget. I think I know your circumstances, your age and your feebleness. I can imagine how much you need a "helpmeet." O that it might have been in the providence of God to have spared your companion. Your pleasant home I have not forgotten. The heavenly seasons around the family altar still are lively in my memory. In the reminiscences connected with my short pilgrimage in different States, I have often thought if there ever was a second Zachariah and Elizabeth, they could be found in the small cottage under the bluff near Grafton, Ill., on the banks of the "Father of Waters." Do I say too much? I think not. Your place was one of the retired and sacred spots of earth, where a heavenly influence was always felt, and where you and your companion had for a long time kept the fires burning on the sacred altar. If you had not the blessed hope to sustain you, I should expect you to despair, for you have no one of like precious faith near to sympathize with you. Like Lot, alone you are left. But O the glorious hope! It embraces all we can desire, and its consummation being very near, you can anticipate a meeting with her who was the choice of your youth, who now sleeps in the dust, in care of Jesus, but who, with all of the resurrected and translated saints, will enter the kingdom of God. May the Lord overrule this great loss to the good of all.

W. Pratt.

Died, in Eria, Buchanan Co., Iowa, Aug. 29th, 1861, Bro. Hiram Bond, aged forty-five years, seven months and twenty days.

After a sickness of five months, Bro. Bond fell asleep, to rest a little while till Jesus comes. He formerly lived in Wales, Mass., and for years belonged to the "Methodist Episcopal Church;" and after he heard the glorious news of the coming Saviour, continued to look for his return. He united with the church at "Strawberry Point" one year ago last July. It was a source of comfort to find himself associated with those of like precious faith, from whom he had been somewhat separated, for he had lived in the west six years, a "pilgrim and stranger," "looking for a city, whose maker and builder is God." He leaves a wife and eight children, and a number of friends to mourn his loss.

Sermon was preached by the writer, from 1 Peter 1: 3–5; from which I tried to comfort the friends, by the "hope of the resurrection" and the inheritance that is to be revealed. This was the faith of our brother, as he was a firm believer in life and immortality through Christ at the resurrection of the dead. Peter S. W. Dero.

☞ God is waiting to be gracious to us, as individuals, as families, as a people, as a nation—will we confess our sins, humble ourselves in the dust? "He that covereth his sin shall not prosper, but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." Confess your faults one to another, that ye may be healed; James 5: 15.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

PER STEAMSHIP SAXONIA.

St. John's, N. F., Sept. 21. Steamship Saxonia, From Hamburg, via. Southampton, at 4 P. M. of the 11th, was intercepted by the news yacht of the Associated Press off Cape Race, at 6 o'clock this morning. She has 300 passengers and £26,000 in specie for New York.

The Saxonia experienced strong head winds most of the passage. Passed steamship Bremen on the evening of the 11th.

Steamship Persia, from New York, arrived at Liverpool on the 8th, and steamship Bohemian, from Quebec, at Londonderry, the 10th.

ENGLAND.

The policy of sending reinforcements to Canada is questioned, and the arrangements for doing so are suspended for the present.

The Times city article says it is expected that a combined Anglo-French naval and military expedition will be organized to obtain redress for indignities inflicted on British and French interests in Mexico. Spain is earnestly desirous of an adjustment that may end the prevailing horrors, and foreign intervention is prayed for by the whole Mexican population. It is assumed that the Federal Cabinet at Washington will cordially co-operate.

London Money Market. The settlement of the Consols account on the 10th was attended with much confusion. Eight operators were compelled to suspend—in one case for 225,000 pounds.

Applications at the Bank for discount were moderate. Gold to the amount of £556,000 was sent into the Bank since the last return.

FRANCE.

The Paris Pays announces that an increase in the artillery and marine will shortly take place.

The Patrie says that all the powers without exception acknowledges the truth of the allegations made by the Roman government in protesting against Ricasoli's assertions.

The Constitutionnel says the mission of the French authorities in the Papal States is to make the integrity of the Holy See respected, and to maintain neutrality by barring the frontiers to the passage of an armed band.

SPAIN.

The Spanish government, in conjunction with England and France, will intervene in Mexican affairs by sending troops to Mexico from Cuba.

ITALY.

The National fete at Naples passed off splendidly. The King and Garibaldi were cheered.

The Journal of Rome officially declares that the passage relative to Rome in Ricasoli's note is calumnious, and that it is unworthy the dignity of the Holy See to make a reply, demonstrating the falsity of the assertions contained therein.

Gen. Guyon has ordered that any invasion by the Piedmontese of localities occupied by the French troops shall be repulsed by force.

At a meeting of the Olegians at Palermo, a resolution was adopted declaring that the temporal power of the Pope is incompatible with, and contrary to, the mission of the Catholic church.

It is rumored that the Minister of the United States at Brussels has addressed a proposal to Garibaldi to take an important command in the Federal army, and that Garabaldi accepted of the offer under certain reservations.

The Emperor of Brazil has recognized the Kingdom of Italy.

AUSTRIA.

The Emperor received the deputation of the lower House of the Reichrath, bearing the address, and thanked them for the loyal manifestations of their sentiments.

The elections to the Diet in the Orlea district resulted in favor of the government.

TURKEY.

The Montenegrins evacuated Farina, accompanied by fifty Christian families.

Fresh detachments of Turkish troops had arrived at Lentari. Dervish and Mehemid Pasha, with troops, has marched against Realis and Nebogue in Herzovinia. The Montenegrins are forwarding guns to Grabrowo. The Turkish troops had crossed the Montenegrin frontier.

WEST COAST OF AFRICA.

The territory of Lagor was ceded to the British crown Aug 5th. The King signed the treaty.

A commercial treaty in favor of England and France had been negotiated with the King at Badaloo.

Trade on the Gold Coast was dull.

POLAND.

Disturbances took place at Okalesch on the Emperor's anniversary fete, and the military used much violence against the populace, many of whom were arrested. A deputation had left for Warsaw.

DOMESTIC.

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 20.—A report received here this morning states that McCulloch with probably 2000 men was on the Osage, seventy miles from here, date not given, marching on Jefferson City. The commanding officer here is inclined to credit the report.

Col. Richardson took a position with a regiment of the Home Guards at Osage Bridge, where the first attack will no doubt be made. He says he will not desert the post until the last man falls.

Lieut, Montgomery, of Gen. Fremont's cavalry, has just arrived from Georgetown, and says heavy firing was heard at Boonville all day Wednesday and late into the night from Lexington, disproving the story that that place surrendered on Tuesday.

Claib Jackson has, it is said, but 9500 men, and is surrounded on every side. He cannot escape if defeated, nor hold Lexington if he takes it.

In Pettis county all the rebels have gone off in squads to join Jackson. Nearly all the Unionists have also left in fear, and the country is perfectly desolate. Fine crops are standing everywhere ungathered.

St. Louis, Sept. 20. A gentleman named King, who left a point on the Missouri river opposite Lexington on Wednesday nigth, arrived here this morning and reports that a severe fight took place on Thursday for the possesion of three ferry boats which lay at the Levee. Gen. Price's force advanced on the boats in two bodies, one from above and the other from below the town.

After a sharp engagement they were repulsed. The boats were not in fair range of Col. Mulligan's guns, his fortifications being so situated as to prevent him from commanding them completely, and his force was two small to admit of his making a sortie against Price's overwhelming numbers; but Mr. King says he saw twelve wagon loads of killed and wounded rebels taken off after the fight. He also says that Price assaulted Col. Mulligan's fortifications four or five times on Wednesday, but was repulsed each time with a loss of from 300 to 400.

Ironton, Mo., Sept. 18. A skirmish occurred on Thursday at Black River, fifteen miles southwest of here, between three companies of Indiana volunteers, under Major Garvitt, and a body of rebel cavalry, under the notorious Ben. Talbot. Five rebels were killed, four prisoners taken, thirty horses and a quantity of arms captured. The balance scattered in all directions.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 19. Fifteen hundred men, under Col. Smith, overtook 600 rebels as they were crossing the river at Blue Mills' landing, on the 17th, and completely routed them, killing from 120 to 200, and took 12 prisoners. The Federal loss was 50 killed and 25 wounded.

A private letter from Lexington to-day says Price attacked the Federals at 10 o'clock yesterday morning with a force of 30,000. The Federals are estimated at three or four thousand.

The Federals fought them two hours, when the rebels drove them back into the intrenchments, carrying every thing before them. The Irish Brigade then came out and charged them at the point of the bayonet, scattering the rebels everywhere. Price was to attack them again this morning with 17 pieces of artillery. No statement of the loss is given.

It is feared that the reinforcements sent from Jefferson City have not yet reached Lexington.

Heavy batteries are placed at Glasgow by the rebels, and our troops will have to disembark below the town and attack them in the rear.

Washington, Sept. 20. Gen. Fremont telegraphs to the headquarters of the army, under date of yesterday, that Major Gavitt of the First Indiana Regiment of cavalry who was sent out on a reconnoissance toward Gen. Hardee's poistion at Greenville, met the enemy's pickets and drove them in, killing two and taking three of them prisoners. He also captured sixty muskets and twenty-five horses.

St. Louis, Sept. 20. The following additional particulars in relation to affairs at Lexington have been ascertained. The first attack on the fortifications is said to havbeen made on Thursday of last week, but this is certainly a mistake, as Gen. Price did not leave Warrenburg—40 miles south of Lexington—until Wednesday night. The attack was probably made on Monday, as stated by previous advices, with about 800 men. The engagement lasted two hours, when the rebels were repulsed with a loss of 100 killed and between 200 and 300 wounded.

The attack on Wednesday was a determined affair and lasted nearly all day.

The reinforcements from the North, under Gen. Sturgis, probably number 3000, but should they be unable to cross the river, which is quite likely, the only aid they can give will be to sweep with their artillery the points occupied by the rebels. It is confidently hoped, however, that the 6000 troops that left Jefferson City on Wednesday, will be able to land at or near Lexington, and cut their way through the enemy's forces and join Col. Mulligan.

It is said that Col. Mulligan expressed confidence in being able to hold his position against any force not more than ten times greater than his.

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 20. It is supposed at headquarters that Mulligan's force at Lexington is 3500 men, consisting of an Irish Brigade under Col. Mulligan, 900; Col. Marshall's Illinois cavalry, 600; a Kansas regiment—500 mounted and 500 infantry; and the Home Guards; three six-pounders, one howitzer, and two mortars.

Some Federal scouts just in report that the firing was still going on Wednesday evening. The rebels, it is said, have no shells, schrapnel or cannister, nothing but round shot and slugs. Nearly 3000 government horses and mules are within Mulligan's intrenchments, requiring much care to prevent a stampede.

A special dispatch to the St. Louis Democrat says that J. C. Davis, commanding here, received the appointment as Brigadier General to-day.

General Lane is reported to have formed a junction with the force at Lexington, with four thousand men. Reinforcements from St. Joseph are also reported to have reached that place, and Lexington in now considered safe.

St. Louis, Sept. 21. In order to correct confusion and many contradictory statements relative to the position of Lexington and the opposing forces under Col. Mulligan and Gen. Price, it is deemed necessary to make the following explanation:

The general direction of the Missouri at Lexington is from the West to East—the city lying on the South bank. The early settlement, now called Oldtown, is situated back on a hill and has been superseded by New Lexington, which is further up the river where there is a steamboat landing. This is the main city.

Mulligan's fortifications are on a ridge running at right angles between the two towns. They surround the Masonic College buildings, standing about a quarter of a mile from the river, which has been used as quarters for the troops and strengthened to resist an artillery attack.

The line of fortifications runs down to the river bluff. This is the point where the conflict took place Tuesday for the possession of the ferry boats.

The main body of Price's army is situated at the old town, but the fortifications have been assailed from all sides but the river. On Thursday of last week an attack was made by a strong party of roving rebels, who were repulsed with considerable loss, and the old town shelled and burnt to prevent its being used as shelter.

St. Louis, Sept. 23. Gen. Prentiss' dispatch announcing the surrender of Col. Mulligan, at Lexington, says the Federal loss was 37 killed and 140 wounded. The rebel loss is supposed to be about 800 killed and wounded.

The reported fight between the rebels and Gen. Lane's brigade is discredited here, Lane being some distance east of that point, at last accounts, marching on Lexington.

The account of the battle of Blue Mills forwarded last night was gathered from official dispatches, and therefore can be relied upon. Col. Smith's command was to leave Blue Mills for St. Joseph the day after the battle.

A special dispatch to the Republican from Jefferson City, dated the 22d, says nothing has been received corroborative of the report of the surrender of Lexington, and many there disbelieve it totally.

It is supposed if Lexington has surrendered, Price and his men will move down the river, and, unless checked or defeated, attack Boonville and then Jefferson City.

Judge Field, who arrived here yesterday, having been a prisoner in Lexington and released, says Col. Mulligan told him last Tuesday evening that he could hold out, under any circumstances, five or six days.

Chicago, Sept. 23. A special dispatch from Quincy to the Journal says: Col. Mulligan has been released on parole and will be here this evening. He will remain until Gen. Fremont's orders are received. Gen. Prentiss has telegraphed from Brookfield to the Assistant Quartermaster to provide subsistence for 2000 men, and to have it ready on their arrival. The commissioned officers are retained as prisoners by the rebels.

St. Louis, Sept. 23. Charles G. Ramsey, the proprietor of the Evening News, was arrested this afternoon by order of the Provost Marshal, and taken to Headquarters for examination. His offence was publishing an editorial article to-day, entitled "Fall of Lexington," reflecting in bitter terms upon the campaign and the military authorities of the Department of the West. His paper was suppressed, and all the manuscript found in the office seized, and the building is now in possession of the Provost Guard. The name of the author of the article was divulged, and it is thought the publication of the paper will be allowed to continue.

New York, Sept. 23. An attempt was discovered last night to destroy the train due from Albany on the Hudson River road, between 102d and 118th streets. Heavy rocks were piled up on the inside track extending a long distance. The Police removed the stones. The train was said to be a special one conveying a regiment from the interior. It came through safely. There is no clue as yet to the fiends.

Notices, &c.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times; and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. Morgan, Chairman.

Explanation.—"A. C. Association" means the Advent Christian Association, and "C. P. Society" means Christian Publication Society.

Rufus Wendell.

Notice.

Geo. Storrs, of New York, owing to the extreme pressure of present circumstances, offers the herein after named works at fifty per cent discount to any person, or persons, sending him ten dollars or upwards, if applied for soon. The works are—

Six Sermons, revised and enlarged edition: bound, 50 cts.; in paper covers, 30 cts.
The Watch Tower: or, Man in Death, in paper covers. .... 20 cents.
Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again—in paper covers .... 20 cts.
Life only in Christ: a bound volume, including each of the above works, and a discourse on the Atonement $1.00
The Discussion with Prof. Mattison—in paper covers. .... 30 cts.
Bible vs. Tradition—bound, 75 cts.; paper covers, 40 cents.
Man's Destiny: A Review of Prof. Post—in paper covers .... 30 cts.
Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney: Part II.—in paper covers .... 30 cts.
Our Israelitish Origin—paper covers. .... 50 cts.
Man's Nature and Destiny: A Sermon, by Geo. Storrs—paper covers .... 5 cts.
Bible Examiner for 1861, bound $1.50

Of this last work there are but some thirty copies left.

All remittances and orders, sent by mail, must be addressed—Geo. Storrs, Box 4658, New York. Sent by private hands, they may be left with Geo. W. Young, (up stairs) 35 Ann Street, (corner of Nassau.)

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference, or meeting of days, at Nottingham, (Dames Hall) commencing Sunday, September 29th—the object of which is the salvation of souls. The meeting will continue as long as thought advisable. Brethren coming, will be prepared to labor for that object.

C. C. Stevens.

Exeter, N. H., Sept. 23, '61.

Notice.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will meet in Wayne, Thursday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Oct. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. The meeting will be held in a school-house, about one mile west of Wayne village, near Bro. Cyrus Bartlett's. Brethren will call on him for direction. We hope the Lord's laborers will be there. I. C. Wellcome, Sec.

Conference.

The next Western Quarterly Conference in the State of Maine will be held in Kennebunk, Oct. 10th, 1861. A good representative of the brethren within the bounds of this Conference is desired. The ministering brethren, especially, will be present. Brethren and sisters, we need to be awake to the times in which we live, and the duties of these times. Therefore, come up to this quarterly meeting in the name and spirit of the Lord.

By order of Conference, O. R. Fassett.

Conference at No. Dana, Mass.

The Lord willing, there will be a Conference at North Dana, Mass. to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 9th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. Champlin and Otis are expected to assist in preaching the word. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend. This is mostly a new field. No meeting of the kind has ever been held here. Board and horse keeping on reasonable terms for those who wish. Come, brethren and sisters, we will make you as comfortable as we can. Come in the name of the good Lord, with the expectation of seeing his power displayed in the conversion of sinners and the return of backsliders. Come one, come all. We expect to have a good meeting in the name of the Lord.

Eld. Geo. A. Streeter.

N. B. The above does not exclude any of the preaching brethren who may a desire to come. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer. G. A. S.

Notice.

Has any subscriber the Crisis for Jan. 9th, 1861, who would mail it to the address of R. Willard, Hammonton, N. J., and thus cheer the bereaved heart of our Bro. A. Fike?

Notice.

The next Rhode Island Quarterly Conference will meet at Rocky Brook, R. I., the last Wednesday in September. An invitation has been extended to the Conference from Exeter, and Lafayette and Rocky Brook churches. According to my instructions from the Conference, I have located it at Rocky Brook. M. R. Phetteplace, Clerk.

Notice.

It is expected there will be a meeting at Bro. Asahel Judd Mix's, in Bristol, commencing Oct. 2d, 1861, to continue five days. Bro. Levi R. Teeple is expected to preach, as the Lord may direct. Whosoever will may come.

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.

English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we get them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line; but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1.25; postage 14 cts.
Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1.50; postage 15 cts.
Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.62; postage 15 cts.
Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50; postage 21 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.
Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75; postage 26 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50; postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. Joseph T. Curry will preach at Springfield Sunday, Sept. 29th, and has arranged to remain with the Church there and supply the desk until further notice.

New York	Friday evening, Sept. 27th.
Albany	Sunday, Sept. 29th.
Goshen	Tuesday, Oct. 1st.
Boodsville	Wednesday, Oct. 2d.
	H. PRATT.
Lake Village, N. H	Sunday, Oct. 6th.
Kennebunkport, Me.	Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Portsmouth, N. H	Sunday, Oct. 20th.
	J. COUCH.
Morris, Ct.	Oct. 8th.
Plymouth Hollow	Oct. 9th.
Bristol	Oct. 10th.
Southbridge, Mass	Oct. 13th.
	S. B. MUNN.
Athol	Oct. 6th.
	D. M. BEACH.

I will preach in Pownal, Vt., where brethren may appoint, commencing Oct. 1st and continuing over the Sabbath.

North Adams, Mass., commencing Oct. 7th and continuing over the Sabbath.

South Adams, meetings commencing Oct. 17th and continuing over the Sabbath.

GEO. A. OTIS.

I propose to meet with the friends as follows:—

Biddeford	Sept. 27.
Portland	Sunday, Sept. 29.
Poland	Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.
Lewiston	Oct. 2.
Yarmouth	Sunday, Oct. 6.
	J. S. WHITE.
North Salem, N. Y., Bro. Bailey's	Sept. 29.
Brooklyn, L. I.	Oct. 2.
	J. K. BELLOWS.
Bangor, Me.	Sunday, Sept. 29.
Stark	Oct. 16th.
	D. A. JONES.
Portsmouth	Sept. 29th.
Portland	Oct. 6.
Yarmouth	Oct. 13.

If supplied, please notify me in season to comply with other requests. The two last weeks in Oct. not engaged. HIRAM MUNGER.

Bristol	Sept. 29.
	C. GOODRICH.

APPOINTMENT FOR WORCESTER.

W. Pratt	Sunday, Sept. 29
	R. CURTIS.
Vernon, Vt	Sept. 29.
Erving, Mass	Sept. 30.
	GEO. A. STREETER.
Rocky Brook	Sunday, Sept, 29.
	H. F. CARPENTER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

J. McKee, Hesper, Ill.—All right. You must write to Bro. Morgan for the tract, as we have none in our office.

Eld. J. Porter, Dansville, C. E.—Wm. Adkinson 23 cts.; Geo. Mathews $1.44. Jos. Wilson pays two numbers ahead.

Eld. A. N. Seymour—We have credited M. P. Rogers $1.60, and charged the same to you, which balances your account.

Cash Receipts.

Dr. R Willard 261, $2.20; M P Rogers 353, $1.60; W. Dunn 346, $1 15; S M Fowler 312, $3; W L Wheeler 282, 80 cts; J Lyle 325, 51 cts; S W Foss 286, $2.16; Aaron Yard 313, $1.50; G W Hard 315, $1.50.

Mrs. D Baker 320, Mrs. E Canfield 325, Mary Webber 325,—50 cts. each.

Hy. Daton 338, Joel Allen 364, S K Fenton 338, S A Kamerling 332, Mrs. N Knapp 356, P Blanchard 300, J S Moulton 286, Mary Sheldon 338, Jon. Chapman 294, N Shumway 312, M F Champlin 340, S Rhyner 302, J Sampson 306, S J Black 312, Rufus Hill 338, Lucy Gowell 338, Almira Cottle 338, Jacob Grim 338, H Littlefield 325, A C Jenkins 364, Carp. Clark 319, W A Cotting 260, Asr. Barnett 338, W P Wentworth 340, Henry Barnard 363, Jno. Daniels 300, Wm. Adkinson 336, T T Farrell 306, Wm. Richardson 314, F D Field 314, P W Higgins 320, M E Green 338, Wm. Howarth 338, Jos. Taylor 338, J Nudd 330, W R Wilson 312, Mrs. P Green 307, G R Baker 338, M J Maginnis 338, E C Field 312, Mrs. R E Cole 338, Mrs. Curtis 338, J Marshal 324, Betsey Herrick 325, Gil. West 325, Thos. Chambers 338, M A Belding 338, J Meggnier 338, Soph. Gay 303, J G Knowlton 329, J P Ellis 296, Saml. Freeman 338, Wm. Keith 338, Mrs. T Harrington 332, Danl. Jones 338,—$1.00 each.

T W [illegible] 338, J H Turner 316, J M [illegible] 312, Wm. Brown 375, J H Sleeper 312, Mrs. O Young 296, E Loomis 338, C S Whitney 312, A M S Bement 364, T P Hodgdon 338, [illegible] 364, Mrs. S Dow 318, S P Hubbard 338, Martha Cole 364, S S Rogers 364,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

J Pinkham 3 cts., I Dimmick $1.00, W L Wheeler [illegible], A B White 50 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruah and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 28 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 280 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 23 cts. Postage 7 cts. By L. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $6.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 3 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 10 cts.; postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment [illegible] and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts; postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. B. Brooks, No. 3 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 [illegible]; [illegible]; [illegible].

[illegible] Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred, [illegible] postage 1 cent.

For the Crisis.

"He that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."—Matt. 12: 30.

None can idly look on in the vineyard of God,
All are toiling for good or for ill;
Each act of our lives doth an influence cast—
The sequel the judgment will tell.
Each day that we live we are busy at work
To gather or scatter abroad,
Encouraging some one more firmly to trust,
Or driving him further from God.

We are idly deceiving ourselves if we say,
If no good, 'tis no ill we have done:
Ah! yes, if we've failed to work in his cause,
Our example has hindered some one.
There is always one heart over which we possess
An influence, though it is small;
Yes, none are so weak, so humble, or poor,
As to cast here no shadow at all.

Each kind, loving word, each smile we bestow,
Helps to soften the tone of one heart—
To open its portals to mercy and grace,
Which Jesus still waits to impart;
While a look of unkindness or angry reproach
Serves to harden the nature to sin—
To deafen the ear to the low, gentle voice,
Of the spirit's that pleading within.

The pride we display causes envy and strife—
Leads the lambs of the pasture astray;
While a meek, lowly spirit strews blossoms of love—
Sheds fragrance of peace o'er the way.
Thus from morning till night we are still toiling on,
We gather or scatter abroad,
Our hands ever busy still for or against
The cause of Jehovah our Lord.

MRS. W. P. WENTWORTH.

La Fayette, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

"The Memory of the Just is Blessed."

The above text was brought forcibly to mind while thoughts of by-gone days were the subject of my recent meditation. I had before me sweet and vivid recollections of the worthy labors of our beloved Bro. K. S. Hastings, who, like the ancient pilgrims, hath "fallen on sleep," and rests with his fathers in the dark, deep grave. Yet, "he being dead, yet speaketh." Yea, his faithfulness in teaching the "commandments of God and the faith of Jesus," is not forgotten. His holy walk and upright example yet lives. Like Apollos of old, he was truly "an eloquent man, and mighty in the Scriptures." With the same spirit that the prophets possessed, he told us things that "should come hereafter;" giving "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little." Many times, while hearing and wondering "at the gracious words which proceeded out his mouth," have I been led to say, like Hezekiah, "Good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken..' There seemed to be such "power, by the Spirit of the Lord," in his speech, that I could but exclaim, like the woman of Zarephath, "Now I know that thou art a man of God, and that the word of the Lord in thy mouth is truth." His labors in this vicinity were blessed of God; and the people, "whether they will hear or forbear, yet "know that a prophet of the Lord hath been among them." Ezek. 2: 5. Some were pricked in the heart and cried out, "what shall we do?" Several were also baptized by him, confessing their sins, and walked in newness of life.

Bro. K. S. Hastings was one of the first of that "sect everywhere spoken against," who preached the speedy advent of Messiah in this place about 1850. His first visit to this place was blest in a peculiar manner. When drawing near the house where he intended to call, one of its inmates, (a young lady of very respectable character) looking out of the window and seeing him approach, said to her mother. "The old Millerite is coming." "Sure enough!" said the mother, "and what do you think the old Millerite will have to say?" Although they never had seen him before, they guessed rightly when they said "it is he." He entered—their jolly talk was hushed to a deathly silence. He held a pleasant conversation with the man of the house, who had embraced the same "precious faith," but walked alone, as none of his family held the same views, or even enjoyed the favor of God. But dark clouds soon fell back from the old man's brow as each family voice was raised in prayer to "ask mercies of the God of heaven." Bro. H., before leaving, proposed having a season of prayer; and accordingly called on the mother to pray. She was daunted, and knew not what to do; for, although she had brought up a large family of children; and had been a church member "lo these many years," yet not one of her family circle had ever heard her voice in prayer. And now what could she do? A few moments before, and she stood vainly mocking that "old disciple," who now so earnestly begged her to supplicate the Lord. She deeply hesitated, and said, "I choose to join the others." Bro. H. replied he knew of no way to join the others, only by praying herself vocally. And, feeling her sins had well-nigh reached up to heaven like a mountain before her, she broke out in fervent petitions to that God who "pardoneth our iniquities," and a new song was put into her mouth; her guilt fled away, and peace, free and full, ruled in her heart, next, vehemently broke out in cries for mercy that daughter, who had spoken vainly of the messenger of God. The Father of mercies and God of all comfort" heard while she was yet speaking, and her soul was filled with "joy unspeakable and full of glory." That house became the house of many prayers. Each member of the family joined the army of God, and commenced fighting for that King who "only hath immortality." And to-day three of those sons are preachers of the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ, one of which is yet among us, fighting "through evil as well as through good report." Two of them have left father, mother, brothers and sisters, home and friends, taken their little families and gone far west, to preach Jesus and the resurrection.

At another house where Bro. H. called, the Lord blest his labors with more than ordinary favor. At that dwelling there was a christian lady, who had resolved to walk "in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless," and requested Bro. H. to baptize her; but, on informing her husband of her intention, he seemed bitterly opposed to it, spoke angrily to her, and would not be present when she followed her Savior into the liquid stream, but retired in a sullen mood from her presence. But that praying minister asked God to follow that impenitent man; his petition was granted, love took the place of anger in that opposing husband's breast. He asked his wife's forgiveness, obtained the grace of God, felt his sins were forgiven, and finally was baptized by Bro. H. before he left the place.

Thus we see that, while our brother sleeps unconscious in the tomb, his works yet praise him, while the wicked die, and "their memorial is perished with them;' "who had come and gone from the place of the holy, and they are forgotten in the city where they have so done," (Eccl. 8: 10; showing us that "the memory of the just is blessed, but the name of the wicked shall rot." Prov. 10: 7. Precious indeed were those opportunities we had of hearing the law from the lips of our "father in Israel;" and many hearts exclaimed, "all the words which the Lord hath spoken will we do, and be obedient." Ex. 23: 3–7.

One of his last visits to this place was truly solemn. In his discourse he mentioned Paul's farewell visit to the saints at Miletus, who "sorrowed most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his face no more." Acts 20. During this affecting sermon of our beloved pastor, many wept aloud, as though he too, like Paul, was about to leave us to return no more; his own voice meanwhile was choked with sobs and violent weeping, as he fervently plead with the little church here to be steadfast in the work of the Lord. His heart began to be burdened greatly for the ungodly in this place. He raised his voice, asking God to arouse the wicked to a sense of their condition; as he prayed, it seemed as though the heavens must come down; such petitions could not go unheard. At the hour of nine, some of the ring-leaders in wickedness approached the house, and, as one of us stepped to the door, they asked if there was a meeting here. We told them we were having only a family prayer meeting, and asked them to walk in; they entered quietly, were seated, and Bro. H. arose, opened his Bible, took his text, and preached near an hour from words something like these: "I have called, but ye refused." They seemed thunder-struck at his authority and power, and when he closed, they left in a gentleman-like manner, without the stamping of feet and loud yells, as they heretofore had practiced. But the final result of that exercise I leave the day of God to unfold.

L. A. MIRICK.

Savoy, Mass., Aug., 1861.

P. S. I write the above at the request of H. L. Hastings, who wished me to write some of my recollections of his father's labors here; but I refrained for awhile, and tried to enlist others in the work who were better qualified to speak. But he says, "make no excuses;" so I forward this, hoping others will "gather up the fragments, that nothing be lost." Who will say "I can't? O complain not of talents, nor withhold your pen. Make use of the gifts God has given to men.

L. A. M.

For the Crisis.

A Letter.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Feeling it a duty and privilege to be praising the Lord in these perilous times—the last period of the world's history—I take my pen to write a few lines for the Crisis. In the dark catalogue of this world's history, revolution has succeeded revolution, notwithstanding the peace and safety doctrine has been sounding in our ears. Yet the Lord says, there is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." Now our own beloved country is engaged in the bloody strife. How appalling! But says the Saviour, "Fear not, little flock, it is your heavenly Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. When we take a retrospective view of the past, we may well ask, what will be the final consequence of the awful conflict now pending between the North and South,—one party probably holding at least four millions of slaves as property, in a similar manner as a merchant does his goods, to be bought and sold. The consequences that must necessarily follow will be a large amount of cruelty inflicted upon them, lest they should escape during the war. Let us cast a glance over the old countries, and consider the millions of poverty-stricken poor, unprotected and uncared for by the rich and popular.

Our Saviour divides mankind into two classes, the good and evil, and simply informs us they may be known by their fruits. He says, "every tree is known by its fruit." In my humble experience I can truly say I have received the blessing of the Lord as the fruits of the spirit of love. All my family have been sick this present year, five in number, myself excepted. Though poor and dependent, like the sparrow that falls to the ground, not one of them was forgotten before God. Our beloved Dr. Buxton, rendered his most attentive and constant services, in his profession, during the whole reign of sickness. For all this may the Lord reward him a hundred fold in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting. Thus I could say with regard to many other kind friends in this neighborly city, who sat up and watched with my family many long and wearisome nights, when two and three of them were sick at a time. The fruit of all this goodness, I humbly trust, will have a happy influence upon my heart and life. "Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble."

Brethren and sisters, let us be watching for that glorious event that many of us are so soon expecting to see. Let us discard all the fables of these last days, and build our foundation upon the rock where nought will shake us, and look for the speedy advent of our Lord, who is coming in all the glory of his Father, his own glory, and the glory of the holy angels. May the blessing of love and peace rest upon you and comfort you at all times, is the desire of your unprofitable servant,

C. H. SAWIN.

For the Crisis.

Camp Meeting Notice.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—Agreeable to appointment we met on the Camp ground, where we enjoyed the counsel, prayers and fellowship of about fifty of God's chosen pilgrims, bound for the land of promise; and the best of all was, the Lord was in our midst, and we had a thrilling shout in the Camp of Israel; and all praise is due to the King of Zion for his unspeakable goodness on that occasion.

The meeting was called to order by the appointment of Bro. A. N. Seymour, President, and Bro. R. Phinney, Vice President. Bro. L. Roberts was chosen Secretary, and Bro. H. Austin, Treasurer. A Committee of Arrangements was also chosen to confer with one another and keep order on the ground during the meeting. A second Committee was also chosen to circulate subscription papers and collect means for the support of an Evangelist for the ensuing year, or, in other words, the Camp meeting year. At 2 o'clock, P. M., religious services were opened by singing and prayer, and a discourse by Bro. T. G. Newman from 1 Pet. 1: 19, showing the efficacy of the precious blood of Christ. At 6 P. M., prayer and conference; preaching at 7 by Bro. Drummond from Jonah 1: 6.—"What meanest thou, O sleeper," etc. The discourse was a feeling one, and the power of truth was sensibly felt by the speaker, the congregation sharing the same blessing. We retired to our tents, and by ten o'clock all was quiet.

Second day. Soon after daybreak our ears were all saluted by the melodious voice of Bro. A. F. Servis singing, as he walked around the Camp ground, one of the Songs of Zion. As we had no bell or hour, we proposed that he should announce to us the time for rising each morning by singing, which he did; and the notes of that clear, sweet voice, which fell on our ears and awoke us to consciousness, were truly refreshing and joyful. Prayer in the tents one half hour after rising. Prayer and conference at 6 A. M. All seemed to enjoy it with much satisfaction. At 10 1-2, Bro. George Moyer, from Indiana, preached from 2 Pet. 1: 16–19 an instructive discourse, unfolding to the church the prophecies and the faithfulness of God in establishing and making honorable his ever faithful word, in which the believer can always confide and rest secure amidst the surging billows of the perils of these last days. At 2 P. M., Bro. Phinney preached from Heb. 11: 13, 14. A good discourse, showing the good news of precious promises made to the fathers, as yet not consummated, but will soon be by the coming of the seed, to whom the promises were made. At 6 prayer and conference, as usual, and increasing interest felt among the flock. At 7 we had the pleasure of preaching about Christ's coming, the descent of the new Jerusalem, resurrection and translation of the saints to the city of God to enjoy eternal blessedness. Our spirit was refreshed in discoursing about heavenly things. I will not detail minutely, but suffice it to say that all our social as well as sermonizing gatherings increased in interest from first to last; our number, though small at first, continually increased.

On Saturday afternoon we retired a short distance from the camp ground to a beautiful lake, where we planted six dear souls in the likeness of Christ's death. It was a most precious season; tears flowed as the children received the right hand of fellowship. Never did we enjoy a baptismal scene any better; the influence upon the congregation was impressive. Saturday evening Bro. Moyer preached on the prophecies a stirring discourse, after which we had two exhortations, which seemed to go where they were directed with power.

Sunday morning social meeting commenced at 8 o'clock, in which nearly all the friends of Jesus spoke, to edification and comfort. At 10 Bro. Newman preached upon the Signs of the Times; a well directed discourse, producing conviction, I think, on many minds. He occupied one hour and ten minutes, then we sang, after which Bro. Drummond preached a strong discourse on the present state of man. At 2 P. M., we discoursed upon the subject of eternal life through Jesus Christ. In the evening Bro. Moyer preached on the final destiny of the wicked, which will tell in time to come on those who heard. There were a good many rowdies on the ground, but no disturbance; they were all held in check by the power of kindness. A number entered one of the tents in time of service, and went to stealing provision, but the owner caught them at it, and freely gave them all he had, counselling them not to steal any more.

Monday we met at 9 A. M., for business, and to hear the last sermon from Bro. Phinney on Charity, which was excellent. We circulated a subscription, and in a short time got $100 subscribed for an Evangelist. I presented Bro. J. A. Sober to the church as a good and proper man for an Evangelist. Bro. Phinney, Newman and Moyer spoke in his favor. It was then moved and seconded that Bro. Sober should be their servant; the vote was unanimous. The camp meeting then adjourned to meet again the 27th of August, 1862, in the town of Grand Blanc, Genesee Co., Mich., on the farm of Bro. John Anable, in a delightful and thickly settled community.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. Hiram Austin for his hospitality and kindness during the meeting, when we took the parting hand, all feeling loth to leave the place where we had enjoyed such a sweet communion season, partaking of those emblems which point us on to the time of rest in the kingdom of God.

We would not forget to say that we for the first time met with Brn. Newman and Moyer, and formed a very happy acquaintance; they are kindred spirits, loving God and laboring ardently for the promotion of truth and righteousness. May God bless and prosper them in the way of well doing.

A. N. SEYMOUR.

For the Crisis.

We must have a Paper.

We always have had one. The truths of God must always be sounded out from pulpit and press. The inhabitants in the desolate places of our world—those who have not opportunities of hearing the word spoken, must not be left without a paper,—their preacher. The devil has his presses, issuing lies and abominations. Spiritualists have their papers, politicians have them in abundance, and it is not in me to believe God will not give his children this means of advancing truth and building up his cause. No, no, we shall not be left without a weekly comforter. Just as soon as one periodical goes down, another will come up. Soon as one editor becomes blind, another is made to see.

God will give us a paper; but, brethren, we must support it. Some folks are shouting happy when their paper comes to them; but when a dun-letter or a collecting agent comes in, it changes the tune amazingly. Now let us shout just as loud when we are paying for our Crisis as when we are reading it. These days are the days when christians, especially Adventists, ought to be honest. Let those who are so pleased and ready to praise their minister, be as joyful over him when he wants a loaf of bread, or a new coat.

Let us trust in God, and use his money for his cause. Time is short. We must work. The Lord is coming, and so is the judgment. I want to be found blameless, through the righteousness of Christ Jesus. O let us be good. Let us be kind. Let us be faithful. None but holy ones can enter that holy city.

M. MATHEWS.

Yarmouth, Me.

For the Crisis.

The People Wondered at.

We think the people most wondered at are those who are looking for their Master, "the Lord from heaven." In view of his coming, is it possible that their hearts can be so much on the present as to lose sight of their glorious eternal home? Truly, what manner of persons ought we to be, in all holy conversation and godliness, ever having before our minds the great purpose of the gospel.

For whom is this honor reserved? the prophets, apostles and fathers inquire, who longed to see this hour, but saw it not. And what are we, that we should be counted worthy to wait for the King of Kings?" What humility our position inspires! what deep searchings of heart, and what sacrifice of self! Is this position for us, to wait and watch for the Son of Man? May we also claim that promise, "Blessed is that servant, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching"? What zeal should this inspire—yea, what carefulness in all things, without spot and blameless!

If, when the Lord descended on Mount Sinai to give laws to the people, they were commanded to wash themselves, to cleanse and sanctify themselves, lest his anger should break out upon them,—how much more when he is coming to make his dwelling among men, "fashioning us like unto his glorious body," should we sanctify ourselves and "keep ourselves in the love of God"—his Spirit have the ruling power of our hearts. It is a question of serious import, "Who shall stand when he appeareth?" or, "Who shall abide the day of his coming?" which shall "try every man's work, of what sort it is." Let us be diligent: "let us not sleep," lest, when he comes, our raiment should be found stained with the shades of worldliness and sin. But let us realize the glorious position of waiting for Jesus, the glorious Life-giver. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen.

New Glasgow, C. E.

M. H. M.

Selections.

"Feed my Lambs."

It is one of the cheering signs of the times that an increased interest is felt in the conversion of children. Many prayers are now offered in their behalf. It has come at length to be admitted that children may be converted. Ministers, therefore, have a special duty in respect to this large and interesting class. The command of Christ comes to them with emphasis, "Feed my lambs."

Much has been done, and is now being done, for the conversion of children. They are gathered into Sabbath schools. Sermons are preached to them. Something more, however, is necessary. Ministers should cultivate and keep up an acquaintance with the children. They should know them as the good Shepherd is represented as knowing the sheep and lambs of his fold. "He calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out." One cannot but smile in reading the memoir of the venerable Dr. Hopkins, to come across such a passage as the following—(the testimony of one who knew and remembered him well:) "Whenever he met me in my childhood, as I passed his house to my school, he inquired for my name, and the name of my father; but never seemed to notice my answers so as to recollect them, but appeared to be lost in divinity." No wonder he had so weak a hold on the affections of his people. He was "lost in divinity."

How different was it in this respect with the seraphic Summerfield, who always manifested a particular interest in the children of his charge, and of whom it is said, that having once been introduced to a family, he never forgot the name of any of its members, not even of the children and servants. A pleasing incident is related of him. Coming down from the pulpit one day, he noticed a little boy who seemed desirous of speaking with him.

"Do you want anything of me, my little boy?" said Summerfield.

The boy seemed overcome, and could only say, "Mr. Summerfield."

"Well, my son, what do you want of Mr. Summerfield?"

The boy, encouraged, said he wished Mr. Summerfield would call at his mother's. On inquiring where his mother lived, the name of the street and the number of the house were given.

"What is your name?"

"John Brown," replied the boy.

Well, John Brown, to-morrow at eleven o'clock I shall pay you a visit." Accordingly, at the time appointed, Mr. Summerfield called. He found John busily employed sweeping, fixing the fire, and preparing for his visitor. "Well, John, here I am, according to my appointment." John requested him to take a seat until he had found his mother. She was a pious woman, and said that her son had heard Mr. Summerfield preach whenever he spoke to the children, and that his mind had been much impressed in consequence. Summerfield knelt down and prayed with them; and before he went away, encouraged John, and gave him some good advice; entered his name on the list of those for whom he felt a peculiar interest, and told him that he should keep his eye on him, requesting him to come and speak to him whenever he had an opportunity, that he might ascertain what progress his little friend John Brown was making. This is a simple story, but does it not give us an insight into the wonderful success of this remarkable man in winning souls, not of children simply, but of adults also, to Christ?

Wesley's interest in children, and his affectionate notice of the little boy whom he found on the pulpit stairs, as he was making his way through the crowd to preach, will be remembered in this connection.

"When I was a little boy in Bristol," says the poet Southey, "I was running down a flight of steps with my sister, a beautiful girl with flowing ringlets. John Wesley took her up in his arms and kissed her and blessed her, and then laid his hand on my head and blessed me." The poet's eyes filled with tears as he related this, and he added, "I feel as if I had the blessing of that man upon me yet."

Robert Hall also was "exceedingly fond of children," would "enter into all their amusements," and not unfrequently take them up in his arms, put his hands on them and bless them.

In the memoir of the good Dr. Alexander of Princeton, it is suggested that there should be a class of preachers for children alone. "If I were a young man," he says, "I would, God willing, choose that field." And one is interested in finding in the correspondence of his son, the Rev. James W. Alexander, of New York, the expression of a similar sentiment. "I have made up my mind to go for the nursery practice. Let others take the fathers and grandfathers, if I can only make an impression on the children."

The nursery practice! that is what is wanted. The hope of the church is in the children of the church. If these can be saved, the world may be evangelized. If not, then all is lost. When Washington returned from Hartford, after his interview with Count de Rochambeau, just previous to the discovery of Arnold's treachery, the citizens of the towns through which he passed, turned out to greet him, and among them, at one place, children bearing torches. "We may be beaten by the English," said Washington to the officers of his staff, "it is the chance of war; but there," pointing as he spoke to the children, "is an army they will never conquer." And so we, who stand in the fore front of the battle, may be borne down by the hosts of error and sin with which we are called to contend; but we can say, pointing to the hosts of children, rising up on every side, redeemed by Christ's blood, and already made savingly acquainted with him, "There is an army they will never conquer."—Tract Journal.

Two Cords of Wood.

Just at dusk one November evening three children occupied a large kitchen connected with the establishment of farmer Grant. A bright wood fire blazed cheerfully in the wide chimney, while from the crane the suspended tea-kettle was announcing, as loudly as possible, that the hour for supper was approaching. By the bright, but fitful light, one young girl sat reading; another sat at the window watching the cows as they walked demurely from the yard to the stable, while a boy of eleven summers was seated on a cricket in front of the fire, gazing steadily at the flames as they shot upward, but with an appearance of abstraction, indicating that his mind was elsewhere.

Softly Ellen advanced from the window, and touching her sister Ruth to call her attention, just whispered, "Just look at Thomas! He's in a brown study, as the teacher said this afternoon, I do wonder what he's thinking of?"

"Ask him," responded Ruth, glancing at her brother, and then turning to her book again.

Thomas," called Ellen, "What makes you look so sober to night? Did you miss at school?"

The boy heaved a deep sigh, and then turned to his sister with a smile, saying, "O, Ellen, you can help me, if you will, only you first promise not to tell any one."

Ellen promised, and Thomas led her to the farther corner of the room, as his mother had come in, where he made known to her his plan.

"Last night," said he, "after you and Ruth had gone to bed, I heard father and mother talking. It made me feel so bad I could not go to sleep. She had been bringing in the clothes and kept coughing, as she always does when she works hard. Father told her that she must go to taking that doctor's stuff that done her so much stood last winter. At first she did not answer; but pretty soon I saw her put up her hand and brush away a tear."

"There are so many things to be bought for the children," she said, after a while, "that I don't like to spend money for medicine. I don't often cough so much."

"I know that too," replied father, "but you must attend to your health. What should we all do without you?"

"I sometimes think," said mother, "that my work is almost done, and if it is God's will to call me away, he will provide for our dear children."

"I couldn't stay to hear any more, for I had to run into the entry to keep from sobbing aloud—Oh! Ellen, what could we do without mother?"

The young girl turned around and gave her mother a piercing glance, as if to satisfy herself that her brother had cause for his solicitude, and then asked, "but what can you or both of us do to help her?"

"I mean somehow to buy her a bottle of that medicine," exclaimed Thomas, impressively, "but how to do it is the question. Dr. Jones had a load of wood carted to-day, and he wants a man to come and saw it, I would go to-morrow afternoon and ask him to give me the job, for the medicine, only father wants his wood piled up to-morrow, before the snow comes."

Ellen stood for a moment returning her brother's gaze; then said, eagerly, "Ruth and I will pile it for you. We'll get up very early, and do our stint before breakfast, and then we shall have the whole of the afternoon."

Thomas joyfully accepted this offer, and readily obtained the job from the kind physician. Before night he had piled the two cords in the shed and sawed nearly a quarter of it.

"Well, my little man, said the doctor, driving into the yard as Thomas was hanging up the saw preparatory to leaving. "How much have you earned this afternoon?"

A bright thought flashed through the boy's mind, and in true Yankee style he answered the question by asking, "Doctor, how much a bottle was the cough medicine you gave mother last winter?"

"Half a dollar, I think. Is she sick again?"

The boy then communicated his wishes, and with a flushed face inquired of the doctor, if he would be satisfied to let him have a bottle to carry home with him.

The good man was evidently moved by this unexpected proposal. He made no reply except to invite the boy to his office. When there he talked more freely, and ended by giving him a small powder for her, in addition to the cough medicine, and promised to call himself the next day.

An hour later Thomas sat with his sister by the fire, and communicated to them the joyful tidings of his afternoon labor. They then proceeded to give the medicine to their mother as a token of affection from her three children, "for," said Thomas, "I could not have it if you had not helped me."

To say that Mrs. Grant was satisfied, would be but fully expressing her emotion when the love token was placed in her hands.

With moistened eye she gave each of them a kiss, and then added in a subdued voice, "God will reward you, my dear ones. The blessing affixed in the fifth commandment will be yours, for you have indeed honored your mother."

God did bless them in rendering the medicine effectual in restoring the health of their mother whose life was prolonged for years. She saw her children growing up useful, happy, and respected by all who knew them.—Youth's Companion.

OVER BATHING.—If a fish is deprived of its scales, it will be chilled to death; and reasoning analogically, and knowing, too, that human skin-scales are destroyed by the alkali of the soap, a man may wash the scales off his body, leaving the pores so unprotected against the heat and cold and obstructions, that death will inevitably ensue; indeed, physiological research proves, that if a third of the skin is removed from the body by scrubbing or otherwise, a fatal termination is unavoidable. Observant persons know how soon the skin becomes pale, shrivelled and tender, even on the harder hands, if kept a great deal in cold water. These are suggestive considerations for those who believe that continual water sloshings are indispensable to health and longevity.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Importance of Energy.

A man who has been unsuccessful in several departments of life, on account of his want of energy, was recently recommended to apply for assistance to a friend of rare executive ability and force of character. He replied, "it will be of no avail, for like the rest of active business men, he worships energy,—a quality I do not possess." The sluggish man was right—for in our bustling times, energy is highly prized, and men possessing it to a prominent degree are wanted everywhere. Fraser's Magazine has an excellent essay "On the importance of Energy in Life," which selects Lord Brougham and John Bright to illustrate the effect of energy on the public men of Great Britain.

It is stated that no Englishman, except Peel or Wellington, has produced such changes in the world of opinion and practice as Brougham. Look, adds the essayist, at the state, both in fact and in opinion, of law and education in the United Kingdom, now compared with what it was some half century ago, and render that honor which is due to the wonderful energy of Lord Brougham, without which quality he could not have succeeded, had his knowledge, his reasoning powers, and his abilities been greater than they even are.

John Bright is another living example of the power of energy. Had his intellectual powers been greatly multiplied, he would not now occupy such a prominent place among the men of the time as he does, had it not been for his earnestness of purpose and energy of character.

A Prayer.

Guide me, Father! God of mercy!
On the way:
Never from thy holy guidance
Let me stray!
Give that meet of joy and sorrow
Pleaseth thee,
Whatso'er thy will ordaineth
Best for me.

In the shadow and the darkness
Be my star;
In the light, lest radiance dazzle,
Go not far!
Make me patient, kind and gentle,
Day by day:
Teach me how to live more nearly
As I pray.

NEVER LONELY.—The child of God need never be lonely. He need never be sick at heart for want of friends. He may be far from home,—away from loved ones,—sick and suffering,—with few comforts and no human sympathy. But God is with him. Let him open his heart, and he will hear the Almighty saying, "I am with thee; I will strengthen thee; I will help thee; I will uphold thee." Is he tempted to despond? With David let him say, "I am poor and needy; yet the Lord thinketh upon me. Thou art my help and my deliverer: make no tarrying, O my God." Jesus, who hath borne your griefs and carried your sorrows, will not forget you. He is near you now. Be not lonely; for you are not alone. He is with you. Hear him saying, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God."

THE DEAF HEAR.—In the Church of Columbus, O., of which Rev. E. D. Morris is pastor, there is an admirable arrangement for the accommodation of the pupils of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, who attend regularly. There is a gallery the whole length of the church, on either side, and a gallery for the choir over the entrance to the church and directly in front of the pulpit. Dr Stone, the Superintendent of the Asylum, takes his seat in the gallery with the choir, and the pupils take theirs in the side galleries. As soon as the minister commences the services, every eye in the side galleries,—for these are occupied exclusively by the deaf and dumb—is turned upon Dr. Stone, who by signs translates every word into their language as it falls from the preacher's lips.

KINDNESS.—A kind man will probably find kindness all about him. The merciful man, as a general thing, will obtain mercy. He who has always had a kind excuse for others, who has looked at the brightest side of the case—he who has given his pardon and his help whenever he could, who has never brought his fellow man into any strait by reason of not helping him—will find that the mercy he has bestowed flows back upon him in a full and spontaneous spring. He will make a merciful world by the mercy he himself shows.

THE DAY OF TROUBLE COMES TO ALL.—The sun does not always shine. The skies are not always bright. If so, when trouble comes, what shall we do? "Call upon me," says God. And shall we surely be heard? Is there no danger of a repulse? None at all. "I will deliver thee." Not always just in the way that we expect or prefer, but in the way that God sees to be best for us.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondence.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications on sale at this office, should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY their postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 314. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1861. VOL. XIV. NO. 3.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, | J. S. WHITE,
F. H. BERICK.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, | WALTER PRATT,
J. S. WHITE, | H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Mariner, Haste!

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

AIR.—"Bury me not in the deep, deep sea."

Mariner, haste! there's a threat'ning gale—
In the darkness list! there's a faint, sad wail;
Keep out the life-boat till day is o'er,
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! for the tide waits not,
Tear from its mooring thy fragile barque;
Hoist every sail! for the breakers roar,
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! for a 'witching song
Has reached thy ear from the giddy throng;
Fame leaves a sting when her song is o'er—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! from the shades of pride
Gomorrah and Sodom sleep side by side,
And earth's probation is almost o'er,—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! from the love of gain,
Its vot'ries writhe in its golden chain,
And earth is mad with the shining ore,—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! thou art weary now,
Shadows of suff'ring are on thy brow;
Fainting and weak, grasp the dipping oar—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Seek'st thou peace where the storm comes not—
Home, where sorrows are all forgot—
Friends, that will love thee and change no more—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! there's no time to sleep,
Push out thy barque where the dark waters leap;
Toil bravely on, though the wild breakers roar—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

For the Crisis.

"To the Churches" awaiting the Reign of "the Prince of the Kings of the Earth."

BY E. S. WILLARD.

(Concluded.)

"All the way in which the Lord our God hath led us."

But, as if this were not enough for the loving heart of our Great Father to do for this people, "again he sent another servant" from afar, at his own charges. We, stimulated by his zeal, hired the Baptist hall, while he put up posters. Then he went one way and we another, from house to house, through mud and rain, and gave out that a "stranger" would preach at the hall in the evening. The rain held up, and they were all out. But, because he announced that he came "not in his own name," but in the name of Christ only, 'they did not receive him," but, the next evening, with one consent, threw open the Methodist hall, a mile distant, and all that met were very indignant, because, forsooth, they suspected somebody's loyalty, in that the stars and stripes were not floating to the breeze at the very moment somebody thought they ought to be. They came down en masse before our meeting closed, and "made the welkin ring again," not with "Great is Diana of the Ephesians," but "The Flag of our Union forever!" "Bow the knee! bow the knee!"

Our brother's first discourse might be termed a vindication of the Divine character; well calculated to disabuse the public mind of many erroneous views of his character, in the light of such passages as the following: "[illegible] is angry with the wicked every day," etc.; harmonizing them with his paternal manifestations, as in the case of the returning prodigal; shewing, at the same time, by apt illustration, the crying necessity that we be brought to love holiness here, and practice it from choice, ere we can be fitted for Paradise Restored.

The scenes accompanying the sounding of the seventh trumpet were ably dwelt upon in his second and last discourse. Rev. 11. The organ was touched with a master hand, and it made sweet music to the ear of faith. Never were prophecy and fulfillment so entirely panoramic to our eye as at this view; and bless God! it has been brightening and deepening ever since. First, "The nations were angry"—a prophecy uttered, and its fulfillment before our eyes. O, who would be any more than a simple "minister of Christ," if he can have such weapons to wield upon the battle-field as these! Let all their fainting hearts AWAKE! The car is moving forward, and our God is at the helm! All glory to his name! Second, "Thy wrath is come." Here, said he, there will be an Indignation meeting on a grand scale! and one to which all will be summoned who have not fled for refuge to the hope set before us in the gospel. Third, "The time of the dead that they should be judged." Fourth, "The rewards." Fifth, "The destruction."

Thus closed the public labors of this servant also; and, like his predecessor, in a sense, he was "beaten, and sent empty away." And here, as a tribute to faithfulness, we love to linger awhile. They did not leave without fruit. No, bless the Lord! We are even now using the strength gained from their example. They were as faithful to their brethren out of the stand, as they were to the world in it. And fruit has redounded to the glory of God, which will appear, we think, in the great "reckoning" day.

O ye ministers of His! do ye remember that it is written, "Like priest, like people"? Do ye realize that in every thing—conversation, apparel, eating and drinking, ye are examples to the flock, and they follow you, as naturally as the sheep follow the shepherd? Come up, then, to the standard of your great Exemplar, while here on earth; so that saint or sinner cannot put his finger upon a "spot" that the grace of God can cleanse away from you. Thus cleansed, you will form a nucleus, about which the saints of God will rally, and together we shall constitute a body, "cleansed from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." Then will be manifested a body, such as was manifested to the world on the day of Pentecost, which our "God will delight to honor," by adding to it the "gifts" of his Holy Spirit as in the beginning. Then will be manifested a body, walking "in all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love"—filled by one Spirit—animated by one hope—governed by one Lord—strengthened by one faith—submitting to one baptism, and acknowledging one God and Father of all, until every scattered member, in all the ramparts of Christendom, will be attracted or driven to it. Then will the "perfect man" be formed, "speaking the truth in love, and growing up into Him in all things which is the head—Christ." Then, and not till then, will "the body of Christ" be fitted for its translation, and eternal union with its glorified Head. But here we must close this already too long article, with a few reflections.

First. We say, with Sectarianism and ourselves, (be it found where it may,) with the help of God, there is an eternal separation. And, David-like, we have written upon the great smooth rock that separates us from this blood-thirsty Saul, in large letters, in Hebrew, Greek and Latin, "SELA-HAMMA-LEKOTH"—that is, The rock of Division. We stand out free and bold upon God's literal word, to believe and do all that is written therein, despite all human authority. A whole Bible is Christian. A half, fourth, or sixteenth, is sectarian. Give us the whole, or none.

Second. If ancient Israel were cut off because they rejected Christ in his first advent, will modern Israel be saved in rejecting Christ in his second advent? If the "natural branches" were broken off because of "unbelief," will the grafted branches stand without faith? If none were saved at the first advent but those who heard "that prophet," will any be crowned at his second advent who do not love His appearing?

Third. "With all lowliness and meekness" we will say to our brethren, (all those in every nation who fear God and keep his commandments,) let us beware! Let us reject no precept of God's word, (however simple it may appear in the sight of men,) in heart, or in our mediums of communication; for in so doing we become sectarian. A whole Bible be our motto, with all its reproach! Neither let us "add unto his words, lest he reprove us, and we be found liars," remembering that it is written, "There is no respect of persons with God." Thus ended the campaign, with the following results:

The Sunday School alluded to, soon went down, while the injured one greatly revived. They called and settled a minister, etc., while another now sustains semi-monthly preaching; still another sent several hundred miles for a servant of theirs to come and immerse four of their sons; organized a Sunday School; bought a lot, and are preparing to build; while all are entirely relieved of any fear from their hitherto threatening neighbors, saying, "O, they will soon die out!" while we, the least of all, are still "threshing wheat" in our own house, and also obeying the last mandate, "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled." Our hall is lit every first day evening for a union prayer meeting; and the God of peace is with us. Bless his name! O, "all ye that fear God," let us entreat your prayers for our mission work, for sad indeed are the cases we find, and great is the strength needed to bring them "in." So pray the least in all our Father's house."

Hammonton, N. J., Sept. 11, '61.

For the Crisis.

The Types.

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled.—MATT. 5: 17, 18.

We have been taught from our early childhood, that the types of the old law were all done away at the cross, and since then have been a dead letter entirely. And so they have been, so far as relates to their former observance; but Christ assures us, in the language quoted, that not till the passing away of this mundane system will all be fulfilled. Paul, in his letter to the Hebrews, 10th chapter, says that the law had a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image. Now we well know that, where there is a shadow, there must of necessity be a substance; and we also know that a "shadow" is not so perfect as that which produces it. The "image" is the substantial form—the picture filled up.

We will now proceed to examine the types somewhat briefly, and ascertain, if possible, how many have been fulfilled, and what yet remains to be fulfilled.

I. The Passover. Ex. 12. This was the first type divinely instituted for national observance. The paschal lamb must be without blemish. It must be separated from the rest of the flock four days before being offered. It was to be slain between the two evenings. Not a bone of it must be broken. Its blood was to be sprinkled upon the door-posts of the dwellings of the children of Israel. The flesh was to be eaten with unleavened bread and bitter herbs. This type was observed on the fourteenth day of the first month. Has this been fulfilled? We answer, it has; and for proof refer to Paul's testimony on this point. I Cor. 5: 7, 8.—"Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us. Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." As Christ is declared by the apostle to be our Passover, the victim bearing the name of the institution, we will see if he fulfilled it in its main features.

1. Was he without blemish? Answer: "For such an High Priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners." Not only in the purity, but also in the separation, he fulfilled the type. When offering his last prayer, just prior to his being offered up for the sins of the world, Jesus uses this language: "And now I am no more in the world"; he had separated himself for sacrifice.

2. Was he slain at evening, or, as the the margin reads, "between the two evenings"? The Jews reckoned the one evening after the sun had passed the meridian, and the other after sunset till twilight ended. From twelve at noon until three o'clock in the afternoon, there was darkness over all the land. At the ninth hour, answering to our third, the time when the priests immolated the paschal lamb, "Jesus cried with a loud voice and gave up the ghost."—Matt. 27: 45, 46, 50.

3. Was a bone of Christ broken? "But when they came to Jesus and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs; that the scripture might be fulfilled, 'A bone of him shall not be broken.'" This refers to the direction respecting the paschal lamb, "Neither shall ye break a bone thereof."

4. Was the Lamb of God slain at the passover? He was. See Matt. 26: 17. Was he offered on the fourteenth day? He was. See Mark 14: 12. We will linger here a few moments, as there is a difficulty in the minds of some touching this point. The record teaches that Christ ate of the passover with his disciples the evening prior to his betrayal and death; how then could he have been sacrificed at the hour when the priests slew the paschal lamb? It was the custom of the Jews to partake of the passover at the end of the fourteenth day, while Christ ate his evidently at the beginning, as the Jews commenced their day at sun-setting. And the same day, according to their reckoning, between the two evenings, Christ yielded up his life, exclaiming, It is finished. By reference to John 18: 28, we find that the Jews would not enter the judgment hall, lest they be defiled, and thereby prevented from eating the passover. This makes it evident that the Saviour partook thereof with his disciples at an earlier hour than the Jews.

5. The paschal lamb was to be slain without the gates of the city. Deut. 16: 5. Did Christ suffer without the gates of Jerusalem? He did. "Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate."—Heb. 13: 12. In all these things we trace a correspondence between the type and the fulfillment—the shadow and the substance.

II. The wave sheaf. This was the second type to be observed. This was the first fruit of the wheat harvest, to be offered the morrow after the Sabbath.—Lev. 23: 10–14. Did Christ fulfill this type? He did. Turn to 1 Cor. 15: 20.—"But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." 23d verse,—"Christ the first fruits." The apostle in his argument carries out the figure of the grain, "It is sown in corruption," etc. Christ was resurrected as the first fruit of the wheat harvest, on the morrow after the Jewish Sabbath. Thus in order of time the type was fulfilled.

III. Pentecost. From the morrow after the Sabbath—from the day that the sheaf of first fruits was offered unto the Lord, fifty days were to be numbered, bringing them to Pentecost, when a new meat offering was to be presented. It was instituted in commemoration of the giving of the law at Sinai; but it was also typical of the giving of a new law, accompanied not by thunderings and lightnings, but by the tongues of flame and gifts of the holy Spirit. In an upper room at Jerusalem the disciples were gathered together, waiting for the promise of the Father—the gifts of the Holy Ghost—whereby they were to be qualified for the opening dispensation. "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come," then the baptism of the Spirit came upon them, filling the room and their hearts with its divine influence. Then they all spoke with divers tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance. This we believe to be the antetype of the "new meat offering." These gifts and miracles were God's testimony, to be given in connection with that of the disciples, for the confirmation of the new covenant.

It may not be out of place here to express our views respecting the introduction of this new covenant. We know that many teach that the week of confirmation began with Christ's public minority, and that the Jewish sacrifice and oblation ceased in the "midst of the week" by his death on the cross. To this view we shall state our objections.

1. A covenant must first be dedicated with blood. This is argued clearly and conclusively by Paul, Heb. 9. 2. A covenant was of no force at all while the testator liveth. See Heb. 9: 16, 17. And here I will quote a translation, found in Clark's notes on these passages:—"For where there is a covenant, it is necessary that the death of the appointed victim should be exhibited, because a covenant is confirmed over dead victims; since it is not at all valid while the appointed victim is alive. There is no word signifying testator or men in the original. Diathemenos is not a substantive, but a participle, or participle adjective, derived from the same root as diatheekee, and must have a substantive understood. I therefore render it the disposed or appointed victim; alluding to the manner of disposing or setting apart the pieces of the victim when they were going to ratify a covenant; and you know well the old custom of ratifying a covenant, to which the apostle alludes.

Mr. Wakefield thus renders the passage: "For where a covenant is, there must be necessarily introduced the death of that which establisheth the covenant; because a covenant is established over dead things, and is of no force at all whilst that which establisheth the covenant is alive." Says Dr. Clarke, "We should endeavor to forget that testament and testator were ever introduced, as they totally change the apostle's meaning." Dr. Macknight also agrees with many other learned men in this view of the subject, and in his note on the 15th verse he thus remarks:—Mediator of the new covenant. See Heb. 8: 6, 7. The word diatheekee, here translated covenant, answers to the Hebrew word berith, which all the translators of the Jewish Scriptures have understood to signify a covenant."

Omitting a few sentences for brevity, we quote again: "On this supposition it may be asked,—1. In what sense can the Sinaitic covenant, or law of Moses, which required perfect obedience to all its precepts, under penalty of death, and allowed no mercy to the sinner, however penitent, be called a testament, which is a deed conferring something valuable on a person, who may accept or refuse it, as he thinks fit? 2. If the law of Moses be a testament, and if, to render that testament valid, the death of the testator is necessary, as the English translators have taught us, (verse 16,) I ask, who was it that made the testament of the law? Was it God, or Moses? And did either of them die to render it valid? 3. The things affirmed in the common translation of verse 15, concerning the New Testament, viz., that it has a Mediator; that that Mediator is the Testator himself; that there were transgressions of a former testament, for the redemption of which the Mediator of the New Testament died; and, verse 19, that the first testament was made by sprinkling the people, in whose favor it was made, with blood, are all things quite foreign to a testament. For was it ever known in any nation that a testament needed a mediator? or that the testator was the mediator of his own testament? or that it was necessary the testator of a new testament should die to redeem the transgressions of a former testament? or that any testament was ever made by sprinkling the legatees with blood? These things, however, were usual in covenants. They had mediators who assisted at the making of them, and had sureties for the performance of them. They were commonly satisfied by sacrifices, the blood of which was sprinkled on the parties; withal, if any former covenant was infringed by the parties, satisfaction was given at the making of a second covenant." He enlarges on this point, and clearly establishes, we think, the position taken in respect to the proper rendering of the word covenant, instead of testament. There are many passages which evidently show that the words are used interchangeably, referring to the same thing.

It is very clear that covenants were usually made by sacrifice. Verse 17. The word "men" is supplied. Learned translators say that it refers to the appointed victim, or sacrifice. A covenant is firm over dead sacrifices. Our translators have supplied the word men, and have translated after men are dead, contrary to the propriety of the phrase." The necessity of the death of the appointed sacrifice, in order for the surety of the covenant, is most emphatically taught in the argument of the apostle, though the analogy will not agree in every respect when applied to Christ, he being both the victim and the Mediator.

3. Our third objection is derived from the prophecy of Daniel 9: 26, 27.—"After threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off." Although the seven weeks named in the preceding verse are not repeated in this, yet we think they must be included in the period. After the sixty-nine weeks are expired, Messiah is cut off, or put to death. The covenant is established by the death of the appointed victim. It is dedicated by the blood of the Son of God. This, we believe, marks the introduction of the week of confimation, respecting which we wish to speak more fully. M. D. W.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Jottings by the Way.

BY P. B. M.

How natural the desire to communicate what interests you! But how little that occurs in a common life can be made of interest to another! The world talks about "live thoughts," "apples of gold in pictures of silver"—words fitly spoken—yet who of all the living writers of the age excel, or answer such demands! Who knows the harp of a thousand strings, and can touch it skilfully with words! Who can be comprehensive and at the same time graphic—sententious; imaginative, and yet keep his feet in the world of matter-of-fact; versatile, and not superficial; scrupulously faithful, and yet not too punctilious? Who can be all things to all men! Who does not exhibit faults at every step of their lives! Among writers, I notice some write with pens that are like the pencil of an artist; others, with pens that prick like porcupine quills; and others write as if their pens had been dipped in vinegar or gall. But where is perfection? Surely, out of Christ there is none.

But to my narrative. At Springfield had a pleasant season, notwithstanding the rain. Found a small but interesting church, notwithstanding recent ministerial rascalities. Bro. Ladd and his brethren have fought valiantly for a good cause, and their reward is insured them. At Warehouse Point found a church with a comfortable chapel. Eld. Babcock, a veteran in the cause, resides here. They greatly need a good revival. At Cheshire preached to a full and attentive congregation, in the chapel where my father, Eld. I. Morgan, statedly preaches. Am glad they are looking up. At Hartford found the church, as I thought, in a better state, spiritually, than when I visited them a year since; although they have not so good a place of worship, and have to lament the death of one of their most faithful and godly members—Deacon A. Clapp—the like of whom are seldom found among the Deacons of our land. But sanctified trials purify. Doubtless they have been sanctified to this church. Hartford [illegible] citadels. God grant it may so continue while the world stands. Eld. Wendell, notwithstanding the onerous duties of editorship, has had the care of this church, and must be gratified with the healthful state it is in. He that goeth forth weeping, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless return with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him! In Bristol, there are some who are deeply acquainted with the things of God, but the cause is low. In Plainfield there is a prospect of a healthful interest. Collinsville, I was told, had nearly gone by the board. The Terryville Church has ceased to be. In Plymouth Hollow is a small flock. In the Housatonic valley things are thought to compare generally with the other portions of the State. Worldly-mindedness, a few afflicting cases of interference, and a general want of wholesome discipline, has done much to put back the cause in this State. Whether so educated or trained, it does not matter, these churches must learn by sad experience that it is best "ALL things should be done decently and in order."

Wednesday, Sept. 11th, went in the midst of a heavy rain to the Sandisfield camp meeting, being hindered by Providence from going to Pauling, as at first intended; traveled the last eleven miles by stage, most of the way being up hill, and requiring upwards of three hours, with no one but myself and driver on board, with two good stout horses! What think you of that, ye dwellers on land prairies? The weather afterward was all that could be desired. Found double the tents I expected. Eld. Fenn, who had the more special charge of the meeting, conducted it with much credit to himself and acceptance to those present. The best of order prevailed, and the congregations were deeply attentive. The preachers spoke with great freedom and with evident effect. Some were converted, I believe, and others restored from backsliding. The brethren seemed prayerful and happy—the grove often echoing with the high praises of God. I was thankful to see the spirituality exhibited among our brethren, and yet with no signs of fanaticism. There were present Elders Fenn, Goodrich, I. Morgan, Brown, Rodman, Burr and Hastings. Had to leave Saturday, but believe the meeting must have been a success.

Found the Worcester church in a tried, but hopeful state. God grant that, with the large-heartedness of apostolic christians, and with the fidelity of martyrs, they may hold on and hold out to the end!

For the Crisis.

More Errors.

In a late copy of a paper called "The Missionary," published at Pittsburg, I observed an article on "The Christian Office of Sponsors." The writer first states a "truth." He says:—"There are in the Christian church, not a few regulations for which we have no special command in the word of God. . . . To these belong the Christian office of god-parents or sponsors." In defending this relic of Popery, among other things, the writer remarks that, "God-parents" become sureties also for children, who are to be baptized. As all are conceived and born in sin, every surety must pray, that a gracious God would regard the child in mercy, and, by the Holy Spirit, through the holy sacrament, (baptism,) change this child of wrath into a child of his grace." Now Christ said, "Except ye be converted and become as a little child, ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." Those who have arrived at the age of accountability, are no more sinners, except in degree, (being sinners to the same extent naturally,) than a child—according to the dogma of total depravity. How ridiculous then to speak of little children as children of wrath in order to be saved! But in calling poor innocent infants children of wrath—totally depraved sinners—reflects on the character of God. It implies that God, who is the author of our being, made us so bad, that should we die without being "rantized," we have no hope of mercy!

The question is then asked, "Do you renounce the devil, and all his works and ways?" And what the child cannot promise, its surety promises, and thus, the second time appears in its stead." How absurd! A baby asked if it renounces the devil, and all his works and ways, and some one else, who ought to do so for himself, promises to do so for the baby! Again: Then the great banner of the Christian Church is unfurled,—the Apostolic creed is confessed. And as the child, by its own strength, cannot come under this banner, nor swear fidelity to the "Triune" God itself, the surety brings it under this banner of the church, and becomes its mouthpiece and guardian." And thus is the helpless infant bound soul and body to the church, before it can exercise that liberty [illegible] rational beings possess. And after awhile, when that child begins to read and understand, and perhaps discovers that the creed which he has been made to accept, is not all "truth"; and that the church does not agree with his view of church organization, etc., he dare not reject them, because his parents and "god-parents," bound him solemnly to said creed and church in infancy, in order to save his soul! Again: The "god-parents" are also witnesses of the baptism. Baptism is a pledge of the highest blessings—it is the 'washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost.' It not only opens the door of the kingdom of heaven unto the child, but also, introduces it into this kingdom of God." Of course, then, a child is not fit for the kingdom of heaven without baptism, or rather sprinkling. The Master says, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Where is there a command of Christ, that authorizes the baptism of a baby, and that by sprinkling? I thought the old Calvinistic dogma of "children going to hell unless baptized," had been exploded long ago, and was considered by all sensible people as an absurdity, and derogatory to the character of God,—a theory repulsive, disgusting and false. Lord, give us the truth.

T. W. SMITH.

For the Crisis.

A Letter.

BRO. WENDELL:—I have long desired to communicate with you in my experience, but my health has been very poor the last spring and summer. I was sensible that my strength was failing me, and it was a source of anxiety to me. It has so unfitted me for study of the good word of God, that I should have certainly given up in despair, had I not found in my heavenly Father's Will, instructions, clear and positive, to "cast all my care upon the Lord, who careth for me." It is when we thus look unto him, that we receive wisdom from him to direct our steps. He has been my stay and my staff—my guide and my support. I can but rejoice in Him who has ever been my faithful friend—who has so richly showered down upon me his blessings. He has heard and answered prayer. I think I can realize, in my past and present experience, by living faith, (for the life I now live I live by faith on the Son of God,) that God is not the God of the dead, but of the living, and that Christ is Lord both of the dead and of the living.

My brother, I feel as though the cause of truth in which we have engaged is a glorious one, and is worthy of the candid and prayerful consideration of every christian heart. My motto is onward—pressing onward towards the mark for the prize. It is worthy of a sacrifice to attain it, and, by the grace of God, I am determined to hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of my hope firm unto the end. I pray God to give you, my christian brother, wisdom, knowledge and understanding, that you may be able, by health and strength, and by that living faith that invigorates the faculties of the mind, to carry on the good work. I have often felt that you needed the prayers of God's people to sustain, and uphold, and encourage you in your arduous work and labor of love for the salvation of your fellow men. The word of God is more and more precious to me day by day, and I feel that it is because I earnestly seek to know more of him "whom to know aright is life and peace." I think I can see in the word of God, and in the signs of the times, that the time for our Savior to appear, and awake the sleeping saints, and change the living saints, and clothe them in incorruption and immortality, is near at hand. The opening heavens will soon reveal to our eyes the King in his glory, accompanied by the angelic host, who will be sent forth to gather the wheat into the garner of the Lord. I look for the establishment of the everlasting kingdom, when they that are asleep shall awake, and the living shall be changed, "whose names are written in the book of life." When the heavens shall be dissolved by fervent heat and a new heaven and a new earth shall spring forth, purified and cleansed. This is the inheritance that is to be, incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. Let us all be faithful a little longer, and the glory shall be ours.

Faithfully yours, S. H[illegible]

Troy, N. Y., Sept. 23, 1861.

☞ God is willing to take the lead of our minds, hearts, thoughts, words, actions; choose all our changes, make the path of duty plain—guide us into all truth. "Ask and it shall be given—seek and ye shall find." He knoweth our down sitting, our uprising—he understandeth our thoughts afar off,—he compasseth our path, our lying down, our rising up—and is acquainted with all our ways.

☞ A firm [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Restitution.

Dear Bro. Wendell:—Restitution, what is it? It is the simple act of restoring. What is it to restore? It is to give back what has been lost, or taken away. But, says the objector, "I believe in the restitution of all things, and of course the wicked will all be saved." Yes, but the Bible does not read thus. Acts. 3: 20–21. "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." None of the prophets say a word about restoring the wicked. They say the earth shall be restored to its Eden glory; that the dead saints, from their graves, and all the living ones, He will change "from mortal to immortality" in the "twinkling of an eye;" then the saints, all of them, will inherit the restored earth. That then, but not till then, the "meek shall inherit the earth." That then, but not till then, will the "glory of the Lord cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea." Then will the "kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ; and he shall "reign forever and ever, world without end." Also in this restitution. "he shall send Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." The earth, according to the holy prophets is to be restored. Num. 14: 21. "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Now the question may be asked, how is the earth to be restored? The answer is found in 2 Pet. 3, where he declares the earth, which now is, "is reserved unto fire," as the old one was unto water. But nevertheless we, according to his promise (Isa. 65,) look for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

I find none of the prophets declare that the finally impenitent will be restored;—but, on the contrary, Malachi 4: 1–3 says, "For behold the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But, says one, "I prefer doctrines from the New Testament." But it said, Matt. 3: 20, "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down and cast into the fire." It appears to me that this language imports, clearly, an utter extinction of being, and nothing short. 12th verse, "He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire;" the fire being unquenchable, it will burn them up, as Malachi says, "root and branch."

H. H. Dobney, a Baptist minister of England, when speaking on this subject says: "The eternal torture folks must show that, when the God of truth threatens the sinner with destruction, in many mutually consistent passages, the terms employed cannot be understood literally, but must be understood metaphorically; which must be either because man is necessarily indestructible, or because the Judge will not exert the power he possesses to destroy, or will exert his power to prevent the sinner naturally dying out of existence; and so will, by an act of Omnipotence, keep him alive forever and ever, in order to torment him." In reference to this last idea, the remark may be suffered, that the sinner is either necessarily immortal, (which will scarcely be affirmed,) or else he is immortal only by the will and conservation of God; so that the above awful inference is just that God will, of his own free act, uphold in life forever and ever the unhappy sinner, for no other purpose than to punish him. Verily, the evidence for this had need be strong, and mighty masses of obvious truth must be piled upon a mountain base, to raise this everlasting pyramid of infinitely more than sepulchral gloom, which is forever and forever more to throw its dark and appaling shadow across the universe of God. We say that a theory like this, which presents the righteous God under such a terrific aspect, had need to be sustained by evidence proportionally strong; yes, if the doctrine of never ending torment for innumerable myriads of God's creatures be indeed contained in Scripture, beyond a doubt it will be found repeated over and over again, with every variety of phrase, and diligently sought illustration. It will be indissolubly entwined in numerous arguments; will be the only fair result to which various lines of apostolic reasoning conduct. Concede text after text, it will remain. We ask, then, for the massive arguments to be produced; we want the truth."

Now some one may ask, "how long to the above named Restitution?" This I cannot tell. But I firmly believe that it will come before the generation or race of people that witnessed the darkening of the sun, in 1780, have all passed away. For in Matt. 24: 3, the disciples inquired, "What shall be the sign of thy coming." Blessed Jesus condescends to tell them, 7th verse, "For nation shall rise against nation," which did not take place till about three hundred years after the destruction of Jerusalem. 15th verse, "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet;" which is undoubtedly the Papacy, which did not get into full operation till some five hundred years after the destruction of Jerusalem. Then, as I understand, this last named power was to last 1260 years, which would bring us down the stream of time over 1700 years this side of Jerusalem's destruction. Surely, according to the Savior's prediction, "immediately after the tribulation of those days, the sun was darkened," May 19th, 1780, or, as Luke 21st chap. records it, "signs in the sun," just as the disciples inquired what should be the sign of his coming. It was supernaturally darkened, no eclipse, for the moon was near its full. Also the moon "refused to give its light," fulfilled the night following. "And the stars shall fall from heaven," which was fulfilled, I believe, in 1833, by the meteoric shower. The next sign spoken of is "distress of nations with perplexity," which, I think, is just upon us. Then, says Jesus, "shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds." They who? I think some of the same that was alive eighty-one years ago, "this generation shall not pass away till all these things be fulfilled." Now, dear brethren and sisters, if the race that is eighty-one shall not pass away before the judgment, let us be ready, is my prayer. Amen.

Ira Fancher.

Sandy Hill, Sept. 10th, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Inquiries Answered.

Bro. Wendell:—In the Crisis, dated Sept 11th, a few questions are asked upon Rev. 22: 9. The first is, as to "Who the angel was that talked with John, on the Isle of Patmos." I think it was the angel Gabriel. In Rev. 1: 1, we read, "The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass, and he sent and signified it by his angel, unto his servant John." Again, in Rev. 22: 16, we read, "I, Jesus, have sent mine angel", and 6th verse, "And the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel." In Rev. 13: 15, we have the description of a personage; and in Dan. 10: 5, 6, we have a description of the same person. Again, in Rev. 2: 18, we read, "These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass." We have the same description in these three places, while the last one names the person described. In Dan. 8: 13, we find two personages spoken of, who, I think, are Christ and Gabriel. In Dan. 10: 13, we read, "But lo, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me"; verse 21, "But I will shew thee that which is noted in the Scriptures of truth, and there is none that holdeth with me in these things, but Michael your prince." In chap. 12: 1. "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince, which standeth for the children of thy people." Jude, 9th verse, "Yet Michael, the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses"; and Rev. 12: 7, "And there was war in heaven; Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels." From these texts it is evident that Michael has angels, and that none knew of these things but Gabriel, and that he is that "great prince," or, as the Revelator has it, "the prince of the kings of the earth." He is interested about the bodies of the dead, and has disputed with the devil, and overcome the dragon.

The next question is as follows: "Does a fellow servant imply anything more than a messenger—a mortal being, sent to instruct God's people?" The inference in this case is, that it is. John was the disciple that Jesus loved, and would have been chosen in preference to any other mortal. The angel Gabriel appears to have been an important servant to Daniel; he said unto him, "Stand upright, for unto thee am I now sent." "Then said he unto me, Fear not, Daniel; thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words." He is commanded to make him "understand the vision"; and the same Gabriel whom he saw in the vision at the beginning, touched him "about the time of the evening oblation." Again, Gabriel announces the birth of John, and afterward the birth of Jesus. These texts show that Gabriel was a faithful servant. He was serving the same God that they were, and as none but Michael "held with him" in these things, he was a fellow servant with John.

The next question is, "Does it not imply by the keeping of the sayings of this book, that he is one who is subject to the rule or government of the dispensation under which we live—though, perhaps, a being more noted and worthy than it has been our privilege to see?" There is positive proof that he is subject to the rule that we live under; for Jesus said, "All power is given unto me, in heaven and in earth." Again, the Apostle Paul says of Christ, "He sits far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come." Again, right hand of God; angels, and authorities, and powers being made subject unto him."

The last question reads thus: "May not this 'fellow-servant' be one of those spoken of in Rev. 6: 11, who are represented as martyred by the beast from the bottomless pit, who is to slay the witnesses?" I would like to ask one question. Is there a sentence in the book of God's word that tells of an angel "slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held"?

Susannah H. Akers.

Thorndike, Mass.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 2, 1861.

Home Again.

Summoned by telegraph, on the 17th ult., to attend the funeral of a beloved sister in Christ, in Hinesburgh, Vt., we left Boston that evening, and reached our destination a little before noon the next day; passed several hours on the 21st with Bro. Batchelor in Rutland; spent Sunday the 22d in Castleton, where we heard two excellent discourses from Bro. A. Ross, and preached once; had a moment's chat with Bro. Beals as we came through Poultney on Monday morning, 23d, and learned that Bro. Howell was improving; visited in Albany and in Montgomery Co., N. Y., from Monday, 23d, to last Saturday morning; attended a Fast Day meeting in the Hudson St. M. E. Church, in Albany, and heard an appropriate discourse from the pastor, in which were fearlessly set forth in a clear and strong light some of the sins of this wicked nation, now groaning beneath the desolating scourge of civil war; reached home on the afternoon of the 28th ult., greatly refreshed by exemption from office duties, and glad to find our companion and daughter well—the former considerably improved in health. The editing of this number as well as the last has fallen almost wholly upon our esteemed co-laborer, Bro. Berick. If any matters of business have been waiting our return, they shall receive early attention.

The Man of Sin.

"For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming."—2 Thess. 2: 7, 8.

The power brought to view in the foregoing passage is, without doubt, the Catholic power. In this, all Protestant writers are agreed. It does not refer to the "Catholic Church," as such, but to the Papacy, that "politico-ecclesiastical" power, established in Rome. This despotism has not a parallel in the history of the world. Its government was peculiar, acquired by unlawful means, and its power wielded in an unholy cause. It is truly astonishing, how such a power could grow to such importance—how men could ever be brought to regard it with favor, and exert themselves to sustain it. But if we look closely to the facts connected with its rise and development, we shall, perhaps, have less cause to wonder.

This power did not grow up in a moment; it required centuries to give it the character of the "Man of Sin," and the "Son of perdition." It was while the church was inactive and men were asleep, that the evil, which finally resulted in the rise of the "Man of Sin," that "Wicked" power, was developed. The Saviour, in the parable of the "tares and wheat," shows plainly, that the sowing of the tares took place while "men slept"; the evil, which resulted in the rise of the "Son of perdition," was sown when the servants were careless and inactive. The very principle discovered by the disciples when they wished to "call down fire from heaven" upon those who refused to follow with them, was indicative of the working of the "mystery of iniquity"—a preparatory work to the development of the "Man of Sin."

The usurpation of the Bishop of Rome was founded on the pretence that Peter was constituted head of the christian church. That Christ, in the declaration "Thou art Peter, and on this rock I will build my church," etc, authorized Peter to be the head of the church. But the passage probably means nothing more than that Peter should be foremost in preaching the truth, and publishing the good news of the kingdom of God; and the declaration, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth," etc., was addressed, not to Peter, but to the twelve apostles. Thank heaven, we are not built on Peter, but on Christ. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." He is the beginning and the end, the first and the last, and without him we perish.

But to return. The city of Rome was a favorable location for these Bishops to manifest their growing ambition. Rome was the capitol of the empire,—why should it not be the centre of the church's operations? This was a plausible argument, especially to those who wanted it so. And while the church at Rome enjoyed quiet and prosperity, the Bishops made use of all circumstances to advance their interests. Little by little, they freed themselves from all dependence on the civil power; indeed, they claimed to be above all earthly laws. In the reign of Henry III, upwards of "one hundred murders" were committed by the clergy, whom the civil power could not bring to justice. They succeeded in bringing, within ecclesiastical courts, all cases relating to marriage, alimony, wills, etc. They procured from the reigning kings and emperors the enactment of laws by which they were declared to be "head over all the churches." And as if this was not enough, in order to bind the clergy to their interests, they forbade marriage. By the sale of indulgencies, they increased the revenue, thus robbing the poor, to procure means to carry out their hellish purposes. They set up the claim of infallibility, and denied the people the liberty of thinking for themselves in matters of religion. They claimed that the traditions and acts of the general councils were as binding on the conscience as the Scriptures of truth, thus giving to the acts and declarations of the worst men that ever lived, equal validity with the sayings of those who "spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Where persons refused to listen to their teachings, they were excommunicated without hope of mercy; hence, not only individuals and churches, but, sometimes, whole provinces and kingdoms were cut off from the fellowship of the church. And to cap the climax, that engine of cruelty, the "Inquisition," was established, in order to enforce obedience to their claims. Of all the works of the devil, or the inventions of hell, this was the most awful. Persons who were suspected of being unsound in the faith, were arrested and incarcerated in loathsome dungeons, deprived of the society of their friends, and often subjected to the most exquisite tortures. They were tormented, until they confessed their errors, and then subjected to the greatest anguish, because of their errors.

Thus this power—this "Man of Sin"—this "Wicked," has reigned with a strong and cruel hand, fulfilling the prediction of the apostle, "Then shall that Wicked be revealed," ever "sitting in the temple (church) of God, showing himself to be God." In our next, we shall endeavor to set forth the importance of this subject as connected with the coming of Christ. We shall see how clearly the prediction of the apostle has been fulfilled, and that this prophecy shows that the end is approaching.

F. H. B.

For the Crisis.

Wilbraham Camp Meeting.

TO THE MINISTERS.

That our annual feast in camp at W. this year was a glorious one,—that the weather was superb, the prayer meetings of deep interest, the preaching generally excellent, the singing soul-stirring and never to be forgotten, the juvenile instructions of new and rare value to the children and parents also, the harmony all that could be desired, the order never better, and the general influence of the meeting healthy and awakening, will be conceded by all that were present. But I am sorry to hear that the meeting did not sustain itself financially, but has left the committee considerably in debt, partly because of the lightness of the collections, partly by underestimating the expenses of the ground, and partly by the misfortune of smashing up a wagon in the Committee's employ. This indebtedness amounts to $63,60. Besides this, there is about $30 still due on the last year's debt contracted for the purchase of crockery, fixtures, etc., which should have been paid long ago, but the cash is still held back.

Now I protest earnestly against pushing the payment of these obligations over into another year, and I here make the following proposals to the ministry who were at the meeting, of a way to at once liquidate the same. Forty-eight of us sat at the well loaded tables and had our board from three to seven days free, and if we add the poor who were not charged, the number of free boarders amounted to nearly one hundred. Brn. Grant, Berick and Adams have this $93,60 on their shoulders; I don't think it is right for them to carry it; and I suggest, as a proper way to relieve them of their burden, that we forty-eight ministers send them without delay one dollar apiece; (I think my Graham mush and cakes cheap at that; don't you, Hiram?) and having done this, resolve ourselves into a committee of finance on the whole, and raise the remainder for them in some way between this and the first of November. And if any others who had their board free can aid in the matter, let them do so as a fair matter of conscience. Brethren, what do you say? Shall this be done, and done promptly? Here goes my dollar to Bro. Grant. Who that was at the meeting, (I ask without blushing,) and enjoyed it hugely, but forgot to put but a quarter into the collection, will help raise the next one? Let us have this debt out of existence soon.

My P. O. address during this fall will be Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Daniel T. Taylor.

Dansville, N. Y., Sept. 26, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Ordination in Windsor, Me.

Bro. John R. Hall, of South China, Me., was set apart for the work of the ministry in Windsor, Sunday, Sept. 15th. Sermon and charge by Eld. N. P. Nason. Prayer and fellowship by Eld. S. K. Partridge. We hope the Church will sustain Bro. Hall.

S. K. Partridge.
N. P. Nason.

[In a private letter accompanying the following communication, the writer informs us that our recent notice of "Retribution" revealed to him for the first time the fact of his having perpetuated the mistake which he now explains and corrects.—Editor.]

Explanation and Correction.

BY GEO. STORRS, NEW YORK.

The Judgment.—Some time about ten years since, I had occasion to preach on this subject. My original memorandum is now before me, and I find it corresponds with my printed discourse on the subject, first published in the Bible Examiner, July 1853. This discourse was republished, by request, in the Examiner, March 1861. These three documents all agree in the expression 10,000,000 [ten millions] of years, as the period of the day of judgment, allowing one hour to each individual, if they were to be passed in succession, so as literally to give account for every word, act and thought. In 1855, in a reply to H. Grew, on life from the dead, I quoted from recollection, trusting too much to memory, or else miswrote the idea by inserting "thousand" after "ten." Whether such was the fact, or whether it crept in in going through the compositor's hands and escaped detection in proof reading, is impossible for me to tell. Certain it is, it was not in my "mathematical" calculation, and was no error of mine in that respect. Unfortunately, however, in preparing my Pamphlet on "Life from the Dead," the copy was used in the reply to H. Grew, instead of my published discourse. In that reply, also, thirty minutes had been introduced, in place of one hour, making a double error.

What I now wish is, that all persons into whose hands my Pamphlet on "Life from the Dead" has fallen, would do me the favor to correct page 60, ninth line from bottom, by striking out the word "thousand," and the line below alter so as to ready sixty minutes instead of "thirty:" then they will have the truth of my mathematical calculation; which, however, was not originally designed to be exact, but only to approximate the period.

The following is my statement as first made, and includes all I said on the Time.

The Time necessary to an examination of each individual case, in the formal manner expressed or implied in the common theory, is an insuperable objection to it.

As to the number of the human family, it is impossible to arrive at any thing like certainty; yet we are not of those who suppose the number has been so great that they could not all stand upon the globe at one time, as some have affirmed. For a basis of calculation, we will suppose that one generation of the world lasts thirty years. This would give 200 generations in 6000 years. We will now take the present number of the inhabitants of the globe (eight or nine hundred millions) as the number to represent each generation; though it will be seen that this most likely gives us too many. Eight hundred millions multiplied by 200, (the number of generations from Adam to the end of 6000 years,) will give us one hundred and sixty thousand millions (160,000,000,000!) as the sum total of the human family to be judged, provided the judgment is to occur at the close of the 6000 years. Now, let us allot some specific time to the examination and decision of each individual case, on the supposition they are to be judged in succession—that is, one after another.

1. Allow one second to each individual, and six thousand years must be taken up in the process.

2. Allow one minute to each case, and three hundred and sixty thousand years are necessary.

3. Give one hour to each, and twenty-one millions six hundred thousand years are required. (21,600,000 years!)

4. Let one day be the time for each case, and near eight thousand millions of years will be necessary to complete the judgment. (8,000,000,000 of years!)

We do not affirm such a period will not be occupied in the judgment, but it certainly looks doubtful when the Scriptures seem every where to speak of the speedy execution of the sentence on the return of Christ. There seems only one way to avoid this protraction of the judgment, and that is to suppose the examination of all, or of large numbers, is proceeding at one and the same time. This indeed is possible, but then it breaks in upon the notion that each individual case is to be examined before all and exposed to all the race of men.

If we reduce the number to be examined and judged to one-half our estimate, as likely we may in truth, and then allow only one hour to each case, at least ten millions of years would be necessary to complete the judgment, and before sentence could be executed; or a period about sixteen hundred times as long as it has been since Adam was created.

Notwithstanding this seemingly insurmountable difficulty to the common theory, if the Scripture positively affirmed such to be the process of judgment, we would bow to its testimony; but we may find it does not, and we are therefore at liberty to search to see if some other view of the judgment is not the true one.

For the Crisis.

An Inquiry.

Bro. Wendell:—I am much pleased with Bro. J. S. White's article in the Crisis of Sept. 18th, on "The Scriptural use of the Second Personal Pronoun." It appears to me to be unanswerable, and it is in harmony with the doctrine of no life out of Christ, which doctrine I have for years cherished with increasing favor. With your permission, I wish to propose to Bro. White the following questions:—

1. Does the word "tribulation," in 2 Thess. 1: 6, relate to torment in a life beyond the present? 2. Does the true import of 2 Thess. 1: 6, demand that those among the wicked dead who troubled the Thessalonian Church shall live again?

An early answer will oblige your Sister,

Vermont, Sept. 21, 1861. [illegible]

For the Crisis.

The Gloom of Earth.

"We spend our years as a tale that is told."—David.

Well, dear reader, here I am, a pilgrim and stranger out in Central New York. Pensively have I gazed, for some time, from the window where I stood a few moments since. Out to the west, some six miles distant, are seen the Lake Ontario. In the interval, is seen the spires of the different meeting-houses. Not far distant, on an eminence, I can view, glistening in the morning sun, numerous white marble slabs, in the place of graves. There sleep, in their narrow dwellings, the victims of the indiscriminate ravages of death. A short distance beyond a beautiful undulating landscape that intervenes, is a large forest, the foliage of which presents a diversity of colors. The harvest is past; the summer is ended; the fields look mournful and gray. The sweet warbling of the feathered choir has given way to the mournful sighing of the autumnal winds; and, with measured and unerring pace, stern, cold, gloomy, frigid winter hastens to crush to earth, like an angel of death, the last relic of summer beauty that remains. Alas! alas! what an ever changing state is this, and what an alternating creature is puny man! Forty years in the spring time of life seemed a long, tedious, weary pilgrimage to tread. In retrospect, it seems but a span; and, as we wake to memory the peculiar instances that have dotted the pathway, 'tis strewn with numerous hopes, once bright and blooming, soon shrouded in gloom. Ties that have entwined and united fond hearts have been riven. Loved ones, dear as the core of our hearts, sacred as the apple of the eye, have passed away. Their memories are sweet and precious. Their virtues are embalmed in the sweetest anticipations of the future life. The green, grassy mounds, where they sleep sweetly in Jesus, we cannot forget. And, although doomed to wander a pilgrim and stranger, yet, often in spirit will we linger round their precious dust, until we sleep on the bosom of our mother, or the fiat of Jehovah wakes them to immortality, and we greet in the embrace of eternal youth, where sorrow never lives and pleasure never dies.

Let us, then, learn wisdom by the past; and in view of the many sunshines, so often obscured by the clouds of adversity, learn, with chastened hearts and obedient feet to tread with patience and resignation the pathway of duty and obedience; pressing forward, amid the shadows of the evening, as signals gleam portentously, both of the fiery doom of earth's destiny, and the morn of eternal joy to those found waiting, having been washed and made white in the blood of the "precious," all-atoning Lamb of God. Dearly beloved! O how blessed, how vast the anticipation of the unending, undying, perpetual now—of the immortal, glorified, future state. How beautiful the following extract:—

"Eternity.—Eternity has no gray hairs. The flowers fade, the heart withers, man grows old and dies; the world lies down in the sepulchre of ages, but time writes no wrinkles on eternity. Eternity! stupendous thought! The ever-present, unborn, undecaying and undying, the endless chain, compassing the life of God—the golden thread, entwining the destinies of the universe. Earth has its beauties, but time shrouds them for the grave; its honors are but a sunshine of an hour; its palaces, they are but gilded sepulchres; its pleasures, they are bursting bubbles."

Not so in the Kingdom. In the dwelling place of God can come no decay. No groans can ever mingle with the songs that warble from immortal tongues. Eternal splendor, light, life, beauty, glory and blessedness, shall be the inheritance of the "blood besprinkled ones." Rejoice, rejoice, for such a prospect as now opens to the eye of faith.! Earth is now shrouded in gloom, "distress and perplexity." "O come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." Amen. Even so come.

S. S. Brewer.

Mansville, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

New Hampshire Letter.

Dear Brn. and Srs:—Though I feel at this time unworthy to address you, yet, thinking that a word fitly spoken sometimes proves as effectual for good as lengthy arguments, I thought that I would pen a few lines. I hope we shall, instead of looking at "things which are seen," at this trying time, and partaking of the same spirit, and being moulded into the same image, "lift up our heads," and with an eye of faith look beyond, to things which are eternal; having our conversation, our affections, our treasure in heaven, from whence we look for the Son of God, who will deliver his people from all evil—from sin, and all the maladies that follow in its train. When he comes, he will bring about a better state of things. Praise God! But I think, before that happy day shall dawn, we shall be brought into still more trying times. Deliverance will be sweet when it comes. God's people will be "purified, made white, and tried." They will be like silver purified. For nothing that is filthy, or "worketh abomination," will ever be permitted to enter those pearly gates. Are we ready for the process? Are we willing, like good old Abraham, to give up our Isaacs? Or will we, like Esau, for the lusts of our flesh—from want of self-denial, sell our birthright? Will we, like Achan, partake of the forbidden things; though it proves our destruction? Or will we "lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us," and "endure hardness like good soldiers," that we may obtain an incorruptible crown? May we be "wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." Be filled with his (God's) Spirit, and be so interested in the things of God, that we shall be moulded into the image of his Son, and clearly reflect his likeness.

Then, brethren and sisters, prove faithful to your heavenly Father; he will not cause you to be tempted above what we are able to bear, but will provide a way for our escape.

J. W. H.

Sandwich, N. H., Sept. 22, 1861.

FINANCIAL REPORT of Wilbraham Campmeeting, 1861.

EXPENSES.

For lumber, straw, team hire, lamps, lighting ground, and sundry other items, as reported to meeting Aug. 31st,	$106.17
Advertising the meeting,	1.25
Mr. Collin's charge for passing over lot,	2.00
Groceries, provisions, bread, etc., for Boarding Tent and refreshment stands,	395.32
Services of Messrs. Pease, King, Kinsman, Arnold, W. Munger, Spoor, A. Cooley, W. Cooley, Bless. J. Baker, Goodrich Chaffee, H. Munger, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Hitchcock, Mrs. Cooley, Miss Hancock and Miss Cole,	132.10
Crockery, tin ware, cotton cloth, table covers, etc.,	28.87
Teaming water, storing and drawing crockery, and fire wood,	31.00
Use of tents more than received for same	5.75
Damages to Mr. Butterfield's team while under hire to those preparing for the meeting, caused by the horse taking fright and running through the woods,	25.00
	$727.46

RECEIPTS.

For sale of boards and straw,	$41.73
Contributions,	69.92
Amount received for board and sales at the Boarding Tent, and Cake and Fruit Stands,	464.65
Rent of horse, oyster and hulled corn stands and barber's shop,	72.56
Amount received for use of crockery, loaned for the Methodist Campmeeting,	15.00
Excess of expenses over receipts,	63 60
	$727.46

The large number of free boarders, (about ninety) the expense of procuring additions to the crockery and cooking department, together with the accident above mentioned, have thus run the committee in arrears sixty-three dollars and sixty cents. Any who are disposed to help make up this deficiency, can forward whatever they have to give to the undersigned.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer,
Boston, Mass.

For the Crisis.

A Letter.

Bro. Wendell:—Thinking a few lines upon the state of religion in this part of the Lord's vineyard might not be without interest to the readers of the Crisis, I take pleasure in informing them that the cause of truth is gaining ground in this vicinity. The labors of Bro. G. W. Turner, by the blessing of God, have been crowned with success, and many, who a few months since were groping their way in sin and darkness, have, through his efforts, been brought into the marvellous light of the gospel, and are now "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ." The little flock in this place, who have united under the name of Christians, are humbly and prayerfully striving to do the Master's will, notwithstanding the many difficulties we have to encounter in this new woody country. Bless God, we may still look forward, with joyful anticipations, to that glorious time, only a little in the future, when we shall join the blood-washed company, whose anthems of praise shall re-echo o'er the blooming plains of the new earth—when the trials and sorrows of this world will be forgotten, for God himself will wipe away all tears from our eyes. The signs of the times indicate the speedy return of our long absent Lord.

Dear brethren, let us be pure in heart. Let us be faithful. Our prayers and tears here will soon be over, and our work will soon be done; and then, glory to God, if we have on the wedding garment, we may join the "Church triumphant," who shall sit down to the marriage of the Lamb in the kingdom of God. Amen.

H. E. Palmer.

Ironton, Wis., Sept. 8th.

For the Crisis.

Mr. Baxter and the Prophecies.

Bro. Wendell:—I notice in the "Boston Daily Journal" of Monday evening, Sept. 23d, on third page, a synopsis of the views of the Rev. Mr. Baxter, in a lecture on Prophecy, and the great tribulation accompanying the return of Christ about 1864–68, delivered in St. Paul's Episcopal Church of late. In which Mr. B. speaks of the times, and the end of this dispensation, and the beginning of the millenium; the drying up of the mystic Euphrates, or Turkish empire; the outgoing of the three unclean spirits of anarchy; Spiritualism and superstition under the sixth vial. I think it would be very interesting to the readers of the Crisis, especially in these

For the Crisis.

Restitution.

Dear Bro. Wendell:—Restitution, what is it? It is the simple act of restoring. What is it to restore? It is to give back what has been lost, or taken away. But, says the objector, "I believe in the restitution of all things, and of course the wicked will all be saved." Yes, but the Bible does not read thus. Acts. 3: 20–21. "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." None of the prophets say a word about restoring the wicked. They say the earth shall be restored to its Eden glory; that the dead saints, from their graves, and all the living ones, He will change "from mortal to immortality" in the "twinkling of an eye;" then the saints, all of them, will inherit the restored earth. That then, but not till then, the "meek shall inherit the earth." That then, but not till then, will the "glory of the Lord cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea." Then will the "kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ; and he shall "reign forever and ever, world without end." Also in this restitution. "he shall send Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." The earth, according to the holy prophets is to be restored. Num. 14: 21. "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Now the question may be asked, how is the earth to be restored? The answer is found in 2 Pet. 3, where he declares the earth, which now is, "is reserved unto fire," as the old one was unto water. But nevertheless we, according to his promise (Isa. 65,) look for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

I find none of the prophets declare that the finally impenitent will be restored;—but, on the contrary, Malachi 4: 1–3 says, "For behold the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But, says one, "I prefer doctrines from the New Testament." But it said, Matt. 3: 20, "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down and cast into the fire." It appears to me that this language imports, clearly, an utter extinction of being, and nothing short. 12th verse, "He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire;" the fire being unquenchable, it will burn them up, as Malachi says, "root and branch."

H. H. Dobney, a Baptist minister of England, when speaking on this subject says: "The eternal torture folks must show that, when the God of truth threatens the sinner with destruction, in many mutually consistent passages, the terms employed cannot be understood literally, but must be understood metaphorically; which must be either because man is necessarily indestructible, or because the Judge will not exert the power he possesses to destroy, or will exert his power to prevent the sinner naturally dying out of existence; and so will, by an act of Omnipotence, keep him alive forever and ever, in order to torment him." In reference to this last idea, the remark may be suffered, that the sinner is either necessarily immortal, (which will scarcely be affirmed,) or else he is immortal only by the will and conservation of God; so that the above awful inference is just that God will, of his own free act, uphold in life forever and ever the unhappy sinner, for no other purpose than to punish him. Verily, the evidence for this had need be strong, and mighty masses of obvious truth must be piled upon a mountain base, to raise this everlasting pyramid of infinitely more than sepulchral gloom, which is forever and forever more to throw its dark and appaling shadow across the universe of God. We say that a theory like this, which presents the righteous God under such a terrific aspect, had need to be sustained by evidence proportionally strong; yes, if the doctrine of never ending torment for innumerable myriads of God's creatures be indeed contained in Scripture, beyond a doubt it will be found repeated over and over again, with every variety of phrase, and diligently sought illustration. It will be indissolubly entwined in numerous arguments; will be the only fair result to which various lines of apostolic reasoning conduct. Concede text after text, it will remain. We ask, then, for the massive arguments to be produced; we want the truth."

Now, some one may ask, "how long to the above named Restitution?" This I cannot tell. But I firmly believe that it will come before the generation or race of people that witnessed the darkening of the sun, in 1780, have all passed away. For in Matt. 24: 3, the disciples inquired, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, [illegible] blessed Jesus condescends to tell them, 7th verse, "For nation shall rise against nation," which did not take place till about three hundred years after the destruction of Jerusalem. 15th verse, "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet;" which is undoubtedly the Papacy, which did not get into full operation till some five hundred years after the destruction of Jerusalem. Then, as I understand, this last named power was to last 1260 years, which would bring us down the stream of time over 1700 years this side of Jerusalem's destruction. Surely, according to the Savior's prediction, "immediately after the tribulation of those days, the sun was darkened," May 19th, 1780, or, as Luke 21st chap. records it, "signs in the sun," just as the disciples inquired what should be the sign of his coming. It was supernaturally darkened, no eclipse, for the moon was near its full. Also the moon "refused to give its light," fulfilled the night following. "And the stars shall fall from heaven," which was fulfilled, I believe, in 1833, by the meteoric shower. The next sign spoken of is "distress of nations with perplexity," which, I think, is just upon us. Then, says Jesus, "shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds." They who? I think some of the same that was alive eighty-one years ago, "this generation shall not pass away till all these things be fulfilled." Now, dear brethren and sisters, if the race that is eighty-one shall not pass away before the judgment, let us be ready, is my prayer. Amen.

Ira Fancher.

Sandy Hill, Sept. 10th, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Inquiries Answered.

Bro. Wendell:—In the Crisis, dated Sept 11th, a few questions are asked upon Rev. 22: 9. The first is, as to "Who the angel was that talked with John, on the Isle of Patmos." I think it was the angel Gabriel. In Rev. 1: 1, we read, "The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel, unto his servant John." Again, in Rev. 22: 16, we read, "I, Jesus, have sent mine angel"; and 6th verse, "And the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel." In Rev. 13: 15, we have the description of a personage; and in Dan. 10: 5, 6, we have a description of the same person. Again, in Rev. 2: 18, we read, "These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass." We have the same description in these three places, while the last one names the person described. In Dan. 8: 13, we find two personages spoken of, who, I think, are Christ and Gabriel. In Dan. 10: 13, we read, "But lo, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me"; verse 21, "But I will shew thee that which is noted in the Scriptures of truth, and there is none that holdeth with me in these things, but Michael your prince." In chap. 12: 1. "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince, which standeth for the children of thy people." Jude, 9th verse, "Yet Michael, the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses"; and Rev. 12: 7, "And there was war in heaven; Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels." From these texts it is evident that Michael has angels, and that none knew of these things but Gabriel, and that he is that "great prince," or, as the Revelator has it, "the prince of the kings of the earth." He is interested about the bodies of the dead, and has disputed with the devil, and overcome the dragon.

The next question is as follows: "Does a fellow servant imply anything more than a messenger—a mortal being, sent to instruct God's people?" The inference in this case is, that it is. John was the disciple that Jesus loved, and would have been chosen in preference to any other mortal. The angel Gabriel appears to have been an important servant to Daniel; he said unto him, "Stand upright, for unto thee am I now sent." "Then said he unto me, Fear not, Daniel; thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words." He is commanded to make him "understand the vision"; and the same Gabriel whom he saw in the vision at the beginning, touched him "about the time of the evening oblation." Again, Gabriel announces the birth of John, and afterward the birth of Jesus. These texts show that Gabriel was a faithful servant. He was serving the same God that they were, and as none but Michael "held with him" in these things, he was a fellow servant with John.

The next question is, "Does it not imply by the keeping of the sayings of this book, that he is one who is subject to the rule or government of the dispensation under which we live—though, perhaps, a being more noted and worthy than it has been our privilege to see?" There is positive proof that he is subject to the rule that we live under; for Jesus said, "All power is given unto me, in heaven and in earth." Again, the Apostle Paul says of Christ, "He sits far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come." Again, [illegible] right hand of God; angels, and authorities, and powers being made subject unto him."

The last question reads thus: "May not this 'fellow-servant' be one of those spoken of in Rev. 6: 11, who are represented as martyred by the beast from the bottomless pit, who is to slay the witnesses?" I would like to ask one question. Is there a sentence in the book of God's word that tells of an angel "slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held"?

Susannah H. Akers.

Thorndike, Mass.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 2, 1861.

Home Again.

Summoned by telegraph, on the 17th ult., to attend the funeral of a beloved sister in Christ, in Hinesburgh, Vt., we left Boston that evening, and reached our destination a little before noon the next day; passed several hours on the 21st with Bro. Batchelor in Rutland; spent Sunday the 22d in Castleton, where we heard two excellent discourses from Bro. A. Ross, and preached once; had a moment's chat with Bro. Beals as we came through Poultney on Monday morning, 23d, and learned that Bro. Howell was improving; visited in Albany and in Montgomery Co., N. Y., from Monday, 23d, to last Saturday morning; attended a Fast Day meeting in the Hudson St. M. E. Church, in Albany, and heard an appropriate discourse from the pastor, in which were fearlessly set forth in a clear and strong light some of the sins of this wicked nation, now groaning beneath the desolating scourge of civil war; reached home on the afternoon of the 28th ult., greatly refreshed by exemption from office duties, and glad to find our companion and daughter well—the former considerably improved in health. The editing of this number as well as the last has fallen almost wholly upon our esteemed co-laborer, Bro. Berick. If any matters of business have been waiting our return, they shall receive early attention.

The Man of Sin.

"For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming."—2 Thess. 2: 7, 8.

The power brought to view in the foregoing passage is, without doubt, the Catholic power. In this, all Protestant writers are agreed. It does not refer to the "Catholic Church," as such, but to the Papacy, that "politico-ecclesiastical" power, established in Rome. This despotism has not a parallel in the history of the world. Its government was peculiar, acquired by unlawful means, and its power wielded in an unholy cause. It is truly astonishing, how such a power could grow to such importance—how men could ever be brought to regard it with favor, and exert themselves to sustain it. But if we look closely to the facts connected with its rise and development, we shall, perhaps, have less cause to wonder.

This power did not grow up in a moment; it required centuries to give it the character of the "Man of Sin," and the "Son of perdition." It was while the church was inactive and men were asleep, that the evil, which finally resulted in the rise of the "Man of Sin," that "Wicked" power, was developed. The Saviour, in the parable of the "tares and wheat," shows plainly, that the sowing of the tares took place while "men slept"; the evil, which resulted in the rise of the "Son of perdition," was sown when the servants were careless and inactive. The very principle discovered by the disciples when they wished to "call down fire from heaven" upon those who refused to follow with them, was indicative of the working of the "mystery of iniquity"—a preparatory work to the development of the "Man of Sin."

The usurpation of the Bishop of Rome was founded on the pretence that Peter was constituted head of the christian church. That Christ, in the declaration "Thou art Peter, and on this rock I will build my church," etc, authorized Peter to be the head of the church. But the passage probably means nothing more than that Peter should be foremost in preaching the truth, and publishing the good news of the kingdom of God; and the declaration, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth," etc., was addressed, not to Peter, but to the twelve apostles. Thank heaven, we are not built on Peter, but on Christ. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." He is the beginning and the end, the first and the last, and without him we perish.

But to return. The city of Rome was a favorable location for these Bishops to manifest their growing ambition. Rome was the capitol of the empire,—why should it not be the centre of the church's operations? This was a plausible argument, especially to those who wanted it so. And while the church at Rome enjoyed quiet and prosperity, the Bishops made use of all circumstances to advance their interests. Little by little, they freed themselves from all dependence on the civil power; indeed, they claimed to be above all earthly laws. In the reign of Henry III., upwards of "one hundred murders" were committed by the clergy, whom the civil power could not bring to justice. They succeeded in bringing within ecclesiastical courts all cases relating to marriage, alimony, wills, etc. They procured from the reigning kings and emperors the enactment of laws by which they were declared to be "head over all the churches." And as if this was not enough, in order to bind the clergy to their interests, they forbade marriage. By the sale of indulgencies, they increased the revenue, thus robbing the poor, to procure means to carry out their hellish purposes. They set up the claim of infallibility, and denied the people the liberty of thinking for themselves in matters of religion. They claimed that the traditions and acts of the general councils were as binding on the conscience as the Scriptures of truth, thus giving to the acts and declarations of the worst men that ever lived, equal validity with the sayings of those who "spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Where persons refused to listen to their teachings, they were excommunicated without hope of mercy; hence, not only individuals and churches, but, sometimes, whole provinces and kingdoms were cut off from the fellowship of the church. And to cap the climax, that engine of cruelty, the "Inquisition," was established, in order to enforce obedience to their claims. Of all the works of the devil, or the inventions of hell, this was the most awful. Persons who were suspected of being unsound in the faith, were arrested and incarcerated in loathsome dungeons, deprived of the society of their friends, and often subjected to the most exquisite tortures. They were tormented, until they confessed their errors, and then subjected to the greatest anguish, because of their errors.

Thus this power—this "Man of Sin"—this "Wicked," has reigned with a strong and cruel hand, fulfilling the prediction of the apostle, "Then shall that Wicked be revealed," ever "sitting in the temple (church) of God, showing himself to be God." In our next, we shall endeavor to set forth the importance of this subject as connected with the coming of Christ. We shall see how clearly the prediction of the apostle has been fulfilled, and that this prophecy shows that the end is approaching.

F. H. B.

For the Crisis.

Wilbraham Camp Meeting.

TO THE MINISTERS.

That our annual feast in camp at W. this year was a glorious one,—that the weather was superb, the prayer meetings of deep interest, the preaching generally excellent, the singing soul-stirring and never to be forgotten, the juvenile instructions of new and rare value to the children and parents also, the harmony all that could be desired, the order never better, and the general influence of the meeting healthy and awakening, will be conceded by all that were present. But I am sorry to hear that the meeting did not sustain itself financially, but has left the committee considerably in debt, partly because of the lightness of the collections, partly by underestimating the expenses of the ground, and partly by the misfortune of smashing up a wagon in the Committee's employ. This indebtedness amounts to $63,60. Besides this, there is about $30 still due on the last year's debt contracted for the purchase of crockery, fixtures, etc., which should have been paid long ago, but the cash is still held back.

Now I protest earnestly against pushing the payment of these obligations over into another year, and I here make the following proposals to the ministry who were at the meeting, of a way to at once liquidate the same. Forty-eight of us sat at the well loaded tables and had our board from three to seven days free, and if we add the poor who were not charged, the number of free boarders amounted to nearly one hundred. Brn. Grant, Berick and Adams have this $93,60 on their shoulders; I don't think it is right for them to carry it; and I suggest, as a proper way to relieve them of their burden, that we forty-eight ministers send them without delay one dollar apiece; (I think my Graham mush and cakes cheap at that; don't you, Hiram?) and having done this, resolve ourselves into a committee of finance on the whole, and raise the remainder for them in some way between this and the first of November. And if any others who had their board free can aid in the matter, let them do so as a fair matter of conscience. Brethren, what do you say? Shall this be done, and done promptly? Here goes my dollar to Bro. Grant. Who that was at the meeting, (I ask without blushing,) and enjoyed it hugely, but forgot to put but a quarter into the collection, will help raise the next one? Let us have this debt out of existence soon.

My P. O. address during this fall will be Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Daniel T. Taylor.

Dansville, N. Y., Sept. 26, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Ordination in Windsor, Me.

Bro. John R. Hall, of South China, Me., was set apart for the work of the ministry in Windsor, Sunday, Sept. 15th. Sermon and charge by Eld. N. F. Nason. Prayer and fellowship by Eld. S. K. Partridge. We hope the Church will sustain Bro. Hall.

S. K. Partridge.
N. F. Nason.

[In a private letter accompanying the following communication the writer informs us that our recent notice of "Retribution" revealed to him for the first time the fact of his having perpetuated the mistake which he now explains and corrects.—Editor.]

Explanation and Correction.

BY GEO. STORRS, NEW YORK.

The Judgment.—Some time about ten years since, I had occasion to preach on this subject. My original memorandum is now before me, and I find it corresponds with my printed discourse on the subject, first published in the Bible Examiner, July 1853. This discourse was republished, by request, in the Examiner, March 1861. These three documents all agree in the expression 10,000,000 [ten millions] of years, as the period of the day of judgment, allowing one hour to each individual, if they were to be passed in succession, so as literally to give account for every word, act and thought. In 1855, in a reply to H. Grew, on life from the dead, I quoted from recollection, trusting too much to memory, or else miswrote the idea by inserting "thousand" after "ten." Whether such was the fact, or whether it crept in in going through the compositor's hands and escaped detection in proof reading, is impossible for me to tell. Certain it is, it was not in my "mathematical" calculation, and was no error of mine in that respect. Unfortunately, however, in preparing my Pamphlet on "Life from the Dead," the copy was used in the reply to H. Grew, instead of my published discourse. In that reply, also, thirty minutes had been introduced, in place of one hour, making a double error.

What I now wish is, that all persons into whose hands my Pamphlet on "Life from the Dead" has fallen, would do me the favor to correct page 60, ninth line from bottom, by striking out the word "thousand;" and the line below alter so as to ready sixty minutes instead of "thirty:" then they will have the truth of my mathematical calculation; which, however, was not originally designed to be exact, but only to approximate the period.

The following is my statement as first made, and includes all I said on the Time.

The Time necessary to an examination of each individual case, in the formal manner expressed or implied in the common theory, is an insuperable objection to it.

As to the number of the human family, it is impossible to arrive at any thing like certainty; yet we are not of those who suppose the number has been so great that they could not all stand upon the globe at one time, as some have affirmed. For a basis of calculation, we will suppose that one generation of the world lasts thirty years. This would give 200 generations in 6000 years. We will now take the present number of the inhabitants of the globe (eight or nine hundred millions) as the number to represent each generation; though it will be seen that this most likely gives us too many. Eight hundred millions multiplied by 200, (the number of generations from Adam to the end of 6000 years,) will give us one hundred and sixty thousand millions (160,000,000,000!) as the sum total of the human family to be judged, provided the judgment is to occur at the close of the 6000 years. Now, let us allot some specific time to the examination and decision of each individual case, on the supposition they are to be judged in succession—that is, one after another.

1. Allow one second to each individual, and six thousand years must be taken up in the process.

2. Allow one minute to each case, and three hundred and sixty thousand years are necessary.

3. Give one hour to each, and twenty-one millions six hundred thousand years are required. (21,600,000 years!)

4. Let one day be the time for each case, and near eight thousand millions of years will be necessary to complete the judgment. (8,000,000,000 of years!)

We do not affirm such a period will not be occupied in the judgment, but it certainly looks doubtful when the Scriptures seem every where to speak of the speedy execution of the sentence on the return of Christ. There seems only one way to avoid this protraction of the judgment, and that is to suppose the examination of all, or of large numbers, is proceeding at one and the same time. This indeed is possible, but then it breaks in upon the notion that each individual case is to be examined before all and exposed to all the race of men.

If we reduce the number to be examined and judged to one-half our estimate, as likely we may in truth, and then allow only one hour to each case, at least ten millions of years would be necessary to complete the judgment, and before sentence could be executed; or a period about sixteen hundred times as long as it has been since Adam was created.

Notwithstanding this seemingly insurmountable difficulty to the common theory, if the Scripture positively affirmed such to be the process of judgment, we would bow to its testimony; but we may find it does not, and we are therefore at liberty to search to see if some other view of the judgment is not the true one.

For the Crisis.

An Inquiry.

Bro. Wendell:—I am much pleased with Bro. J. S. White's article in the Crisis of Sept. 18th, on "The Scriptural use of the Second Personal Pronoun." It appears to me to be unanswerable, and it is in harmony with the doctrine of no life out of Christ, which doctrine I have for years cherished with increasing favor. With your permission, I wish to propose to Bro. White the following questions:—

1. Does the word "tribulation," in 2 Thess. 1: 6, relate to torment in a life beyond the present? 2. Does the true import of 2 Thess. 1: 6, demand that those among the wicked dead who troubled the Thessalonian Church shall live again?

An early answer will oblige your Sister,

Vermont, Sept. 21, 1861. [illegible]

For the Crisis.

The Gloom of Earth.

"We spend our years as a tale that is told."—David.

Well, dear reader, here I am, a pilgrim and stranger out in Central New York. Pensively have I gazed, for some time, from the window where I stood a few moments since. Out to the west, some six miles distant, are seen the Lake Ontario. In the interval, is seen the spires of the different meeting-houses. Not far distant, on an eminence, I can view, glistening in the morning sun, numerous white marble slabs, in the place of graves. There sleep, in their narrow dwellings, the victims of the indiscriminate ravages of death. A short distance beyond a beautiful undulating landscape that intervenes, is a large forest, the foliage of which presents a diversity of colors. The harvest is past; the summer is ended; the fields look mournful and gray. The sweet warbling of the feathered choir has given way to the mournful sighing of the autumnal winds; and, with measured and unerring pace, stern, cold, gloomy, frigid winter hastens to crush to earth, like an angel of death, the last relic of summer beauty that remains. Alas! alas! what an ever changing state is this, and what an alternating creature is puny man! Forty years in the spring time of life seemed a long, tedious, weary pilgrimage to tread. In retrospect, it seems but a span; and, as we wake to memory the peculiar instances that have dotted the pathway, 'tis strewn with numerous hopes, once bright and blooming, soon shrouded in gloom. Ties that have entwined and united fond hearts have been riven. Loved ones, dear as the core of our hearts, sacred as the apple of the eye, have passed away. Their memories are sweet and precious. Their virtues are embalmed in the sweetest anticipations of the future life. The green, grassy mounds, where they sleep sweetly in Jesus, we cannot forget. And, although doomed to wander a pilgrim and stranger, yet, often in spirit will we linger round their precious dust, until we sleep on the bosom of our mother, or the fiat of Jehovah wakes them to immortality, and we greet in the embrace of eternal youth, where sorrow never lives and pleasure never dies.

Let us, then, learn wisdom by the past; and in view of the many sunshines, so often obscured by the clouds of adversity, learn, with chastened hearts and obedient feet to tread with patience and resignation the pathway of duty and obedience; pressing forward, amid the shadows of the evening, as signals gleam portentously, both of the fiery doom of earth's destiny, and the morn of eternal joy to those found waiting, having been washed and made white in the blood of the "precious," all-atoning Lamb of God. Dearly beloved! O how blessed, how vast the anticipation of the unending, undying, perpetual now—of the immortal, glorified, future state. How beautiful the following extract:—

"Eternity.—Eternity has no gray hairs. The flowers fade, the heart withers, man grows old and dies; the world lies down in the sepulchre of ages, but time writes no wrinkles on eternity. Eternity! stupendous thought! The ever-present, unborn, undecaying and undying, the endless chain, compassing the life of God—the golden thread, entwining the destinies of the universe. Earth has its beauties, but time shrouds them for the grave; its honors are but a sunshine of an hour; its palaces, they are but gilded sepulchres; its pleasures, they are bursting bubbles."

Not so in the Kingdom. In the dwelling place of God can come no decay. No groans can ever mingle with the songs that warble from immortal tongues. Eternal splendor, light, life, beauty, glory and blessedness, shall be the inheritance of the "blood besprinkled ones." Rejoice, rejoice, for such a prospect as now opens to the eye of faith.! Earth is now shrouded in gloom, "distress and perplexity." "O come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." Amen. Even so come.

S. S. Brewer.

Mansville, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

New Hampshire Letter.

Dear Brn. and Srs:—Though I feel at this time unworthy to address you, yet, thinking that a word fitly spoken sometimes proves as effectual for good as lengthy arguments, I thought that I would pen a few lines. I hope we shall, instead of looking at "things which are seen," at this trying time, and partaking of the same spirit, and being moulded into the same image, "lift up our heads," and with an eye of faith look beyond, to things which are eternal; having our conversation, our affections, our treasure in heaven, from whence we look for the Son of God, who will deliver his people from all evil—from sin, and all the maladies that follow in its train. When he comes, he will bring about a better state of things. Praise God! But I think, before that happy day shall dawn, we shall be brought into still more trying times. Deliverance will be sweet when it comes. God's people will be "purified, made white, and tried." They will be like silver purified. For nothing that is filthy, or "worketh abomination," will ever be permitted to enter those pearly gates. Are we ready for the process? Are we willing, like good old Abraham, to give up our Isaacs? Or will we, like Esau, for the lusts of our flesh—from want of self-denial, sell our birthright? Will we, like Achan, partake of the forbidden things; though it proves our destruction? Or will we "lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us," and "endure hardness like good soldiers," that we may obtain an incorruptible crown? May we be "wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." Be filled with his (God's) Spirit, and be so interested in the things of God, that we shall be moulded into the image of his Son, and clearly reflect his likeness.

Then, brethren and sisters, prove faithful to your heavenly Father; he will not cause you to be tempted above what we are able to bear, but will provide a way for our escape. [illegible]

Sandwich, N. H., Sept. 22, 1861.

FINANCIAL REPORT of Wilbraham Campmeeting, 1861.

EXPENSES.

For lumber, straw, team hire, lamps, lighting ground, and sundry other items, as reported to meeting Aug. 31st,	$106.17
Advertising the meeting,	1.25
Mr. Collin's charge for passing over lot,	2.00
Groceries, provisions, bread, etc., for Boarding Tent and refreshment stands,	395.32
Services of Messrs. Pease, King, Kinsman, Arnold, W. Munger, Spoor, A. Cooley, W. Cooley, Bless. J. Baker, Goodrich Chaffee, H. Munger, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Hitchcock, Mrs. Cooley, Miss Hancock and Miss Cole,	132.10
Crockery, tin ware, cotton cloth, table covers, etc.,	28.87
Teaming water, storing and drawing crockery, and fire wood,	31.00
Use of tents more than received for same	5.75
Damages to Mr. Butterfield's team while under hire to those preparing for the meeting, caused by the horse taking fright and running through the woods,	25.00
	$727.46

RECEIPTS.

For sale of boards and straw,	$41.73
Contributions,	69.92
Amount received for board and sales at the Boarding Tent, and Cake and Fruit Stands,	464.65
Rent of horse, oyster and hulled corn stands and barber's shop,	72.56
Amount received for use of crockery, loaned for the Methodist Campmeeting,	15.00
Excess of expenses over receipts,	63.60
	$727.46

The large number of free boarders, (about ninety) the expense of procuring additions to the crockery and cooking department, together with the accident above mentioned, have thus run the committee in arrears sixty-three dollars and sixty cents. Any who are disposed to help make up this deficiency, can forward whatever they have to give to the undersigned.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer,
Boston, Mass.

For the Crisis.

A Letter.

Bro. Wendell:—Thinking a few lines upon the state of religion in this part of the Lord's vineyard might not be without interest to the readers of the Crisis, I take pleasure in informing them that the cause of truth is gaining ground in this vicinity. The labors of Bro. G. W. Turner, by the blessing of God, have been crowned with success, and many, who a few months since were groping their way in sin and darkness, have, through his efforts, been brought into the marvellous light of the gospel, and are now "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ." The little flock in this place, who have united under the name of Christians, are humbly and prayerfully striving to do the Master's will, notwithstanding the many difficulties we have to encounter in this new woody country. Bless God, we may still look forward, with joyful anticipations, to that glorious time, only a little in the future, when we shall join the blood-washed company, whose anthems of praise shall re-echo o'er the blooming plains of the new earth—when the trials and sorrows of this world will be forgotten, for God himself will wipe away all tears from our eyes. The signs of the times indicate the speedy return of our long absent Lord.

Dear brethren, let us be pure in heart. Let us be faithful. Our prayers and tears here will soon be over, and our work will soon be done; and then, glory to God, if we have on the wedding garment, we may join the "Church triumphant," who shall sit down to the marriage of the Lamb in the kingdom of God. Amen.

H. E. Palmer.

Ironton, Wis., Sept. 8th.

For the Crisis.

Mr. Baxter and the Prophecies.

Bro. Wendell:—I notice in the "Boston Daily Journal" of Monday evening, Sept. 23d, on third page, a synopsis of the views of the Rev. Mr. Baxter, in a lecture on Prophecy, and the great tribulation accompanying the return of Christ about 1864–68, delivered in St. Paul's Episcopal Church of late. In which Mr. B. speaks of the times, and the end of the millennium, and the beginning of the millennium; the drying up of the mystic Euphrates or Turkish empire, [illegible] troublesome times. It shows that we, as Second Adventists, are not the only people that are looking for the Saviour to come soon and deliver all his people from all these troubles. But others are waking up to the same glorious truths, and proclaiming them. I hope you will procure that paper, and publish it in the Crisis, for the benefit of its readers. It may be the means of waking up a great many who are now almost asleep, as it were, on the great and glorious subject of the speedy coming of Christ. OTIS IRISH.

New Bedford, Sept. 25th, '61.

For the Crisis.

Note from Elder Himes.

NOTICE.—To all who may wish conferences and protracted meetings with a view to build up and extend the Advent cause.

Brethren, by the blessing of God, my health is restored, and I am able to preach and labor as in former times, for the building up of the churches, and the salvation of souls. I am ready to "go out quickly into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in," in obedience to the command of the divine Master. The supper is ready. Luke 14: 15–24. The Master is coming very soon, and what we do for the church and the world must be done quickly. So soon as the church in Boston can get a supply, I shall devote myself wholly to the missionary work. In the meantime, if my labors are wanted in any part of the vineyard, where I can work without embarassment, I shall be glad to hear. Address Eld. J. V. HIMES.

Boston, Sept. 30, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Notice.

BRO. WENDELL:—Please insert the following:—

"DROWNED.—Mr. Joseph Kennedy, son of Elder John Kennedy, of Sommerville, Me., a private in Company H., Capt. J. F. Milliken, Eighth Maine regiment, left Augusta Sept. 10th, and was drowned the 12th, while bathing, in New York. Those in charge obtained a coffin, sent the body to Augusta, and on the 14th a squad of soldiers conveyed it to his father's residence in Sommerville. On the 15th, a discourse was preached by Eld. N. F. Nason, of North Searsport, to a large number, who met to drop a tear of sympathy over the grave of one that was respected. Eld. K. is very grateful to Government for its kindness. May the afflicted family and acquaintances of the deceased (who was about thirty years old) be led to see the importance of entire trust in that God who notices even so small an event as the fall of a sparrow. J. S. RICHARDS.

Belmont, Me., Sept. 17, 1861."

Eld. Kennedy has lately had heavy trials. His barn was burned, with seven tons of hay, wagon, sleigh and harness. He has one son in the army, if living. He feels like Jacob. Joseph is not, Simeon is not. May God bless Bro. and Sr. Kennedy in their old age. N. F. N.

For the Crisis.

Reply to G. W. Stetson.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—In reply to the question of Bro. G. W. Stetson, I remark, that I understand that the union of the pre-existent Spirit, (denominated the Son of God, Rom. 1: 4,) with the body prepared him, qualified or capacitated him for that actual participation of "our feelings and infirmities," which constituted him a faithful High Priest, whose offering and mediation were acceptable to God.

The fact that the divine Spirit of the Son of God existed anterior and independently of the body prepared him, involves no proof that mere human spirits can exist independently of the body. The Son of God was a peculiar being. Although, in his incarnate state of humiliation, he "was made like unto his brethren"; in his original "begotten" divine nature, he was made "much better than the angels," Heb. 1: 4, whose nature is superior to ours. Heb. 2: 7.

As the Son of God, in his divine nature, was "begotten of the Father," John 1: 14, his declaration, "I live by the Father," John 6: 58, must be understood as referring to his highest nature, and consequently, the words, "thou shalt make his soul (life) an offering for sin," Isa. 53: 10, may be referred to the same nature. I understand that it was the voluntary offering of the highest and entire life of the Son of God, in conformity with the will of the Father, in connection with his general obedience, which constituted an adequate "propitiation for the sins of the whole world"; so that God might be just and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." 1 John 2: 2; Rom. 3: 26. It appears to me, that both the Trinitarian and simple Humanitarian theories are open to the serious charge of diminishing the efficacy of the great sacrifice, by limiting the actual death of the Son of God to simple humanity. I understand that my brother S. is not an advocate of either of these theories. HENRY GREW.

Correspondence.

From Sister M. A. Belding.

BRO. WENDELL:—Feeling encouraged from week to week, while reading the letters in the Crisis from the dear children scattered abroad, I felt that I wanted to bring in my testimony with them, thinking perhaps it might cheer some lone pilgrim on his way to the kingdom. Truly we have everything to encourage us; to suffer if need be; for the race is almost run—redemption is nigh. The signs proclaim that Jesus is near. Then let us lift up our heads and rejoice. I am glad that I have to suffer, for the rest will be the more glorious; it makes Jesus more precious; and all I ask is, that I may have grace given me to endure it. I believe the perils of the last days are around us, and if we do not watch and be sober, we shall be overcome by them. Iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold; but the promise is to them that endure to the end. O, how cheering the thought, that if faithful a little while longer, Jesus will come and take us to himself, that where he is we may be also. Then sorrow's tear will no more flow, and the days of parting will be gone forever. Here we meet with those we love, but the parting time comes, and we have to bid them adieu, perhaps some of them never to meet again in this life; but there there will be no more parting, no more sorrow, for the former things will be passed away. My prayer is, that we may all be ready when Jesus comes, to hear him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." M. A. B.

South Windsor, Sept. 17, '61.

From Bro. W. Sweet.

BRO. WENDELL:—I hold meetings on Sundays, and sometimes week days, and intend soon to commence evening meetings. I am willing to do all I can for my Master's cause. I love God and the glorious appearing of his Son. I love the Holy Spirit of God, which is sent into the world to "reprove the world of sin," and to guide the saints into all truth, by inspiring the holy apostles to understand how to teach the word, and write God's truths plain, so as to be understood by all who love the truth. It is this alone that can purify our souls—that can sanctify, seal and save us in the day of the Lord Jesus. "My words," says Jesus, "they are spirit, and they are life." We are commanded to try all things by the word of God. "Preach the word in season and out of season," "for the time will come they (ungodly, proud professors and sinners) will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts, shall they heap to themselves teachers" of "smooth things," to please the ear and gain the applause of wicked men.

My brethren in the ministry, we must stand on the sure rock—Christ, and contend earnestly for the "faith once delivered to the saints." We must hold out and endure to the end.

From Sr. Susan F. Mudgett.

BRO. WENDELL:—Enclosed I send you two dollars, towards paying what I owe for the Crisis. Please inform me through the paper the amount that is still your due, for my prayer is that God will give me the means to pay all I owe. The Crisis must be had, especially since we have arrived at the time which we have so long been expecting, when all the "kingdoms of the earth are being broken" to pieces, to give place to the peaceful reign of "Prince Emmanuel." We need no further evidence to assure our hearts of the fact that that kingdom is about to be set up, for every thing tells us plainly it is even so. O for a preparation to hail with joy the descending King! Yours, believing fully that Jesus is just about taking to himself his great power to reign King over all the earth.

Kenduskeag, Me., Aug. 26.

From Bro. O. D. Woodruff.

BRO. WENDELL:—Enclosed I send 13 cts. in stamps, and wish you would send me a copy of F. H. Berick's "Disquisition on the Prophecies" for the same. We are trying to hold on till Jesus comes, and it requires a constant watching and praying, and trust in God, to live soberly, righteously and godly at this time. But those who take heed to the sure word of prophecy, know that their redemption draweth nigh; and we can truly lift up our heads and rejoice. But a little while and deliverance will come. Yes, He whose right it is will take the kingdom, and sit on the throne of His glory. Then will the faithful receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. Bro. Wendell, pray for us, that we may hold on till Jesus comes, and be numbered with the saints of the Most High. We are well, and hope your family are. Our love to you and yours.

From Bro. W. Sheldon.

BRO. WENDELL:—Permit me to inform my friends in the West concerning my present whereabouts in the field of battle. For, the present, my head quarters will be Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis. Merrimack is a pleasant village, on the banks of the Wisconsin river, twenty-five miles from Madison City. On moving away from Springville, I had the pleasure of knowing that I had lost no friends during my stay there, excepting those whom death had dragged to the tomb. If there are scattered friends near this place whom I have not yet found out, please write me where you are.

Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis., Sept. 20.

From Bro. N. F. Nason.

BRO. WENDELL:—My health is not good. I cannot do what I would be glad to, but do all I can. The last three Sundays I spent in China, Whitefield and Windsor. I attended at Sommerville the funeral of Bro. Kennedy's son. Evening at Week's Mills, China. God speed the truth. Love to all the saints still loving and longing for the appearing of Jesus Christ.

North Searsport, Me., Sept. 23d.

From Bro. Charles Atherton.

BRO. WENDELL:—You will find enclosed two dollars for the Crisis—one for the past and one for the present number. As for the Crisis, I prize it next to the Bible. It sets forth the truths of the Bible as I understand them. I have talked with several about these truths, and they say that I have not got the Spirit of Christ; but I know that I have. Thanks be to God, my hope grows brighter and brighter, and may it continue to do so till Christ comes.

Milton, Ulster Co., N. Y.

From Bro. J. W. N.

BRO. WENDELL:—In these hard times, at this late hour, I have made out to get a dollar to renew my subscription for the Crisis. I like the Crisis much. Think it is one of the best religious papers in the land. May God grant that it may afford meat to the household, which may serve to build them up in the most holy faith. And may its editor, while he may labor to water the reader, be watered also himself.

Sandwich, N. H., Sept. 22d, '61.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

Important from Washington.

Washington, Sept. 29. During last week it was so frequently reported from day to day that our troops had taken possesion of Munson's Hill, that when, last night, this long predicted event took place, it found few believers among those least excited by sensation reports. A personal visit, however, puts the fact beyond doubt. The American flag now floats there in place of that of the rebels. Detachments from Generals Richardson, Keyes, and Wadsworth's brigades, and also from Gen. Franklin's division, now occupy Munson's Hill under command of Col. Ferry, of the Michigan 5th Regiment.

Early this morning, the pickets from Gen. Smith's division advanced to, and now occupy Falls Church. Neither this nor the foregoing movement met with any opposition whatever, as the rebel army had on Friday night retired from the whole line of their positions on the line of Washington. Upton's Hill, this side of Falls Church, is necessarily included among the points now held by the Federal forces.

The works of the enemy at the places they have abandoned were, in a military point of view, almost worthless, being nothing more than rifle pits of very common construction. The positions on Murray's and Munson's Hill afforded the rebels an unobstructed view of all our fortificatians and other defenses. The appearance of the ground deserted by them indicated that they were deficient in those arrangements which serve to make camp life comfortable, having no tents, but merely shelters rudely constructed. There were no signs to show that they had ever mounted any guns. Our troops are now so employed as to show that they do not merely intend temporarily to occupy their present position.

The advance of Gen. Smith on Falls Church from the Chain Bridge was accompanied by events of the most deplorable character. Having passed Vanderwerken's and Vanderberg's houses on their way to the former place, and when about half a mile from it, by some unaccountable blunder, Col. Owen's Irish Philadelphia Regiment, in the darkness of the night, mistaking for rebels Capt. Mott's battery, which was in advance, sustained by Gen. Baker's California Regiment, Baxter's Philadelphia Zouaves, and Col. Friedman's cavalry, fired a full volley into the troops last mentioned, killing and wounding a large number. The California regiment, not knowing whence the firing came, returned it with marked effect. The horses attached to Mott's battery became unmanageable, and the tongues of the caissons were broken, owing to the narrowness of the road. Lieut. Bryant having command of the first section, ordered the guns to be loaded with grape and cannister and soon had them in range to rake the supposed enemy, when word was sent to him that he was in the company of friends. All was excitement, and a long time elapsed before the actual condition of affairs was ascertained and confidence re-established.

Many conflicting stories prevail as to the parties on whom the blame should rest, but Gen. Smith immediately ordered Col. Owen's regiment to fall back to camp.

The killed were all buried to-day, near their encampments, with military honors, while the wounded were removed to the hospitals, in Georgetown, principally, where they are receiving the best attentions.

There are reports of others having been killed, but no positive information has so far been obtained concerning them.

The conduct of the Federal troops to-day while occupying the grounds recently vacated by the enemy, resulted in the burning of property to the amount of from $30.000 to $40.000, including houses with their contents, but which were untenanted. No distinction was made as to the political character of their owners. These wanton acts will doubtless undergo investigation by the military authorities, as they were strongly condemned by General McClellan, who went over to the Virginia side at an early hour to-day, visiting the various localities recently vacated by the rebels.

A private was summarily shot to-day by his superior officer, for insubordination, in refusing to perform duty.

A foraging expedition started this morning from Gen. Franklin's division, consisting of infantry, cavalry and artillery in strong force. They proceeded to Edsell's Hill, on the Orange and Alexandria railroad, eight miles from Alexandria. As they advanced beyond our picket lines the rebels retired to Springfield Station, a mile and a half beyond Edsell's Hill. From this hill, which our forces temporarily occupied, detachments went in various directions for forage. A fine view of the surrounding country was afforded, but no breastworks or new constructions of the enemy could be seen. The object of the expedition was successful, and large quantities of hay, corn and oats were transported to the camp. Not a gun was fired on either side during these proceedings. The party did not return till late this afternoon.

A company to-day visited the Mount Vernon estate of the late John A. Washington, recently killed in Western Virginia, and brought away about 800 bushels of wheat, nearly 500 bushels of oats, and 75 barrels of fish, all of which has been stored in the Commissary's Department at Alexandria.

New York, Sept. 29. John Clark, of Boston, Captain in the Commisary Department, has been sent to Hatteras for duty by Gen. Wool.

New York, Sept. 29. The gun boats Rhode Island and Connecticut arrived from Fort Pickens last night. The pirate Judith, mounting four 42-pounders and a long pivot gun, was captured and burned on the 14th inst. by an expedition from the frigate Colorado, under Lieut. Russell. The Judith was anchored near the Pensacola Navy Yard, and after a sharp engagement she was set on fire and destroyed.

FROM KENTUCKY.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 28. Hon. Horace Mayuard of Tennessee is at Frankfort.

Agents are now stationed along the Ohio river, to prevent the smuggling of arms into Kentucky.

The Bulletin says 500 soldiers from Terra Haute, Indiana, have gone up Green river, Kentucky, and taken possession of locks Nos. 1 and 3. One shot was fired at them, which was returned, killing their assailant. Many Union families have fled to Evansville from the Green river country.

It is reported that some of Gen. Buckner's men attacked the Union camp on Mud river, forty miles from Bowling Green, under Col. Hawkins. The rebels were badly whipped. The Union men are flocking to Col. Hawkins from all directions with shot guns and rifles.

FROM GEN. BANKS' DIVISION.

It is believed that Gen. Peck of New York, a West-Pointer, will take command of the First Brigade of Gen. Bank's division. Col. Donnelly, of the New York 28th, is acting commander at present.

Col. Biddles' regiment and the Kane rifles left this morning to join Gen. McCall's division near Washington.

Strong rebel pickets frequently make their appearance near the Point of Rocks opposite Col. Geary's command. Last Saturday morning fifteen were seen to leave the island below the ruins of the bridge, just before daylight.

This island comprises several acres of dense foliage. It is separated from Virginia by a narrow channel. Col. Geary thinks they are in the habit of coming over there every night.

On Friday night the rebels made a demonstration as if they would cross at the Point of Rocks. Col. Geary set a trap to catch them if they carried out their supposed plan. While awaiting their movements he discovered that signals were making at a farmer's house on the Maryland shore, the inmates of which were secured and held. The rebel force did not attempt to cross.

Last week Capt. Pardee, of Company A, Geary's regiment, made an excursion over the river opposite Berlin, securing three prisoners, eight horses and ten head of cattle.

FROM MISSOURI.

St. Louis, Sept. 28th. To our knowledge Gen. Price has not started any portion of his forces toward this direction. Capt. Foster was informed, on the morning after the surrender of Lexington, by a rebel Quartermaster, that he had issued that day 34,000 rations, and he thinks the force has since that been increased to additions from the country to about 42,000. Capt. Foster represents that men were flocking in from all quarters to join the force of Gen. Price. He had heard nothing definite in regard to the whereabouts of Ben. McCulloch. The rebels told him that McCulloch's force was from 10 to 15,000 men. The officers think that Ben. McCulloch is moving on towards Jefferson City.

The troops of Price had devasted the country for a circuit of over twenty miles. Every barn, field and mill had been cleared of their contents. The fields that were a few days ago covered with ripe grain, are now as bare as a desert. The dwellings that were filled with the comforts and necessaries of life, have been stripped of everything contained in them. Money, silver ware, clothing, bedding, in fact every thing has been seized and the owners insulted.

Threats have been made against the lives of all Union men, as well as against all those who have remonstrated against these lawless proceedings.

A few members of Jackson's legislature had assembled in the town and passed an ordinance of secession, and when our informant left, they were discussing an act providing for the confiscation of the property of all persons opposed to the Southern Confederacy. Other acts of a very severe character were also under consideration.

All the Federal officers taken prisoners have now left Lexington except Col. Mulligan, who remains there to settle up some business affairs. He is not wounded as reported.

FROM KANSAS.

Leavenworth, Sept. 28. Reports from a reliable source from Gen. Lane's command, say that after his successful engagement with the rebels at Papinsville, he made a forced march on Osceola and succeeded in capturing a large supply train left by Generals Rains and Price, together with $100,000 in money. The command of Gen. Lane is now supposed to be on its way north to join Gen. Sturgis.

The Kansas city reports of Ben. McCulloch's being in the vicinity of Fort Scott with a large force are still adhered to. Nothing definite, however, is given in regard to his movements.

Gen. Sturgis, with parts of the 27th and 29th Ohio Regiments, arrived here last night on the steamer Masons from Liberty.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

The enlistment of troops for the five regiments last called for, goes on moderately well. The pay of soldiers being so much below the California wages, it seems to discourage volunteering at this time, when the State is prospering, and the people well employed, still the number of volunteers now called for will be obtained.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 30. A special dispatch from Cairo says the rebels attempted to burn the bridge a mile from Norfolk this morning, but were repulsed by Capt. Noleman's cavalry. Three rebels were killed at the first volley, and others were killed and wounded afterwards. Only one of our men was wounded.

An avowed rebel says he saw Pillow in Kentucky on Saturday, marching on Paducah, with 27,000 men, that Jeff. Thompson's movements are feints to draw attention from that quarter.

It was reported at Paducah yesterday that Pillow had left Columbus to join the troops marching on Paducha from Tennessee, their united force being 40,000.

A special dispatch to the Tribune, from Quincy, says that while there is much speculation concerning the strength of the two armies about to meet at Lexington, it may be interesting to state that a letter was received to-day from Huntsville, Mo., dated the 27th, which expresses the confident opinion, that Fremont will be defeated unless he can bring 50,000 men against Price. It says: "This county is filled with armed men, marching day and night to reinforce Price." The writer is satisfied that Mulligan's surrender added 25,000 men to Price's strength.

St. Joseph, Mo., Sept. 30. Col. Smith commanding this point, has advices that 10,000 rebels would encamp at Agency Ford, fourteen miles below this city to-night. Scouts have been sent in that direction, and are expected to-night. The available Federal force there does not exceed 700 men.

Philadelphia, Sept. 30. The Bulletin's special Washington's dispatch says the rebels appeared in force on the Potomac, opposite Great Falls, and opened a battery of six pieces on Gen. McCall's division. Our batteries replied and the rebels dispersed. None were hurt on our side. The Federal troops took possession of Lewinsville this morning, the rebels retiring after a slight skirmish.

Toronto, Canada, Sept. 30. A number of volunteers left Hamilton to-day to join Col. Rankin's regiment of Lancers at Detroit. It is reported that a bounty is paid and a free passage to Detroit given the men.

Married.

At Pine Avenue, Sept. 5th, by Eld. J. Parry, Eld. JUDSON AUSTIN to LOTTIE, daughter of the officiating Elder.

Notices, &c.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times, and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

EXPLANATION.—"A. C. Association" means the ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, and "C. P. Society" means CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Notice.

There will be a General Conference in Orrington, commencing Oct. 10th, and continuing over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as the Lord will. Brethren G. W. Brown and John Billings will be present. Other preaching brethren are expected. Provision will be made for all who are pleased to come to the meeting. There appears to be quite an interest at Orrington—as much so as there has been since '43.

In behalf of the brethren,

F. H. SMITH.

Advent Christian Association.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Board of Managers of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester Tuesday, Oct. 15th, at 9 o'clock, A. M.

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

Notice.

Wm. J. Ripley will hold a meeting at Wrightville, Ct., Sunday, Oct 13th. Will some Bro. meet him at the depot on the down train from Winsted Saturday?

C. GOODRICH.

Notice.

GEO. STORRS, of New York, owing to the extreme pressure of present circumstances, offers the herein after named works at fifty per cent. discount to any person, or persons, sending him TEN DOLLARS or upwards, if applied for soon. The works are—

Six Sermons, revised and enlarged edition: bound, 50 cts.; in paper covers, 30 cts.

The Watch Tower: or, Man in Death, in paper covers........20 cents.

Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again—in paper covers..........20 cts.

Life only in Christ: a bound volume, including each of the above works, and a discourse on the Atonement..........$1.00

The Discussion with Prof. Mattison—in paper covers..........30 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition—bound, 75 cts.; paper covers, 40 cents.

Man's Destiny: A Review of Prof. Post—in paper covers..........30 cts.

Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney: Part II.—in paper covers..........30 cts.

Our Israelitish Origin—paper covers..........50 cts.

Man's Nature and Destiny: A Sermon, by Geo. Storrs—paper covers..........5 cts.

Bible Examiner for 1860, bound..........$1.50

Of this last work there are but some thirty copies left.

All remittances and orders, sent by mail, must be addressed—GEO. STORRS, Box 4658, New York. Sent by private hands, they may be left with Geo. W. Young, (up stairs) 35 Ann Street, (corner of Nassau.)

Conference at No. Dana, Mass.

The Lord willing, there will be a Conference at North Dana, Mass. to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 9th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over Sunday. Brn. Champlin and Otis are expected to assist in preaching the word. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend. This is mostly a new field. No meeting of the kind has ever been held here. Board and horse keeping on reasonable terms for those who wish. Come, brethren and sisters, we will make you as comfortable as we can. Come in the name of the good Lord, with the expectation of seeing his power displayed in the conversion of sinners and the return of backsliders. Come one, come all. We expect to have a good meeting in the name of the Lord.

Eld. GEO. A. SPENCER.

N. B. The above does not exclude any of the preaching brethren who may desire to come. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer. G. A. S.

Conference.

The next Western Quarterly Conference in the State of Maine will be held in Kenduskeag, Oct. 10th, 1861. A good representative of the brethren within the bounds of this Conference is desired. The ministering brethren, especially, will be present. Brethren and sisters, we need to be awake to the times in which we live, and the duties of these times. Therefore, come up to this quarterly meeting in the name and spirit of the Lord.

By order of Conference, O. R. FASSETT.

Notice.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will meet in Wayne, Thursday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Oct. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. The meeting will be held in a school-house, about one mile west of Wayne village, near Bro. Cyrus Bartlett's. Brethren will call on him for direction. We hope the Lord's laborers will be there. I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollar's worth; for twelve dollars, four dollar's worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

R. WENDELL, per order of Publishing Committee.

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.
English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we get them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line; but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1 25; postage 14 cts.
Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1.50; postage 15 cts.
Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.63; postage 15 cts.
Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50; postage 21 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.
Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75; postage 26 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50; postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

I shall preach at Whitefield Meeting House, North Whitefield, Me., Saturday, Oct. 5th and Sabbath, Oct. 6th. Commence Saturday, at 10 o'clock, A. M., as arranged by Eld. S. K. Partridge.

J. V. HIMES.

Milo, Me., (where the brethren may appoint,) Oct. 13th. THOMAS SMITH.

South Sebec, where Joshua Livermore may appoint..........Sunday, Oct. 13th.

[The foregoing appointment was received with no name appended.—ED.]

Morris, Ct..........Oct. 6th.
South Windsor, Ct..........Oct. 13th.
Concord, N. H..........Oct. 27th.

C. GOODRICH.

If the Lord will, Bro. Renselier Fenn will preach at the Pine Tree School House, at 10 1-2 A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., on Sunday, Oct. 13th.

Lynn..........Sunday, Oct. 6th.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Portland, Me..........Sundays Oct. 13th and 20th.

L. BOUTELL.

Lake Village, N. H..........Sunday, Oct. 6th.
Kennebunkport, Me..........Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Portsmouth, N. H..........Sunday, Oct. 20th.

J. COUCH.

Morris, Ct..........Oct. 8th.
Plymouth Hollow..........Oct. 9th.
Bristol..........Oct. 10th.
Southbridge, Mass..........Oct. 13th.

S. B. MUNN.

Athol..........Oct. 6th.

D. M. BEACH.

North Adams, Mass., commencing Oct. 7th and continuing over the Sabbath.

South Adams, meetings commencing Oct. 17th and continuing over the Sabbath.

GEO. A. OTIS.

Yarmouth..........Sunday, Oct. 6.

J. S. WHITE.

Stark..........Oct. 6th.

D. A. JONES.

Portland..........Oct. 6.
Yarmouth..........Oct. 13.

If supplied, please notify me in season to comply with other requests. The two last weeks in Oct. not engaged. HIRAM MUNGER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Thomas Smith's P. O. address will, in future, be Bangor, Me.

W. Sheldon's P. O. address is now changed from Springville, Wis., to Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis.

Mrs. L. M. Plummer: All right—money received 27th August.

J. B. Mooney: We understand that the next No. of Voice of the Prophets will be ready in two weeks from now.

Cash Receipts.

W F Smith 314, 16 cts.; G H Fisher 325, 50 cts.; Sab. Scott 339, $1.76.

S Mason 247, Hy. Hill 327, I T Neal 338, A M Humphreville 325, D L Chase 338, J B Richardson 312, G W Wiggin 338, W H Simmons 334, C M Smith 336, C Stratton 286, Jno. Brackett 312, C B Hall 323, D Rowell 322, S G Kimball 315, P Rockwood 334, Mrs. L Bills 338, Sol. Hale 330, J E Hyde 294, B Herrick 351, Jacob Baker 312, Abba White 338, E M Hogan 338, D Newton 338, J B Mooney 338, Jon. Morrell, Jr., 338, And. Vanderipe 325, Mrs. Fabeau 338, J. Conrad 338, Edwin Miller 338, J D Stone 336, O Clapp 338, Dr. M B Richardson 286, J H Langley 338, S N Langley 338,—$1.00 each.

C C Dow 286, Chs. Piper 325, E D Hutchinson 334, J W Piper 312, Amos Rowe 338, D Devereux 364, H H Hemenway (old acct.) 158, C C Wist 346, C Atherton 338, S F Mudgett 319, Wm. Beatty 338, Wm. McSherry 338, Ph. White, 2 copies, 310, L Reimer 338, A S Kelly 338,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

Eld. J. Hemenway $14.11, C Atherton 5 cts, Eld. L Scott $3.34, O D Woodruff 13 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of Immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $1 00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 35 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 188 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 259 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $6.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 3 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms; or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. [illegible], No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. White, Warwick, R. I.:— [illegible]

[illegible]

troublesome times. It shows that we, as Second Adventists, are not the only people that are looking for the Saviour to come soon and deliver all his people from all them troubles. But others are waking up to the same glorious truths, and proclaiming them. I hope you will procure that paper, and publish it in the Crisis, for the benefit of its readers. It may be the means of waking up a great many who are now almost asleep, as it were, on the great and glorious subject of the speedy coming of Christ. OTIS IRISH.

New Bedford, Sept. 25th, '61.

For the Crisis.

Note from Elder Himes.

NOTICE.—To all who may wish conferences and protracted meetings with a view to build up and extend the Advent cause.

Brethren, by the blessing of God, my health is restored, and I am able to preach and labor as in former times, for the building up of the churches, and the salvation of souls. I am ready to "go out quickly into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in," in obedience to the command of the divine Master. The supper is ready. Luke 14: 15–24. The Master is coming very soon, and what we do for the church and the world must be done quickly. So soon as the church in Boston can get a supply, I shall devote myself wholly to the missionary work. In the meantime, if my labors are wanted in any part of the vineyard, where I can work without embarassment, I shall be glad to hear. Address Eld. J. V. HIMES.

Boston, Sept. 30, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Notice.

BRO. WENDELL:—Please insert the following:—

"DROWNED.—Mr. Joseph Kennedy, son of Elder John Kennedy, of Sommerville, Me., a private in Company H., Capt. J. F. Milliken, Eighth Maine regiment, left Augusta Sept. 10th, and was drowned the 12th, while bathing, in New York. Those in charge obtained a coffin, sent the body to Augusta, and on the 14th a squad of soldiers conveyed it to his father's residence in Sommerville. On the 15th, a discourse was preached by Eld. N. F. Nason, of North Searsport, to a large number, who met to drop a tear of sympathy over the grave of one that was respected. Eld. K. is very grateful to Government for its kindness. May the afflicted family and acquaintances of the deceased (who was about thirty years old) be led to see the importance of entire trust in that God who notices even so small an event as the fall of a sparrow. J. S. RICHARDS.

Belmont, Me., Sept. 17, 1861."

Eld. Kennedy has lately had heavy trials. His barn was burned, with seven tons of hay, wagon, sleigh and harness. He has one son in the army, if living. He feels like Jacob. Joseph is not, Simeon is not. May God bless Bro. and Sr. Kennedy in their old age. N. F. N.

For the Crisis.

Reply to G. W. Stetson.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—In reply to the question of Bro. G. W. Stetson, I remark, that I understand that the union of the pre-existent Spirit, (denominated the Son of God, Rom. 1: 4,) with the body prepared him, qualified or capacitated him for that actual participation of "our feelings and infirmities," which constituted him a faithful High Priest, whose offering and mediation were acceptable to God.

The fact that the divine Spirit of the Son of God existed anterior and independently of the body prepared him, involves no proof that mere human spirits can exist independently of the body. The Son of God was a peculiar being. Although, in his incarnate state of humiliation, he "was made like unto his brethren"; in his original "begotten" divine nature, he was made "much better than the angels," Heb. 1: 4, whose nature is superior to ours. Heb. 2: 7.

As the Son of God, in his divine nature, was "begotten of the Father," John 1: 14, his declaration, "I live by the Father," John 6: 58, must be understood as referring to his highest nature, and consequently, the words, "thou shalt make his soul (life) an offering for sin," Isa. 53: 10, may be referred to the same nature. I understand that it was the voluntary offering of the highest and entire life of the Son of God, in conformity with the will of the Father, in connection with his general obedience, which constituted an adequate "propitiation for the sins of the whole world"; so that God might be just and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." 1 John 2: 2; Rom. 3: 26. It appears to me, that both the Trinitarian and simple Humanitarian theories are open to the serious charge of diminishing the efficacy of the great sacrifice, by limiting the actual death of the Son of God to simple humanity. I understand that my brother S. is not an advocate of either of these theories. HENRY GREW.

Correspondence.

From Sister M. A. Belding.

BRO. WENDELL:—Feeling encouraged from week to week, while reading the letters in the Crisis from the dear children scattered abroad, I felt that I wanted to bring in my testimony with them, thinking perhaps it might cheer some lone pilgrim on his way to the kingdom. Truly we have everything to encourage us; to suffer if need be; for the race is almost run—redemption is nigh. The signs proclaim that Jesus is near. Then let us lift up our heads and rejoice. I am glad that I have to suffer, for the rest will be the more glorious; it makes Jesus more precious; and all I ask is, that I may have grace given me to endure it. I believe the perils of the last days are around us, and if we do not watch and be sober, we shall be overcome by them. Iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold; but the promise is to them that endure to the end. O, how cheering the thought, that if faithful a little while longer, Jesus will come and take us to himself, that where he is we may be also. Then sorrow's tear will no more flow, and the days of parting will be gone forever. Here we meet with those we love, but the parting time comes, and we have to bid them adieu, perhaps some of them never to meet again in this life; but there there will be no more parting, no more sorrow, for the former things will be passed away. My prayer is, that we may all be ready when Jesus comes, to hear him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." M. A. B.

South Windsor, Sept. 17, '61.

From Bro. W. Sweet.

BRO. WENDELL:—I hold meetings on Sundays, and sometimes week days, and intend soon to commence evening meetings. I am willing to do all I can for my Master's cause. I love God and the glorious appearing of his Son. I love the Holy Spirit of God, which is sent into the world to "reprove the world of sin," and to guide the saints into all truth, by inspiring the holy apostles to understand how to teach the word, and write God's truths plain, so as to be understood by all who love the truth. It is this alone that can purify our souls—that can sanctify, seal and save us in the day of the Lord Jesus. "My words," says Jesus, "they are spirit, and they are life." We are commanded to try all things by the word of God. "Preach the word in season and out of season," "for the time will come they (ungodly, proud professors and sinners) will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts, shall they heap to themselves teachers" of "smooth things," to please the ear and gain the applause of wicked men.

My brethren in the ministry, we must stand on the sure rock—Christ, and contend earnestly for the "faith once delivered to the saints." We must hold out and endure to the end.

From Sr. Susan F. Mudgett.

BRO. WENDELL:—Enclosed I send you two dollars, towards paying what I owe for the Crisis. Please inform me through the paper the amount that is still your due, for my prayer is that God will give me the means to pay all I owe. The Crisis must be had, especially since we have arrived at the time which we have so long been expecting, when all the "kingdoms of the earth are being broken" to pieces, to give place to the peaceful reign of "Prince Emmanuel." We need no further evidence to assure our hearts of the fact that that kingdom is about to be set up, for every thing tells us plainly it is even so. O for a preparation to hail with joy the descending King! Yours, believing fully that Jesus is just about taking to himself his great power to reign King over all the earth.

Kenduskeag, Me., Aug. 26.

From Bro. O. D. Woodruff.

BRO. WENDELL:—Enclosed I send 13 cts. in stamps, and wish you would send me a copy of F. H. Berick's "Disquisition on the Prophecies" for the same. We are trying to hold on till Jesus comes, and it requires a constant watching and praying, and trust in God, to live soberly, righteously and godly at this time. But those who take heed to the sure word of prophecy, know that their redemption draweth nigh; and we can truly lift up our heads and rejoice. But a little while and deliverance will come. Yes, He whose right it is will take the kingdom, and sit on the throne of His glory. Then will the faithful receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. Bro. Wendell, pray for us, that we may hold on till Jesus comes, and be numbered with the saints of the Most High. We are well, and hope your family are. Our love to you and yours.

From Bro. W. Sheldon.

BRO. WENDELL:—Permit me to inform my friends in the West concerning my present whereabouts in the field of battle. For the present, my head quarters will be Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis. Merrimack is a pleasant village, on the banks of the Wisconsin river, twenty-five miles from Madison City. On moving away from Springville, I had the pleasure of knowing that I had lost no friends during my stay there, excepting those whom death had dragged to the tomb. If there are scattered friends near this place whom I have not yet found out, please write me where you are.

Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis., Sept. 20.

From Bro. N. F. Nason.

BRO. WENDELL:—My health is not good. I cannot do what I would be glad to, but do all I can. The last three Sundays I spent in China, Whitefield and Windsor. I attended at Sommerville the funeral of Bro. Kennedy's son. Evening at Week' Mills, China. God speed the truth. Love to all the saints still loving and longing for the appearing of Jesus Christ.

North Searsport, Me., Sept. 22d.

From Bro. Charles Atherton.

BRO. WENDELL:—You will find enclosed two dollars for the Crisis—one for the past and one for the present number. As for the Crisis, I prize it next to the Bible. It sets forth the truths of the Bible as I understand them. I have talked with several about these truths, and they say that I have not got the Spirit of Christ; but I know that I have. Thanks be to God, my hope grows brighter and brighter, and may it continue to do so till Christ comes.

Milton, Ulster Co., N. Y.

From Bro. J. W. N.

BRO. WENDELL:—In these hard times, at this late hour, I have made out to get a dollar to renew my subscription for the Crisis. I like the Crisis much. Think it is one of the best religious papers in the land. May God grant that it may afford meat to the household, which may serve to build them up in the most holy faith. And may its editor, while he may labor to water the reader, be watered also himself.

Sandwich, N. H., Sept. 22d, '61.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

Important from Washington.

Washington, Sept. 29 During last week it was so frequently reported from day to day that our troops had taken possesion of Munson's Hill, that when, last night, this long predicted event took place, it found few believers among those least excited by sensation reports. A personal visit, however, puts the fact beyond doubt. The American flag now floats there in place of that of the rebels. Detachments from Generals Richardson, Keyes, and Wadsworth's brigades, and also from Gen. Franklin's division, now occupy Munson's Hill under command of Col. Ferry, of the Michigan 5th Regiment.

Early this morning, the pickets from Gen. Smith's division advanced to, and now occupy Falls Church. Neither this nor the foregoing movement met with any opposition whatever, as the rebel army had on Friday night retired from the whole line of their positions on the line of Washington. Upton's Hill, this side of Falls Church, is necessarily included among the points now held by the Federal forces.

The works of the enemy at the places they have abandoned were, in a military point of view, almost worthless, being nothing more than rifle pits of very common construction. The positions on Murray's and Munson's Hill afforded the rebels an unobstructed view of all our fortifications and other defenses. The appearance of the ground deserted by them indicated that they were deficient in those arrangements which serve to make camp life comfortable, having no tents, but merely shelters rudely constructed. There were no signs to show that they had ever mounted any guns. Our troops are now so employed as to show that they do not merely intend temporarily to occupy their present position.

The advance of Gen. Smith on Falls Church from the Chain Bridge was accompanied by events of the most deplorable character. Having passed Vanderwerken's and Vanderberg's houses on their way to the former place, and when about half a mile from it, by some unaccountable blunder, Col. Owen's Irish Philadelphia Regiment, in the darkness of the night, mistaking for rebels Capt. Mott's battery, which was in advance, sustained by Gen. Baker's California Regiment, Baxter's Philadelphia Zouaves, and Col. Friedman's cavalry, fired a full volley into the troops last mentioned, killing and wounding a large number. The California regiment, not knowing whence the firing came, returned it with marked effect. The horses attached to Mott's battery became unmanageable, and the tongues of the caissons were broken, owing to the narrowness of the road. Lieut. Bryant having command of the first section, ordered the guns to be loaded with grape and cannister and soon had them in range to rake the supposed enemy, when word was sent to him that he was in the company of friends. All was excitement, and a long time elapsed before the actual condition of affairs was ascertained and confidence re-established.

Many conflicting stories prevail as to the parties on whom the blame should rest, but Gen. Smith immediately ordered Col. Owen's regiment to fall back to camp.

The killed were all buried to-day, near their encampments, with military honors, while the wounded were removed to the hospitals, in Georgetown, principally, where they are receiving the best attentions.

There are reports of others having been killed, but no positive information has so far been obtained concerning them.

The conduct of the Federal troops to-day while occupying the grounds recently vacated by the enemy, resulted in the burning of property to the amount of from $30.000 to $40.000, including houses with their contents, but which were untenanted. No distinction was made as to the political character of their owners. These wanton acts will doubtless undergo investigation by the military authorities, as they were strongly condemned by General McClellan, who went over to the Virginia side at an early hour to-day, visiting the various localities recently vacated by the rebels.

A private was summarily shot to-day by his superior officer, for insubordination, in refusing to perform duty.

A foraging expedition started this morning from Gen. Franklin's division, consisting of infantry, cavalry and artillery in strong force. They proceeded to Edsell's Hill, on the Orange and Alexandria railroad, eight miles from Alexandria. As they advanced beyond our picket lines the rebels retired to Springfield Station, a mile and a half beyond Edsell's Hill. From this hill, which our forces temporarily occupied, detachments went in various directions for forage. A fine view of the surrounding country was afforded, but no breastworks or new constructions of the enemy could be seen. The object of the expedition was successful, and large quantities of hay, corn and oats were transported to the camp. Not a gun was fired on either side during these proceeding. The party did not return till late this afternoon.

A company to-day visited the Mount Vernon estate of the late John A. Washington, recently killed in Western Virginia, and brought away about 800 bushels of wheat, nearly 500 bushels of oats, and 75 barrels of fish, all of which has been stored in the Commissary's Department at Alexandria.

New York, Sept. 29. John Clark, of Boston, Captain in the Commissary Department, has been sent to Hatteras for duty by Gen. Wool.

New York, Sept. 29. The gun boats Rhode Island and Connecticut arrived from Fort Pickens last night. The pirate Judith, mounting four 42-pounders and a long pivot gun, was capturned and burned on the 14th inst. by an expedition from the frigate Colorado, under Lieut. Russell. The Judith was anchored near the Pensacolo Navy Yard, and after a sharp engagement she was set on fire and destroyed.

FROM KENTUCKY.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 28. Hon. Horace Mayuard of Tennessee is at Frankfort.

Agents are now stationed along the Ohio river, to prevent the smuggling of arms into Kentucky.

The Bulletin says 500 soldiers from Terra Haute, Indiana, have gone up Green river, Kentucky, and taken possession of locks Nos. 1 and 3. One shot was fired at them, which was returned, killing their assailant. Many Union families have fled to Evansville from the Green river country.

It is reported that some of Gen. Buckner's men attacked the Union camp on Mud river, forty miles from Bowling Green, under Col. Hawkins. The rebels were badly whipped. The Union men are flocking to Col. Hawkins from all directions with shot guns and rifles.

FROM GEN. BANKS' DIVISION.

It is believed that Gen. Peck of New York, a West-Pointer, will take command of the First Brigade of Gen. Bank's division. Col. Donnelly, of the New York 28th, is acting commander at present.

Col. Biddles' regiment and the Kane rifles left this morning to join Gen. McCall's division near Washington.

Strong rebel pickets frequently make their appearance near the Point of Rocks opposite Col. Geary's command. Last Saturday morning fifteen were seen to leave the island below the ruins of the bridge, just before daylight.

This island comprises several acres of dense foliage. It is separated from Virginia by a narrow channel. Col. Geary thinks they are in the habit of coming over there every night.

On Friday night the rebels made a demonstration as if they would cross at the Point of Rocks. Col. Geary set a trap to catch them if they carried out their supposed plan. While awaiting their movements he discovered that signals were making at a farmer's house on the Maryland shore, the inmates of which were secured and held. The rebel force did not attempt to cross.

Last week Capt. Pardee, of Company A, Geary's regiment, made an excursion over the river opposite Berlin, securing three prisoners, eight horses and ten head of cattle.

FROM MISSOURI.

St. Louis, Sept. 28th. To our knowledge Gen. Price has not started any portion of his forces toward this direction. Capt. Foster was informed, on the morning after the surrender of Lexington, by a rebel Quartermaster, that he had issued that day 34,000 rations, and he thinks the force has since that been increased to additions from the country to about 42,000. Capt. Foster represents that men were flocking in from all quarters to join the force of Gen. Price. He had heard nothing definite in regard to the whereabouts of Ben. McCulloch. The rebels told him that McCulloch's force was from 10 to 15,000 men. The officers think that Ben. McCulloch is moving on towards Jefferson City.

The troops of Price had devasted the country for a circuit of over twenty miles. Every barn, field and mill had been cleared of their contents. The fields that were a few days ago covered with ripe grain, are now as bare as a desert. The dwellings that were filled with the comforts and necessaries of life, have been stripped of everything contained in them. Money, silver ware, clothing, bedding, in fact every thing has been seized and the owners insulted.

Threats have been made against the lives of all Union men, as well as against all those who have remonstrated against these lawless proceedings.

A few members of Jackson's legislature had assembled in the town and passed an ordinance of secession, and when our informant left, they were discussing an act providing for the confiscation of the property of all persons opposed to the Southern Confederacy. Other acts of a very severe character were also under consideration.

All the Federal officers taken prisoners have now left Lexington except Col. Mulligan, who remains there to settle up some business affairs. He is not wounded as reported.

FROM KANSAS.

Leavenworth, Sept. 28. Reports from a reliable source from Gen. Lane's command, say that after his successful engagement with the rebels at Papinsville, he made a forced march on Osceola and succeeded in capturing a large supply train left by Generals Rains and Price, together with $100,000 in money. The command of Gen. Lane is now supposed to be on its way north to join Gen. Sturgis.

The Kansas city reports of Ben. McCulloch's being in the vicinity of Fort Scott with a large force are still adhered to. Nothing definite, however, is given in regard to his movements.

Gen. Sturgis, with parts of the 27th and 29th Ohio Regiments, arrived here last night on the steamer Masora from Liberty.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

The enlistment of troops for the five regiments last called for, goes on moderately well. The pay of soldiers being so much below the California wages, it seems to discourage volunteering at this time, when the State is prospering, and the people well employed, still the number of volunteers now called for will be obtained.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 30. A special dispatch from Cairo says the rebels attempted to burn the bridge a mile from Norfolk this morning, but were repulsed by Capt. Noleman's cavalry. Three rebels were killed at the first volley, and others were killed and wounded afterwards. Only one of our men was wounded.

An avowed rebel says he saw Pillow in Kentucky on Saturday, marching on Paducah, with 27,000 men, that Jeff. Thompson's movements are feints to draw attention from that quarter.

It was reported at Paducah yesterday that Pillow had left Columbus to join the troops marching on Paducha from Tennessee, their united force being 40,000.

A special dispatch to the Tribune, from Quincy, says that while there is much speculation concerning the strength of the two armies about to meet at Lexington, it may be interesting to state that a letter was received to-day from Huntsville, Mo., dated the 27th, which expresses the confident opinion, that Fremont will be defeated unless he can bring 50,000 men against Price. It says: "This county is filled with armed men, marching day and night to reinforce Price." The writer is satisfied that Mulligan's surrender added 25,000 men to Price's strength.

St. Joseph, Mo., Sept. 30. Col. Smith commanding this point, has advices that 10,000 rebels would encamp at Agency Ford, fourteen miles below this city tonight. Scouts have been sent in that direction, and are expected to-night. The available Federal force there does not exceed 700 men.

Philadelphia, Sept. 30. The Bulletin's special Washington's dispatch says the rebels appeared in force on the Potomac, opposite Great Falls, and opened a battery of six pieces on Gen. McCall's division. Our batteries replied and the rebels dispersed. None were hurt on our side. The Federal troops took possession of Lewinsville this morning, the rebels retiring after a slight skirmish.

Toronto, Canada, Sept. 30. A number of volunteers left Hamilton to-day to join Col. Rankin's regiment of Lancers at Detroit. It is reported that a bounty is paid and a free passage to Detroit given the men.

Married.

At Pine Avenue, Sept. 5th, by Eld. J. Parry, Eld. JUDSON AUSTIN to LOTTIE, daughter of the officiating Elder.

Notices, &c.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times, and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

EXPLANATION.—"A. C. Association" means the ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, and "C. P. Society" means CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY. RUFUS WENDELL.

Notice.

There will be a General Conference in Orrington, commencing Oct. 10th, and continuing over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as the Lord will. Brethren G. W. Brown and John Billings will be present. Other preaching brethren are expected. Provision will be made for all who are pleased to come to the meeting. There appears to be quite an interest at Orrington—as much so as there has been since '43.

In behalf of the brethren,

F. H. SMITH.

Advent Christian Association.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Board of Managers of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester Tuesday, Oct. 15th, at 9 o'clock, A. M.

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

Notice.

Wm. J. Ripley will hold a meeting at Wrightville, Ct., Sunday, Oct. 13th. Will some Bro. meet him at the depot on the down train from Winsted Saturday?

C. GOODRICH.

Notice.

GEO STORRS, of New York, owing to the extreme pressure of present circumstances, offers the hereinafter named works at fifty per cent. discount to any person, or persons, sending him TEN DOLLARS or upwards, if applied for soon. The works are—

Six Sermons, revised and enlarged edition: bound, 50 cts., in paper covers, 30 cts.

The Watch Tower: or, Man in Death, in paper covers. .... 20 cents.

Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again—in paper covers. .... 20 cts.

Life only in Christ: a bound volume, including each of the above works, and a discourse on the Atonement $1.00

The Discussion with Prof. Mattison—in paper covers. .... 30 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition—bound, 75 cts.; paper covers, 40 cents.

Man's Destiny: A Review of Prof. Post—in paper covers. .... 30 cts.

Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney: Part II.—in paper covers .... 30 cts.

Our Israelitish Origin—paper covers. .... 50 cts.

Man's Nature and Destiny: A Sermon, by Geo. Storrs—paper covers .... 5 cts.

Bible Examiner for 1860, bound. $1.50

Of this last work there are but some thirty copies left.

All remittances and orders, sent by mail, must be addressed—GEO. STORRS, Box 4658, New York. Sent by private hands, they may be left with Geo. W. Young, (up stairs) 35 Ann Street, (corner of Nassau.)

Conference at No. Dana, Mass.

The Lord willing, there will be a Conference at North Dana, Mass., to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 9th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. Champlin and Otis are expected to assist in preaching the word. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend. This is mostly a new field. No meeting of the kind has ever been held here. Board and horse keeping on reasonable terms for those who wish. Come, brethren and sisters, we will make you as comfortable as we can. Come in the name of the good Lord, with the expectation of seeing his power displayed in the conversion of sinners and the return of blacksliders. Come one, come all. We expect to have a good meeting in the name of the Lord.

Eld. GEO. A. STARRETT.

N. B. The above does not exclude any of the preaching brethren who may a desire to come. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer. G. A. S.

Conference.

The next Western Quarterly Conference in the State of Maine will be held in Kennebunk, Oct. 10th, 1861. A good representative of the brethren within the bounds of this Conference is desired. The ministering brethren, especially, will be present. Brethren and sisters, we need to be awake to the times in which we live, and the duties of these times. Therefore, come up to this quarterly meeting in the name and spirit of the Lord.

By order of Conference, O. R. FASSETT.

Notice.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will meet in Wayne, Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Oct. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. The meeting will be held in a school-house, about one mile west of Wayne village, near Bro. Cyrus Bartlett's. Brethren will call on him for direction. We hope the Lord's laborers will be there. I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollar's worth; for twelve dollars, four dollar's worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

R. WENDELL, per order of Publishing Committee.

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.

English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we get them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line; but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1 25; postage 14 cts.
Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1 50; postage 15 cts.
Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.61; postage 15 cts.
Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50; postage 21 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.
Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75; postage 26 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50, postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

I shall preach at Whitefield Meeting House, North Whitefield, Me., Saturday, Oct. 5th and Sabbath, Oct. 6th. Commence Saturday, at 10 o'clock, A. M., as arranged by Eld. S. K. Partridge.

J. V. HIMES.

Milo, Me., (where the brethren may appoint,) Oct. 13th. THOMAS SMITH.

South Sebec, where Joshua Livermore may appoint .... Sunday, Oct. 13th.

[The foregoing appointment was received with no name appended.—ED.]

Morris, Ct. .... Oct. 6th.
South Windsor, Ct. .... Oct. 13th.
Concord, N. H. .... Oct. 27th.

C. GOODRICH.

If the Lord will, Bro. Renselier Fenn will preach at the Pine Tree School House, at 10 1-2 A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., on Sunday, Oct. 13th.

Lynn .... Sunday, Oct. 6th.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Portland, Me. .... Sundays Oct. 13th and 20th.

L. BOUTELL.

Lake Village, N. H. .... Sunday, Oct. 6th.
Kennebunkport, Me. .... Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Portsmouth, N. H. .... Sunday, Oct. 20th.

J. COUCH.

Morris, Ct. .... Oct. 8th.
Plymouth Hollow .... Oct. 9th.
Bristol .... Oct. 10th.
Southbridge, Mass .... Oct. 13th.

S. B. MUNN.

Athol .... Oct. 6th.

D. M. BEACH.

North Adams, Mass., commencing Oct. 7th and continuing over the Sabbath.

South Adams, meetings commencing Oct. 17th and continuing over the Sabbath.

GEO. A. OTIS.

Yarmouth. .... Sunday, Oct. 6.

J. S. WHITE.

Stark .... Oct. 6th.

D. A. JONES.

Portland. .... Oct. 6.
Yarmouth. .... Oct. 13.

If supplied, please notify me in season to comply with other requests. The two last weeks in Oct. not engaged. HIRAM MUNGER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Thomas Smith's P. O. address will, in future, be Bangor, Me.

W. Sheldon's P. O. address is now changed from Springville, Wis., to Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis.

Mrs. L. M. Plummer: All right—money received 27th August.

J. R. Mooney: We understand that the next No. of Voice of the Prophets will be ready in two weeks from now.

Cash Receipts.

W F Smith 314, 16 cts.; G H Fisher 325, 50 cts.; Sab. Scott 329, $1.76.

S Mason 247, Hy. Hill 327, I T Neal 338, A M Humphreville 325, Dl. Chase 338, J B Richardson 312, G W Wiggin 338, W H Simmons 324, O M Smith 336, C Stratton 286, Jno. Brackett 312, C B Hall 333, D Rowell 322, S G Kimball 318, P Rockwood 334, Mrs. L Bills 338, Sol. Hale 330, J R Hyde 294, B Herrick 351, Jacob Baker 312, Abba White 338, E M Hogan 338, D Newton 338, J B Mooney 338, Jon. Morrell, Jr., 338, And. Vanderipe 325, Mrs. Fabean 335, J Conrad 288, Edwin Miller 325, J D Stone 326, O Clapp 338, Dr. M B Richardson 286, J H Langley 326, S M Langley 338,—$1.00 each.

C C Dow 286, Chs. Piper 325, E D Hutchinson 334, J W Piper 312, Amos Rowe 338, D Devereaux 364, H H Hemenway (old acct.) 156, C C Wist 346, C Atherton 338, S F Mudgett 319, Wm. Beatty 338, Wm. McSherry 338, Ph. White, 2 copies, 319, L Reimer 338, A S Kelly 286,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

Eld. J. Hemenway $14.11, C Atherton 5 cts. Eld. L Scott $3.24, O D Woodruff 13 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to prepay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruahh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $1 00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—3 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 3 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms; or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 5 cts.—postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Bacon, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. White, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by [illegible]; [illegible] Bible Hell; [illegible]

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $2.00 per hundred; 3 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Selected for the Crisis.

"The Nobleman's Return."

Luke 19: 12.

Return, O Nobleman, return,
Thou hast been long away;
Thine absence, dearest Lord, we mourn—
For thy return we pray.

We long to have "thy kingdom come,"
That sin and death may cease;
Then shall "thy will on earth be done,"
And all be love and peace.

Then "war's bloodshed," with their train,
No more shall pain our eyes;
Earth shall be filled with joy again,
And songs of triumph rise.

How long shall wicked men bear rule?
Oft have the scoffers said,
"The promise will not be fulfilled
Which God to Abraham made.

'For since the Fathers fell asleep,
All things remain the same;'
The promised King of which you speak,
Will never come to reign."

For this, they will not understand
"Scoffers were once destroyed,"
When water covered all the land,
By the command of God.

Then, wicked men of every class
Were swept from off the earth;
But eight from out the wicked mass
Escaped the dreadful death.

Again thy judgments will descend
Upon the sinful race,
Who choose not Jesus for their friend,
Or seek his promised grace.

O Lord, we tremble at thy word,
For pardon, Lord, we pray;
We would escape thy judgments, Lord,
In that most fearful day."

We do believe thy coming near—
Come, Lord, we pray again;
Earth groans to see her King appear,
In righteousness to reign.

While "Israel" lift their longing eyes,
And pray, "Messiah come!"
This prayer with theirs shall ever rise,
"Blessed Nobleman, return!"

Abby A. Perry.

Scotland, Windham Co., Ct.

For the Crisis.

Our Pilgrimage.

Bro. Wendell:—We came to Williamsburg the 3d. inst.; held meetings in the Town Hall. The interest and numbers increased during the week The Methodist preacher came in on Sabbath evening, after which both preachers attended. They treated the subjects presented with candor, asking questions at the close of the meetings. We hope to meet them again. Sunday, the 9th, we spent with the brethren in Goshen; planted two, husband and wife, in the likeness of the Savior's death, with the approbation of our heavenly Father. The rebels to God's government have not been able to steal the lenses from God's light-house in Goshen.

We commenced our camp at South Hawley Thursday, the 12th, and success attended our efforts. We found the sword of the Spirit mighty to prevail against the strongholds of the enemy, and God's picket guard an ample police for our safety, and quite a saving in our finance in these hard times Our meetings in that vicinity are gaining a wide influence and a candid audience. One Baptist minister, from Charlemont, said he saw no way to escape our conclusions with regard to the near coming of Jesus. But the time came to part, and again we had to say good bye to those we love, hoping to meet again.

We left for Albany Monday. On arriving, found a pilgrim's home with Bro. Nichols. Gave the church, what seemed to be, "meat in due season," and so they constrained us to return to them again. I started down the river Tuesday morn, and, had I nothing better, I would tell you about the scenery of North river, or a boat ride down the river. I leave it for those who have lost sight of that which is much better—the river of God, seen not unfrequently by the pilgrims—eclipsing every earthly scene. But I have something better. After starting, we soon had an excellent little singer, with his accordion, to divert such as needed diverting. And then came the fiddler, and another accordion, and a harp played by a blind German, which, together, made quite attractive entertainment for the crowd. Then came on board a few Methodist, from camp meeting, so they huddled together and commenced singing their camp songs. This seemed to be an improvement on the former, still the entertainment did not stop here. When their energies, were somewhat exhausted an old Methodist preacher commenced exhorting; so I drew near the old man, while he talked of the persecutions of the Methodist when he joined them, some forty years ago. No one appeared in their behalf, and it was dangerous to attend a campmeeting then; but now it is all quiet; you can take your wife your children, or sweetheart, and be much safer on the camp ground than in Broadway, etc; and finally wound up by singing something of his own composition, prefacing its peculiar sentiment with the uncertainty of life, the certainty of death, and the importance of getting ready to die. So he brought out his hymn at length under four different heads: To the young—to the old—to the saint and sinner, the lines ending with the words;—

"Be in time, be in time."

This opened up the way, so I commenced with the same Scripture (sentiment,) and [illegible] I told them if the old man [illegible] ture—for sin made men "in time" to DIE, and obedience prepared them to live, "For his servants we were to whom we yield ourselves to obey, whether of obedience unto life, or of sin unto death." This, having produced the desired effect, I then proceeded to inquire the cause of persecution among the Methodist, to which the old man had alluded, and the great peace which that people now enjoy, even at their camp meetings. 1. They were a God-fearing people, and made no compromise with the world or the Devil. They came out from the world, did not conform to the world, but trusted in GOD, and therefore the world hated them; hence the persecution. Then you could tell a Methodist any where and every where, but who can now tell them, even in this boat's company? The old veteran, soldier like, backed up the right, and so I continued. Then the devil and the world hated them, because they would not go on the same boat, and he set his agents to persecute them. But now they go, all in the same boat, all on good terms. They employ his agents for engineers, for singers and pilots, and, instead of trusting in God, they get a wicked police, and thus rejoice in their quietude at camp meetings. The preacher's eye began to light up while he cried out emphatically, "it is so!" Here the cry came—"Passengers for Haverstraw," so I left the old pilgrim contending for the faith, and soon found myself amid the rain and mud, under the covering of a brick-kiln, waiting for a boat that had already past, to go to Sing Sing. H. Pratt.

P. S. I heard the preacher say, as I passed off the boat, that when God raised up preachers in his day, nine out of ten could sing; therefore they had no need of organs, fiddles, and the like, in their churches. But how changed it is now. H. P.

Pleasantville, N. Y., Sept. 19th.

For the Crisis.

Maine Conference Report.

The eighth session of the annual "Advent Conference" of Maine, convened at Yarmouth Sept. 11th, according to appointment, at 2 o'clock, P. M. The President not being present, Eld. O. R. Fassett was nominated and chosen President of the Conference. Eld. I. C. Wellcome was chosen Secretary. The ninth Psalm was then read, and the old and expressive hymn, page 264 of the Lyre,

"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand," was sung. At this stage of the meeting Eld. J. V. Himes arrived, and by invitation offered prayer; then preached a sermon from Rom. 13: 11–14, which was instructive and reviving to all our hearts. It was truly cheering to see so good a gathering of faithful christians, to do battle for Christ and his truth, in these days of armies of angry men, with carnal weapons, to slay their fellows. The brethren and sisters came together ready to work for God, strong in faith, rejoicing in hope of soon "seeing the King in his beauty." Bro. Himes has so far recovered his health as to seem to have renewed his age. His preaching was vigorous, and his courage and zeal never better. All seemed heartily glad to see him and hear him. Bro. N. Smith, who has been disabled, by disease, for a few years, was able, though in feeble health, to be with us to enjoy the blessings of such a meeting. We could thank God for the privilege.

Evening, 7 o'clock, Bro. F. H. Berick, who was also with us, preached an earnest discourse. We were all glad to see and hear him too. It will be interesting to all who love the Lord, to learn that Bro. B. is making a renewed effort to preach this all-important message to a fast sinking world. Amen. Blessed be God.

Thursday, 8 o'clock, A. M., met for business. Meeting called to order by the President, and prayer offered by Eld. T. Smith. Business being called for, the Secretary read letters from churches, and a request to the Conference to investigate the character of one of its members. It was voted to choose a council of five for that purpose. The parties mutually agreed upon Eld. J. V. Himes, Eld. F. H. Berick, Eld. T. Smith, Isaac Wight and R. Herley, for the council. The Conference accepted the nomination, and they proceeded to their business.

At 9 o'clock commenced a prayer and conference meeting, which continued with much interest until noon. At 2 P. M., Eld. Himes preached on the Signs of the Times, from Matt. 16: 2, 3. This was not only instructive, but truly awakening and refreshing to the way-worn pilgrim, causing us to see that we are upon the very threshold of the kingdom of God.

Evening, 7 o'clock, Bro. Berick preached. It sounded to us, who have been many years of this faith, like old times. It was a thorough Bible argument on "knowing the time," and "manner of time," of the first and second advents of Christ, with their attendant events. It was very impressive, and was listened to with marked attention.

Friday, 9 o'clock, A. M., met and enjoyed a blessed season in prayer and conference until 11 o'clock, when Bro. L. Boutell, who had arrived, preached a vigorous and stirring practical sermon from 1 Cor. 15: 58, causing us to feel that [illegible] finished its work, adjourned to meet again Oct. 1st—Brn. Berick and Himes being obliged to leave for home in time to fill Sunday appointments.

2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. T. Smith preached from Eph. 1: 13, 14, showing, in a clear and forcible manner, that God's word was the great instrumentality He has ordained to convert men, and the "Holy Spirit" the sanctifying and sealing agent, unto the coming redemption of the earth. Bro. Himes then remarked that one believer desired baptism, and he made an earnest appeal to believers to attend faithfully to this ordinance. We then repaired to the river side, when one joyful believer was baptized by Bro. Himes.

Evening, 7 o'clock, Eld. Himes, having been entreated to remain until Saturday, and preach once more, gave a discourse from Luke 14: 16–24. This was a timely and convincing application of this parable to our times, and the work in which we are engaged, in giving proclamation that the "marriage supper of the Lamb" is soon to be enjoyed.

Saturday, 8 o'clock, A. M., met for business. I should have mentioned that at our first business meeting Bro. I. Wight, J. H. Meader, Jeremiah Carr, and H. D. Read, were presented, recommended and received, by a unanimous vote, as members of this Conference, and all brethren from out of the State, present, were invited to take part with us in our deliberations. Elders O. R. Fassett and J. A Libbey, were now proposed, and, by a unanimous vote, received as members of this Conference. It was then voted that all brethren and sisters of good christian character, within the State, who meet with us to participate in our Conferences, shall be considered members of it.

The report of the Committee on Missions was called for, when the following was submitted:

Report.

Your Committee beg leave to report that at the close of the last year's Conference, Eld. E. M. Haggett engaged to enter upon the work as missionary so soon as he could close his other engagements. This he was unable to do until Feb., 1861, when he entered upon the work, though with ill health. He continued in the field, preaching in Hartford, Sumner, Franklin, Belgrade, Stoneham, Lovell, Greenwood and Livermore, until June, when his health became too much impaired to preach. We have allowed him $50 for his expenses. We have also circulated one dollar's worth of tracts, making fifty-one dlolars expended.

We have collected on the subscriptions	$43.00
Otherwise donated	5.83
Total	$48.83
Paid out for the Mission	$51.00
Due the Treasury	$2.17
There is due on subscriptions, which we expect to collect	$22.00
This would leave in the Treasury	$19.83

Respectfully submitted. Conference accepted the report.

I. C. Wellcome, Treasurer.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Sandisfield Camp Meeting.

Dear Bro. Wendell:—By request of the committee, I present to the readers of the Crisis a brief sketch of the Sandisfield Camp Meeting, which commenced Monday evening, Sept. 9th. A few brethren only had arrived, who thought best to dedicate the ground by a prayer and conference meeting. All were of one mind, which, I am happy to say, was characteristic of the meetings during the week. Not a discordant note was publicly heard between the brethren during the whole meeting.

Tuesday morning and afternoon Bro. C. Goodrich laid a good foundation for the meetings to rest upon, which was faith in God. At five o'clock the camp was cheered by the arrival of H. L. Hastings, accompanied by Brn. P. C. Rodman and J. D. Brown, and we thought, before the next night, Bro. H. had most an excellent body guard for a sick and lame man. Wednesday we had a very hard rain, which kept the brethren in the tents, where they were strengthened and edified by Brn. Brown and Rodman, and others. By the way, Bro. F. Burr preached a good discourse Tuesday evening on the christian graces, as brought to view in 2 Peter, 1st chapter.

Thursday, the brethren's hearts were made glad by the return of clear weather, and the arrival of Bro. P. B. Morgan, who addressed a large and attentive audience in the afternoon, from these words: "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." Bro. M., after pointing out the marks of God's hand in the rise and fall of kingdoms, made a special application of the text to the errors which have come into the church like a flood. In bringing testimony from the word of God and the christian fathers, and contrasting it with the teachings of the day, caused the eyes of the congregation to show signs of astonishment. But Bro. M.'s smooth and eloquent style made the truth quite palatable to the Baptists and Congregationalists, of which a good part of the audience was composed.

Friday morning, Bro. Ira Morgan preached from the words of the thief, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." [illegible] thief's request was promised on that day, but not fulfilled. Bro. Hastings followed, with some very appropriate remarks, showing what paradise was, and where it is to be, which drove the nail in a sure place. In the afternoon Bro. P. B. Morgan preached on the rise and fall of the four universal monarchies, showing the kingdom of God to be the fifth, and that under the whole heavens. We noticed a Baptist preacher present, who, a few months ago, acknowledged to us the same position. On being asked if he preached it, he replied that it was objectionable to most of his people. We hope Bro. M.'s discourse may incite new zeal in him, that cannot be bought with meat that perisheth. Bro. M. preached again Saturday morning, and then bade us farewell and left for Worcester. His services were timely, and took well with the Congregationalists. We hope the brethren in Boston will not be selfish, but permit Bro. M. to go over to the regions beyond occasionally.

Bro. Hastings preached in the afternoon, from these words: "And so shall we ever be with the Lord." He showed that the state of being with the Lord did not consist in turning over pine tables and chairs, and then dying and going through seven spheres, which caused some Spiritualists to squirm; and the way Bro. H. poured the facts on them, must have caused them to have felt uncomfortable, to say the least. However, they came out the next day, with reinforcements, and got another touch on another point from the same source. Bro. H. seemed to have no sympathy for their faith.

Sunday came, with a clear and invigorating air, which made the grove very lovely. At nine o'clock, the brethren met in front of the stand for a love feast, where about one hundred testified for Jesus and the truth, and then a large number arose, manifesting to be on the Lord's side, who did not have time to testify. At half-past ten, Bro. Hastings gave us a thrilling and comforting discourse, on the birth, life, death and ascension of Christ. In the afternoon he gave us another, on the coming of Christ. The congregation was estimated to be upwards of two thousand. Some of the prayer and conference meetings were very interesting. In the prayer meeting Friday evening, a young lady, who has frequently been convicted, said she felt that it was the last call of mercy to her. She resolved to consecrate herself to God. Others were moved to tears, but could not be persuaded to forsake all for Christ.

In the Conference meeting Saturday, a Baptist Deacon was moved to acknowledge us as christians, and spoke at some length, in a very appropriate manner; he never could be persuaded to attend an Adventist meeting before. Some, who had been neglecting duty, were aroused, and five were buried in baptism. Sunday noon, others acknowledged duty to be baptized, but chose to defer it till some future time.

We feel confident that great good will result from this meeting; it is already manifest that prejudice is greatly removed from the minds of many who come out to hear, who could not be prevailed to attend an ordinary meeting. The meeting moved just as though God stood at the helm, and we give him the glory, and pray him to fasten the truth on the hearts of the people. We tested the congregation with regard to having another meeting next year, and several hundred manifested a desire to have one. Many who have been accustomed to camp meetings, observed that they never saw better order at a meeting of so many people. The boarding stand gave general satisfaction; and, although the times are hard, the expenses of the meeting was met without trouble, which encouraged us to attempt another, should it be the will of the Lord to keep us on the ocean of time another year. Wm. A. Fenn.

For the Crisis.

Camp Meeting.

My Dear Bro. Wendell:—I seat myself to sketch an account of the late Camp Meeting at Exeter, Me.

Monday, Sept. 2d, I took the cars at South New Market, for Portland. Calling at Bro. Brooks', I found some going to the meeting, which added much to the pleasant ride. At ten, we took the boat for Bangor, and found more of the brethren on board, moving in the same direction. The night was pleasant, and we soon took our berth, in order to get all the sleep we could amid the pounding and jerking of the paddle wheels. About four o'clock in the morning, the monotony was broken by the stern cry, "Passengers for Rockland, select your baggage." This brought out the sleepers, to look up their baggage and be ready to leave. The same cry was heard all the way up the river, at the various landings.

At 10 o'clock, P. M., after a safe and pleasant ride, we landed at Bangor, and soon found Bro. Ireland, with his camp meeting wagon, ready to convey us to the grove. Speedily we were on the way, in good cheer, stopping only to dine and refresh ourselves at the pilgrim house of Bro. Ireland. Afternoon found us on our way over the hills, meditating upon the good things of the kingdom. We reached the camp ground before dark, when we were greeted [illegible] and the meeting progressing. Brn. Billings, Dammon and Jones, with their accustomed zeal, were there, giving direction to the meeting. Fourteen tents were up and well arranged. The old Advent believers from all the region had come together, and there was a large gathering, which kept increasing till the last. The order of exercise was prayer and conference, from eight till ten; preaching at ten, two and seven. Tent meetings directly after dinner and supper, so that the time was all profitably taken up. It was soon evident, that the Lord in a special manner was present by the influence of the "Holy Spirit," and our social meetings were excellent, prayers fervent, exhortations cheering, and the Spirit of the Lord reached the heart, which brought out confessions, such as was calculated to restore the old "waste places" with the healing balm. Love to God and one another was soon manifest, and "Glory, Hallelujah!" was soon heard in the camp. Many caught the fire, and our honest-hearted, whole souled brethren, shouted aloud for joy, and it was blessed to enjoy the feast with them.

The preachers present, who took part in the meeting, were Brn. Billings, Dammon, Jones, Berick, Read, Hemenway, Brown, Stratten, Bragg and others, and all went on in harmony, making it pleasant and profitable to be there. The preaching was practical and timely, and although no previous arrangement was made, yet the great Head of the church took the lead. That the right truth was spoken, at the right time, and in the right place, there is no question. The signs of the times, with the deceptions which are calculated to destroy us, were clearly set forth and urged upon us with zeal and faithfulness, commendable in one doing up his last work. Leo Miller, the able defender of Spiritualism, was present, and taking exceptions to a remark Bro. Berick made in a discourse, which was, that "Spiritualists denied the inspiration of the Scriptures, as held by the Protestant world," he requested the privilege of stating what Spiritualists do believe. Permission being given, he occupied one hour. In his remarks, he admitted all that was charged upon them. Bro. Berick, in about ten minutes, showed, very successfully, the difference between the inspiration of the Bible, as written by holy men who were moved upon by the Holy Ghost, and Spirit manifestations, so that all could see that the foundation of our blessed hope was on a firm basis, and that it was all important to hold on, and hold fast the Bible, amid the deceptions of this "hour of temptation." The word of God did run, and was glorified at this meeting. Many were reclaimed, and some led to inquire, "what shall I do to be saved?" Some of the brethren, that for years have been swamped by certain errors, confessed their mistakes, and stepped once more on the old gospel track. We all shouted Amen, "because the lost was found," the dead was alive. This gave a new impulse to our social meetings, which were of the best kind—spiritual, free and solemn. And although the crowd, that came to the meeting, increased till Sunday, when it was estimated there was five thousand people, yet all was so orderly, that we had no need of physical restraint; some noise was heard in the distance, but all went off pleasantly on the ground. The singing from the stand was the very best—the brothers, Lougee, added much to its melody. All seemed delighted with the music, which was in the Spirit and with the understanding also.

The brethren and neighbors in the immediate vicinity did what they could for the comfort of those who attended the meeting, and I think one uttered the truth when he said it was the best "Second Advent" camp meeting ever held in Maine. It can but exert a salutary influence through the whole State. God grant a revival of the Advent faith, with good religion among us all. Our whereabouts is not to be mistaken; we are on the right track, doing the right work, and soon, if good and faithful, shall find the right home. The preaching brethren were welcomed to the late home of Pitman Chamberlin, where we were abundantly cared for by the widow and her son. Great blessing attend them, even life eternal. Amen.

L. Boutell.

Selections.

How are we Justified?

An important question considering the scriptural representations of the ungodly. How can mortal man be just with God? How, when every attribute of an unchangeble God—his justice, his veracity, his holiness—all stand pledged to punish the transgression of his law, how may condemnation be removed, old sinners be brought back to the innocence of childhood, and not one of these attributes compromised—sin pardoned, and yet justice giving its joyful assent? This is a mystery undestood only by the initiated. Matt. 13: 11. It is that into which angels desire to look. Herein the wisdom of the adversary, who supposed that sin would introduce eternal anarchy between God and man, has been overmatched; he has been outwitted! The great problem is solved in the doctrine of atonement.

One of the benefits of the atonement of Jesus is justification—a deliverance from condemnation. Rom. 8: 1. It is obtained by faith—Rom. 5: 1. How many [illegible] godliness, in promises of future obedience, and have failed because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the deeds of the law; while at the same time Christ has stooped in sympathy over them, yearning to impart it freely "without money and without price." Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. How many poor, bleeding souls are ignorantly going about to establish their own righteousness when the righteousness of God—a righteousness that an angel might be proud of—is unto all and upon all them that simply believe, accompanied by that peace which passeth understanding. Go, mourning souls, and tell the Lord at once, that your efforts at self-justification are a failure; that you have lost all confidence in the flesh; that as far as your obedience is concerned you have made miserable work of it, and tell him also that your future obedience will be of the very same kind, unless he helps you; and no doubt he will teach you how to live by faith on the Son of God.—Christian Messenger.

I do not like to hear him Pray.

I do not like to hear him pray
Who loans at twenty-five per cent.,
For that I think the borrower may
Be pressed to pay for food and rent.
And in that Book we all should heed,
Which says the lender shall be blest,
As sure as I have eyes to read,
It does not say "take interest."

I do not like to hear him pray,
On bended knees about an hour,
For grace to spend aright the day,
Who knows his neighbor has no flour.
I'd rather see him go to mill
And buy his luckless brother bread,
And see his children eat their fill,
And laugh beneath their humble shed.

I do not like to hear him pray,
"Let blessings on the widow be!"
Who never seeks her home to say,
"If want o'ertake you come to me."
I hate the prayer, so loud and long,
That's uttered for the "orphan's weal,"
By him who sees him crushed by wrong,
And only with the lips doth feel.

I do not like to hear her pray,
With jeweled ears and silken dress,
Whose washer-woman toils all day,
And then is asked "to work for less."
Such pious shavers I despise;
With folded hands and air demure,
They lift to Heaven their "angel" eyes,
Then steal the earnings of the poor!

Light is Sown for the Righteous.

What a consolatory promise this is for the believer. When the soul is swept over with storms, and hopes are blasted, friends are lost, and the whole world seems desolate, then "light is sown;" it appeareth not, but as the seed lies hidden and then springeth up, and in due time yields the rich sheafs, so light will come out of darkness, and the event that seemed the destruction of the heart's dearest treasures, will be regarded as the evidence of the tender care of a heavenly Father! "He who doeth all things well," will bring good things out of those seeming evil. No children of affliction, if they are true believers, need ever despair. No clouds of sorrow are ever so dark but they have some bright spots on them; let the eyes be fixed on them, and they will grow brighter till the perfect day.

Who is there that has suffered yet feels not that his sufferings have increased his happiness? Who can realize the intense bliss of ease, but those who are suddenly released from sharp pains? The blessings of life are not so unequally distributed as appears at a superficial glance. Those who experience the severest reverses and misfortunes, find a rest and enjoyment in the comforts that are left them, that those who bask in continual prosperity have no idea of. The light that is sown for them, shines with increased splendor, even when it has dark surroundings. * * * *

Those in the furnace of affliction may for a time be covered with ashes and smoke, but ere long these will be cleared away, and the result of the refining fire will be gloriously manifested. Oh, ye who are poor and bereaved, and defrauded, let not the dark mantle of grief be closed round you; what appears now so dark, is but the hour before daybreak. In a little while, ye will see the light springing up that is sown for the righteous, even the light of hope and joy and peace.—Evangelist.

The Heart in the Face.

It is truly remarkable that so much of the heart may be read in the face, so that it is quite easy to tell whether a man is joyous or sad, pleasant or angry. It is not always necessary for him to say exactly how he feels, since his true feelings are expressed in his countenance, which usually tells the truth. His words may be false, and he may say what is untrue, but the index of the heart in the face tells no lies. This was all the evidence that Jacob had of his uncle Laban's ill-will towards him. His uncle had not uttered a word of censure or animosity, but he looked as if he felt unkindly. "I see," said Jacob to Rachel and Leah, "your father's countenance, that it is not towards me as before." Looks, not words, convinced him that Laban cherished hard feelings toward him. He wanted no better proof than this—it was enough.

It is a fact that we judge more of men's dispositions by their looks, than we do by their words. If we meet a stranger, we look into his face, and make some inference very soon about his character. It is said that "actions speak louder than words;" and is just as true that looks speak louder than words. The language of looks is so explicit that even the little child can read it. The babe in his mother's arms knows the difference between a smile and a frown. The former awakens a smile on his little face, while the latter extorts a cry of fear. He cannot understand the language that he hears—it is all an unknown tongue to him; but the looks he is enabled to interpret. The first book that a babe studies is his mother's face. Each smile is a lesson, and so is each shade that passes over her brow. Every day is a new leaf turned, with old lessons reviewed and new ones learned; and finally, the child so well understands the maternal heart which is carried in the face [illegible] the morning, by a glance at his countenance? How invariably a happy heart sparkles out through the eye, and beams in every lineament of the face! But that scowl on the brow! what is the import of that? Every parent knows full well its meaning, and he must tread softly or he will inflame passions that are surging the heart. That cloud is a signal which the heart hangs out, a sort of palmetto flag that a rebellious spirit flings to the breeze in defiant recklessness.

The christian graces, too, often leave lines of light in the countenance. Meekness, humility, who has not traced these and kindred virtues in the face of the devoted saint? Eminent spirituality seldom fails to reveal itself in this way. He who is frequently in communion with heaven, and sincerely so, carries another countenance than he would to hold intercourse with the opposite realm. How true, then, that the "countenance is a tell-tale!" It tells what the heart is.—Congregationalist.

Short but Sweet.

There is really more good, sound sense in the following pastoral charge, from the Religious Herald, than in many a wordy, windy charge, which has consumed the time of speaker and hearers for a half hour. If pastors will heed it, many of them will be more able and useful men:

I charge you—my young brother, to take care of your body. Eat nothing which does not agree with your digestive apparatus—masticate it well—take regular and sufficient exercise daily—go to bed at ten o'clock, P. M., and rise at six o'clock, A. M.,—and maintain "a prudent, cautious self-control" over your animal passions.

I charge you to take care of your mind. Discipline and furnish it it daily. "Let the word of God dwell in you richly with all wisdom." Make continual and choice additions to your stores of knowledge—otherwise constantly pouring out as you will be called to do, "your barrel will soon run emptyings."

I charge you—to take care of your heart. Keep it with all diligence. Be watchful and prayerful. Unless the principle of grace implanted within you is kept vigorous and thriving, you will not be happy in your sacred calling, nor successful in it, nor be a fit example to christians, in charity, in faith, and purity.

I charge you—to take care of your doctrine. Let it be that which was once delivered unto the saints—preserve it uncorrupt—faithfully preach it, in season—contend earnestly for it—and see that your flock be rooted and grounded in it.

Taking this course—keeping your body under subjection, stocking your mind with precious furniture, keeping your heart right in the sight of God, and your doctrine according to divine revelation; and having it drop in public and private, in the sanctuary and from house to house, "as the rain upon the grass, and as the dew upon the tender herb"—you will make full proof of your ministry, and when the Chief Shepherd appears, will receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.—Religious Herald.

True.—"One well considered sermon, well delivered," says the Republican, "is all that any congregation can remember and carry off. It is an absolute damage to the impression of this sermon to rush at once into a Sabbath school, and subject the mind to a new series of impressions; but when we come to follow both sermon and school with another sermon, all the impressions of the morning are wiped out, and all the impressions of the day are blurred.

It is notorious that the mind of Christendom has become indurated and obtunded by being constantly hammered with truth. There is no field of effort in which so much labor is worse than thrown away, as in the field of Sabbath religious instruction in well organized christian communities. The work is overdone in the matter of preaching, beyond all question; and we may say, also, that it is underdone in other departments. Two-thirds of the Christian Church of America are doing nothing, except going to church and cramming on Sunday. They are simply passive and receptive. We do not see them in the mission school, we do not see them in any active christian labor whatever. They pay their slip-rent, swallow the preaching, and then run to their farms and their merchandise. In short, the ministers are expected to do all the work, and the people none of it."—Banner of Light July 20th, 1861.

Medical Whispers.

"Tea, Coffee, Cocoa and Chocolate."—T. M.C., Rochester.—Coffee, or tea, or chocolate, when very strong and very hot, are injurious. It is not the tea, nor the coffee, that is injurious to the constitution, but it is their strength, their too great heat, and their excessive use. Cold coffee is sometimes a pleasant and highly valuable tonic. Tea is not very injurious, and weak cocoa and chocolate are both important beverages in some lingering and nervous complaints.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications on sale at this office, should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications and remittances to RUFUS WENDELL, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts and 26 [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 315. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1861. | VOL. XIV. NO. 4.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

J. S. WHITE, F. H. BERICK, — EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, J. S. WHITE, WALTER PRATT, H. V. DAVIS, J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Where is She?

Where is the voice so oft did cheer
The lonely pilgrim through life's gloom?
Why still the gentle, kindly tones,
That warned the sinner of his doom?
Where is the hand was wont to wield
A mighty pen, both firm and true?
Why is it that no more we hear
From "Fannie" of "Pine Avenue?"

Is it because her "deathless soul"
Has flown above "without a wing"—
Now flits around Jehovah's throne,
"A nameless and eternal thing?"
Is it because her "spirit voice"
Now chants on high the "angel song
We seem to hear at dewy eve,
Borne on the gentle breeze" along?
Was she released from cares of earth,
Celestial joys in heaven to prove?
Is "death the servant Jesus sends
To call us to his arms" above?

No! death is not the friend of man,
When clasped within his cold embrace,
There's no remembrance of our Lord—
We cannot celebrate his praise.
But low within the darksome tomb
Our sister's voice is hushed and still,
Death touched her soul with chilling power—
She bowed beneath his iron will.

She sleeps—a dreamless, silent sleep—
Unconscious, waits our coming King—
Our Jesus, who has promised life
And immortality to bring.
'Tis then we'll hear her gladsome voice,
Her victory over death proclaim;
She'll sound aloud our Saviour's praise
In songs of triumph to his name.

MRS. W. P. WENTWORTH.

La Fayette, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Types.—No. 2.

"And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week, and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease." Daniel 9: 27.

"He shall confirm," etc. This is thought by many positive proof that the confirmation of the covenant began with Christ's ministry; but we deem the objections presented sufficient to show that a covenant could not be confirmed three years before its ratification and dedication by blood, being until then "of no force at all." Christ was the appointed Mediator, and he did not enter upon this office until after his ascension to heaven. Christ was born under the law; he belonged to the Jewish dispensation—the Old Covenant; and his ministrations were under that law until he nailed it to his cross, and then commenced the initiatory rites pertaining to the introduction of the New Covenant, with its "better promises" and excelling glory.

"But do we not read that He shall confirm the covenant with many for one week, and surely Christ was not with his apostles seven years?" We will refer you in reply to the language of Paul, Heb. 2: 3, 4. Here we see that the "great salvation" which he has contrasted with the former dispensation, began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him." When did it begin to be spoken by the Lord? Evidently after his resurrection. It was first confirmed unto the disciples "by many infallible proofs," during the forty days in which he was seen of them, and instructed "in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Paul tells us that he manifested himself to the twelve apostles, and on one occasion was seen by five hundred of the brethren. That he did not cease the confirmation of the covenant after his glorification to the office of Mediator, or Priesthood, is evident from the testimony of Paul. After the disciples had been confirmed in respect to the new covenant, and entered upon the work of confirming it to others—"God also gave witness, both with signs and wonders, and gifts of the Holy Ghost." Here is a combined testimony, the one from heaven uniting with the one on earth, all for the establishing of the covenant, how long? "For one week," or seven years. How clear the evidence on this point. "Confirmed unto us," by whom? "Them that heard him." "He shall confirm," etc. "God also bearing them witness." "With many." Thousands were convinced of these truths pertaining to the new covenant among the Jews, during the seven years following its introduction.

"In the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease." This, many declare, was at the cross; that when Christ the Lamb, shadowed forth by the type, was offered, then all the Jewish sacrifices ceased to be efficacious. To this we shall present our objections. We do not believe the Jewish worshipper was required to accept the new covenant, and conform to its laws, until all things pertaining thereto was fully established. The blood of sprinkling was shed at the cross, but the covenant was not ordained in the hands of its Mediator until seven weeks afterward. Were the Jews without a sacrifice, without an oblation, without an high priest, during this time? We are informed by John that the Holy Spirit could not be given until Jesus was glorified. He was forty days on earth after his resurrection, and ten days after his ascension, the Holy Spirit was poured out; hence we infer that he was then glorified to be an High Priest of the new covenant.

But the proofs of all this were yet to be given to the Jewish people. To Peter was committed the keys of the kingdom of of heaven. A key is that which unlocks that which has been shut; opens that which has been hidden from view. The unfolding of the mysteries of the kingdom of God, which for ages had been kept secret, was assigned to Peter; and on the day of Pentecost, after the glorification of the Mediator—after the giving of the Holy Spirit with all its attendant signs, and gifts, and miracles—he stands up with boldness, and, to astonished thousands gathered at Jerusalem to keep the feast, he begins to use one of the keys intrusted to him, and reveals the glorious salvation now offered through the despised, rejected and crucified Nazarene, and multitudes are convinced, and receive the initiatory ordinance of baptism. They began at Jerusalem to confirm the covenant, and for seven years, according to the chronology of our Bibles, they preached to the Jews only.

"The midst of the week" may not mean just half, but whether it do or not, it is evident that when sufficient time had been given for the proofs to be brought fully before the Jewish nation, their sacrifices were no longer recognised by God. The cutting off of Messiah, and the causing the sacrifice and oblation to cease, are evidently two points of time; they are so at least in our humble judgment. According to our Bible chronology we find, in A. D. 41, Peter preaching the gospel to Gentiles at the house of Cornelius. He turns the other key, (for to him were given the keys, plural,) and unlocks to them the mysteries of the kingdom, and thus opens the door for Paul, God's chosen vessel, and great apostle to the Gentiles; and, by his deep reasonings from the Scriptures, accompanied by the Spirit's power, he wins thousands to the truth.

We have followed the shadow of three of the types, and two general feasts, viz., the feast of the passover, and the feast of weeks, or harvest, until we have arrived at the substance; and one yet remains to be noticed.

IV. The feast of tabernacles. This feast was commenced on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, and continued seven days. It was called "the feast of ingathering, which is in the end of the year." It was a feast of rejoicing after the vintage and harvest were all gathered in. Christ, by his resurrection, fulfilled the type of the first fruits of wheat harvest; and the feast of tabernacles will probably succeed the great harvest at the end of the world, and be a season of rejoicing to the saints after their final deliverance.

Having now examined the prominent feasts, we will briefly notice a few of the intervening and connecting links. We have found the Antitype of the paschal lamb, and the high priest, fulfilled in Christ. The common priests were typical of the Jewish worshippers. "Ye also as lively stones are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices"; "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood."—1 Pet. 2: 5, 9. The priests under the old covenant were anointed with oil, and the priests under the new have also an anointing. Says John, "Now he which hath anointed us is God." "Ye have an unction from the Holy One." "But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you." This doubtless refers to the Holy Spirit. The priests were sprinkled with the blood of beasts, and their bodies washed with pure water. Under the new covenant, the priesthood are sprinkled with the blood of Christ, and their bodies washed by baptism. Heb. 10: 22. The Levitical priests were required to offer a daily sacrifice to God. The christian priest is commanded to present his body a living sacrifice, and to offer a sacrifice of praise continually. The tabernacle had two parts, the inner and the outer sanctuary, separated from each other by a blue veil. In the first went the priests daily to offer sacrifice; in the other, the High Priest alone entered once every year, bearing on his breastplate the names of the twelve tribes of Israel, and there made an atonement for the whole nation. The first represents this earth, separated from the Most Holy, or heaven, by the blue veil which is spread out over it, and they who are in this tabernacle groan, being burdened.

On the great day of atonement, when the names of the tribes were borne in before the Mercy Seat, and their sins confessed before the Lord, an atonement was made for the Holy of Holies, because of the iniquities of the children of Israel, and the Mercy Seat, and the golden altar, by the sprinkling of blood. The whole congregation were, in the meantime, without the tabernacle, waiting for the return of the High Priest, whose coming could be announced by the tinkling bells upon the hem of his robe. When he came out, the scape goat was brought forward, and upon him were laid the sins of the people, and then he was sent into the wilderness, a land not inhabited. Then came the soul-refreshing blessing in this form: 1. "May Jehovah bless thee and preserve thee! 2. May Jehovah cause his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee! 3. May Jehovah lift up his face upon thee, and may he put prosperity unto thee."

By keeping these ordinances in memory, many portions of Scripture present to us very interesting illusions. One is found in Acts 3: 19—"Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send Jesus Christ," etc. Reference is probably had to the return of the High Priest from the Holy place, and the bearing away of the sins of the people on the head of the scape goat. The Saviour seems to have had his mind on the same event, when after enumerating the signs of his coming, he tells them thereby to know that he is at the door, about to come forth to bless his waiting people. And unto those who "wait at the door of the tabernacle, looking for his coming, he will appear without a sin offering, having obtained eternal redemption for them." On the first day of the seventh month, there was a memorial of blowing of trumpets, and is supposed to have been in commemoration of the finishing of creation, when all the sons of God shouted for joy. This was observed on the first day of the civil year. Every fiftieth year, on the tenth day of the seventh month of the ecclesiastical year, the great trumpet of Jubilee was blown. "The word Jubilee is thought to be derived from a word signifying to bring back, restore, return, because at this time men were returned to their liberty, estates and families."—Cobbin. It was a time of restitution, or restoring back to a previous condition; and was not this a type of the "times of restitution" referred to by Peter in the 3d chap. of Acts? Ever since Paradise was lost, all the holy prophets have spoken of such "times," and the return of Jesus Christ marks their introduction. Earth is to be restored back to primeval beauty—"there shall be no more curse." The kingdom is to be restored again to man—"Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." The beasts are to be restored to their former peaceable condition. See Isa. 11: 6-9.

In the year of Jubilee, every family of the Jewish nation were restored to their inheritance. Their possessions were redeemed when they had passed into other hands. Does not the Saviour refer to this type and its fulfillment, when he bids his disciples lift up their heads, as the tokens of his coming appear, for their redemption draweth nigh? And again; is not allusion had to this by the apostle, when he says, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption"? Also in another place: "Sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession." The symbolic trumpets, and the "great trumpet" spoken of as sounding when Christ shall appear, seem to have been shadowed forth by the blowing of trumpets under the Mosaic economy. What has not been fulfilled must be, for Christ says, "Not one jot or tittle shall pass from the law till all be fulfilled."

M. D. W.

☞ The most holy and useful men in all ages have spent much time in secret devotion—"lifting up holy hands to God without wrath and doubting." Whole hours often—some two, three and four, were spent on the bended knee before the Lord, in earnest, fervent, soul-melting supplications—in humble, holy adoration. Thus their faces shone God-like, brilliantly, like the face of Moses when he descended from the mount of God.

☞ Everywhere endeavor to be useful, and everywhere you will be at home.

For the Crisis.

Comfortable Doctrine.

BY P. B. MORGAN.

It is not among the least noticeable facts in favor of Christianity, that it is eminently suited to all the absolute wants of the higher or moral nature of man. In this is pre-eminently exhibited its intrinsic excellence; a good that no man can afford to be without. Hence that is no mean view of Christianity that affirms for it comfort unsurpassed and unequalled, by any or all things beside. It is with this view the Scriptures talk of "good words" and "comfortable words"; "patience and comfort of the Scriptures"; and of the Holy Ghost as a "Comforter" that shall abide with the Church always; "comfort of love"; "comfort one another," etc. Hence the Church has affirmed of man's justification by faith, that it is "a most wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort."

The same doctrine we claim for the belief that Life and Immortality are attainable only through Christ at his second advent, and that the dead are unconscious until that time. Of the first proposition we have only space to say, at this time, that men have never been able to devise a rational theodicy, in which the ends of mercy and justice were fully realized, with any other view. For example: In the doctrine of eternal suffering, is seen the triumph of a stern judicial justice over mercy. In the notions of Universalism we have mercy, but not justice. It is an axiomatic fact in the theological world, that revealed and natural religion must agree.

With this view we have the following facts: (1.) We have, in the doctrine of Life through Christ, the ends of both mercy and justice perfectly realized. (2.) A doctrine clearly and persistently affirmed in the Scriptures. (3.) Therefore another proof of the divine authenticity of the Scriptures. But who does not know that the all-prevalent and all-sufficient argument against the unconscious state of man in death, is, that "it is such an uncomfortable doctrine." Now to such we have only to say, let them be consistent and bear in mind the following suggestions, and we believe we shall hear no more of this:

It is contended that man enters immediately at death into infinite felicity, or into unutterable anguish and woe. But in what proportion do their friends go into the felicity contemplated? Perhaps one to five; and may be not one in twenty. Where are the others? In inconceivable torment—in the flames of hell! And yet it is said, the doctrine that affirms of believers departed, that they "SLEEP IN JESUS," and of the unbelievers, that they are "reserved unto the day of judgment, TO BE punished," (2 Pet. 2: 10,) is not a comfortable doctrine. We think it is "a most wholesome doctrine, and full of comfort;"—wholesome, because among other things it makes indescribably glorious the doctrines of Christ's second advent, the resurrection of the dead, etc., of which the Christian world has become so insensible, and it is to be feared morally indifferent;—and full of comfort, because it is relieved of the tormenting reflections and vagaries of the opposite system, and stands connected with a system that has, with an infinite spirituality, also tangibility; and, best of all, perfect consistency, because in strict harmony with the facts in nature and the infallible word of God.

For the Crisis.

Perilous Times.

The apostle has truly said of these days, the days in which we are now living, that they are "perilous times." (2 Tim. 3: 1.) Daniel, also, has spoken somewhat upon this matter, when he declares, "There shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation to that same time." Now there are some peculiarities about these "times" and "time" of peril and trouble which demand our most careful consideration. Through the whole history of the kingdoms of this world, from the commencement of the Babylonian dynasty, down through Medo-Persia, Grecia, and the Roman empires, there were to be, and were, wars and fightings, "nation rising against nation," famines, and pestilences. The world was filled with distress and anguish. Pen cannot describe the misery, nor do I care to dwell on the sad picture, for everywhere 'tis mingled with scenes of human woe. Daniel says of it, a "time of trouble, such as never was"; the apostle says, "perilous." It would seem then that the nature of this "time of trouble" was different from all preceding times of trouble.

Let us inquire, in the first place, Who are those to whom the prophet and apostle refer as being likely to be affected by these perilous times? Daniel tells us, "At that time thy people shall be delivered; every one that shall be found written in the book;" and Paul says, [illegible] their own selves," and disobeying God in every particular in moral conduct, yet were to "have the form of godliness, (all the outward show of Christianity,) but denying the power thereof: from such (to God's people) turn away." It will be well for us to hear our Lord a little at this point. "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, (showing plainly that this would be a characteristic of this time,) and cares of this life, (and which of us does not feel the force of this expression of our Lord at this time?) and so that day come upon you unawares."—Luke 21: 34. It seems, then, that it is the children of God that are in, or surrounded, and liable to be affected by these seductive influences. Satan would, if it were possible, deceive the very elect.

It is no new thing for the nations of earth to be at war with each other. Such has been, and such the prophets declare will be the case, till Christ and his saints shall receive the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven—"till He come whose right it is to reign." The christian could stem with boldness the open persecutions of the man of sin; they could yield up their lives a sacrifice on the cross, at the guillotine, or on the rack, and not flinch from martyrdom in any manner. Stimulated by the glorious promises of God, they endured a great fight of afflictions, while they looked not at things seen, but to the eternal, incorruptible inheritance in the better resurrection. Such open persecution only operated as a stimulus, driving the child of God to the most perfect reliance on the promises of our heavenly Father. Satan, not accomplishing the end he had in view by such harsh procedure, transforms himself into an "angel of light," and now, by stilling the conscience "with a form of godliness," bids fair to destroy more thousands than in the time he openly persecuted the church.

Our Saviour saw beforehand the seductive influences that would surround his church in these last times, and, knowing the only antidote, bids us "take heed"—to "watch and pray," that we "may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." And if we but obey his injunction, what strength, what comfort, will he impart to us. "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," and, "My grace is sufficient for thee." Again, "Draw nigh to God, and He will draw nigh to you."

Another characteristic of this time is this. "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap (there will be many of them) to themselves teachers (instructors) having itching ears; and they shall turn away—(my friends, did you ever think of it? how few will listen to the glorious truth of the near coming of the Master! and other kindred doctrines of God's word)—their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." How wonderfully precise has God made known unto us the character of the people of this age! The pen of the historian could not more accurately describe the present condition of the people of this world and of the professed church! Well did Daniel say, "A time of trouble, such as never was," and the apostle, "perilous times"! Child of God, dost thou realize that seductive influences are being thrown around thee, to cheat thee out of eternal life? Bestir thyself. Awake! arise! "for soon he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

The sum of the evidence derived from the foregoing remarks plainly shows that we are living in the last times—the fulfillment of the prophetic word—"the time of trouble"; that we are in "the time of the time of the end"—the filling up of our Saviour's words, that "the Kingdom of God is nigh at hand"—yea, "even at the door." We ask, are the landmarks all passed by? My lamp reveals nothing to come but the indignation of the Lord, to be poured on the wicked nations of earth. Lo, the evil has commenced, and will not cease till it be fully accomplished. But the blessed promise is, "Thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book." If we but "watch and pray," then shall we "be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, (on the wicked nations of earth,) and stand before the Son of man." What a volume of thought is embraced in that little word "stand"! While the wicked will flee from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, calling on the rocks to fall on them and hide them, the righteous "will have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him at his coming." They will "stand." In that day it shall be said, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him; we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

Brethren, we are "looking for that blessed [illegible] great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ."

His word attests the moment near,
And that can never fail.

God "has magnified his word above all his name." With what avidity, then, should we grasp its precious promises! with what zeal should we promulgate its glorious truths! till the Master shall say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Amen.

Yours truly, P. B. HOTT.

North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio.

For the Crisis.

Everlasting Punishment.—What is it?

Will Bro. Hastings please to harmonize with his views, through the Crisis, the passage found in Matt. 25: 46, "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal." In Bro. H. L. H.'s new work he advocates the view, that the penalty to be executed upon the wicked is pain, anguish, and torment. And this pain, anguish, and torment is to result in their death; which death will be the utter extinction of their being. The word here rendered "punishment" is kolasin, and is the same used in 1 John 4: 18, and is there rendered "torment"—"because fear hath torment," (kolasin.) If the view of the punishment for sin Bro. Hastings advocates is true, then it follows that the pain, anguish, tribulation, and torment, will be eternal; and, consequently, cannot end in death, or any other way: for the passage would then read, (if the translation in 1 John 4: 18 is correct,) "And these shall go away into everlasting torment; but the righteous into life eternal," just as properly as "punishment," and would also prove that torment to be eternal; and if so, does not the doctrine of the eternal torment of the wicked become established as a result of such theory?

Yours, in hope of eternal life,

H. B. MARTIN.

[In connection with the foregoing, we invite the attention of Bro. Martin and our readers to the following excellent critique on Matt. 25: 46. We extract it from the work by Bro. Hastings, entitled "Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as taught in the Epistles of Paul," pp. 58-61.—EDITOR.]

"Another passage which is thought by many to contain irrefragable evidence that wicked men are to be eternally tormented in hell, occurs in the same discourse, Matt. 25: 46; 'And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal.' It must be recollected here that in this passage the two words 'everlasting' and 'eternal' are both translated from the same Greek word aionion. Now as the life of the saints is eternal, it is alleged that the punishment of the wicked must be eternal also. To this we most readily agree.

But first in the exposition of this passage we are led to inquire into the meaning of the term punishment. This by many has been assumed to be synonomous with torment. This is a grand mistake. Punishment may be torment, or it may not be—'imprisonment, fine, confiscation, exile and death,' all may be punishments, and yet the person punished may not endure torment at all. Torment on the other hand is 'extreme pain; anguish, the utmost degree of misery either of body or mind.' A man may suffer all this accidentally, or by disease—in that case it cannot be properly called punishment, though it is torment. Now the punishment is not always in proportion to the pain endured. Death can be produced by the administration of certain poisons almost without pain—the cutting off of a hand, or the extraction of a tooth might occasion more anguish than the infliction of death in such a manner; yet who would suppose from that fact, that that which caused the greatest suffering was the greatest punishment? Now the term kolasin, here translated punishment, does not signify torture or torment. It is derived from kolazo which signifies 'to curtail, dock, prune the trees, to keep within bounds, hold in check, bridle, then to chastise, correct, punish.' Hence the word kolasin signifies a 'checking, punishing, chastisement, correction, punishment.' These are the proper definitions of the term. It does not signify torment. So our Saviour does not say they shall go into eternal torture, but rather into eternal or everlasting punishment, or cutting off. What this punishment is, will appear from the language of Paul. 2 Thess. 1: 9, where he expressly declares that they 'shall be PUNISHED with EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power.' That this destruction is not to be eternally going on, and never accomplished, is evident from those declarations that teach us that the wicked 'shall SUDDENLY be destroyed, and that without remedy;' and that 'SUDDEN DESTRUCTION cometh upon them' while they are saying peace and safety, and thus put far off the impending day of judgment and of wrath.

In the language of Dr. Whitby, 'This fire may be called eternal, not that the bodies of the wicked shall be ever burning in it, and never be consumed by it, since this cannot be done without a constant miracle; but because it shall so entirely consume their bodies as that they shall never subsist again, but shall perish and be destroyed forever by it.' Again with reference to the word eternal, we know that it sometimes has the sense of final, or simply that sense. Because this destruction is eternal it does not follow that the act of destruction is to be always going on, but rather that the state of destruction is such that there is no recovery from it. Thus if a man were destroyed for a year and the [illegible] year; if for a hundred years, it would be a century of punishment; if for a thousand years, it would be a millennium of punishment—but if he was destroyed, never to be restored throughout eternity, it would be an ETERNAL punishment. That such is to be the case we learn from the word of God.

The apostle, Heb. 6: 2, speaks of 'eternal judgment.' We are not to infer from this that the judgment day is never to expire—but simply this, that whereas earthly judgments are temporal in their character and results, here shall be a judgment where every thing wrong shall be made right, and the decisions of which shall not be subject to alteration or reversal—hence it is an eternal judgment, so also a punishment where there is neither reprieve or restoration may be fitly called an eternal punishment."

To this we add one more extract from "Pauline Theology." Speaking of the Apostle Paul's teachings on "future punishment," the author, on pp. 39, 40, speaks thus:—

"Sixth: He does not mention or make use of the word torment at all in the whole of his epistles. The idea of devils mocking, and tormenting their victims in the pit of woe, does not appear once in all his writings, nor any where else in the word of God. Indeed, with the exception of one passage in Revelations 14: 11, concerning which commentators are not agreed, but which, as it is spoken of worshippers of the beast, cannot be shown to refer to all sinners, and which, as it is spoken in the present tense and in connection with their actual worship, cannot be proved to refer to the future state at all, with this single exception, there is not one passage in the whole Book of God that represents the wicked as being tormented. Of course the Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus is not reckoned as teaching the doctrine; for all laws of criticism forbid that parables be made use of to teach doctrines. The idea of a God that torments and tortures his enemies; and preserves them by his omnipotence, that he may torment them in his wrath, was unknown to, and untaught by those early teachers of the truth of God. It was reserved for the corruptions of vain philosophy, and the traditions of heathen teachers, to engraft such an idea upon the character of that God whose name is LOVE.

Paul did not teach the doctrine of torment. Suffering and anguish are implied in the fire which shall devour the ungodly, but torment as a distinct idea, as it is taught by modern religious teachers from Sabbath to Sabbath, does not appear in his epistles. If the idea that God would torment and torture wicked men in hell to all eternity had been true; Paul must have known it, and would have preached it. He did not preach it; therefore it is not true."

For the Crisis.

The Two Witnesses.

WHEN WILL THEY FINISH THEIR TESTIMONY?

There has been much said and written on the probable fulfillment of the prophecy of the two witnesses finishing their testimony, their being killed, and their rising again,—Rev. 11: 3-13; and, like all other prophecies which were to be fulfilled before the Lord's coming, this has been placed in the past, as a matter of necessity, by those who thought his coming immediately impending.

Some regard the two witnesses as the Old and New Testaments, others as Daniel and John, and others still as Moses and Elijah; while most of those among us who believe the prophecy has had its fulfillment, apply it to the denial of God, and burning of the Bible, by the authority of the government of France during the revolution of 1798.

It strikes me that the two witnesses may more properly be regarded as the Church and the Word of God, than anything else. For if God's word were destroyed, the church would still witness against the corruptions of the world; and if the church were destroyed, leaving the word, that would be a witness against them; but, if both were blotted out, God would be without a witness among men. Hence, if God's witnesses are to be reduced to two, as comprehending his usual means of manifesting his will to the world, I do not see why we may not more properly regard the two witnesses as the Church and the Word, than anything else.

With this view of the matter we refer to the past, and find both witnesses, as it were, clothed in sackcloth, according to the prophecy. [illegible]

career of Louis Napoleon. Yet this is the view held by many, I think, who urge a past fulfillment of the slaying of these witnesses. I think I can see, however, how it may have a fulfillment under the last phase of the apostasy—the beast and his image. Spiritualism, in all its blasphemy, is to be accepted by the christian world generally, and become nationalized by a union of Church and State, when all must acknowledge the divine origin of Spiritualism, and the same authority for their course, or be subject to oppression, persecution, and perhaps death, at the hands of the ruling power.

God in his mercy will not suffer the christian world to come up to the judgment occupying a middle ground. All Christendom must be fairly tested on their devotion to God and his truth. They must be compelled to choose between the gospel, pure and unadulterated, though unpopular, and bold Atheism popularized. This testing season, which, I verily believe, we are just entering, or have commenced, will be "the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world to try them." This test is manifest in the account of the false Christ's of Matt., where we are assured that if it were possible they would deceive the very elect, which implies strongly that no others will have power to escape their deceptions. Also in the account of the strong delusion attending the Man of Sin, when all those who receive not the love of the truth shall become victims to this delusion, believe a lie, and be damned. And under the reign of the "beast and his image," "all, both free and bond, rich and poor, great and small," are divided into two classes,—those who receive the mark of the beast and those who refuse, at the hazard of their lives, to receive his mark, or worship him.

But in this apostasy of Christendom, God will not suffer them to depart without a faithful warning. Hence, during this hour of temptation, while men are making their choice of Spiritualism, God's witnesses will be reminding them of their departure from the faith. As the apostasy looms up, the witnesses vary their messages according to the stage of its development. Making present the most important truth, when she presents in her departure the phase of Atheism simply, or a corruption in doctrines. The present phase of Spiritualism—the message of the church directed against the apostasy, is against this feature. See Rev. 14: 6. When there is a considerable departure of the Christian world to the corruptions, message of the witnesses, warning them of their tendency, announces this. Rev. 14: 8 and 18: 2, 3. No longer able to restrain them from their headlong course by showing the falsity of their position in the sight of God, and the immorality of their lives, they now admonish them to come back for fear of greater "sins" and "plagues," sure to come upon them if they persist in their course with the mass, saying, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues," Rev. 18: 4.

When the apostasy has become so general as to take the lead in the world, they organize on the principles of their new religion, what they will announce as the fulfillment of the Scripture predictions of the "Millennium,"—"The New Jerusalem,"—the "Kingdom of Heaven on Earth," and, with the false Christ at its head, will proclaim that Christ has come, and will now take possession of the earth as his own, when all must submit, or they will take measures to exterminate them, as enemies to the reign of their Christ. This brings out the last message of the witnesses, usually called the third angel's message.—Rev. 14: 9, 10. In this they admonish them against receiving the mark of the beast and his image, assuring them that such shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, in the plagues to be poured out on them. They do this at the hazard of their lives, but they shrink not from a faithful warning of the apostate world on the verge of ruin. This is their last message. It finishes their testimony. The apostates are hardened beyond recovery, and the further testimony of the witnesses would be unavailing.

The Bibles are now burned by public authority, and the church, which has been reproving these apostates to their annoyance, has now to suffer a sore persecution, when, it will be said, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," "that they may rest from their labors." This will be the slaying of the witnesses, and in this state they will remain, or those who shall live through it, during three days and a half, (in years.) When these witnesses have finished their testimony, and have fled for safety to the dens and caves of earth, these apostates will make merry over their supposed annihilation of christianity, and their relief from the reproof of these witnesses. But their triumph will be short, for soon will the seven last plagues fall upon them and continue with them till the Lord comes. I. K. [illegible]

E. Stoneham, Me., Sept. 30th, 1861.

☞ There is not a word in our tongue but the Lord knoweth it altogether. "O who so wise to choose our lot and regulate our ways." The very hairs of our head are all numbered.—"In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths."—[illegible]

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 9, 1861.

Inherent Immortality and the Blessed Hope of the Gospel.

By inherent immortality we mean the widely prevalent opinion that all men possess deathless spirits; and the particular aspect of the doctrine to which we now direct attention, is the sentiment that believers in death are personally present with the Redeemer, in paradise or in heaven. We name both these localities because a distinction between them is recognized in current religious thinking, and among those who maintain the distinction unanimity does not exist as to whether departed saints, in their disembodied state, are in paradise, merely, or in heaven itself—the former place (some might prefer to say state) being regarded, with respect to glory, as inferior to the latter, or as the ante-chamber leading to it. We remark, however, that whatever view is taken of this question, there is a very general agreement that the departed spirits of the good are with Christ.

By the blessed hope of the gospel, we mean, of course, the second "glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." By it we refer to the consummation of the Master's promise—"I will come again, and receive you to myself." By it we designate the event which loomed up before the faith of a beloved Apostle when, seeking to pour comfort into the hearts of a sorrowing Church, he said—"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God."

We present these two doctrines in connection for the purpose of remarking upon the obvious and irreconcilable conflict which exists between them as matters of Christian faith. Both views cannot exert their legitimate influence upon the same individual at the same time. This fact is matter of observation everywhere in christendom—the reason for it ought to be misunderstood by none. To believe practically that "death is the gate to endless joy," is necessarily to feel little or no interest in the coming of the Lord and "our gathering together unto him" at his advent. On the other hand, to be profoundly impressed with the truth of the Bridegroom's return, and with the scenes of grandeur and glory which wait upon the coming of the day of God, implies a recognition of the truth that death is a foe whose dreary domains can never be pierced by the light of life until he comes who holds the keys of hades.

The danger that the notion of disembodied felicity should usurp the place which Christ's coming ought to occupy in the faith of the Church, is more than hinted at in the following remarks from that able writer on the second advent, Rev. David Brown, of Scotland:—

"It is not enough that we believe the doctrines of Scripture numerically, so to speak. We must believe them as they are revealed—in their revealed collocations and bearings. Implicit submission to the authority of God's word obviously includes this. If, then, Christ's second appearing, instead of being full in the view of the Church, as we find it in the New Testament, is shifted into the back ground, while other anticipations are advanced into its room, which, though themselves Scriptural, do not occupy in Scripture the place which we assign to them, are we 'trembling' at the authority and the wisdom of God in his Word, or are we not rather 'leaning to our own understanding?'"

Several important items are stated in the foregoing. 1. The second appearing of Christ will be full in the view of any Church whose faith is conformed to the New Testament. 2. There is danger of shifting the doctrine of the advent into the background to make room for "other anticipations." 3. Mr. B. seems to concede that these "other anticipations" may be Scriptural!

Of course the reader will infer that Mr. Brown has in view the popular idea of going to glory at death when he speaks of "other anticipations." This is the fact, and in order to keep the advent in the foreground, and death in the back ground, he does not tell his readers that death is "but the voice that Jesus sends, to call us to his arms." No—consistency will not permit him to talk in such a strain, popular though it be. Another extract will show the reader how death is viewed by Mr. B. He says:—

"The death of believers, however changed in its character, in virtue of their union to Christ, is, intrinsically considered, not joyous, but grievous—not attractive, but repulsive. It is the disruption of a tie which the Creator formed for perpetuity—the unnatural and abhorrent divorce of parties made for sweet and uninterrupted fellowship. The bliss of the disembodied spirits of the just is not only incomplete, but, in some sense, private and fragmentary, if I may so express myself."

Upon this we observe, that to us, the thought of sleeping "in Jesus" has greater charms than a state which involves "the unnatural and abhorrent divorce of parties made for sweet and uninterrupted fellowship," and in which the "bliss" of the saved is "incomplete, private and fragmentary"! [illegible] the reunion of the divorced "parties" referred to by Mr. Brown? Theologians have a good deal to say about the immortal soul returning to reinhabit the body, at the resurrection—but where does the Word of God talk thus? Echo answers, where? Jesus does not say—"I will bring him down from the land of spirits in the last day," but, "I will RAISE HIM UP in the last day." Again we might inquire, Where does the Bible speak of "bliss" in a life beyond the present, except as it points us to "the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory"—to the "fullness of joy" in God's "presence" and the "pleasures forevermore" at his "right hand"? These, blessed be God, are not "incomplete," but perfect! Neither are they "private," for they shall be shared, in all their infinitude of joy, by the whole redeemed host of God's elect.

We have seen how Mr. Brown views death. In contrast with that hear what he says concerning the coming of Jesus. We quote once more:—

"But at the Redeemer's appearing all the redeemed will be called together, and perfectly, publicly and simultaneously glorified. It is necessary to point out the inferiority, in practical power, of the one prospect to the other, or to indicate the superior class of ideas and feelings which the latter is fitted to generate."

How grateful should we be for Scriptural light concerning man's condition in death. Every thing, with us who see the truth in this direction, hangs upon the resurrection of the dead, and this in turn hangs upon the coming of Jesus. Let us, then, while we actively prepare to stand approved before the Son of Man, say with the poet—

"We'll wait till Jesus comes—we'll wait,
And then be gathered home."

"Retribution."

A Methodist preacher, who advocates the eternal misery of the wicked, and to whom during our recent absence we sold a copy of Bro. Hastings' new work, writes us as follows:—

"I have hastily read Hastings' book, and call it unanswerable in the main: hope you will read it carefully and prayerfully. I am surprised at one thing, and that is—he goes into no argument or proof of the final annihilation of the wicked. I think I understood you to say that was his view."

We did inform the writer of the above note that the author of "Retribution" held the doctrine of the literal destruction of the wicked, and if the former will read the work "carefully," as he wishes us to do, he will find that it is not a defense of endless torment. Were the fact otherwise, the author would be strangely inconsistent with himself, for in his work on "Pauline Theology," as quoted at some length in another part of this paper, he declares that—"the idea of a God that torments and tortures his enemies; and preserves them by his omnipotence, that he may torment them in his wrath, was unknown to, and untaught by those early teachers of the truth of God." Should it, however, turn out that the dominant "idea" in "Retribution" is this very one which "was unknown to and untaught by" the apostles, our surprise will find alleviation in the fact that "the corruptions of vain philosophy and the traditions of heathen teachers" have not entirely ceased to exert their baleful influence in the world. We do not now affirm that "Retribution" is obnoxious to the charge here suggested, but if it is not, it seems to us that even a hasty perusal of its pages should have sufficed to convince an intelligent Minister that its author repudiates the endless torture theory! However this may be, we are free to say that if we had published a book of one hundred and fifty-six pages on "the doom of the ungodly," we should esteem our effort rather dubiously complimented if an advocate of the common orthodox view should, having perused our work, pronounce it "unanswerable in the main," and have failed to discover any clear assertion by us of "the final annihilation of the wicked"!

We take occasion again to recommend to the careful perusal of our readers Bro. Hastings' work on "Retribution." It can be ordered from this office or from the author at Providence, R. I. In the Preface, Bro. Hastings says—"The point in dispute is not who thinks he is right, but who is right? In settling such questions we are not to rest upon assertions, but upon facts, and the question is not who says he is right, but who proves it." What Bro. H. has said and what he has proved in "Retribution," can only be known by those who read the book. So forward your orders. The price, we believe, is intended to be 38 cents, though it is printed "38 cents" on the first and "25 cts." on the fourth page of the cover. Will the author inform our readers definitely which is the correct price?

While upon this subject, it occurs to us to mention that Bro. R. E. Ladd has signified his willingness to pay for twenty copies of "Retribution," to be sent to as many persons believing that the wicked dead will be made alive and afterwards destroyed, provided such persons will buy and read the work entitled "Life from the Dead; or, The Righteous only will Live again." The offer is before our readers; let those avail themselves of it who wish to "prove all things" and "hold fast that [illegible]

Light Advancing.

We give below an extract from a private letter received by us a few days ago from a friend—an educated gentleman and a member of the legal profession—in Canada. Himself and wife recently paid us a visit, and carried with them, on their return, an ample assortment of works on the Immortality question. We are much gratified to learn that the publications are doing a missionary work, and shall not be surprised if they are made instrumental in opening the way for the proclamation of Life only through Christ in a locality where this blessed truth has not yet been heard. May the Lord hasten it in his time, and raise up men who are not ashamed of unpopular truth. We trust the "Church of England clergyman" referred to in the extract will now be ready to do all in his power to put other minds than his own "quite at rest" upon the momentous subject of human destiny. If endless misery is false, the magnitude of the error cannot be exaggerated. Multitudes are driven into Universalism because they cannot accept the orthodox view; and multitudes more are rushing into infidelity because they suppose the Bible teaches an immortality in suffering for all who fail to come to Christ. Love to God and love to our fellow men should alike impel us onward in the fearless assertion and defense of the life and death doctrine, as revealed in the word of God. If our friend will leave the "onus probandi" (burden of proof) with the advocates of the common theory,—and there is where it certainly belongs,—we have no fears whatever but that his own convictions, when matured, will demand the utter repudiation of the dogma of "the eternal suffering of the wicked." May heavenly wisdom guide him in his researches, and he be made a bold defender of the truth which has begun to enlist his earnest attention. "Reasonableness of Christianity" is the title of Locke's work to which our friend refers. He writes us as follows:—

"We are reading our Advent library diligently and faithfully. I put the sermons and Mr. Grant's pamphlets into the hands of a Church of England clergyman, who, after he had completed their perusal, told me that they had put his mind quite at rest upon subjects concerning which he had been a long time in doubt,—that he no longer believed in the immortality of the soul, (as commonly understood,) or that the eternal torment of the wicked was a Bible doctrine;—his eyes were first opened by "Locke's Reasonableness of the Scriptures," (I think that is the book he mentioned),—but that he was never clearly convinced until he read the books I gave him. He proposed that we should take the 'Bible Examiner' together. You may therefore order a copy to be sent to me, if you please.

After having read and thought a little more on the subjects we discussed, I will write you my views. At present I can only say, that the onus probandi, so far as the formation of my opinion is concerned, will rest with those who attempt to prove the eternal suffering of the wicked."

HYGIENE.—For the information of the sister who inquires why we have "left Hygiene out of the Crisis" and expresses a regret that we have done so, we would say that we deemed it undesirable to keep up that department as a regular feature of our paper. We have designed, however, to give from time to time articles on health among our selected miscellany, though we may have lost sight of it too much.

By the way, Bro. J. Paine Babcock sent us some time since an article on "Experiments with Food, made by celebrated chemists," which he copied from the New York Illustrated News, and which he thinks "may be a benefit to some poor saints that have not the things of this world in abundance." The article, which we give entire, is as follows:—

"We find that in bread every 100 pounds' weight is found to contain 80 pounds of nutritious matter; butcher meat, averaging the various sorts, contains only 31 pounds in 100 pounds; French beans, 80 pounds; peas, 23 pounds; greens and turnips, which are the most aqueous of all vegetables used for domestic purposes, furnish only 8 pounds of solid nutritious substance in 100 pounds; carrots, 14 pounds; and what is very remarkable, as being in opposition to the hitherto acknowledged theory, 100 pounds of potatoes yield only 25 pounds of substance valuable as nutritious. According to this estimate, one pound of good bread is equal to 2 1-2 or 3 pounds of potatoes; and 75 pounds of bread and 30 pounds of butcher meat are equal to 300 pounds of potatoes. Or again, 1 pound of rice or of broad beans, is equal to 4 pounds of cabbage and 3 pounds of turnips. This calculation is considered correct, and may be useful to families, where the best mode of supporting nature should be adopted at the least expense."

CREDENTIALS.—Lay delegates to the Worcester meeting next week should bring with them certificates of election from the Churches which they represent. An omission to attend to this might cause some embarrassment.

AN INQUIRY.—We are requested by a preaching brother to ask Prof. C. F. Hudson, in the Crisis, if the Hebrew word translated "turned" in Psa. 9: 17 "always denotes a return, or turning back, to a former place or state?"

Married Life.

Dr. Holland, in the closing number of a series of interesting "essays upon human life," published in The Springfield Republican, alludes incidentally to the subject of marriage, and says that "there is nothing more common in experience and observation than the partiality felt by young and unmarried men for the society of married women, and the love of unmarried young women for the society of married men. I suppose," continues the Doctor, "nearly every young man and young woman has a time of feeling that all the desirable matches in the world are disposed of, and that the marriageable young persons left are really insipid companions. This is entirely natural, but exceedingly unreasonable. To expect a man to be as much of a man without a wife as with one, is just as reasonable as to expect a half-finished house to be as beautiful as a finished one. It is impossible for an unmarried man, other things being equal, to be as agreeable a companion as a married man; and lest I be suspected of a jest in this statement, I wish to assure my reader that I am entirely in earnest. Intimate contact with the nature of a good woman, in the relation of marriage, is just as necessary to the completeness of manhood, as the details of an architectural design are to the homely conveniences around which they are made to cluster. Every man is a better man for having children, and the more he extends those relations which grow out of the family life, the more does he open up to culture and carry to completeness the very choicest portions of his manly nature. It is natural, therefore, that an unmarried woman should become possessed of the notion that all the desirable men are married; and that the unmarried men should be the subjects of a similar mistake with relation to the other sex. It must be remembered that men and women are made desirable by matrimony, and that half-finished work should not be subjected to any sweeping judgments."

"THE EARNEST EXPECTATION."—An excellent article with this title appears in the editorial columns of the Independent of the 3d inst. We shall give it to our readers entire in our next issue. It will help to deepen the conviction that we are right, as a people, in preferring the Coming of Jesus and the Resurrection of the Dead to the "expectation" of a kingdom for ghosts, located "beyond the bounds of time and space."

"OLD MOSES."—The thanks of our readers are due to Bro. M. H. Piper, of this city, for the principal selected articles on our fourth page this week. Read the story of "Old Moses," and then be thankful to God that his grace can cheer and comfort the bondman in his servitude and make him a blessing to his oppressor. We should "remember those in bonds as bound with them."

ERRATUM.—In Bro. John B. Paine's letter, Crisis of Sept. 25th, third line from bottom, read "war" instead of "word."

Advent Christian Association.

Preachers, delegates, or any others who may wish to attend the meeting of the Advent Christian Association at Worcester, are informed that tickets from Boston to Worcester, (good Oct. 14th to the 18th inclusive) to go and return, can be obtained at half price—$1.25 for both ways—of the undersigned, GEO. T. ADAMS,

167 Hanover Street.

The Holy Spirit in Conversion.

The New Testament distinctly teaches that the heart is renewed and sanctified by the positive and direct influence of the Holy Spirit. To deny this doctrine is to reject the authority of the Scriptures as a divine revelation, upon a subject confessedly beyond the sphere of human consciousness. But this is unphilosophical as well as unchristian. Viewing the Biblical doctrine of regeneration and sanctification by the Holy Spirit simply as a theory of conversion, can any better theory be supposed? Is it said that the mind or heart has power to change itself? Assuredly it has; and it is commanded to repent and turn from sin to holiness. And it never will turn, nor can it be turned, except by its own act. But this does not reach the question, How and Wherefore does it change? Is it said that the truth is adapted to induce the mind to turn from sin? Most certainly it is so adapted, and the preaching of the Gospel is designed for this very purpose. "Ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth." But this again does not explain how the truth comes to exert its transforming and purifying influence. Is it then said that the mind has certain susceptibilities or adaptations for the truth, but that the moral sentiments are overlaid by passional desires, and that hence the soul lies dead in trespasses and sins, until in some favored moment, it knows not how or why, its moral susceptibilities are awakened, and it accepts and obeys the truth? All this again may be true. Such susceptibilities to purifying and ennobling moral influences there are in every human soul. Such favored moments of moral quickening do come to every man. Happy is he who yields to such influences and comes to God in Christ.

But we have not yet reached a philosophical reason for the change. In almost every instance of sincere conversion to Christ, the subject, while he can define his own mental states and processes—the steps, few or many, that led to the change, the experiences that preceded, attended, followed it—still finds it impossible to state why he was moved and led, or why he thought and acted, thus and thus at this time rather than at any other period of his mental history. But when he reads in the Scriptures of the agency of the Holy Spirit in convincing of sin and in calling to repentance, he feels that this meets and explains his case—that there must have been upon him an influence from above. This influence of the Holy Spirit acts in harmony with the laws of mental thought and feeling, and is not properly a subject of consciousness. It is never coercive, but it is none the less persuasive and effectual. We submit, then, that the Biblical doctrine of the agency of the Holy Spirit in conversion and sanctification gives the most philosophical explanation of these phenomena. It introduces a power or influence back of the mind, which is adequate to produce these effects through the powers of the mind itself in their free and normal action. To deny this doctrine is to exclude God from all agency in the world of mind, while yet we concede his agency in the physical universe.

But this doctrine is taught in the New Testament avowedly upon divine authority. Christ declared that, on his return to heaven, the Father would send the Holy Spirit to convince the world of sin, and to guide the disciples into truth. He commanded his disciples to wait at Jerusalem for the visible token of the coming of the Holy Spirit. And from that day onward the apostles ascribe the effect of their preaching, in the conversion and sanctification of souls, to this special power of the Holy Spirit. Hence those ministers who, in describing the moral change of conversion and in exhorting men to this change, fail to recognize the agency of the Holy Spirit in the change, leave out of view the vital source of power. This doctrine of the Holy Spirit should be their own strength and encouragement in preaching. It should be the argument of christians in praying for the efficacy of the Word. It should also be a most potent argument upon the mind of the sinner; at once inciting hope in his struggles to break away from sin, and warning of the peril of resisting or rejecting the grace of God that would bring him salvation. That a minister of the gospel, intent upon the spiritual reformation and salvation of his fellow-men, should throw aside or even disuse this most efficient power in prayer and preaching, is to us a marvel. And yet, if there be not a positive lack of faith in the Spirit's influence, there is in the churches and the ministry a lamentable failure to honor the Holy Spirit in the work of human reform. We can have no philosophy of preaching that will improve upon that simple dependence on the Holy Spirit that Paul manifested, when he said, "My speech and my preaching was not with enticing (or persuasible) words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit, and of power." If, as some suppose, the pulpit has really lost power in these days, that power is to be regained, not by vacating the province of the pulpit and merging it in the rostrum, but by seeking with more earnestness and faith the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Independent.

The Man of Sin.

"But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy unto the end."—DAN. 7: 26.

In the seventh chapter of Daniel, is found a prophecy of four kingdoms, that were to arise successively, covering a period of many centuries. The fourth and last of these universal monarchies was to be divided, and in this condition to continue until the judgment. The event noticed as the "sitting of the judgment" was to take place just before the end of the world.

In examining, briefly, this subject, we may remark that the fourth kingdom is, without doubt, the Roman empire. The description agrees best with this government. So obvious is this, that nearly all Protestant commentators take this ground, and we see no reason why it should be questioned for a moment. It will be found that the entire description finds its correspondencies in this empire.

1. This empire was to be the fourth in order. It is agreed by all that Babylon was the first; Medo-Persia the second; and Grecia the third. This last kingdom was conquered by the Romans, so that Rome became the fourth empire, according to the declaration of Daniel.

2. This empire was to be oppressive. The history of Rome fully confirms this. The nations conquered by the Romans were oppressed by taxation, and some of them enslaved. The Romans did more than all other nations toward subjecting the Jews, and finally in destroying them. It persecuted the church for nearly three hundred years, during which time it is computed that ten millions suffered martyrdom.

3. This empire was to be divided. Subsequent to the reign of Constantine, the western empire of Rome was divided into ten kingdoms, and that before A. D. 500; thus fulfilling the declaration, that "ten kingdoms shall arise." This fact is acceded to by both Protestant and Catholic writers; hence we may regard this as already fulfilled.

4. After this fourth kingdom was divided, another kingdom or government was to come up. Protestant writers are generally agreed that the power spoken of refers to the Papacy. And to confirm this view, we may remark that the description of the prophet fully agrees with this position. (1.) The Papacy came into existence after the division of the Roman empire. (2.) It was diverse from those ten kingdoms. (3.) It was a blasphemous power. (4.) The saints, or people of God, were given into the hands of this power. (5.) The church were persecuted by it throughout many ages.

Now as the church were to be persecuted for 1260 years, and as they are not persecuted at the present time, it follows that the 1260 years are ended; and if so, when did they end? I do not at the present time purpose to say at what point the days ended, but simply refer to one or two facts which bear upon the subject.

There is no doubt, it seems to me, that it is perfectly safe to say the Church has not been in the hands of the Catholic power since the French revolution; and if this be so, then sometime prior to the year 534, the saints must have been given into his hands. The work to "unite all men in one faith," commenced in 519, but was not perfected until sometime afterward. But between 519 and 534, this work of "giving the saints into his hand" took place. Between these two points, the 1260 years commenced. The accession to power, by Justinian, in 527, is a very interesting point, and especially so, when we consider the subsequent acts of this monarch. He was a rigid Catholic, and sought to unite all men in the Catholic faith; and even persecuted those who differed from him. To say nothing of his acts at an earlier date, we may remark that in 532 he published an edict, which looks very much like the giving of the saints into his hands. It is thus spoken of by the historian:—

"While the Arian king was striving, by the most just and equitable laws, to clear the Church from all simony in the west, the Catholic emperor was employing the most unjust and unchristian means of clearing her from all heresies in the east, that of persecution, and the most cruel persecution any christian emperor had yet set on foot, or countenanced. For by an edict which he issued to unite all men in one faith, whether Jews, Gentiles, or Christians, such as did not, in the term of three months, embrace and profess the Catholic faith, were declared infamous, and, as such, excluded from all employments, both civil and military, rendered incapable of leaving any thing by will, and their estates confiscated, whether real or personal. These were convincing arguments of the truths of the Catholic faith; but many, however, withstood them; and against such as did, the imperial edict was executed with the utmost rigor. Great numbers were driven from their habitations with their wives and children, stripped and naked. Others betook themselves to flight, carrying with them what they could conceal, for their support and maintainance; but they were plundered of the little they had, and many of them inhumanly massacred, by the Catholic peasants, or the soldiery, who guarded the passes."

Now when we take into the account the fact, that an event, corresponding to the taking away of the power of the Papacy, or, in the language of the prophet, the "sitting of the judgment" on this power, did actually take place during the French Revolution, it strengthens the position that the events which took place during the reign of Justinian, and especially the one before alluded to, was the very one which accomplished the prediction of giving "the saints into the hands" of this power. That the Catholic power did meet with reverses during the French Revolution of a character to justify a belief that the "judgment did sit" on this power, is evident from the following:—

"At the commencement of the French Revolution, the clergy in France were both numerous and wealthy. They amounted to no less than eighteen Archbishops, one hundred and eleven Bishops, and one hundred and fifty thousand Priests, having under their control a revenue of five millions sterling, annually, besides three thousand four hundred convents. The clergy and their wealth were now attacked by the infidel revolutionists, and fell an easy prey. The tithes and revenues of the clergy were taken away, by a decree of the Constituent Assembly; the possessions of the Church were now declared to be the property of the nation; the religious orders were abolished, the monks and nuns ejected from their convents, and their immense wealth seized for the nation. The revolutionary torrent, which was thus set in motion, destroyed law, government and religion in France; and laid waste the ROMAN CHURCH, both there and in neighboring countries. The Priests were massacred, her silver shrines and saints were turned into money for the payment of the troops, her bells were converted into cannon, and her churches and convents into barracks for soldiers. From the Atlantic to the Adriatic she presented but one appalling spectacle. She had shed the blood of saints and prophets and God now gave her blood to drink." (Hist. of the Church, by Goodrich, pp. 183, 184.)

"A civil constitution was formed for the clergy, to which all were required to swear, on pain of death or banishment. The great body refused, and priest, and altar were overturned, and blood, once esteemed sacred, flowed to the horses' bridles. Such as could, escaped through a thousand dangers, and found an asylum in foreign countries. No tongue can tell the woes of the nation." (Marsh's Ec. His., p. 300.)

How evident it is that we are living near the coming of Christ. The event is to transpire immediately after the consump-

career of Louis Napoleon. Yet this is the view held by many, I think, who urge a past fulfillment of the slaying of these witnesses. I think I can see, however, how it may have a fulfillment under the last phase of the apostasy—the beast and his image. Spiritualism, in all its blasphemy, is to be accepted by the christian world generally, and become nationalized by a union of Church and State, when all must acknowledge the divine origin of Spiritualism, and the same authority for their course, or be subject to oppression, persecution, and perhaps death, at the hands of the ruling power.

God in his mercy will not suffer the christian world to come up to the judgment occupying a middle ground. All Christendom must be fairly tested on their devotion to God and his truth. They must be compelled to choose between the gospel, pure and unadulterated, though unpopular, and bold Atheism popularized. This testing season, which, I verily believe, we are just entering, or have commenced, will be "the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world to try them." This test is manifest in the account of the false Christ's of Matt., where we are assured that if it were possible they would deceive the very elect, which implies strongly that no others will have power to escape their deceptions. Also in the account of the strong delusion attending the Man of Sin, when all those who receive not the love of the truth shall become victims to this delusion, believe a lie, and be damned. And under the reign of the "beast and his image," "all, both free and bond, rich and poor, great and small," are divided into two classes,—those who receive the mark of the beast and those who refuse, at the hazard of their lives, to receive his mark, or worship him.

But in this apostasy of Christendom, God will not suffer them to depart without a faithful warning. Hence, during this hour of temptation, while men are making their choice of Spiritualism, God's witnesses will be reminding them of their departure from the faith. As the apostasy looms up, the witnesses vary their messages according to the stage of its development. Making present the most important truth, when she presents in her departure the phase of Atheism simply, or a corruption in doctrines. The present phase of Spiritualism—the message of the church directed against the apostasy, is against this feature. See Rev. 14: 6. When there is a considerable departure of the Christian world to the corruptions, message of the witnesses, warning them of their tendency, announces this. Rev. 14: 8 and 18: 2, 3. No longer able to restrain them from their headlong course by showing the falsity of their position in the sight of God, and the immorality of their lives, they now admonish them to come back for fear of greater "sins" and "plagues," sure to come upon them if they persist in their course with the mass, saying, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues," Rev. 18: 4.

When the apostasy has become so general as to take the lead in the world, they organize on the principles of their new religion, what they will announce as the fulfillment of the Scripture predictions of the "Millennium,"—"The New Jerusalem,"—the "Kingdom of Heaven on Earth," and, with the false Christ at its head, will proclaim that Christ has come, and will now take possession of the earth as his own, when all must submit, or they will take measures to exterminate them, as enemies to the reign of their Christ. This brings out the last message of the witnesses, usually called the third angel's message.—Rev. 14: 9, 10. In this they admonish them against receiving the mark of the beast and his image, assuring them that such shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, in the plagues to be poured out on them. They do this at the hazard of their lives, but they shrink not from a faithful warning of the apostate world on the verge of ruin. This is their last message. It finishes their testimony. The apostates are hardened beyond recovery, and the further testimony of the witnesses would be unavailing.

The Bibles are now burned by public authority, and the church, which has been reproving these apostates to their annoyance, has now to suffer a sore persecution, when it will be said, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," "that they may rest from their labors." This will be the slaying of the witnesses, and in this state they will remain, or those who shall live through it, during three days and a half (in years.) When these witnesses have finished their testimony, and have fled for safety to the dens and caves of earth, these apostates will make merry over their supposed annihilation of christianity, and their relief from the reproof of these witnesses. But their triumph will be short, for soon will the seven last plagues fall upon them and continue with them till the Lord comes. L. K. LOMBARD.

E. Stoneham, Me., Sept. 30th, 1861.

There is not a word in our tongue but the Lord knoweth it altogether. "O [illegible] wise to choose out lot and regulate [illegible] The very hairs of our head are all numbered."—"In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths."—

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 9, 1861.

Inherent Immortality and the Blessed Hope of the Gospel.

By inherent immortality we mean the widely prevalent opinion that all men possess deathless spirits; and the particular aspect of the doctrine to which we now direct attention, is the sentiment that believers in death are personally present with the Redeemer, in paradise or in heaven. We name both these localities because a distinction between them is recognized in current religious thinking, and among those who maintain the distinction unanimity does not exist as to whether departed saints, in their disembodied state, are in paradise, merely, or in heaven itself—the former place (some might prefer to say state) being regarded, with respect to glory, as inferior to the latter, or as the ante-chamber leading to it. We remark, however, that whatever view is taken of this question, there is a very general agreement that the departed spirits of the good are with Christ.

By the blessed hope of the gospel, we mean, of course, the second "glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." By it we refer to the consummation of the Master's promise—"I will come again, and receive you to myself" By it we designate the event which loomed up before the faith of a beloved Apostle when, seeking to pour comfort into the hearts of a sorrowing Church, he said—"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God."

We present these two doctrines in connection for the purpose of remarking upon the obvious and irreconcilable conflict which exists between them as matters of Christian faith. Both views cannot exert their legitimate influence upon the same individual at the same time. This fact is matter of observation everywhere in christendom—the reason for it ought to be misunderstood by none To believe practically that "death is the gate to endless joy," is necessarily to feel little or no interest in the coming of the Lord and "our gathering together unto him" at his advent. On the other hand, to be profoundly impressed with the truth of the Bridegroom's return, and with the scenes of grandeur and glory which wait upon the coming of the day of God, implies a recognition of the truth that death is a foe whose dreary domains can never be pierced by the light of life until he comes who holds the keys of hades.

The danger that the notion of disembodied felicity should usurp the place which Christ's coming ought to occupy in the faith of the Church, is more than hinted at in the following remarks from that able writer on the second advent, Rev. David Brown, of Scotland:—

"It is not enough that we believe the doctrines of Scripture numerically, so to speak. We must believe them as they are revealed—in their revealed collocations and bearings. Implicit submission to the authority of God's word obviously includes this. If, then, Christ's second appearing, instead of being full in the view of the Church, as we find it in the New Testament, is shifted into the back ground, while other anticipations are advanced into its room, which, though themselves Scriptural, do not occupy in Scripture the place which we assign to them, are we 'trembling' at the authority and the wisdom of God in his Word, or are we not rather 'leaning to our own understanding?'"

Several important items are stated in the foregoing. 1. The second appearing of Christ will be full in the view of any Church whose faith is conformed to the New Testament. 2. There is danger of shifting the doctrine of the advent into the background to make room for "other anticipations." 3. Mr. B. seems to concede that these "other anticipations" may be Scriptural!

Of course the reader will infer that Mr. Brown has in view the popular idea of going to glory at death when he speaks of "other anticipations." This is the fact, and in order to keep the advent in the foreground, and death in the back ground, he does not tell his readers that death is "but the voice that Jesus sends, to call us to his arms." No—consistency will not permit him to talk in such a strain, popular though it be. Another extract will show the reader how death is viewed by Mr. B. He says:—

"The death of believers, however changed in its character, in virtue of their union to Christ, is, intrinsically considered, not joyous, but grievous—not attractive, but repulsive. It is the disruption of a tie which the Creator formed for perpetuity—the unnatural and abhorrent divorce of parties made for sweet and uninterrupted fellowship. The bliss of the disembodied spirits of the just is not only incomplete, but, in some sense, private and fragmentary, if I may so express myself."

Upon this we observe, that to us the thought of sleeping in Jesus has greater charms than a state which involves "the unnatural and abhorrent divorce of parties made for sweet and uninterrupted fellowship," and in which the "bliss" of the saved is "incomplete, private and fragmentary"? [illegible] the reunion of the divorced "parties" referred to by Mr. Brown? Theologians have a good deal to say about the immortal soul returning to reinhabit the body, at the resurrection—but where does the Word of God talk thus? Echo answers, where? Jesus does not say—"I will bring him down from the land of spirits in the last day," but, "I will RAISE HIM UP in the last day." Again we might inquire, Where does the Bible speak of "bliss" in a life beyond the present, except as it points us to "the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory"—to the "fullness of joy" in God's "presence" and the "pleasures forevermore" at his "right hand"? These, blessed be God, are not "incomplete," but perfect! Neither are they "private," for they shall be shared, in all their infinitude of joy, by the whole redeemed host of God's elect.

We have seen how Mr. Brown views death. In contrast with that hear what he says concerning the coming of Jesus. We quote once more:—

"But at the Redeemer's appearing all the redeemed will be called together, and perfectly, publicly and simultaneously glorified. It is necessary to point out the inferiority, in practical power, of the one prospect to the other, or to indicate the superior class of ideas and feelings which the latter is fitted to generate."

How grateful should we be for Scriptural light concerning man's condition in death. Every thing, with us who see the truth in this direction, hangs upon the resurrection of the dead, and this in turn hangs upon the coming of Jesus. Let us, then, while we actively prepare to stand approved before the Son of Man, say with the poet—

"We'll wait till Jesus comes—we'll wait,
And then be gathered home."

"Retribution."

A Methodist preacher, who advocates the eternal misery of the wicked, and to whom during our recent absence we sold a copy of Bro. Hastings' new work, writes us as follows:—

"I have hastily read Hastings' book, and call it unanswerable in the main: hope you will read it carefully and prayerfully. I am surprised at one thing, and that is—he goes into no argument or proof of the final annihilation of the wicked. I think I understood you to say that was his view."

We did inform the writer of the above note that the author of "Retribution" held the doctrine of the literal destruction of the wicked, and if the former will read the work "carefully," as he wishes us to do, he will find that it is not a defense of endless torment. Were the fact otherwise, the author would be strangely inconsistent with himself, for in his work on "Pauline Theology," as quoted at some length in another part of this paper, he declares that—"the idea of a God that torments and tortures his enemies; and preserves them by his omnipotence, that he may torment them in his wrath, was unknown to, and untaught by those early teachers of the truth of God." Should it, however, turn out that the dominant "idea" in "Retribution" is this very one which "was unknown to and untaught by" the apostles, our surprise will find alleviation in the fact that "the corruptions of vain philosophy and the traditions of heathen teachers" have not entirely ceased to exert their baleful influence in the world. We do not now affirm that "Retribution" is obnoxious to the charge here suggested, but if it is not, it seems to us that even a hasty perusal of its pages should have sufficed to convince an intelligent Minister that its author repudiates the endless torture theory! However this may be, we are free to say that if we had published a book of one hundred and fifty-six pages on "the doom of the ungodly," we should esteem our effort rather dubiously complimented if an advocate of the common orthodox view should, having perused our work, pronounce it "unanswerable in the main," and have failed to discover any clear assertion by us of "the final annihilation of the wicked"!

We take occasion again to recommend to the careful perusal of our readers Bro. Hastings' work on "Retribution." It can be ordered from this office or from the author at Providence, R. I. In the Preface, Bro. Hastings says—"The point in dispute is not who thinks he is right, but who is right? In settling such questions we are not to rest upon assertions, but upon facts, and the question is not who says he is right, but who proves it." What Bro. H. has said and what he has proved in "Retribution," can only be known by those who read the book. So forward your orders. The price, we believe, is intended to be 38 cents, though it is printed "38 cents" on the first and "25 cts." on the fourth page of the cover. Will the author inform our readers definitely which is the correct price?

While upon this subject, it occurs to us to mention that Bro. R. E. Ladd has signified his willingness to pay for twenty copies of "Retribution," to be sent to as many persons believing that the wicked dead will be made alive and afterwards destroyed, provided such persons will buy and read the work entitled "Life from the Dead; or, The Righteous only will Live again." The offer is before our readers; let those avail themselves of it who wish to "prove all things" and "hold fast that [illegible]

Light Advancing.

We give below an extract from a private letter received by us a few days ago from a friend—an educated gentleman and a member of the legal profession—in Canada. Himself and wife recently paid us a visit, and carried with them, on their return, an ample assortment of works on the Immortality question. We are much gratified to learn that the publications are doing a missionary work, and shall not be surprised if they are made instrumental in opening the way for the proclamation of Life only through Christ in a locality where this blessed truth has not yet been heard. May the Lord hasten it in his time, and raise up men who are not ashamed of unpopular truth. We trust the "Church of England clergyman" referred to in the extract will now be ready to do all in his power to put other minds than his own "quite at rest" upon the momentous subject of human destiny. If endless misery is false, the magnitude of the error cannot be exaggerated. Multitudes are driven into Universalism because they cannot accept the orthodox view; and multitudes more are rushing into infidelity because they suppose the Bible teaches an immortality in suffering for all who fail to come to Christ. Love to God and love to our fellow men should alike impel us onward in the fearless assertion and defense of the life and death doctrine, as revealed in the word of God. If our friend will leave the "onus probandi" (burden of proof) with the advocates of the common theory,—and there is where it certainly belongs,—we have no fears whatever but that his own convictions, when matured, will demand the utter repudiation of the dogma of "the eternal suffering of the wicked." May heavenly wisdom guide him in his researches, and he be made a bold defender of the truth which has begun to enlist his earnest attention. "Reasonableness of Christianity" is the title of Locke's work to which our friend refers. He writes us as follows:—

"We are reading our Advent library diligently and faithfully. I put the sermons and Mr. Grant's pamphlets into the hands of a Church of England clergyman, who, after he had completed their perusal, told me that they had put his mind quite at rest upon subjects concerning which he had been a long time in doubt,—that he no longer believed in the immortality of the soul, (as commonly understood,) or that the eternal torment of the wicked was a Bible doctrine;—his eyes were first opened by "Locke's Reasonableness of the Scriptures," (I think that is the book he mentioned),—but that he was never clearly convinced until he read the books I gave him. He proposed that we should take the 'Bible Examiner' together. You may therefore order a copy to be sent to me, if you please.

After having read and thought a little more on the subjects we discussed, I will write you my views. At present I can only say, that the onus probandi, so far as the formation of my opinion is concerned, will rest with those who attempt to prove the eternal suffering of the wicked."

HYGIENE.—For the information of the sister who inquires why we have "left Hygiene out of the Crisis" and expresses a regret that we have done so, we would say that we deemed it undesirable to keep up that department as a regular feature of our paper. We have designed, however, to give from time to time articles on health among our selected miscellany, though we may have lost sight of it too much.

By the way, Bro. J. Paine Babcock sent us some time since an article on "Experiments with Food, made by celebrated chemists," which he copied from the New York Illustrated News, and which he thinks "may be a benefit to some poor saints that have not the things of this world in abundance." The article, which we give entire, is as follows:—

"We find that in bread every 100 pounds' weight is found to contain 80 pounds of nutritious matter; butcher meat, averaging the various sorts, contains only 31 pounds in 100 pounds; French beans, 80 pounds; peas, 23 pounds; greens and turnips, which are the most aqueous of all vegetables used for domestic purposes, furnish only 8 pounds of solid nutritious substance in 100 pounds; carrots, 14 pounds; and what is very remarkable, as being in opposition to the hitherto acknowledged theory, 100 pounds of potatoes yield only 25 pounds of substance valuable as nutritious. According to this estimate, one pound of good bread is equal to 2 1-2 or 3 pounds of potatoes; and 75 pounds of bread and 30 pounds of butcher meat are equal to 300 pounds of potatoes. Or again, 1 pound of rice or of broad beans, is equal to 4 pounds of cabbage and 3 pounds of turnips. This calculation is considered correct, and may be useful to families, where the best mode of supporting nature should be adopted at the least expense."

CREDENTIALS.—Lay delegates to the Worcester meeting next week should bring with them certificates of election from the Churches which they represent. An omission to attend to this might cause some embarrassment.

AN INQUIRY.—We are requested by a preaching brother to ask Prof. C. F. Hudson, in the Crisis, if the Hebrew word translated "turned" in Psa. 9: 17 "always" denotes a return, or turning back, to a former place or state?

Married Life.

Dr. Holland, in the closing number of a series of interesting "essays upon human life," published in The Springfield Republican, alludes incidentally to the subject of marriage, and says that "there is nothing more common in experience and observation than the partiality felt by young and unmarried men for the society of married women, and the love of unmarried young women for the society of married men. I suppose," continues the Doctor, "nearly every young man and young woman has a time of feeling that all the desirable matches in the world are disposed of, and that the marriageable young persons left are really insipid companions. This is entirely natural, but exceedingly unreasonable. To expect a man to be as much of a man without a wife as with one, is just as reasonable as to expect a half-finished house to be as beautiful as a finished one. It is impossible for an unmarried man, other things being equal, to be as agreeable a companion as a married man; and lest I be suspected of a jest in this statement, I wish to assure my reader that I am entirely in earnest. Intimate contact with the nature of a good woman, in the relation of marriage, is just as necessary to the completeness of manhood, as the details of an architectural design are to the homely conveniences around which they are made to cluster. Every man is a better man for having children, and the more he extends those relations which grow out of the family life, the more does he open up to culture and carry to completeness the very choicest portions of his manly nature. It is natural, therefore, that an unmarried woman should become possessed of the notion that all the desirable men are married; and that the unmarried men should be the subjects of a similar mistake with relation to the other sex. It must be remembered that men and women are made desirable by matrimony, and that half-finished work should not be subjected to any sweeping judgments."

"THE EARNEST EXPECTATION."—An excellent article with this title appears in the editorial columns of the Independent of the 3d inst. We shall give it to our readers entire in our next issue. It will help to deepen the conviction that we are right, as a people, in preferring the Coming of Jesus and the Resurrection of the Dead to the "expectation" of a kingdom for ghosts, located "beyond the bounds of time and space."

"OLD MOSES."—The thanks of our readers are due to Bro. M. H. Piper, of this city, for the principal selected articles on our fourth page this week. Read the story of "Old Moses," and then be thankful to God that his grace can cheer and comfort the bondman in his servitude and make him a blessing to his oppressor. We should "remember those in bonds as bound with them."

ERRATUM.—In Bro. John B. Paine's letter, Crisis of Sept. 25th, third line from bottom, read "war" instead of "word."

Advent Christian Association.

Preachers, delegates, or any others who may wish to attend the meeting of the Advent Christian Association at Worcester, are informed that tickets from Boston to Worcester, (good Oct. 14th to the 18th inclusive) to go and return, can be obtained at half price—$1.25 for both ways—of the undersigned, GEO. T. ADAMS,
167 Hanover Street.

The Holy Spirit in Conversion.

The New Testament distinctly teaches that the heart is renewed and sanctified by the positive and direct influence of the Holy Spirit. To deny this doctrine is to reject the authority of the Scriptures as a divine revelation, upon a subject confessedly beyond the sphere of human consciousness. But this is unphilosophical as well as unchristian. Viewing the Biblical doctrine of regeneration and sanctification by the Holy Spirit simply as a theory of conversion, can any better theory be supposed? Is it said that the mind or heart has power to change itself? Assuredly it has; and it is commanded to repent and turn from sin to holiness. And it never will turn, nor can it be turned, except by its own act. But this does not reach the question, How and Wherefore does it change? Is it said that the truth is adapted to induce the mind to turn from sin? Most certainly it is so adapted, and the preaching of the Gospel is designed for this very purpose. "Ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth." But this again does not explain how the truth comes to exert its transforming and purifying influence. Is it then said that the mind has certain susceptibilities or adaptations for the truth, but that the moral sentiments are overlaid by passional desires, and that hence the soul lies dead in trespasses and sins, until in some favored moment, it knows not how or why, its moral susceptibilities are awakened, and it accepts and obeys the truth? All this again may be true. Such susceptibilities to purifying and ennobling moral influences there are in every human soul. Such favored moments of moral quickening do come to every man. Happy is he who yields to such influences and comes to God in Christ.

But we have not yet reached a philosophical reason for the change. In almost every instance of sincere conversion to Christ, the subject, while he can define his own mental states and processes—the steps, few or many, that led to the change, the experiences that preceded, attended, followed it—still finds it impossible to state why he was moved and led, or why he thought and acted, thus and thus at this time rather than at any other period of his mental history. But when he reads in the Scriptures of the agency of the Holy Spirit in convincing of sin and in calling to repentance, he feels that this meets and explains his case—that there must have been upon him an influence from above. This influence of the Holy Spirit acts in harmony with the laws of mental thought and feeling, and is not properly a subject of consciousness. It is never coercive, but it is none the less persuasive and effectual. We submit, then, that the Biblical doctrine of the agency of the Holy Spirit in conversion and sanctification gives the most philosophical explanation of these phenomena. It introduces a power or influence back of the mind, which is adequate to produce these effects through the powers of the mind itself in their free and normal action. To deny this doctrine is to exclude God from all agency in the world of mind, while yet we concede his agency in the physical universe.

But this doctrine is taught in the New Testament avowedly upon divine authority. Christ declared that, on his return to heaven, the Father would send the Holy Spirit to convince the world of sin, and to guide the disciples into truth. He commanded his disciples to wait at Jerusalem for the visible token of the coming of the Holy Spirit. And from that day onward the apostles ascribe the effect of their preaching, in the conversion and sanctification of souls, to this special power of the Holy Spirit. Hence those ministers who, in describing the moral change of conversion and in exhorting men to this change, fail to recognize the agency of the Holy Spirit in the change, leave out of view the vital source of power. This doctrine of the Holy Spirit should be their own strength and encouragement in preaching. It should be the argument of christians in praying for the efficacy of the Word. It should also be a most potent argument upon the mind of the sinner; at once inciting hope in his struggles to break away from sin, and warning of the peril of resisting or rejecting the grace of God that would bring him salvation. That a minister of the gospel, intent upon the spiritual reformation and salvation of his fellow-men, should throw aside or even disuse this most efficient power in prayer and preaching, is to us a marvel. And yet, if there be not a positive lack of faith in the Spirit's influence, there is in the churches and the ministry a lamentable failure to honor the Holy Spirit in the work of human reform. We can have no philosophy of preaching that will improve upon that simple dependence on the Holy Spirit that Paul manifested, when he said, "My speech and my preaching was not with enticing (or persuasible) words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit, and of power." If, as some suppose, the pulpit has really lost power in these days, that power is to be regained, not by vacating the province of the pulpit and merging it in the rostrum, but by seeking with more earnestness and faith the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Independent.

The Man of Sin.

"But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy unto the end."—DAN. 7: 26.

In the seventh chapter of Daniel, is found a prophecy of four kingdoms, that were to arise successively, covering a period of many centuries. The fourth and last of these universal monarchies was to be divided, and in this condition to continue until the judgment. The event noticed as the "sitting of the judgment" was to take place just before the end of the world.

In examining, briefly, this subject, we may remark that the fourth kingdom is, without doubt, the Roman empire. The description agrees best with this government. So obvious is this, that nearly all Protestant commentators take this ground, and we see no reason why it should be questioned for a moment. It will be found that the entire description finds its correspondencies in this empire.

1. This empire was to be the fourth in order. It is agreed by all that Babylon was the first; Medo-Persia the second; and Grecia the third. This last kingdom was conquered by the Romans, so that Rome became the fourth empire, according to the declaration of Daniel.

2. This empire was to be oppressive. The history of Rome fully confirms this. The nations conquered by the Romans were oppressed by taxation, and some of them enslaved. The Romans did more than all other nations toward subjecting the Jews, and finally in destroying them. It persecuted the church for nearly three hundred years, during which time it is computed that ten millions suffered martyrdom.

3. This empire was to be divided. Subsequent to the reign of Constantine, the western empire of Rome was divided into ten kingdoms, and that before A. D. 500; thus fulfilling the declaration, that "ten kingdoms shall arise." This fact is acceded to by both Protestant and Catholic writers; hence we may regard this as already fulfilled.

4. After this fourth kingdom was divided, another kingdom or government was to come up. Protestant writers are generally agreed that the power spoken of refers to the Papacy. And to confirm this view, we may remark that the description of the prophet fully agrees with this position. (1.) The Papacy came into existence after the division of the Roman empire. (2.) It was diverse from those ten kingdoms. (3.) It was a blasphemous power. (4.) The saints, or people of God, were given into the hands of this power. (5.) The church were persecuted by it throughout many ages.

Now as the church were to be persecuted for 1260 years, and as they are not persecuted at the present time, it follows that the 1260 years are ended; and if so, when did they end? I do not at the present time purpose to say at what point the days ended, but simply refer to one or two facts which bear upon the subject.

There is no doubt, it seems to me, that it is perfectly safe to say the Church has not been in the hands of the Catholic power since the French revolution; and if this be so, then sometime prior to the year 534, the saints must have been given into his hands. The work to "unite all men in one faith," commenced in 519, but was not perfected until sometime afterward. But between 519 and 534, this work of "giving the saints into his hand" took place. Between these two points, the 1260 years commenced. The accession to power, by Justinian, in 527, is a very interesting point, and especially so, when we consider the subsequent acts of this monarch. He was a rigid Catholic, and sought to unite all men in the Catholic faith; and even persecuted those who differed from him. To say nothing of his acts at an earlier date, we may remark that in 532 he published an edict, which looks very much like the giving of the saints into his hands. It is thus spoken of by the historian:—

"While the Arian king was striving, by the most just and equitable laws, to clear the Church from all simony in the west, the Catholic emperor was employing the most unjust and unchristian means of clearing her from all heresies in the east, that of persecution, and the most cruel persecution any christian emperor had yet set on foot, or countenanced. For by an edict which he issued to unite all men in one faith, whether Jews, Gentiles, or Christians, such as did not, in the term of three months, embrace and profess the Catholic faith, were declared infamous, and, as such, excluded from all employments, both civil and military, rendered incapable of leaving any thing by will, and their estates confiscated, whether real or personal. These were convincing arguments of the truths of the Catholic faith; but many, however, withstood them; and against such as did, the imperial edict was executed with the utmost rigor. Great numbers were driven from their habitations with their wives and children, stripped and naked. Others betook themselves to flight, carrying with them what they could conceal, for their support and maintainance; but they were plundered of the little they had, and many of them inhumanly massacred, by the Catholic peasants, or the soldiery, who guarded the passes."

Now when we take into the account the fact, that an event, corresponding to the taking away of the power of the Papacy, or, in the language of the prophet, the "sitting of the judgment" on this power, did actually take place during the French Revolution, it strengthens the position that the events which took place during the reign of Justinian, and especially the one before alluded to, was the very one which accomplished the prediction of giving "the saints into the hands" of this power. That the Catholic power did meet with reverses during the French Revolution of a character to justify a belief that the "judgment did sit" on this power, is evident from the following:—

"At the commencement of the French Revolution, the clergy in France were both numerous and wealthy. They amounted to no less than eighteen Archbishops, one hundred and eleven Bishops, and one hundred and fifty thousand Priests, having under their control a revenue of five millions sterling, annually, besides three thousand four hundred convents. The clergy and their wealth were now attacked by the infidel revolutionists, and fell an easy prey. The tithes and revenues of the clergy were taken away, by a decree of the Constituent Assembly; the possessions of the Church were now declared to be the property of the nation; the religious orders were abolished, the monks and nuns ejected from their convents, and their immense wealth seized for the nation. The revolutionary torrent, which was thus set in motion, destroyed law, government and religion in France, and laid waste the ROMAN CHURCH, both there and in neighboring countries. The Priests were massacred, her silver shrines and saints were turned into money for the payment of the troops, her bells were converted into cannon, and her churches and convents into barracks for soldiers. From the Atlantic to the Adriatic she presented but one appalling spectacle. She had shed the blood of saints and prophets and God now gave her blood to drink." (Hist. of the Church, by Goodrich, pp. 183, 184.)

"A civil constitution was formed for the clergy, to which all were required to swear, on pain of death or banishment. The great body refused, and priest and altar were overturned, and blood, once esteemed sacred, flowed to the horses' bridles. Such as could, escaped through a thousand dangers, and found an asylum in foreign countries. No tongue can tell the woes of the nation." (Marsh's Ec. His., p. 300.)

How evident it is that we are living near the coming of Christ. The event to transpire immediately after the consumption of the power of the "man of sin," is the return of the Saviour to this world. The fulfillment of prophecy, the signs of the times, all indicate the fact that we are living near the end. It is the next great event. That is coming, and coming soon; we cannot doubt it. May we be ready to hail it with joy when it shall come.

F. H. B.

For the Crisis.

"To the Poor Indian."

I had the pleasure of spending an hour or two this evening in listening to an able and impressive lecture on the "Wrongs of the Indian, and the remedy for those wrongs," by Father Beeson, the friend of the red man, and of drinking into my soul the sweet and touching music as "Laroogua" alone can give birth to. It is truly astonishing to behold the power of enchantment she possesses; all eyes are riveted upon the singer, and all ears are open to catch each note as it falls so delightfully from the lips of this beautiful "child of the forest."

The lecture was well calculated to excite that interest in the well-being of the Indian which every Christian heart should feel. The lecturer painted in living colors the sufferings and misery of the red man. He told how they are robbed, cheated and murdered by men wearing the cloak of civilization, the Border-ruffian considering the poor Indian as proper food for his rifle. If there exists an idea worthy of Satan, it is that the "Indian is doomed to vanish before the march of civilization." Civilization! nay, barbarism rather. The noble Indian stands forth in the majesty of his manhood, and challenges mankind with his cry, "Am I not a man and a brother?" Can we say no?

The impression has gone forth that the Indians are all savages; and to the imagination of the emigrant rise visions of the reeking scalping knife and hideous war dance. That the red man can be civilized and christianized, the present position of the Creek, Chippewa, Cherokee and other tribes bear ample testimony. And because all the frontier Indians are not so, who is to blame? Had one-tenth of the means appropriated by Congress been employed to its legitimate use, and not been stolen by corrupt government officials and others, the same happy results might have flowed among other tribes. And the charge can be made fearlessly, that of the immense sums of money, etc., designed for the Indian, he has received not 5 per cent.

We have lately held a day of "fasting, humiliation and prayer," because God has, after long suffering, begun to pour out the vials of his wrath upon us for our sins. Now if I believe anything sincerely, it is this: that God is visiting this nation with judgment among other things for its treatment of the Indian. We behold the melancholy spectacle of some tribes arraying themselves under the black banner of secession—who should have remained neutral or else sided with the government, which they undoubtedly would have done if they had had sufficient evidence that the government was their friend! I believe they have been forced to this step by the system of fraud and corruption practiced by those entrusted with the Indian's interests, and who to them appeared as the representatives of the Government.

I love the Indian race. I say not this as a result of momentary enthusiasm, but a life-long feeling. I want to see them occupy the position that they can occupy, and will yet occupy. For as soon, and perhaps before this unhappy war is over, the case of the poor Indian will receive attention, and then many who are now gloating over their spoils and numberless victims, will be awakened from their fancied security, and a day of judgment will begin. I feel to thank the Lord that we have at last a man in the Presidential Chair—a man who dares to do right, and who will do right.

We have also an exhibition of the effect of Orthodoxy on the Indian. It is well known that the untutored Indian believes he is the child of the Great Spirit, and when he dies he goes to the happy hunting ground of his fathers. Now the teaching of such doctrines as total depravity, eternal misery, etc., are to the Indian abhorrent, and grate harshly upon his fine feelings. Tell him he is a child of wrath—totally depraved—must do wrong, etc., and for doing what his nature forces him to do he is to be eternally tormented, and tell him this is the truth of the Bible, and with disgust he turns away from such a book, and spurns such a religion. Is it not time a better theology were taught them? What fearful havoc these dogmas make! The Spiritualist is ready to sound in Indian ears the charge that this is christianity, and offer his new revelation in its stead.

If these thoughts arouse a better feeling in any breast for the poor Indian, I shall be content. Brethren, can we do any thing for this noble race? Can we not pray for them? Cannot tracts be sent among them, printed in their own language, teaching [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Will the Wicked Dead live again?

(Continued.)

The word zoee, rendered life, meaning "animated existence, state of being alive, eternal life, immortality," is used in the N. T., as applied directly to the righteous, about 90 times; the noun life, simply, without any qualifying term, about 40 times; eternal life, 36; and everlasting life, 14 times. But the term life, when from zoee, signifies eternal or everlasting life.

It may be well here to inquire, why the terms eternal, or everlasting, ever need be applied to the noun life, if it is not plainly to show that the word life—from zoee—is always to be understood as something different from anazoo, to live again, without any promise of eternal future existence. This is made plain by the passage in John 3: 36—"He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life: (zoee) and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, (zoee)." Yet, still, such may live again, (anazoo), and the wrath of God may abide upon them, i. e., they may be "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord."

It is difficult to conceive how any one can frame the idea that the wicked dead will not live again! We believe no one pretends that there is any positive testimony in the passages we have cited, to prove the wicked will not live again, but they infer that the passages so teach! But what testimony can be more positive or explicit than we have already adduced to prove the wicked dead will live again? If there was no other testimony than the passage in Rev. 20: 5, it seems it should be enough. For if Christ lived, or revived, (anazoo) Rom. 14: 3, then must the wicked dead live again, or be revived, (anazoo), as the primary meaning of the word revive, as given by Webster, is—"To return to life, to recover life"; and he refers to 1 Kings 17: 22, and Rom. 14: 9, as proof. Who can set aside such testimony as this?

T. M. PREBLE.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 24, 1861.

To the Brethren.

I am under the necessity of saying to the brethren in different parts of the country who are expecting me to come and labor with them this fall and the coming winter, that I am unable to fulfill my engagements on account of my health. While I have labored in new fields for the last year, I have seen so much interest manifested to hear the word of life, that it stimulated me to labor beyond what I could bear, consequently my voice has given out, so that it will be impossible for me to preach much for some time to come. It is a great trial for me to be obliged to stop now, when there is so much need of laborers in the field, but I must submit to the will of my heavenly Father. I have not preached but once since the 28th of August, and then but part of the day. How long I must refrain from preaching I cannot tell, but hope after a rest from public speaking for two or three months, to be able to buckle on the armor again, and fight until the war ends, and the saints take possession of the "Kingdom, under the whole heaven." Remember me in your prayers. My P. O. address, for the present, is Clinton, Mass.

J. HEMENWAY.

Camp Meeting Deficiency.

Bro. G. T. Adams, Treasurer, acknowledges the following responses to Bro Taylor's call in the last Crisis.

Joseph T. Curry	$1.00
Walter Pratt.	1.00
Rufus Wendell	1.00

Come, brethren in the ministry, don't let this thing drag. We were well fed at Wilbraham Boarding Tent, the trifle required of each of us to wipe out the debt which rests upon the Committee's shoulders should be contributed cheerfully and promptly. Bro. Walter, writing under date of 7th inst., accompanies his remittance with the following note:—

BRO. WENDELL:—On the arrival of the "Crisis" yesterday I see the expenses of the Wilbraham Camp meeting exceeded its receipts some $68, hence, I enclose one dollar to help make up the deficiency, and if more is wanted I will send another. Last year I boarded myself and family and one preacher. This year myself, wife and boy boarded at the boarding tent, hence I feel it a privilege to share the burden with my brethren in the ministry and relieve the committee.

W. PRATT.

Correspondence.

From Sr. O. S. Miner.

BRO. WENDELL:—I here enclose one dollar for the Crisis. I would be glad to send more if I had it. Myself and my son (an only child fifteen years of age) are the only Advent believers in the place, we have no meetings, and the Crisis seems to strengthen us in our lonely pilgrimage to God's peaceful Kingdom, where there will be no sickness or sorrow. It is on account of sickness I have not sent the money before. I had but just got up from the typhoid fever when my husband was taken with the typhoid and lung fever together; and my son was sick at the same time. [illegible] time of need. I feel to trust in him at all times; he is my stay and my staff. Oh for the privilege of hearing one good sermon. Why can't we have more good sermons in the Crisis? We are completely surrounded with Spiritualism, but I feel the Lord is able to keep us. Will you pray for us? Oh the temptations of the young. I do not want to be selfish, but I do desire to see my Savior come. Oh for patience to wait his time.

From Sr. Lydia Hill.

BRO. WENDELL:—I send you enclosed two dollars in advance, as my payment is about run out. I would be glad to say to the children of my Father, that my only hope is in God. He is my strength and shield, and I still hope in his mercy. I hear him saying, "I am he that blotteth out as a thick cloud thine iniquities, and will remember them no more forever." Blessed be the name of the Lord. O, may we all get sweet submission to His will. Then we can trust all in his hands, feeling that all is well; that our Father is at the helm; that he will safely guide the vessel into port, and save all that will obey the Captain's orders and be ruled by his laws. Then we shall be saved by his grace, and gathered home to be forever with him.

From Bro. William Sweet.

BRO. WENDELL:—Bro. Hastings speaks of hard times for bread in some portions of the east before spring. I say, although money is scarce here in the west, bread stuffs are plenty and cheap for cash or labor, and more laborers are wanted to work at various trades, and farming in particular. There is plenty of land to till in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota. So many of our laboring men have left to join the U. S. army, that help is scarce. Those who can find means, let them immediately come west this fall. We have brethren scattered more or less all over Winona, Goodhue, Filmore and Husten Counties, Minnesota. Let some good minister come to me, and I will show him a large field to work in for God, and warm hearts to feed him or his family, if he has one.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Foreign files by the Niagara are to the 21st ult They contain little of interest beyond the following items

The Central Italian Committee at Genoa have telegraphed to London official news that Garibaldi, moved by the Neapolitan demonstration and sensible of the impending demands of Italy, has determined not to go to America.

Twenty thousand muskets, sold by Prussia to the United States of America, have been supplied from the depot of Stettin, and are now being removed to Hamburg for shipment.

A Madrid semi-official journal declares, in the most positive terms, that Spain will act on her own account against Mexico, and demand reparation of her long standing grievances. A Spanish squadron is on its way to Cuba, where several thousand troops are ready to embark This expedition has been long in preparation, and a steamer is about to start for Cuba with the final instructions of the government.

A letter from Florence says, in a free and semi-confidential conversation with the municipality of Florence, Victor Emmanuel said he hoped to solve the difficulties of the Neapolitan question by firmness and honesty. As to Rome, he said there are people who wish us to cut the gordian knot, but we prefer to untie it. Venice can only be obtained by war. The first thing to do is to organize a strong army. After that, and when we are ready, reasons for attacking Austria will not be wanting.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 5. Special Washington dispatches state that General Fremont will neither be suspended nor court martialed while his troops are in the face of the enemy, owing to the general outcry at the West against his removal.

Richmond papers say that the sick rebels have been removed from Manassas to Richmond, in anticipation of a battle, and that Jeff. Davis, in a speech to the troops on Wednesday, at Fairfax Court House, promised them they should soon be in Baltimore.

Acting Master Churchill, lately directed to take passage for the Pacific, not having been heard from, fears are entertained for his safety.

General McClellan has stopped the visits of Pennsylvania politicians to the camps.

General Wool left this city this morning, but it is not known which route he took.

The World's Washington dispatch says that General McClellan had formed a plan to capture the 6000 or 8000 rebels in the vicinity of Munson's Hill by a night attack with 25,000 men, and arranged certain signals, confiding his plan but to a few prominent officers. The rebels discovered his signals, and although he made great efforts to hasten the departure of his troops, the rebels had got beyond his reach when he arrived at their intrenchments. Gen. McClellan was highly indignant.

Later fom California.

Pacific Springs, 260 miles east of Salt Lake, Oct. 5. The Pony Express, with San Francisco dates of the 28th, passed here at 10 o'clock this morning.

Arrived at San Francisco 20th, steamer Uncle Sam, from Panama.

Sailed 27th, ship Richard 3d, for Callao.

In the southern counties there has been three day's heavy rain up to the night of the 24th, extending from the mountains to the sea. A dispatch from Yreka states that a heavy shower of rain fell in that place on the 25th.

The Rev. Dr. Scott and family have taken passage on the ship Franklin Haven for Liverpool. They expect to leave next week. [illegible] destroyed by fire on the 26th. The building cost about $100,000. There was no insurance.

The cavalry regiments called for from this state are full to overflowing, and yesterday one or two companies were refused. There is still room in the infantry regiments, although they are fast filling up.

The 26th was observed as a fast day in San Francisco, according to the President's message. Services were held during the day in all the churches, and several prayer meetings assembled together in the largest and most central churches in the evening. Business was generally suspended.

The Mexican residents of San Francisco are to-day celebrating the anniversary of their national Independence, something after the fashion of the 4th of July celebrations of Americans. This morning they fired guns, and to-night they will send up sky rockets from the neighboring hills, and participate in fandangoes and other characteristic amusements.

From North Carolina.

The New York Times of Friday gives the substance of a conversation with two gentlemen of intelligence and character who have recently left North Carolina, where they had resided for some time as agents of certain capitalists engaged in mining there. They had much difficulty in getting away, as their acquaintance with the physical features of North Carolina was such as might make the information they could give to the Federal government dangerous to Confederate interests. However, they were finally allowed to go. The Times says:

"These gentlemen have been residing at Rutherford, near the centre of the western portion of the State. In that vicinity, they say, the feeling is open and strong for the Union. Men do not hesitate to declare publicly their hostility to secession, and as a general thing their right to do so is respected even by the secessionists. The same feeling, in their opinion, pervades other sections of the State—strongest, of course, in the mountain districts, but still to be traced in nearly every county. At Chattanooga nearly all were Union men. They have as yet no public organization, but secret Union clubs exist in every part of the State, and will take public action whenever it can be done with any prospect of success.

These gentlemen confirm the report concerning the effect of the receipt at Raleigh of the news of the taking of Hatteras by the Union troops. Before they left home, letters had been received from Raleigh, stating that the Legislature was in session when the capture was announced, and that the Union members rose in their places, and cheered and swung their hats, and were so noisy in their rejoicings that all business was for the time suspended. The same feeling, to a considerable extent, pervaded the people of that city.

It was generally understood that very many more of the inhabitants would have flocked into the Union camp and taken the oath of allegiance, but that they were prevented by the secession troops who lined the coast. The main support of the rebellion is the belief, wide-spread and zealously encouraged by the leaders, that the Northern armies will break up their homes, destroy their property, and subject the whole country to a brutal and licentious soldiery The lower and more ignorant classes, who are made to believe these things, are extremely violent against the North, but the more intelligent, who know them to be false, are by a very large majority Union men.

From Virginia.

Richmond papers received at Cincinnati contain some interesting items.

The Dispatch of Sept. 21st says the strength of the Federal army in Western Virginia is believed to be between 40,000 and 50,000, of whom 25,000 are under Gen. Reynolds, in Randolph county, 6000 to 7000 under Gen. Cox in the Kanawha valley, and 15,000 under Gen. Rosecrans. Reinforcements were to be sent to the rebel Generals Lee, Wise and Floyd, who are said to be outnumbered. Gen. Lee had abandoned his forward movement and fallen back. Generals Floyd and Wise had removed from Sewall's mountain to Meadow Bluff, in the direction of Summerville, whence Gen. Rosecrans was approaching, with a view to offer him battle. The Dispatch says the Federal fortification on Cheat Mountain is almost impregnable. Col. Rust had approached it so nearly as to look over into it and see all that was going on in it, and also the exact nature of the fortification. The forest for several acres around has been cleared, and the trees arranged on the outer boundary with their tops trimmed and pointed outwards, so as to present a mass of sharp points raised to a considerable height, and strongly interlocked. Inside of this is a wall of logs and a deep ditch. Across the road are breastworks of great strength, mounted with pivot guns, while in the centre is a block-house pierced and armed also with cannon. The rebels think they can turn this position if they cannot capture it; while, if their forces march on beyond, it will be useless to the Federals.

The Examiner of Sept. 27th speaks of affairs in Western Virginia as "critical," in consequence of the manner in which Rosecrans was pressing Generals Floyd and Wise, who were "falling back" before him.

THE GREAT EASTERN'S ACCIDENT.—Our foreign papers contain many details of the disaster which befel the Great Eastern, in the breaking of her rudder pin, but the substance has already been given. A passenger on board, after giving an interesting narrative of the affair, and dwelling upon the wonderful strength of the ship and her engines, says:

"How, then, has a ship so constructed, succumbed? I suppose it is not possible to put materials together to insure perfect immunity from accident in such a trial. We were pushing ahead with the gale on our port bow, and when we tried to put her head to wind her huge broadside exposed to the gale was more than her vast power could control. She could not be brought head to wind, nor could she be turned to sail with the wind, and so she lay in the trough of the sea, until in the stupendous efforts to put her right her rudder head broke above; the rudder post, all of massive iron, yielded; then the wheels (these, perhaps, were not equal to their task) gave way one after another, and so this great, strong and powerful ship was at the mercy of [illegible] way which can never be described nor yet imagined by those who have not experienced it, and filling the hearts of all on board with views of things that might yet overtake her, which only an experience can enable any one to realize."

We take the following from the resolutions which were passed at a general meeting of the passengers:

"That we feel it to be our imperative duty to state that the Great Eastern was sent to sea thoroughly unprepared to face the storms which every one must expect to meet in crossing the Atlantic; and that, if it had not been for the extraordinary strength of the hull, and the skill which was manifested in the construction of the vessel and its engines, in all human probability every soul on board would have perished. We call particular attention to the ballasting of the Great Eastern, the state of her paddlewheels, the position of her boats, the insecure and most perilous character of her internal fittings, and the careless way in which she was stowed, owing to which carelessness, in fact, a large portion of our luggage has been most recklessly and utterly destroyed."—Boston Jour.

DEATH OF AN AGED MISSIONARY.—Mrs. Clarissa L. Richards, widow of Rev. William Richards, missionary to the Sandwich Islands, died in New Haven on Thursday, aged sixty-seven years. She accompanied her husband to his field of labor in 1822. After his death, in 1847, she returned to this country.

☞ Messages have lately been sent direct, by telegraph, to Taganrog, on the Sea of Azoff, from the city of London. The distance is 2500 miles. This is said to be the longest direct communication by telegraph ever achieved, unless we except the messages by the Atlantic cable.

Notices, &c.

Notice.

The Second Advent Church, formerly meeting in the Hall at the corner of Grand and Elizabeth Streets, New York, will for the future meet for worship at the Botanic Hall, East Broadway, near the corner of Market Street Preachers visiting New York can call on Elder Wm Roworth, 354 Pearl Street, N Y

Notice.

On my return home, I purpose to preach at the following places —Portsmouth, Tuesday eve, Oct 15th Exeter, Oct 16th Worcester, 17th Sunday, the 20th, not engaged Those brethren in Ct who wished my labors as soon as I was at liberty, please write me at the Worcester Conference, that I may make arrangements there

HIRAM MUNGER.

Hastings' Publications.

All Books and Tracts of H. L. Hastings are kept on hand and for sale at this office A List, with prices, will be given soon.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass, Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C P Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times, and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

EXPLANATION.—"A C Association" means the ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, and "C. P. Society" means CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Notice.

There will be a General Conference in Orrington, commencing Oct. 10th, and continuing over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as the Lord will. Brethren G W. Brown and John Billings will be present Other preaching brethren are expected Provision will be made for all who are pleased to come to the meeting. There appears to be quite an interest at Orrington—as much so as there has been since '43

In behalf of the brethren,

F. H. SMITH.

Advent Christian Association.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Board of Managers of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester Tuesday, Oct. 15th, at 9 o'clock, A. M.

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

Notice.

Wm. J. Ripley will hold a meeting at Wrightville, Ct., Sunday, Oct. 13th. Will some Bro meet him at the depot on the down train from Winsted Saturday?

C. GOODRICH.

Notice.

GEO. STORRS, of New York, owing to the extreme pressure of present circumstances, offers the herein after named works at fifty per cent. discount to any person, or persons, sending him TEN DOLLARS or upwards, if applied for soon. The works are—

Six Sermons, revised and enlarged edition: bound, 60 cts.; in paper covers, 30 cts.

The Watch Tower: or, Man in Death, in paper covers....20 cents.

Life from the Dead: or, the "Righteous only will live again—in paper covers....20 cts.

Life only in Christ: a bound volume, including each of the above works, and a discourse on the Atonement....$1.00

The Discussion with Prof. Mattison—in paper covers....30 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition—bound, 75 cts.; paper covers, 40 cents.

Man's Destiny: A Review of Prof. Post—in paper covers....20 cts.

Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney: Part II.—in paper covers....30 cts.

Our Israelitish Origin—paper covers....50 cts.

Man's Nature and Destiny: A Sermon, by Geo. Storrs—paper covers....5 cts.

Bible Examiner for 1860, bound....$1.50

Of this last work there are but some thirty copies left.

All remittances and orders, sent by mail, must be addressed—Geo. Storrs, Box 4658, New York. [illegible]

Notice.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will meet in Wayne, Thursday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Oct. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. The meeting will be held in a school-house, about one mile west of Wayne village, near Bro. Cyrus Bartlett's. Brethren will call on him for direction. We hope the Lord's laborers will be there.

I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollar's worth; for twelve dollars, four dollar's worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

R. WENDELL, per order of Publishing Committee.

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.

English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we get them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line; but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1.25; postage 14 cts.
Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1.50; postage 15 cts.
Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.62; postage 15 cts.
Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50; postage 21 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.
Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75; postage 26 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50, postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

Appointments.

George Storrs will preach at Botanic Hall, East Broadway, New York City, 10 o'clock, A. M. and 3 P. M. Sunday, Oct. 13th.

WM ROWORTH.

Hazel Plain, Ct. Oct. 13th.
Wrightville, Ct. Oct. 20th.
Plymouth Hollow, C. Oct. 27th.
Prospect, C. Nov. 3d.
Pine Swamp, Ct. Nov. 10th.
South Dover, N. Y., at Bro. Oliver's, or where he may appoint....Nov. 12th and 13th.

T. S. CANFIELD.

Melvin Village Oct. 13th.
Holderness (Tabernacle Oct. 20th.
Albany, (Bell School House) Nov. 27th.
Moultonborough Centre Nov. 3d.

T. W. PIPER.

Clinton, Mass Sunday, Oct. 20th.

GEO. A. STREETER.

East Grate Works, Monday evening Oct. 14th.
Holden Oct. 15th.
South Levant Oct. 16th.
Orrington (where the brethren may appoint) Oct. 17th.
North Searsport Oct. 18th.
Belmont (where the brethren may appoint) Oct. 20th.
Camden Oct. 21st.
Hope. Oct. 22d.
Will some Bro. from Hope meet me at Belmont or Camden?

L. WETHERBEE.

Northfield Farms, Mass....Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Athol Evening, Oct. 15th.
North Dana Evenings, Oct. 16th and 17th.
Clinton. Sunday, Oct. 20th.
Erving Wednesday evening, Oct. 23d and stay as long as duty may require.

S. W. BISHOP.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. Oct. 13th.
Ruthburn Oct. 15th and 16th.
Bro. Beach' Oct. 17th.
Wrightville Oct. 20th.
Plymouth Hollow Oct. 27th.
South Farms Nov. 3d.

J. K. BELLOWS.

Mills, Me., (where the brethren may appoint,) Oct. 13.

THOMAS SMITH.

South Windsor, Ct Oct. 13th.
Concord, N. H. Oct. 27th.

C. GOODRICH.

If the Lord will, Bro. Renselier Fenn will preach at the Pine Tree School House, at 10 1-2 A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., on Sunday, Oct. 13th.

Charlestown, (Hawkins' Hall, 79 Main Street) Thursday evening, Oct. 10th.
Lynn....Sunday, Oct. 13th.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Portland, Me. Sundays Oct. 13th and 20th.

L. BOUTELL.

Kennebunkport, Me. Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Portsmouth, N. H. Sunday, Oct. 20th.

J. COUCH.

Southbridge, Mass Oct. 13th.

S. B. MUNN.

South Adams, meetings commencing Oct. 17th and continuing over the Sabbath.

GEO. A. OTIS.

Yarmouth....Oct. 13.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

J. Blain—We received for you at Camp Meeting $2 from Dr. Mathewson of Sandy Hill, which we credit to you on account. This is all that has been paid us.

W. A. Fenn: Yes, we send the paper.

D. N. Kidder: A. Ash owes $2.12.

Mrs. Mary Holden: We have carried forward the credit as you desire.

D. F. Taylor's P. O. address is Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Eld. Joseph T. Curry's P. O. address is Springfield, Mass.

O. R. Kassett's P. O. address is Yarmouth, Me.

W. Sheldon's P. O. address is now changed from Springville, Wis., to Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis.

Cash Receipts.

J M Miner 271, $1.12; A Wood 337, 60 cts; J Ireland 344, $3.00; H W Morville 312, $3.00; Syl. Neal 315, 12 cts.

John Clark 331, Elizabeth Smith 336, S M Lum 312, A H Boone 312, H D Reed 335,—50 cts. each.

A S McKewen 343, Dr. H Tagert 364, N Irish 343, Mrs. J. Ray 329, Elisha Baker 340, Wm. Welch 276, W W Doughty 338, Mrs. E A W Lake 325, O T Clisby 333, C G Rodman 344, P C Rodman 340, J Clothey 331, M Poettleplace 338, D B Salter 312, Mrs. L T Marsh 338, G W Whiting 338, Jno. Young 338, O Rawson 331, Wm. Sweet 338, N Hoyt 334, Miss M S Gaslin 315, J Morrison, p. pd., 314, C F Bosenger 334, M Christenson 338, A B Chapman 314, Miss E Kelly 334, T Bonney 338, J Rogers 326, AL Cole 338, T Wilkins 338, L U Johnson 338, Dr. Tibbetts 336, Aug. Hamilton 340, M Moorehouse 338, Geo. Storer 338, T D Bailey 338, S S Dimon 321, Benj. Remington 343, George Verge 338,—$1.00 each.

John Whitcomb 338, H S Castle 340, [illegible] 333, Ira Hodgkins 344, J A Sullivan [illegible] Williamson 334, T [illegible] 365, B Little 338, D N Kidder 344, [illegible] 338, J S Douglas 338, [illegible] [illegible]

Books and Tracts.

[illegible] shall be pre-paid; [illegible] books or tracts, [illegible] postage. The postage on [illegible] half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent; 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 5 cts.; 50 cts per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 5 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 3: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp., 5 cts. single, 50 cts per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C F H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 5 cts. $3.00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts.; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 5 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 5 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 3 cts single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, [illegible] per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, [illegible]; postage [illegible].

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1 25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 160 pp. 12mo. Price 60 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 259 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1 25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them at lower rates than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 5 cts. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to please children. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $5.00 per hundred, [illegible]; 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. [illegible]

The Saint's Inheritance; or, the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts. [illegible]

The Wicked not Immortal. [illegible]

The Great Error Exposed; [illegible]

Glad Tidings: [illegible]

tion of the power of the "man of sin," is the return of the Saviour to this world. The fulfillment of prophecy, the signs of the times, all indicate the fact that we are living near the end. It is the next great event. That is coming, and coming soon; we cannot doubt it. May we be ready to hail it with joy when it shall come.

F. H. B.

For the Crisis.

"To the Poor Indian."

I had the pleasure of spending an hour or two this evening in listening to an able and impressive lecture on the "Wrongs of the Indian, and the remedy for those wrongs," by Father Beeson, the friend of the red man, and of drinking into my soul the sweet and touching music as "Laroogua" alone can give birth to. It is truly astonishing to behold the power of enchantment she possesses; all eyes are riveted upon the singer, and all ears are open to catch each note as it falls so delightfully from the lips of this beautiful "child of the forest."

The lecture was well calculated to excite that interest in the well-being of the Indian which every Christian heart should feel. The lecturer painted in living colors the sufferings and misery of the red man. He told how they are robbed, cheated and murdered by men wearing the cloak of civilization, the Border-ruffian considering the poor Indian as proper food for his rifle. If there exists an idea worthy of Satan, it is that the "Indian is doomed to vanish before the march of civilization." Civilization! nay, barbarism rather. The noble Indian stands forth in the majesty of his manhood, and challenges mankind with his cry, "Am I not a man and a brother?" Can we say no?

The impression has gone forth that the Indians are all savages; and to the imagination of the emigrant rise visions of the reeking scalping knife and hideous war dance. That the red man can be civilized and christianized, the present position of the Creek, Chippewa, Cherokee and other tribes bear ample testimony. And because all the frontier Indians are not so, who is to blame? Had one-tenth of the means appropriated by Congress been employed to its legitimate use, and not been stolen by corrupt government officials and others, the same happy results might have flowed among other tribes. And the charge can be made fearlessly, that of the immense sums of money, etc., designed for the Indian, he has received not 5 per cent.

We have lately held a day of "fasting, humiliation and prayer," because God has, after long suffering, begun to pour out the vials of his wrath upon us for our sins. Now if I believe anything sincerely, it is this: that God is visiting this nation with judgment among other things for its treatment of the Indian. We behold the melancholy spectacle of some tribes arraying themselves under the black banner of secession—who should have remained neutral or else sided with the government, which they undoubtedly would have done if they had had sufficient evidence that the government was their friend! I believe they have been forced to this step by the system of fraud and corruption practiced by those entrusted with the Indian's interests, and who to them appeared as the representatives of the Government.

I love the Indian race. I say not this as a result of momentary enthusiasm, but a life-long feeling. I want to see them occupy the position that they can occupy, and will yet occupy. For as soon, and perhaps before this unhappy war is over, the case of the poor Indian will receive attention, and then many who are now gloating over their spoils and numberless victims, will be awakened from their fancied security, and a day of judgment will begin. I feel to thank the Lord that we have at last a man in the Presidential Chair—a man who dares to do right, and who will do right.

We have also an exhibition of the effect of Orthodoxy on the Indian. It is well known that the untutored Indian believes he is the child of the Great Spirit, and when he dies he goes to the happy hunting ground of his fathers. Now the teaching of such doctrines as total depravity, eternal misery, etc., are to the Indian abhorrent, and grate harshly upon his fine feelings. Tell him he is a child of wrath—totally depraved—must do wrong, etc., and for doing what his nature forces him to do he is to be eternally tormented, and tell him this is the truth of the Bible, and with disgust he turns away from such a book, and spurns such a religion. Is it not time a better theology were taught them? What fearful havoc these dogmas make! The Spiritualist is ready to sound in Indian ears the charge that this is christianity, and offer his new revelation in its stead.

If these thoughts arouse a better feeling in any breast for the poor Indian, I shall be content. Brethren, can we do any thing for this noble race? Can we not pray for them? Cannot tracts be sent among them, printed in their own language, teaching the truth? Shall the barbarous idea be carried out that the Indian must perish, or will we try to prevent it? T. W. S.

Philadelphia, Oct. 1st, 1861.

☞ It would be well if we had less medicine and more cures; less profession and more piety; less law and more justice.

For the Crisis.

Will the Wicked Dead live again?

(Continued.)

The word zoee, rendered life, meaning "animated existence, state of being alive, eternal life, immortality," is used in the N. T., as applied directly to the righteous, about 90 times; the noun life, simply, without any qualifying term, about 40 times; eternal life, 36; and everlasting life, 14 times. But the term life, when from zoee, signifies eternal or everlasting life.

It may be well here to inquire, why the terms eternal, or everlasting, ever need be applied to the noun life, if it is not plainly to show that the word life—from zoee—is always to be understood as something different from anazoo, to live again, without any promise of eternal future existence. This is made plain by the passage in John 3: 36—"He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life: (zoee) and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, (zoee)." Yet, still, such may live again, (anazoo), and the wrath of God may abide upon them, i. e., they may be "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord."

It is difficult to conceive how any one can frame the idea that the wicked dead will not live again! We believe no one pretends that there is any positive testimony in the passages we have cited, to prove the wicked will not live again, but they infer that the passages so teach! But what testimony can be more positive or explicit than we have already adduced to prove the wicked dead will live again? If there was no other testimony than the passage in Rev. 20: 5, it seems it should be enough. For if Christ lived, or revived, (anazoo) Rom. 14: 9, then must the wicked dead live again, or be revived, (anazoo), as the primary meaning of the word revive, as given by Webster, is—"To return to life, to recover life", and he refers to 1 Kings 17: 22, and Rom. 14: 9, as proof. Who can set aside such testimony as this?

T. M. PREBLE.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 24, 1861.

To the Brethren.

I am under the necessity of saying to the brethren in different parts of the country who are expecting me to come and labor with them this fall and the coming winter, that I am unable to fulfill my engagements on account of my health. While I have labored in new fields for the last year, I have seen so much interest manifested to hear the word of life, that it stimulated me to labor beyond what I could bear, consequently my voice has given out, so that it will be impossible for me to preach much for some time to come. It is a great trial for me to be obliged to stop now, when there is so much need of laborers in the field, but I must submit to the will of my heavenly Father. I have not preached but once since the 28th of August, and then but part of the day. How long I must refrain from preaching I cannot tell, but hope after a rest from public speaking for two or three months, to be able to buckle on the armor again, and fight until the war ends, and the saints take possession of the "Kingdom, under the whole heaven." Remember me in your prayers. My P. O. address, for the present, is Clinton, Mass.

J. HEMENWAY.

Camp Meeting Deficiency.

Bro. G. T. Adams, Treasurer, acknowledges the following responses to Bro. Taylor's call in the last Crisis.

Joseph T. Curry	$1 00
Walter Pratt.	1 00
Rufus Wendell	1 00

Come, brethren in the ministry, don't let this thing drag. We were well fed at Wilbraham Boarding Tent; the trifle required of each of us to wipe out the debt which rests upon the Committee's shoulders should be contributed cheerfully and promptly. Bro. Walter, writing under date of 7th inst., accompanies his remittance with the following note:—

BRO. WENDELL:—On the arrival of the "Crisis" yesterday I see the expenses of the Wilbraham Camp meeting exceeded its receipts some $63, hence, I enclose one dollar to help make up the deficiency, and if more is wanted I will send another. Last year I boarded myself and family and one preacher. This year myself, wife and boy boarded at the boarding tent, hence I feel it a privilege to share the burden with my brethren in the ministry and relieve the committee.

W. PRATT.

Correspondence.

From Sr. O. S. Miner.

BRO. WENDELL:—I here enclose one dollar for the Crisis. I would be glad to send more if I had it. Myself and my son (an only child fifteen years of age) are the only Advent believers in the place, we have no meetings, and the Crisis seems to strengthen us in our lonely pilgrimage to God's peaceful Kingdom, where there will be no sickness or sorrow. It is on account of sickness I have not sent the money before. I had but just got up from the typhoid fever when my husband was taken with the typhoid and lung fever together, and my son was sick at the same time. Amidst our afflictions the Lord in his mercy has spared our lives, and in our trouble I have found him a very present help in every time of need. I feel to trust in him at all times; he is my stay and my staff. Oh for the privilege of hearing one good sermon. Why can't we have more good sermons in the Crisis? We are completely surrounded with Spiritualism, but I feel the Lord is able to keep us. Will you pray for us? Oh the temptations of the young. I do not want to be selfish, but I do desire to see my Savior come. Oh for patience to wait his time.

From Sr. Lydia Hill.

BRO. WENDELL:—I send you enclosed two dollars in advance, as my payment is about run out. I would be glad to say to the children of my Father, that my only hope is in God. He is my strength and shield, and I still hope in his mercy. I hear him saying, "I am he that blotteth out as a thick cloud thine iniquities, and will remember them no more forever." Blessed be the name of the Lord. O, may we all get sweet submission to His will. Then we can trust all in his hands, feeling that all is well; that our Father is at the helm; that he will safely guide the vessel into port, and save all that will obey the Captain's orders and be ruled by his laws. Then we shall be saved by his grace, and gathered home to be forever with him.

From Bro. William Sweet.

BRO. WENDELL:—Bro. Hastings speaks of hard times for bread in some portions of the east before spring. I say, although money is scarce here in the west, bread stuffs are plenty and cheap for cash or labor, and more laborers are wanted to work at various trades, and farming in particular. There is plenty of land to till in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota. So many of our laboring men have left to join the U. S. army, that help is scarce. Those who can find means, let them immediately come west this fall. We have brethren scattered more or less all over Winona, Goodhue, Filmore and Husten Counties, Minnesota. Let some good minister come to me, and I will show him a large field to work in for God, and warm hearts to feed him or his family, if he has one.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Foreign files by the Niagara are to the 21st ult. They contain little of interest beyond the following items.

The Central Italian Committee at Genoa have telegraphed to London official news that Garibaldi, moved by the Neapolitan demonstration and sensible of the impending demands of Italy, has determined not to go to America.

Twenty thousand muskets, sold by Prussia to the United States of America, have been supplied from the depot of Stettin, and are now being removed to Hamburg for shipment.

A Madrid semi-official journal declares, in the most positive terms, that Spain will act on her own account against Mexico, and demand reparation of her long standing grievances. A Spanish squadron is on its way to Cuba, where several thousand troops are ready to embark. This expedition has been long in preparation, and a steamer is about to start for Cuba with the final instructions of the government.

A letter from Florence says, in a free and semi-confidential conversation with the municipality of Florence, Victor Emmanuel said he hoped to solve the difficulties of the Neapolitan question by firmness and honesty. As to Rome, he said there are people who wish us to cut the gordian knot, but we prefer to untie it. Venice can only be obtained by war. The first thing to do is to organize a strong army. After that, and when we are ready, reasons for attacking Austria will not be wanting.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 5. Special Washington dispatches state that General Fremont will neither be suspended nor court martialed while his troops are in the face of the enemy, owing to the general outcry at the West against his removal.

Richmond papers say that the sick rebels have been removed from Manassas to Richmond, in anticipation of a battle, and that Jeff. Davis, in a speech to the troops on Wednesday, at Fairfax Court House, promised them they should soon be in Baltimore.

Acting Master Churchill, lately directed to take passage for the Pacific, not having been heard from, fears are entertained for his safety.

General McClellan has stopped the visits of Pennsylvania politicians to the camps.

General Wool left this city this morning, but it is not known which route he took.

The World's Washington dispatch says that General McClellan had formed a plan to capture the 6000 or 8000 rebels in the vicinity of Munson's Hill by a night attack with 25,000 men, and arranged certain signals, confiding his plan but to a few prominent officers. The rebels discovered his signals, and although he made great efforts to hasten the departure of his troops, the rebels had got beyond his reach when he arrived at their intrenchments. Gen. McClellan was highly indignant.

Later fom California.

Pacific Springs, 260 miles east of Salt Lake, Oct. 5. The Pony Express, with San Francisco dates of the 28th, passed here at 10 o'clock this morning.

Arrived at San Francisco 26th, steamer Uncle Sam, from Panama.

Sailed 27th, ship Richard 3d, for Callao.

In the southern counties there has been three day's heavy rain up to the night of the 24th, extending from the mountains to the sea. A dispatch from Yreka states that a heavy shower of rain fell in that place on the 25th.

The Rev. Dr. Scott and family have taken passage on the ship Franklin Haven for Liverpool. They expect to leave next week.

The Forrest Theatre at Sacramento was destroyed by fire on the 26th. The building cost about $100,000. There was no insurance.

The cavalry regiments called for from this state are full to overflowing, and yesterday one or two companies were refused. There is still room in the infantry regiments, although they are fast filling up.

The 26th was observed as a fast day in San Francisco, according to the President's message. Services were held during the day in all the churches, and several prayer meetings assembled together in the largest and most central churches in the evening. Business was generally suspended.

The Mexican residents of San Francisco are to-day celebrating the anniversary of their national Independence, something after the fashion of the 4th of July celebrations of Americans. This morning they fired guns, and to-night they will send up sky rockets from the neighboring hills, and participate in fandangoes and other characteristic amusements.

From North Carolina.

The New York Times of Friday gives the substance of a conversation with two gentlemen of intelligence and character who have recently left North Carolina, where they had resided for some time as agents of certain capitalists engaged in mining there. They had much difficulty in getting away, as their acquaintance with the physical features of North Carolina was such as might make the information they could give to the Federal government dangerous to Confederate interests. However, they were finally allowed to go. The Times says:

"These gentlemen have been residing at Rutherford, near the centre of the western portion of the State. In that vicinity, they say, the feeling is open and strong for the Union. Men do not hesitate to declare publicly their hostility to secession, and as a general thing their right to do so is respected even by the secessionists. The same feeling, in their opinion, pervades other sections of the State—strongest, of course, in the mountain districts, but still to be traced in nearly every county. At Chattanooga nearly all were Union men. They have as yet no public organization, but secret Union clubs exist in every part of the State, and will take public action whenever it can be done with any prospect of success.

These gentlemen confirm the report concerning the effect of the receipt at Raleigh of the news of the taking of Hatteras by the Union troops. Before they left home, letters had been received from Raleigh, stating that the Legislature was in session when the capture was announced, and that the Union members rose in their places, and cheered and swung their hats, and were so noisy in their rejoicings that all business was for the time suspended. The same feeling, to a considerable extent, pervaded the people of that city.

It was generally understood that very many more of the inhabitants would have flocked into the Union camp and taken the oath of allegiance, but that they were prevented by the secession troops who lined the coast. The main support of the rebellion is the belief, wide-spread and zealously encouraged by the leaders, that the Northern armies will break up their homes, destroy their property, and subject the whole country to a brutal and licentious soldiery. The lower and more ignorant classes, who are made to believe these things, are extremely violent against the North, but the more intelligent, who know them to be false, are by a very large majority Union men.

From Virginia.

Richmond papers received at Cincinnati contain some interesting items.

The Dispatch of Sept. 21st says the strength of the Federal army in Western Virginia is believed to be between 40,000 and 50,000, of whom 25,000 are under Gen. Reynolds, in Randolph county, 6000 to 7000 under Gen. Cox in the Kanawha valley, and 15,000 under Gen. Rosecrans. Reinforcements were to be sent to the rebel Generals Lee, Wise and Floyd, who are said to be outnumbered. Gen. Lee had abandoned his forward movement and fallen back. Generals Floyd and Wise had removed from Sewall's mountain to Meadow Bluff, in the direction of Summerville, whence Gen. Rosecrans was approaching, with a view to offer him battle. The Dispatch says the Federal fortification on Cheat Mountain is almost impregnable. Col. Rust had approached it so nearly as to look over into it and see all that was going on in it, and also the exact nature of the fortification. The forest for several acres around has been cleared, and the trees arranged on the outer boundary with their tops trimmed and pointed outwards, so as to present a mass of sharp points raised to a considerable height, and strongly interlocked. Inside of this is a wall of logs and a deep ditch. Across the road are breastworks of great strength, mounted with pivot guns, while in the centre is a block-house pierced and armed also with cannon. The rebels think they can turn this position if they cannot capture it; while, if their forces march on beyond, it will be useless to the Federals.

The Examiner of Sept. 27th speaks of affairs in Western Virginia as "critical," in consequence of the manner in which Rosecrans was pressing Generals Floyd and Wise, who were "falling back" before him.

THE GREAT EASTERN'S ACCIDENT.—Our foreign papers contain many details of the disaster which befel the Great Eastern, in the breaking of her rudder pin, but the substance has already been given. A passenger on board, after giving an interesting narrative of the affair, and dwelling upon the wonderful strength of the ship and her engines, says:

"How, then, has a ship so constructed, succumbed? I suppose it is not possible to put materials together to insure perfect immunity from accident in such a trial. We were pushing ahead with the gale on our port bow, and when we tried to put her head to wind her huge broadside exposed to the gale was more than her vast power could control. She could not be brought head to wind, nor could she be turned to sail with the wind, and so she lay in the trough of the sea, until in the stupendous efforts to put her right her rudder head broke above; the rudder post, all of massive iron, yielded; then the wheels (these, perhaps, were not equal to their task) gave way one after another; and so this great, strong and powerful ship was at the mercy of the waves, a log upon the billows, rolling in a way which can never be described nor yet imagined by those who have not experienced it, and filling the hearts of all on board with views of things that might yet overtake her, which only an experience can enable any one to realize."

We take the following from the resolutions which were passed at a general meeting of the passengers:

"That we feel it to be our imperative duty to state that the Great Eastern was sent to sea thoroughly unprepared to face the storms which every one must expect to meet in crossing the Atlantic; and that, if it had not been for the extraordinary strength of the hull, and the skill which was manifested in the construction of the vessel and its engines, in all human probability every soul on board would have perished. We call particular attention to the ballasting of the Great Eastern, the state of her paddlewheels, the position of her boats, the insecure and most perilous character of her internal fittings, and the careless way in which she was stowed, owing to which carelessness, in fact, a large portion of our luggage has been most recklessly and utterly destroyed."—Boston Jour.

DEATH OF AN AGED MISSIONARY.—Mrs. Clarissa L. Richards, widow of Rev. William Richards, missionary to the Sandwich Islands, died in New Haven on Thursday, aged sixty-seven years. She accompanied her husband to his field of labor in 1822. After his death, in 1847, she returned to this country.

☞ Messages have lately been sent direct, by telegraph, to Taganrog, on the Sea of Azoff, from the city of London. The distance is 2500 miles. This is said to be the longest direct communication by telegraph ever achieved, unless we except the messages by the Atlantic cable.

Notices, &c.

Notice.

The Second Advent Church, formerly meeting in the Hall at the corner of Grand and Elizabeth Streets, New York, will for the future meet for worship at the Botanic Hall, East Broadway, near the corner of Market Street. Preachers visiting New York can call on Elder Wm Roworth, 354 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Notice.

On my return home, I purpose to preach at the following places:—Portsmouth, Tuesday eve, Oct. 15th. Exeter, Oct. 16th. Worcester, 17th. Sunday, the 20th, not engaged. Those brethren in Ct. who wished my labors as soon as I was at liberty, please write me at the Worcester Conference, that I may make arrangements there.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Hastings' Publications.

All Books and Tracts of H. L. Hastings are kept on hand and for sale at this office. A List, with prices, will be given soon.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times, and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

EXPLANATION.—"A. C. Association" means the ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, and "C. P. Society" means CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Notice.

There will be a General Conference in Orrington, commencing Oct. 10th, and continuing over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as the Lord will. Brethren G. W. Brown and John Billings will be present. Other preaching brethren are expected. Provision will be made for all who are pleased to come to the meeting. There appears to be quite an interest at Orrington—as much so as there has been since '43.

In behalf of the brethren,

F. H. SMITH.

Advent Christian Association.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Board of Managers of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester Tuesday, Oct. 15th, at 9 o'clock, A. M.

P. B. MORGAN, Chairman.

Notice.

Wm. J. Ripley will hold a meeting at Wrightville, Ct., Sunday, Oct. 13th. Will some Bro. meet him at the depot on the down train from Winsted Saturday?

C. GOODRICH.

Notice.

GEO. STORRS, of New York, owing to the extreme pressure of present circumstances, offers the herein after named works at fifty per cent. discount to any person, or persons, sending him TEN DOLLARS or upwards, if applied for soon. The works are—

Six Sermons, revised and enlarged edition: bound, 60 cts.; in paper covers, 30 cts.

The Watch Tower; or, Man in Death, in paper covers. ....20 cents.

Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again—in paper covers........20 cts.

Life only in Christ: a bound volume, including each of the above works, and a discourse on the Atonement........$1.00

The Discussion with Prof. Mattison—in paper covers........30 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition—bound, 75 cts.; paper covers, 40 cents.

Man's Destiny: A Review of Prof. Post—in paper covers........30 cts.

Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney: Part II.—in paper covers........30 cts.

Our Israelitish Origin—paper covers........50 cts.

Man's Nature and Destiny: A Sermon, by Geo. Storrs—paper covers........5 cts.

Bible Examiner for 1860, bound........$1.50

Of this last work there are but some thirty copies left.

All remittances and orders, sent by mail, must be addressed—Geo. Storrs, Box 4658, New York. Sent by private hands, they may be left with Geo. W. Young, (up stairs) 35 Ann Street, (corner of Nassau.)

Notice.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will meet in Wayne, Thursday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Oct. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. The meeting will be held in a school-house, about one mile west of Wayne village, near Bro. Cyrus Bartlett's. Brethren will call on him for direction. We hope the Lord's laborers will be there.

I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollar's worth; for twelve dollars, four dollar's worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

R. WENDELL, per order of Publishing Committee.

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.

English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we get them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line, but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1.25; postage 14 cts.

Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1.50; postage 15 cts.

Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.62, postage 15 cts.

Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50, postage 21 cts.

Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.

Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75 postage 26 cts.

Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50, postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

Appointments.

George Storrs will preach at Botanic Hall, East Broadway, New York City, 10 o'clock, A. M. and 3 P. M. ....Sunday, Oct. 13th.

WM. ROWORTH.

Hazel Plain, Ct.	Oct. 13th.
Wrightville, Ct.	Oct. 20th.
Plymouth Hollow	Oct. 27th.
Prospect, Ct.	Nov. 3d.
Pine Swamp, Ct.	Nov. 10th.
South Dover, N. Y., at Bro. Oliver's, or where he may appoint	Nov. 12th and 13th.

I. S. CANFIELD.

Melvin Village	Oct. 13th.
Holderness (Tabernacle)	Oct. 20th.
Albany (Bell School House)	Nov. 27th.
Moultonborough Centre	Nov. 31st.

T. W. PIPER.

Clinton, Mass.	Sunday, Oct. 20th.

GEO. A. STREETER.

East Grate Works, Monday evening	Oct. 14th.
Holden	Oct. 15th.
South Levant	Oct. 16th.
Orrington (where the brethren may appoint)	Oct. 17th.
North Searsport	Oct. 18th.
Belmont (where the brethren may appoint)	Oct. 20th.
Camden	Oct. 21st.
Hope.	Oct. 22d.

Will some Bro. from Hope meet me at Belmont or Camden?

L. WETHERBEE.

Northfield Farms, Mass.	Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Athol	Evening, Oct. 15th.
North Dana	Evenings, Oct. 16th and 17th.
Clinton.	Sunday, Oct. 20th.
Erving	Wednesday evening, Oct. 23d

and stay as long as duty may require.

S. W. BISHOP.

Pleasant Valley, Ct.	Oct. 13th.
Ruthburn	Oct. 15th and 16th.
Bro. Beach's	Oct. 17th.
Wrightville	Oct. 20th.
Plymouth Hollow	Oct. 27th.
South Farms	Nov. 3d.

J. K. BELLOWS.

Mile, Me., (where the brethren may appoint,) Oct. 13.

THOMAS SMITH.

South Windsor, Ct.	Oct. 13th.
Concord, N. H.	Oct. 27th.

C. GOODRICH.

If the Lord will, Bro. Rinselier Fenn will preach at the Pine Tree School House, at 10 1-2 A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., on Sunday, Oct. 13th.

Charlestown, (Hawkins' Hall, 79 Main Street) Thursday evening, Oct. 10th.

Lynn ....Sunday, Oct. 13th.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Portland, Me. ....Sundays Oct. 13th and 20th.

L. BOUTELL.

Kennebunkport, Me.	Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Portsmouth, N. H.	Sunday, Oct. 20th.

J. COUCH.

Southbridge, Mass. ....Oct. 13th.

S. B. MUNN.

South Adams, meetings commencing Oct. 17th and continuing over the Sabbath.

GEO. A. OTIS.

Yarmouth. ....Oct. 12.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

J. Blain—We received for you at Camp Meeting $2 from Dr. Mathewson of Sandy Hill, which we credit to you on account. This is all that has been paid us.

W. A. Fenn. Yes, we send the paper.

D. N. Kidder: A. Ash owes $2.12.

Mrs. Mary Holden: We have carried forward the credit as you desire.

D. F. Taylor's P. O. address is Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Eld. Joseph T. Curry's P. O. address is Springfield, Mass.

O. R. Kassett's P. O. address is Yarmouth, Me.

W. Sheldon's P. O. address is now changed from Springville, Wis., to Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis.

Cash Receipts.

J M Miner 271, $1.12; A Wood 237, 60 cts; J Ireland 344, $2.00; H W Norville 312, $3.00; Syl. Neal 315, 12 cts.

John Clark 331; Elizabeth Smith 326, S M Lum 312, A H Boonel 312, H D Reed 325,—50 cts. each.

A S McEwen 343, Dr. H Tagert 364, N Irish 343, Mrs. J Ray 329, Elisha Baker 340, Wm. Webb 276, W W Doughty 333, Mrs. E A W Lake 325, O T Clisby 333, C G Rodman 344, P C Rodman 346, J Clothey 331, M Poettleplace 338, D B Salter 312, Mrs. L T Marsh 338, G W Whiting 330, Jno Young 325, O Rawson 331, Wm. Sweet 338, N Hoyt 334, Miss M S Gaslin 315, J Morrison, p. pd., 314, C F Bosenger 334, M Christenson 338, A B Chapman 314, Miss E Kelly 334, T Bonney 338, J Rogers 326, AL Cole 338, T Wilkins 338, L J Johnson 338, Dur. Tibbetts 334, Aug. Hamilton 340, M Moorehouse 318, Geo. Storer 338, T D Bailey 338, [illegible] 331, Benj. [illegible] 342, George Verge [illegible]—$1.00 each.

John Whitcomb [illegible], H S [illegible], [illegible] 333, Ira Hodgkins 364, J A [illegible], [illegible] Williamson [illegible], [illegible] 365, B Little [illegible], D N Kidder [illegible], J S Douglas [illegible] [illegible]—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

A Wood 40 cts, J A [illegible], [illegible] W S Olmsted [illegible].

Books and Tracts.

Those wishing our books and tracts by mail shall be prepaid; [illegible] books or tracts, need [illegible] postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts.; postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 5 cts.; 25 cts. per d oz.; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 8 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 6 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp. 5 cts. single, 50 cts per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-3 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-3 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 6 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 5 cts. $3.00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts. in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 5 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 5 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 3 cts single, postage 1 ct., $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 160 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sec. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 259 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $4.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 5 cts. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the young. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdoms of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Barsom, D.D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts. single, postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance; or, the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts. postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Three hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 5 cts. single. $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In which are examined all the texts brought forward to prove it. Two hundred [illegible]. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price [illegible]. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings; or Bible proof that the [illegible] destruction of the wicked [illegible]. By J. Blain. Price [illegible] 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts [illegible] for sale at our agent in Portland, Me. [illegible] Bacon, No. 8 Summer [illegible].

[illegible]

tion of the power of the "man of sin," is the return of the Saviour to this world. The fulfillment of prophecy, the signs of the times, all indicate the fact that we are living near the end. It is the next great event. That is coming, and coming soon; we cannot doubt it. May we be ready to hail it with joy when it shall come.

W. H. B.

For the Crisis.

"To the Poor Indian."

I had the pleasure of spending an hour or two this evening in listening to an able and impressive lecture on the "Wrongs of the Indian, and the remedy for those wrongs," by Father Beeson, the friend of the red man, and of drinking into my soul the sweet and touching music as "Laroo-gaa" alone can give birth to. It is truly astonishing to behold the power of enchantment she possesses; all eyes are riveted upon the singer, and all ears are open to catch each note as it falls so delightfully from the lips of this beautiful "child of the forest."

The lecture was well calculated to excite that interest in the well-being of the Indian which every Christian heart should feel. The lecturer painted in living colors the sufferings and misery of the red man. He told how they are robbed, cheated and murdered by men wearing the cloak of civilization, the Border-ruffian considering the poor Indian as proper food for his rifle. If there exists an idea worthy of Satan, it is that the "Indian is doomed to vanish before the march of civilization." Civilization! nay, barbarism rather. The noble Indian stands forth in the majesty of his manhood, and challenges mankind with his cry, "Am I not a man and a brother?" Can we say no?

The impression has gone forth that the Indians are all savages; and to the imagination of the emigrant rise visions of the reeking scalping knife and hideous war dance. That the red man can be civilized and christianized, the present position of the Creek, Chippewa, Cherokee and other tribes bear ample testimony. And because all the frontier Indians are not so, who is to blame? Had one-tenth of the means appropriated by Congress been employed to its legitimate use, and not been stolen by corrupt government officials and others, the same happy results might have flowed among other tribes. And the charge can be made fearlessly, that of the immense sums of money, etc., designed for the Indian, he has received not 5 per cent.

We have lately held a day of "fasting, humiliation and prayer," because God has, after long suffering, begun to pour out the vials of his wrath upon us for our sins. Now if I believe anything sincerely, it is this: that God is visiting this nation with judgment among other things for its treatment of the Indian. We behold the melancholy spectacle of some tribes arraying themselves under the black banner of secession—who should have remained neutral or else sided with the government, which they undoubtedly would have done if they had had sufficient evidence that the government was their friend! I believe they have been forced to this step by the system of fraud and corruption practiced by those entrusted with the Indian's interests, and who to them appeared as the representives of the Government.

I love the Indian race. I say not this as a result of momentary enthusiasm, but a life-long feeling. I want to see them occupy the position that they can occupy, and will yet occupy. For as soon, and perhaps before this unhappy war is over, the case of the poor Indian will receive attention, and then many who are now gloating over their spoils and numberless victims, will be awakened from their fancied security, and a day of judgment will begin. I feel to thank the Lord that we have at last a man in the Presidential Chair—a man who dares to do right, and who will do right.

We have also an exhibition of the effect of Orthodoxy on the Indian. It is well known that the untutored Indian believes he is the child of the Great Spirit, and when he dies he goes to the happy hunting ground of his fathers. Now the teaching of such doctrines as total depravity, eternal misery, etc., are to the Indian abhorrent, and grate harshly upon his fine feelings. Tell him he is a child of wrath—totally depraved—must do wrong, etc., and for doing what his nature forces him to do he is to be eternally tormented, and tell him this is the truth of the Bible, and with disgust he turns away from such a book, and spurns such a religion. Is it not time a better theology were taught them? What fearful havoc these dogmas make! The Spiritualist is ready to sound in Indian ears the charge that this is christianity, and offer his new revelation in its stead.

If these thoughts arouse a better feeling in any breast for the poor Indian, I shall be content. Brethren, can we do any thing for this noble race? Can we not pray for them? Cannot tracts be sent among them, printed in their own language, teaching the truth? Shall the barbarous idea be carried out that the Indian must perish, or will we try to prevent it?

W. W. S.

Philadelphia, Oct. 1st, 1861.

☞ It would be well if we had less [illegible] and more [illegible], less profession and more piety; less law and more justice.

For the Crisis.

Will the Wicked Dead live again?

(Concluded.)

The word zoee, rendered life, meaning "animated existence, state of being alive, eternal life, immortality," is used in the N. T., as applied directly to the righteous, about 90 times; the noun life, simply, without any qualifying term, about 40 times; eternal life, 36; and everlasting life, 14 times. But the term life, when from zoee, signifies eternal or everlasting life.

It may be well here to inquire, why the terms eternal, or everlasting, ever need be applied to the noun life, if it is not plainly to show that the word life—from zoee—is always to be understood as something different from anazoo, to live again, without any promise of eternal future existence. This is made plain by the passage in John 3: 36—"He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life: (zoee) and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, (zoee)." Yet, still, such may live again, (anazoo), and the wrath of God may abide upon them, i. e., they may be "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord."

It is difficult to conceive how any one can frame the idea that the wicked dead will not live again! We believe, no one pretends that there is any positive testimony in the passages we have cited, to prove the wicked will not live again; but they infer that the passages so teach! But what testimony can be more positive or explicit than we have already adduced to prove the wicked dead will live again? If there was no other testimony than the passage in Rev. 20: 5, it seems it should be enough. For if Christ lived, or revived, (anazoo) Rom. 14: 3, then must the wicked dead live again, or be revived, (anazoo), as the primary meaning of the word revive, as given by Webster, is—"To return to life; to recover life"; and he refers to 1 Kings 17: 22, and Rom. 14: 9, as proof. Who can set aside such testimony as this?

T. M. Preble.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 24, 1861.

To the Brethren.

I am under the necessity of saying to the brethren in different parts of the country who are expecting me to come and labor with them this fall and the coming winter, that I am unable to fulfill my engagements on account of my health. While I have labored in new fields for the last year, I have seen so much interest manifested to hear the word of life, that it stimulated me to labor beyond what I could bear; consequently my voice has given out, so that it will be impossible for me to preach much for some time to come. It is a great trial for me to be obliged to stop now, when there is so much need of laborers in the field, but I must submit to the will of my heavenly Father. I have not preached but once since the 28th of August, and then but part of the day. How long I must refrain from preaching I cannot tell, but hope after a rest from public speaking for two or three months, to be able to buckle on the armor again, and fight until the war ends, and the saints take possession of the "Kingdom, under the whole heaven." Remember me in your prayers. My P. O. address, for the present, is Clinton, Mass.

J. Hemenway.

Camp Meeting Deficiency.

Bro. G. T. Adams, Treasurer, acknowledges the following responses to Bro. Taylor's call in the last Crisis.

Joseph T. Curry	$1.00.
Walter Pratt	1.00.
Rufus Wendell	1.00.

Come, brethren in the ministry, don't let this thing drag. We were well fed at Wilbraham Boarding Tent; the trifle required of each of us to wipe out the debt which rests upon the Committee's shoulders should be contributed cheerfully and promptly. Bro. Walter, writing under date of 7th inst., accompanies his remittance with the following note:—

Bro. Wendell:—On the arrival of the "Crisis" yesterday I see the expenses of the Wilbraham Camp meeting exceeded its receipts some $63, hence, I enclose one dollar to help make up the deficiency, and if more is wanted I will send another. Last year I boarded myself and family and one preacher. This year myself, wife and boy boarded at the boarding tent, hence I feel it a privilege to share the burden with my brethren in the ministry and relieve the committee.

W. Pratt.

Correspondence.

From Sr. O. S. Miner.

Bro. Wendell:—I here enclose one dollar for the Crisis. I would be glad to send more if I had it. Myself and my son (an only child fifteen years of age) are the only Advent believers in the place, we have no meetings, and the Crisis seems to strengthen us in our lonely pilgrimage to God's peaceful Kingdom, where there will be no sickness or sorrow. It is on account of sickness I have not sent the money before. I had but just got up from the typhoid fever when my husband was taken with the typhoid and lung fever together, and my son was sick at the same time. Amidst our afflictions the Lord in his mercy has spared our lives, and in our trouble I have found him a very present help in every time of need. I feel to trust in him at all times; he is my stay and my staff. Oh for the privilege of hearing one good sermon. Why can't we have more good sermons in the Crisis? We are completely surrounded with Spiritualism, but I feel the Lord is able to keep us. Will you pray for us? Oh the temptations of the young. I do not want to be selfish, but I do desire to see my Savior come. Oh for patience to wait his time.

From Sr. Lydia Hill.

Bro. Wendell:—I send you enclosed two dollars in advance, as my payment is about run out. I would be glad to say to the children of my Father, that my only hope is in God. He is my strength and shield, and I still hope in his mercy. I hear him saying, "I am he that blotteth out as a thick cloud thine iniquities, and will remember them no more forever." Blessed be the name of the Lord. O, may we all get sweet submission to His will. Then we can trust all in his hands, feeling that all is well; that our Father is at the helm; that he will safely guide the vessel into port, and save all that will obey the Captain's orders and be ruled by his laws. Then we shall be saved by his grace, and gathered home to be forever with him.

From Bro. William Sweet.

Bro. Wendell:—Bro. Hastings speaks of hard times for bread in some portions of the east before spring. I say, although money is scarce here in the west, bread stuffs are plenty and cheap for cash, or labor, and more laborers are wanted to work at various trades, and farming in particular. There is plenty of land to till in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota. So many of our laboring men have left to join the U. S. army, that help is scarce. Those who can find means, let them immediately come west this fall. We have brethren scattered more or less all over Winona, Goodhue, Filmore and Huston Counties, Minnesota. Let some good minister come to me, and I will show him a large field to work in for God, and warm hearts to feed him or his family, if he has one.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Foreign files by the Niagara are to the 21st ult. They contain little of interest beyond the following items:

The Central Italian Committee at Genoa have telegraphed to London official news that Garibaldi, moved by the Neapolitan demonstration and sensible of the impeding demands of Italy, has determined not to go to America.

Twenty thousand muskets, sold by Prussia to the United States of America, have been supplied from the depot of Stettin, and are now being removed to Hamburg for shipment.

A Madrid semi-official journal declares, in the most positive terms, that Spain will act on her own account against Mexico, and demand reparation of her long standing grievances. A Spanish squadron is on its way to Cuba, where several thousand troops are ready to embark. This expedition has been long in preparation, and a steamer is about to start for Cuba with the final instructions of the government.

A letter from Florence says, in a free and semi-confidential conversation with the municipality of Florence, Victor Emmanuel said he hoped to solve the difficulties of the Neapolitan question by firmness and honesty. As to Rome, he said there are people who wish us to cut the gordian knot, but we prefer to untie it. Venice can only be obtained by war. The first thing to do is to organize a strong army. After that, and when we are ready, reasons for attacking Austria will not be wanting.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 5. Special Washington dispatches state that General Fremont will neither be suspended nor court martialed while his troops are in the face of the enemy, owing to the general outcry at the West against his removal.

Richmond papers say that the sick rebels have been removed from Manassas to Richmond, in anticipation of a battle, and that Jeff. Davis, in a speech to the troops on Wednesday, at Fairfax Court House, promised them they should soon be in Baltimore.

Acting Master Churchill, lately directed to take passage for the Pacific, not having been heard from, fears are entertained for his safety.

General McClellan has stopped the visits of Pennsylvania politicians to the camps.

General Wool left this city this morning, but it is not known which route he took.

The World's Washington dispatch says that General McClellan had formed a plan to capture the 6000 or 8000 rebels in the vicinity of Munson's Hill by a night attack with 25,000 men, and arranged certain signals, confiding his plan but to a few prominent officers. The rebels discovered his signals, and although he made great efforts to hasten the departure of his troops, the rebels had got beyond his reach when he arrived at their intrenchments. Gen. McClellan was highly indignant.

Later from California.

Pacific Springs, 260 miles east of Salt Lake, Oct. 5. The Pony Express, with San Francisco dates of the 28th, passed here at 10 o'clock this morning.

Arrived at San Francisco 20th, steamer Uncle Sam, from Panama.

Sailed 27th, ship Richard 3d, for Callao.

In the southern counties there has been three day's heavy rain up to the night of the 24th, extending from the mountains to the sea. A dispatch from Yreka states that a heavy shower of rain fell in that place on the 25th.

The Rev. Dr. Scott and family have taken passage on the ship Franklin Haven for Liverpool. They expect to leave next week.

The Forrest Theatre at Sacramento was destroyed by fire on the 26th. The building cost about $100,000. There was no insurance.

The cavalry regiments called for from this state are full to overflowing, and yesterday one or two companies were refused. There is still room in the infantry regiments, although they are fast filling up.

The 26th was observed as a fast day in San Francisco, according to the President's message. Services were held during the day in all the churches, and several prayer meetings assembled together in the largest and most central churches in the evening. Business was generally suspended.

The Mexican residents of San Francisco are to-day celebrating the anniversary of their national Independence, something after the fashion of the 4th of July celebrations of Americans. This morning they fired guns, and to-night they will send up sky rockets from the neighboring hills, and participate in fandangoes and other characteristic amusements.

From North Carolina.

The New York Times of Friday gives the substance of a conversation with two gentlemen of intelligence and character who have recently left North Carolina, where they had resided for some time as agents of certain capitalists engaged in mining there. They had much difficulty in getting away, as their acquaintance with the physical features of North Carolina was such as might make the information they could give to the Federal government dangerous to Confederate interests. However, they were finally allowed to go. The Times says:

"These gentlemen have been residing at Rutherford, near the centre of the western portion of the State. In that vicinity, they say, the feeling is open and strong for the Union. Men do not hesitate to declare publicly their hostility to secession, and as a general thing their right to do so is respected even by the secessionists. The same feeling, in their opinion, pervades other sections of the State—strongest, of course, in the mountain districts, but still to be traced in nearly every county. At Chattanooga nearly all were Union men. They have as yet no public organization, but secret Union clubs exist in every part of the State, and will take public action whenever it can be done with any prospect of success.

These gentlemen confirm the report concerning the effect of the receipt at Raleigh of the news of the taking of Hatteras by the Union troops. Before they left home, letters had been received from Raleigh, stating that the Legislature was in session when the capture was announced, and that the Union members rose in their places, and cheered and swung their hats, and were so noisy in their rejoicings that all business was for the time suspended. The same feeling, to a considerable extent, pervaded the people of that city.

It was generally understood that very many more of the inhabitants would have flocked into the Union camp and taken the oath of allegiance, but that they were prevented by the secession troops who lined the coast. The main support of the rebellion is the belief, wide-spread and zealously encouraged by the leaders, that the Northern armies will break up their homes, destroy their property, and subject the whole country to a brutal and licentious soldiery. The lower and more ignorant classes, who are made to believe these things, are extremely violent against the North, but the more intelligent, who know them to be false, are by a very large majority Union men.

From Virginia.

Richmond papers received at Cincinnati contain some interesting items.

The Dispatch of Sept. 21st says the strength of the Federal army in Western Virginia is believed to be between 40,000 and 50,000, of whom 25,000 are under Gen. Reynolds, in Randolph county, 6000 to 7000 under Gen. Cox in the Kanawha valley, and 15,000 under Gen. Rosecrans. Reinforcements were to be sent to the rebel Generals Lee, Wise and Floyd, who are said to be outnumbered. Gen. Lee had abandoned his forward movement and fallen back. Generals Floyd and Wise had removed from Sewall's mountain to Meadow Bluff, in the direction of Summerville, whence Gen. Rosecrans was approaching, with a view to offer him battle. The Dispatch says the Federal fortification on Cheat Mountain is almost impregnable. Col. Rust had approached it so nearly as to look over into it and see all that was going on in it, and also the exact nature of the fortification. The forest for several acres around has been cleared, and the trees arranged on the outer boundary with their tops trimmed and pointed outwards, so as to present a mass of sharp points raised to a considerable height, and strongly interlocked. Inside of this is a wall of logs and a deep ditch. Across the road are breastworks of great strength, mounted with pivot guns, while in the centre is a block-house pierced and armed also with cannon. The rebels think they can turn this position if they cannot capture it; while, if their forces march on beyond, it will be useless to the Federals.

The Examiner of Sept. 27th speaks of affairs in Western Virginia as "critical," in consequence of the manner in which Rosecrans was pressing Generals Floyd and Wise, who were "falling back" before him.

The Great Eastern's Accident.—Our foreign papers contain many details of the disaster which befel the Great Eastern, in the breaking of her rudder pin, but the substance has already been given. A passenger on board, after giving an interesting narrative of the affair, and dwelling upon the wonderful strength of the ship and her engines, says:

"How, then, has a ship so constructed, succumbed? I suppose it is not possible to put materials together to insure perfect immunity from accident in such a trial. We were pushing ahead with the gale on our port bow, and when we tried to put her head to wind her huge broadside exposed to the gale was more than her vast power could control. She could not be brought head to wind, nor could she be turned to sail with the wind, and so she lay in the trough of the sea, until in the stupendous efforts to put her right her rudder head broke above the rudder post, all of massive iron, yielded; then the wheels (these, perhaps, were not equal to their task) gave way one after another; and so this great, strong and powerful ship was at the mercy of the waves, a log upon the billows, rolling in a [illegible] way which can never be described nor yet imagined by those who have not experienced it, and filling the hearts of all on board with views of things that might yet overtake her, which only an experience can enable any one to realize."

We take the following from the resolutions which were passed at a general meeting of the passengers:

"That we feel it to be our imperative duty to state that the Great Eastern was sent to sea thoroughly unprepared to face the storms which every one must expect to meet in crossing the Atlantic; and that, if it had not been for the extraordinary strength of the hull, and the skill which was manifested in the construction of the vessel and its engines, in all human probability every soul on board would have perished. We call particular attention to the ballasting of the Great Eastern, the state of her paddlewheels, the position of her boats, the insecure and most perilous character of her internal fittings, and the careless way in which she was stowed, owing to which carelessness, in fact, a large portion of our luggage has been most recklessly and utterly destroyed."—Boston Jour.

Death of an Aged Missionary.—Mrs. Clarissa L. Richards, widow of Rev. William Richards, missionary to the Sandwich Islands, died in New Haven on Thursday, aged sixty-seven years. She accompanied her husband to his field of labor in 1822. After his death, in 1847, she returned to this country.

☞ Messages have lately been sent direct, by telegraph, to Taganrog, on the Sea of Azoff, from the city of London. The distance is 2500 miles. This is said to be the longest direct communication by telegraph ever achieved, unless we except the messages by the Atlantic cable.

Notices, &c.

Notice.

The Second Advent Church, formerly meeting in the Hall at the corner of Grand and Elizabeth Streets, New York, will for the future meet for worship at the Botanic Hall, East Broadway, near the corner of Market Street. Preachers visiting New York can call on Elder Wm. Roworth, 354 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Notice.

On my return home, I purpose to preach at the following places:—Portsmouth, Tuesday eve, Oct. 15th. Exeter, Oct. 16th. Worcester, 17th. Sunday, the 20th, not engaged. Those brethren in Ct. who wished my labors as soon as I was at liberty, please write me at the Worcester Conference, that I may make arrangements there.

Hiram Munger.

Hastings' Publications.

All Books and Tracts of H. L. Hastings are kept on hand and for sale at this office. A List, with prices, will be given soon.

Meeting of the A. C. Association.

God willing, the second annual meeting of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester, Mass., Tuesday, 2 o'clock, P. M., the 15th of October next.

Business of special importance is to be transacted at this meeting, beside the usual appointments of the officers and Boards of the A. C. Association and C. P. Society, on which account a general attendance of preachers and delegates from the several Churches is much to be desired. Each Church co-operating with this Association is allowed to send one delegate, "and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members." All preachers co-operating with the Association are allowed a sitting as members in full.

It is specially requested that united prayer be offered up to Almighty God that the transactions of the Association may be such as the Church demands in these fearfully perilous times; and that whatever personal sacrifice may be required at our hand, that may be done which shall most effectually serve to the building up of Churches and the maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." By order of the Board of Managers,

P. B. Morgan, Chairman.

Explanation.—"A. C. Association" means the Advent Christian Association, and "C. P. Society" means Christian Publication Society.

Rufus Wendell.

Notice.

There will be a General Conference in Orrington, commencing Oct. 10th, and continuing over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as the Lord will. Brethren G. W. Brown and John Billings will be present. Other preaching brethren are expected. Provision will be made for all who are pleased to come to the meeting. There appears to be quite an interest at Orrington—as much so as there has been since '43.

In behalf of the brethren,

F. H. Smith.

Advent Christian Association.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Board of Managers of the A. C. Association will meet in the city of Worcester Tuesday, Oct. 15th, at 9 o'clock, A. M.

P. B. Morgan, Chairman.

Notice.

Wm. J. Ripley will hold a meeting at Wrightville, Ct., Sunday, Oct. 13th. Will some Bro. meet him at the depot on the down train from Winsted Saturday?

C. Goodrich.

Notice.

Geo. Storrs, of New York, owing to the extreme pressure of present circumstances, offers the herein after named works at fifty per cent. discount to any person, or persons, sending him ten dollars or upwards, if applied for soon. The works are—

Six Sermons, revised and enlarged edition: bound, 60 cts.; in paper covers, 30 cts.

The Watch Tower: or, Man in Death, in paper covers....20 cents.

Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again—in paper covers....20 cts.

Life only in Christ: a bound volume, including each of the above works, and a discourse on the Atonement....$1.00

The Discussion with Prof. Mattison—in paper covers....30 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition—bound, 75 cts.; paper covers, 40 cents.

Man's Destiny: A Review of Prof. Post—in paper covers....20 cts.

Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney: Part II.—in paper covers....30 cts.

Our Israelitish Origin—paper covers....50 cts.

Man's Nature and Destiny: A Sermon, by Geo. Storrs—paper covers....5 cts.

Bible Examiner for 1860, bound....$1.50

Of this last work there are but some thirty copies left.

All remittances and orders, sent by mail, must be addressed—Geo. Storrs, Box 4638, New York. Sent by private hands, they may be left with Geo. W. Young, (up stairs) 33 Ann Street, (corner of Nassau.)

Notice.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will meet in Wayne, Thursday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Oct. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. The meeting will be held in a school-house, about one mile west of Wayne village, near Bro. Cyrus Bartlett's. Brethren will call on him for direction. We hope the Lord's laborers will be there.

I. C. Wellcome, Sec.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollar's worth; for twelve dollars, four dollar's worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

R. Wendell, per order of Publishing Committee.

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.

English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we got them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line; but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1.25; postage 14 cts.
Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1.50; postage 15 cts.
Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.63; postage 15 cts.
Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50; postage 21 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.
Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75; postage 26 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50; postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

Appointments.

George Storrs will preach at Botanic Hall, East Broadway, New York City, 10 o'clock, A. M. and 3 P. M....Sunday, Oct. 13th.

Wm. Roworth.

Hazel Plain, Ct.	Oct. 13th.
Wrightville, Ct.	Oct. 20th.
Plymouth Hollow, Ct.	Oct. 27th.
Prospect, C.	Nov. 3d.
Pine Swamp, Ct.	Nov. 10th.
South Dover, N. Y., at Bro. Olivir's, or where he may appoint	Nov. 12th and 13th.

T. S. Canfield.

Melvin Village	Oct. 13th.
Holderness, (Tabernacle	Oct. 20th.
Albany, (Bell School House)	Nov. 27th.
Moultonborough Centre	Nov. 3d.

T. W. Piper.

Clinton, Mass....Sunday, Oct. 20th.

Geo. A. Streeter.

East Grate Works, Monday evening	Oct. 14th.
Holden	Oct. 15th.
South Levant	Oct. 16th.
Orrington (where the brethren may appoint)	Oct. 17th.
North Searsport	Oct. 18th
Belmont (where the brethren may appoint)	Oct. 20th.
Camden	Oct. 21st.
Hope	Oct. 22d.

Will some Bro. from Hope meet me at Belmont or Camden?

L. Wetherbee.

Northfield Farms, Mass.	Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Athol	Evening, Oct. 15th.
North Dana	Evenings, Oct. 16th and 17th.
Clinton	Sunday, Oct. 20th.
Erving	Wednesday evening, Oct. 23d and stay as long as duty may require.

S. W. Bishop.

Pleasant Valley, Ct.	Oct. 13th
Ruthburn	Oct. 15th and 16th.
Bro Beach'	Oct. 17th.
Wrightville	Oct. 20th.
Plymouth Hollow	Oct. 27th.
South Farms	Nov. 3d.

J. K. Bellows.

Milo, Me., (where the brethren may appoint,) Oct. 13th.

Thomas Smith.

South Windsor, Ct.	Oct. 13th.
Concord, N. H.	Oct. 27th.

C. Goodrich.

If the Lord will, Bro. Rouselier Fenn will preach at the Pine Tree School House, at 10 1-2 A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., on Sunday, Oct. 13th.

Charlestown, (Hawkins' Hall, 79 Main Street) Thursday evening, Oct. 10th.
Lynn....Sunday, Oct. 13th.

Rufus Wendell.

Portland, Me....Sundays Oct. 13th and 20th.

L. Boutell.

Kennebunkport, Me.	Sunday, Oct. 13th.
Portsmouth, N. H.	Sunday, Oct. 20th.

J. Couch.

Southbridge, Mass....Oct. 13th.

S. B. Munn.

South Adams, meetings commencing Oct. 17th and continuing over the Sabbath.

Geo. A. Otis.

Yarmouth....Oct. 13.

Hiram Munger.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

J. Blain—We received for you at Camp Meeting $2 from Dr. Mathewson of Sandy Hill, which we credit to you on account. This is all that has been paid us.

W. A. Fenn: Yes, we send the paper.

D. N. Kidder: A. Ash owes $2.12.

Mrs. Mary Holden: We have carried forward the credit as you desire.

D. T. Taylor's P. O. address is Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Eld. Joseph T. Curry's P. O. address is Springfield, Mass.

O. R. Fassett's P. O. address is Yarmouth, Me.

W. Sheldon's P. O. address is now changed from Springville, Wis., to Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis.

Cash Receipts.

J M Miner 271, $1.12; A Wood 237, 60 cts; J Ireland 344, $2.00; H W Norville 312, $2.00; Syl. Neal 315, 12 cts.

John Clark 321; Elizabeth Smith 325, S M Lum 312, A H Bosnel 312, H D Reed 325,—50 cts. each.

A S McEwen 343, Dr. H Tagart 336, N Irish 343, Mrs. J. Ray 329, Elisha Baker 340, Wm. Welsh 276, W W Doughty 338, Mrs. E A W Lake 325, O T Claby 331, C G Bodwin 344, P C Bodman 340, J Clothey 331, M Prettiplace 325, D S Salter 312, Mrs. L T Marsh 339, G W Whiting 335, Jno. Young 338, O Rawson 331, Wm. Sweet 338, N Hoyt 331, Miss M S Gaslin 315, J Morrison, [illegible] 314, C F Bosenger 334, M Christenson 328, A B Chapman 314, Miss E Kelly 338, T Bonney 338, J Rogers 326, AL Cole 338, T Wilkins 338, L [illegible] Johnson 338, Dur. Tibbetts 334, Aug. Hamilton 340, M [illegible] 338, Geo. Storer 338, T D Bailey 338, [illegible] 331, Benj. Ransome 342, George Verge 325—$1.00 each.

John Whitcomb 338, H S Castle 340, [illegible] 338, Ira Hodgkins 344, J A Stillman [illegible] Williams [illegible] 325, S Little 338, D N Kidder 338, [illegible] 338, J B Douglas [illegible] Mayberry [illegible]—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

A Wood 40 cts, J A Sealy [illegible] W S Olmsted [illegible]

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to prepay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of Immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 5 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 6 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts: in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 160 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 252 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one, should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 5 cts. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the young. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $4.00 per hundred, 60 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 5 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1. postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts called on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for the destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] are to end in the [illegible] by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the judgment. All texts on Future Punishment quoted and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be had of our agent in Portland, Me., J. R. [illegible], No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. R. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:— The Harp, by Elder Himes; [illegible]

[illegible]

Selected for the Crisis.

Christian Usefulness.

The low-built grass is not a stately tree,
Nor yet a lovely and all-fragrant rose;
It yields no nectar to the grateful bee,
Nor fashions, for their transit o'er the sea,
The hearts of oak revered by friends and foes.

But think of it as lightly as you will,
Passing it over in your careless tread,
It has its own peculiar place to fill;
And, humble as its work appeareth, still
Nor oak nor rose could do that work instead.

So, youthful Christian, through life's transient day,
There is a special work marked out for you;
It may be of the lowliest kind; it may
Be such as shall the loftiest powers display,
But none beside yourself your work can do.

Then bend in meekness at your Saviour's throne,
And seek to learn the purpose of his grace;
Ask him who has so oft your duty shown,
To point you out the work that is your own,
And tell you where to find your proper place.

"What wilt thou have me do?" With single eye
To your Redeemer's glory, work for him;
Illumined every moment from on high,
Strive in each action God to glorify,
Nor let one thought of self life's radiance dim.

Work, work, nor covet an ignoble rest;
Allow no sloth thy spirit to beguile,
Those love the Saviour most who serve him best;
And he who blesses others, shall be blessed
With the full sunshine of his Saviour's smile.

Gleanings from Letters.

Edwin Miller, West Martinsburgh, N. Y., sends $2, and writes—

We had the pleasure to hear Bro. S. S. Brewer preach last Sunday, at our place, as he was here with his wife and Bro. C. B. Turner. They arrived here on Saturday, and left us Sunday night; went five miles and preached Sunday evening. Monday morning Bro. Turner baptized four happy souls, and then we bade them good bye again. They went twelve miles and held a meeting in Jefferson Co. on Monday evening, and from there to Mannsville. Bro. Brewer was to give a course of lectures in the Baptist church by request of said church. We expect he will come and settle here with us, as there is a great field open, and people want to hear the gospel once more in Lewis and Jefferson Counties.

Eld. A. N. Seymour writes—

Dear Brother, I send you another new subscriber, Sr. M. J. Maginnis, Fentonville, Genesee Co., Mich. She encloses one dollar for the Crisis. She will probably be one of your permanent subscribers. Dear Bro., continue giving us meat in due season, and let one thought be most fervently impressed on every soul—holiness of heart—spotlessness of character, in view of the Saviour's coming. Theory, it matters not how perfect and glorious, will never save us unless all of our thoughts, conversation, spirit and desires are regulated by the standard of truth and righteousness. May God help us to be a very holy people, ready for the opening of the day of God.

Eld. I. K. Lombard, East Stoneham, Me., writes—

I wish you would request through the Crisis that some Brother or Sister (if any has it) would send to the Crisis the hymn, or all they may have of it, of which the two following stanzas form a part:—

"Mary came weeping,
Mary came weeping,
Mary came weeping
Just at the break of day.
He arose! he arose! Ah! yes,
He arose and went to heaven in a cloud.

What's the matter, Mary?
What's the matter, Mary?
What's the matter, Mary?
They have taken away my Lord.
He arose! he arose! Ah! yes,
He arose and went to heaven in a cloud.

L. Roberts, Grand Blanc, Mich., writes—

Enclosed please find one dollar, for which you will give me credit on my subscription for the Crisis. I would be glad to send you five times the amount, but it is all that I can get at present. Times here are very hard. It seems almost impossible to get money at the present time to pay the necessary expenses of our families; but when we get a dollar, we feel like sending it to you, from the fact that we value the paper so highly. It is, indeed, the next thing to our daily bread.

Sister P. Green, Berlin Falls, writes—

Enclosed you will find one dollar, in payment for the Crisis. I would be very glad if I could send more; but cannot at this time. Please continue to send the paper, and I will send more soon. I hope means will be provided for the support of the Crisis. How could I get along without it! Its weekly visits are truly a comfort and support to me; it is like food to the hungry and water to the thirsty soul. Be faithful, and may God bless and save you at last, is my prayer.

Mrs. L. Bills, Bangor, Me., sends $1, and writes—

I hardly know how to afford to send, but as long as I have my bread, I think I must have the Crisis, for it is a great comfort to me in these perilous times, as I cannot attend the meetings every Sabbath. Dear Bro., I feel glad that we are almost home. Our toils will soon be over; soon the rightful heir to David's throne will take possession of the earth and reign King of kings forever.

Andrew C. Jenkins, Springfield, Mass., writes— [illegible]

A. M. S. Bement, Taftsville, Vt., writes—

This has been deferred on account of sickness and death in the family. I feel we are amid the perils of the last days, and because iniquity abounds, the love of many waxes cold. My prayer is that the Lord may sustain you in your arduous labors, that you may be able to give the household meat in due season.

Gilman West, Oxford, N. H., writes—

Enclosed you will find one dollar for the continuance of the Crisis. There is no paper printed that we know of that we prize so highly as we do the Crisis. We hope the Lord will bless the paper, and those who print it till he comes. It advocates what we believe. We love it, and hope to get more money soon to send you.

James Wiswell, Hydeville, Vt., writes—

I should feel lost without the Crisis, for it advocates the doctrines that I love—the soon personal coming of Christ and the resurrection from the dead to immortality in the kingdom of God. Well might the apostle call it a "blessed hope;" it cheers me as I pass along through this wilderness world.

G. W. Hurd, Ionia, Ill., sends $6 for several subscribers, and writes—

Times are very hard, and it is almost impossible to get hold of any money that is good for any thing. May the Lord strengthen your hands, and enable you to give, through the Crisis, a portion to our Father's family that shall be "meat in season."

George R. Baker, East Woodstock, Ct., writes—

Enclosed you will find one dollar for the continuance of my paper. I shall continue to be a subscriber for the Crisis as long as I can command the means to pay for it. I prize the Crisis above all other papers, and my wife says she cannot keep house without it.

Mary Hodgdon, North Barnstead, sends $2 and writes—

The Crisis was a great comfort to my husband, and is to me. I love the truths it advocates because they are taught in the Bible. I want the paper continued, and what is due I will send when I know what it is.

Phebe Rockwood, Belgrade, Me., sends $3 and writes—

I hope the paper will be sustained. I have taken it, I think, some over two years. As we live where there is not much preaching on the coming of our Master, it is to me a welcome visitor. I will do all I can to sustain it.

Sarah A. Elmore, South Windsor, Ct., writes—

My earnest prayer is that our Father would grant you all needed wisdom and grace, to guide you aright amid your "abundant labors" as his servant. May his blessing attend you and yours.

Seth G. Kimball, Burlington, Vt., writes—

I cannot do without the Crisis, for it is all the preaching that I have on the second coming of Christ.

P. W. Higgins, Wellfleet, writes—

I have taken the Crisis for a short time and like it much. I therefore enclose one dollar for its continuance.

For the Crisis.

Maine Conference Report.

(Concluded.)

The importance of missionary labor was then discoursed upon by several, calling out many appropriate remarks; after which it was voted unanimously to continue our efforts in this direction. The committee recommended the propriety of engaging Eld. O. R. Fassett as an Evangelist for the coming year. Conference voted to do so, and opened subscription papers, when one hundred and eighteen dollars was subscribed towards supporting the mission. This looks very encouraging as a beginning, while we remember that the greater part of our brethren who should be interested in the mission were not there, and will doubtless subscribe liberally. So we may sustain two missionaries, or more. Bro. Fassett accepts this call, and will immediately enter upon the work. He will need a horse and carriage, as a saving of expenses can be made in getting about. We will here ask, if any brother has a team which he would like to devote to such a cause, and will donate its use, or let it, or sell it at a reasonable rate? If so, please communicate with us in regard to it.

On closing the subscriptions, reports of churches and localities were listened to for about an hour. The reports were generally very cheering and encouraging; the churches seem to be awake, and the brethren generally wide awake in these times of declension. A good number have been converted and baptized, and many others discipled to the blessed hope. The doors are wide open in all directions for the gospel of the kingdom to be preached. We desired a few hours more time, so that all could report, but we were obliged to enter upon other items of business. The Secretary then read the following

DECLARATION.

Whereas, in the providence of God, we [illegible] hearts of the faithful watchers, with sure tokens of the speedy and glorious personal advent of Christ our King from heaven,—we wish here to re-affirm our unlimited confidence in the truth of the proclamation that has been, and is still being made, that Christ is immediately to appear, to close the gospel age, and establish the everlasting kingdom of God. We wish also to say, that, while the times are so marked with events which give us unmistakable evidence of being immediately connected with the final overthrow of all earthly governments, as declared in the Scriptures; and while the evidence is conclusive that the prophetic periods which extend to the resurrection of the saints and the glorious restitution, must run out in a very few years, it is a matter of much surprise and regret to us that our Advent papers do not give a more distinct and "certain sound" to awaken the sleepers, and to more definitely and earnestly prosecute the "specific work" for which they were originated. We would therefore herein exhort the conductors of, and contributors to said papers, to the importance of turning their attention more fully to the signs of this time, and the evidences of the very speedy termination of the Gentile times, that the flock who patronize them, and call for information, may learn the time of night.

Secondly. We wish to admonish our christian brethren everywhere of the danger they are in who overlook the fact that christians are under Christ, and not under Moses, unless they are fallen from grace. Therefore they must obey Christ if they would live, who has commanded them not to fight, and who has called them out from the world, so they are not of it, and should not fight for it. Popery, Mahomedanism, and other apostate religious classes fight, as do the world, and the world hear them.

Again. We consider it dangerous in the extreme for those who look for God to dash in pieces the kingdoms and nations of the earth, (Ps. 2, Jer. 25, Ezek. 3, Rev. 16th and 19th chapters,) to prepare the way for the kingdom of his Son, to engage in warring with carnal weapons, to try to uphold them in virtually reiterating the cry made by the Jews, "We have no king but Cæsar," and thus reject the reign of Christ to uphold the seceders from God.

This was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

Voted, to accept the decision of the council, now impending, in the case of one of its members, and request that it be delivered to the Secretary for record. A vote of thanks was tendered to the brethren and friends of Yarmouth and vicinity for their hospitality and kindness in entertaining this Conference.

Voted, to adjourn, when this Conference closes, to the call of the President and Secretary in A. D. 1862.

Voted, that the Secretary prepare a report of this Conference, and forward it to the "Advent Herald" and the "World's Crisis" for publication.

At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. J. A. Libbey preached from Jer. 9: 23, 24, drawing a clear line between worldly glorying and glorying in a knowledge of the true God, which brings eternal life. It was a sweet and affecting discourse, after which Eld. Peter Libbey made some appropriate remarks. We then repaired to the river side, when Bro. York baptized three faithful disciples, who have determined to follow the Lord. Evening, at 7 o'clock, Eld. D. M. Hanscomb preached from Rom. 1. 16, showing what the gospel has done for those who believed it, and urging the importance of believing it.

Sunday morning, at 5 o'clock, met for prayer, and continued one hour and a half in what a Sister denominated "an extra session." This was a precious season—one of the best we had. At 8 o'clock, the preachers met for council, and had a pleasant interview. At 9 o'clock, met for prayer and conference, which was a profitable season; time was fully occupied by the joyful saints, who were ready to declare what comfort they enjoyed in the service of God, and the hope they cherished. Two and sometimes three would rise at the same time. This service continued until half-past 10 o'clock. At this point, Bro. C. H. Leverton was ordained for the work of the ministry. He is a young man of promise, who comes to us well recommended, and we commend him to the brethren generally. Eld. L. L. Howard then preached a lengthy and convincing discourse from Matt. 24: 30, on the signs of Christ's soon coming. We then repaired to the water side again, and Eld. York baptized two happy Sisters, who had concluded that sprinkling would not take the place of baptism. At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. O. R. Fassett preached from John 16: 33, an important practical discourse on Peace in Christ, after which about ninety happy disciples partook of the Lord's Supper. This was one of the best seasons we ever enjoyed, and I trust that many of us were forcibly reminded of the promise of Christ to partake with us in the coming kingdom.

Before the evening service, a brother who had been reluctant to do all his duty, [illegible] At 7 o'clock in the evening, Eld. L. L. H[illegible] on the closing or finishing of the mystery of God. It was a labored and good discourse, but a large number of the brethren had left for home; the others were weary with the services of the day, which commenced a 5 o'clock, A. M., and occupied most of the day.

Several of our preachers were not able to be present. Eld. Sevey wrote that his health was too poor to come; but there were more present than at any previous Conference. Those in attendance were I. Smith, O. R. Fassett, R. R. York, N. Smith, I. C. Wellcome, L. L. Howard, E. M. Haggett, D. M. Hanscomb, J. A. Libbey, Peter Libbey, J. Partridge, H. D. Read, I. K. Lombard, L. Rhoades, I. Wight, of Maine; and J. V. Himes, F. H. Berick, L. Boutell, C. H. Leverton, of Mass.

Our Conference closed, and the brethren and sisters returned to their fields of influence and labor, joyous in hope, and much strengthened for renewed labor in God's vineyard. This was the largest gathering of brethren we have ever had at a yearly Conference. It was also the most harmonious, united and active Conference we have yet had. All seemed to have a mind to work, and work together. The most perfect union and love was manifested by all who attended. Many were obliged to leave on Friday and Saturday, but a large number staid to the close. All were treated with the greatest hospitality, and made welcome by the friends in the place. May the Lord make this meeting a blessing to very many. O. R. Fassett, President.
I. C. Wellcome, Secretary.
Richmond, Me., Sept. 18, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Song for the Children.

The Bible is a holy book,
It lightens earth's dark gloom;
It drives away the blackest clouds
That gather round the tomb.

It tells us of the sinner's Friend,
Who suffered for our sin;
It points us to a peaceful home
The faithful soul may win.

O, little children, Jesus came
To bless you with his grace,
Then come and give your hearts to him—
Come, seek your Father's face.

He's coming soon to earth again,
To give his people rest;
Come, little ones, and love the Lord,
And you shall then be blest.

Come to the paradise of God,
Come sing redemption's story;
Come dwell with Jesus and his saints,
Come rest for aye in glory.

Yarmouth, Me. Maria.

For the Crisis.

The State of Christendom.

Bro. Wendell:—The following is an extract from Dr. Wayland's new Tract, entitled "An Appeal to the Disciples of Christ of every denomination in reference to the approaching Day of Prayer." It is an interesting and graphic description of the present state of the professed christian world; and coming as it does from one of the most popular and influential clergymen of the present time, is a valuable witness to the fact that we are living in the time when men have "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," and consequently are in the last days. God grant that we, as Second Adventists, who profess to be looking for Christ's speedy return, may not be found in the same condition as the masses around us, but rather let the "present truth" have its purifying and sanctifying effect upon our hearts, so that we may be enabled to "deny all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly and righteously in this present evil world," on account of "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ."
M. H. Piper.

Boston, Sept. 30th, 1861.

"The disciples of Jesus are intended to be the light of the world. Their moral conduct must show to other men, by contrast, the superiority of a heavenly to an earthly life. They are the exemplification of the nature and the power of the principles of the religion of Jesus. All this is very evident, and it is also evident that unless the character of the church be such as, by its practical exemplification of Christ's precepts, to condemn the world, it is a church only in name, and the light of the world is so far extinguished.

But what is the fact? By what, except outward forms, is the church in many cases to be distinguished from the world? Are there not in many of our churches some whose well-known character is a disgrace to their profession? Are not the places of amusement so frequented by professors of religion as to leave the impression that amusement is with them an end of living? Go to the assemblies, where now do congregate the utterly frivolous and gay, and there you will find the lowly, self-denying Jesus largely represented by his professed disciples. Observe the customs of business, the maxims of trade, the modes of accumulation, the carelessness about truth, and the eagerness to overreach, and who of the disciples of Christ are heard entering their protests against all or any of this iniquity? It is well if they are not borne along with the current, and do not adopt all these maxims and practices as their own.

Let us go into our houses of worship, and what do we see and hear? In buildings of immense expense, adorned with every superfluity of luxury, with a style [illegible] of religion was derived solely from the New Testament, suppose that these persons were disciples of Christ, or that this was intended for the worship of Jesus of Nazareth? Or if God became incarnate to redeem men from everlasting death, and if men have been set apart for the sole purpose of calling sinners to repentance, would any one suppose that the pulpit was occupied by a messenger whom God had sent to warn dying men of their danger, and lead them to him by whom alone they can be saved from eternal woe?

If all this is so, there is surely occasion for a day of humiliation. If we are chastised for our disobedience to God, there is reason why we should repent of our sin and turn to him from whom we have revolted."

For the Crisis.

Back Numbers of the World's Crisis.

Who wants them? This is a paper I never destroy, and have accumulated a year's issue; and any one who can benefit themselves or others with them, sending me their address, shall have three copies per week sent them gratis until the supply is exhausted. The truths, and sermons, and maxims, and counsels they contain, lose nothing by age, and may be profitable to those who have never seen them; and would it not be well for those who take the Crisis, and do not file them, to hunt up some one who cannot afford to pay for it, and send it to them? In the language of the poet:—

The conflict is raging—'t will be fearful and long,
Then gird on the armor and be marching along.

And, as we go scatter the light far and wide. Wake up, brethren and sisters. No time now for slumber. D. N. Smith.

Boston, Sept., 1861.

Selections.

Lost in the Catacombs.

A bold adventurer once undertook to explore the catacombs of Rome, those gloomy caverns of darkness and death into which the most daring enter with misgivings. In order to render his return perfectly safe, he fastened a thread at the entrance, and taking a torch in one hand, and this thread in the other, he set out alone on his explorations. Being led on by the objects of curiosity and interest that met him at every step, before he is aware of it, he is far in these deep caverns; while his mind is so taken up with the strange scene that surrounds him, that he forgets all else, when suddenly his foot slips, he stumbles, the torch falls from his hand, the string slips from his fingers. Now total darkness surrounds him, and in vain he feels for the lost thread. What can he do? If he attempts to make himself heard, his voice will not reach half way to the entrance; if he attempts to retrace his steps, there are a thousand ways to lead him off, and but one that will lead him out; every step may be taking him further away, while at any moment he may plunge into some deep chasm. It is said, that he was so overcome by the hopelessness of his condition, that he fell to the ground insensible.

After some time he comes to himself, when, to his great joy he feels something in his hand: it is the lost string he had grasped in his agonies. Hopefully he bounds up, and, slowly and cautiously threads his way, following wherever his little guide may lead. At length a faint light is seen in the distance; his guide has not misled him. Joyfully he presses onward, with quicker step and firmer tread as the light increases, until he is soon greeted by the "laughing sunbeams" of a bright day.

Kind reader, does not our pathway of life lead through "catacombs" of death, over which sin has thrown a darker pall than that which covers the catacombs of Rome? "What am I? whence? and whither go?" are questions that every thinking soul has propounded to itself. Reason can give me no answer; it dimly points out an eternity behind, an eternity before; but it can tell me nothing about that eternity, or what will be my condition there should I reach it. It is true there is a voice within that whispers "immortality;" but it whispers only to condemn. But all thanks to God, he has not left us without light on such important questions, but has given us a torch by whose light we may safely make our way through the tombs and darkness of earth to a brighter world. In his hand he also holds a thread which has followed us through all the shifting scenes of life; his Holy Spirit would ever draw us back to him. When first our childish feet tread the paths of vice, we felt it gently draw us heavenward, as if to say, "sinner, return, why will you die?" Have any of us been so taken up with the pleasures or cares of this world, with the many objects of apparent interest that meet us at every step in life, that we, too, have stumbled and dropped our torch in this dark world of sin? Has our Bible been neglected? Can we find no time to read and study it? no time to attend the house of worship?

Then darker by far, is our way, and a thousand times more dangerous every step we take, than would have been those of the torchless man in the catacombs. Are we losing our interest in matters of religion? Does the Spirit seldom warn us? Can we sin with less compunction of conscience than formerly? Oh, let us beware! these are fearful indications; that thread will finally run out; it may follow us to the end of life, it may not: "My Spirit will not always strive." If that Spirit leave us, and we have lost ourselves in God's Word, then there are no other guides that can lead us out of the darkness of sin into eternal day. Reader, if we travel without these, we must soon plunge into the darkness of eternal night. Sin has dug many deep chasms between earth and heaven, across which we can never make our way without these guides. Then let us turn and follow them while we may; they will not mislead us; and soon the light may dawn on a new-born soul, and we may be led to rejoice that we have escaped eternal death.

☞ How frequently [illegible]

Old Moses.

Mr. B. was a merchant in Baltimore, and did a very heavy business, especially in grain. One morning as he was passing over the vessel that lay at the wharf with their several commodities for sale, he stepped upon the deck of one, at the stern of which he saw a negro man sitting, whose dejected countenance gave sure indication of distress; and he accosted him with—

Hey! my man, what is the matter with you this morning?

The old negro lifted up his eyes, and looking at Mr. B. replied—

Ah, massa, I'se in great trouble.

B. What about?

Negro. Case I'se fetch up here to be sold.

B. What for? what have you been doing? have you been stealing? or did you run away? or what?

Negro. No, no, massa, none o'dat, its bekase I didn't mine de anders.

B. What kind of orders?

Negro. Well, massa stranger, I tell you. Mass William werry strict man, and werry nice man too, and ebry man on de place got to him, and I break tew de rule, but I didn't tend to break de rule; I forgot myself, an I got too high.

B. It is for getting drunk, then, is it?

Negro. O no, not that nother.

B. You are the strangest negro that I have seen for a week. I can get no satisfaction from you. If you would not like to be pitched overboard you had better tell me what you did.

Negro. Please, massa, don't frow de poor flicted nigga in de wata.

B. Then tell me what you are to be sold for.

Negro. For praying, sah.

B. For praying! that's a strange tale indeed. Will your master not permit you to pray?

Negro. O yes, sah, he let me pray easy, but I hollows too loud.

B. And why do you halloo so in your prayer?

Negro. Kase de Sperit comes on me, an I gits happy fore I knows it; den I gone; kant trol myself den; den I knows nothing about Massa's rule; den I hollow if old Satan himself come wid all de rules of de question.

B. And do you suppose your master will really sell you for that?

Negro. Oh yes, no help for me now; all de men in de world couldn't help me now, kase when massa William say one thing he no do anoder.

B. What is your name?

Negro. Moses, sah.

B. What is your master's name?

Moses. Massa's name is Col. William C.——

B. Where does he live?

M. Down on the Esin Shoah.

B. Is he a good master, does he treat you well?

M. Oh yes, massa William good; no better massa in de world

B. Stand up and let me look at you. And Moses stood up and presented a robust frame, and as Mr. B. stripped up his sleeve, his arm gave evidence of unusual muscular strength.

B. Where is your master?

M. Yonder, he is jist coming to the warf.

As Mr. B. started far the shore he heard Moses give a heavy sigh, followed by a deep groan. Mr. B. reached the wharf just as Col. C. did. He introduced himself and said—I understand you wish to sell that negro man on board yonder boat.

Col. C. replied that he did.

B. What do you ask for him?

C. I expect to get $700.

B. How old is he?

C. About thirty years.

B. Is he healthy?

C. Very, he never had any sickness in his life, except one or two spells of the ague.

B. Is he hearty?

C. Yes sir; he will eat as much as a man ought, and it will do him as much good.

B. Is he a good hand?

C. Yes sir, he is the best man on my place. He has been my foreman for the last ten years, and a more trusty negro I never knew.

B. Why do you wish to sell him?

C. Because he disobeyed my orders. As I said, he is my foreman, and that he might be available at any moment I might want him, I built his quarters within a hundred yards of my own house, and I have never rung the bell at any time at night or in the morning, that his horn did not answer in five minutes after. But two years ago he got religion, and commenced what he calls family prayer—that is prayers in his quarters every night and morning; when he began his prayer it was impossible to tell when he would stop, especially if (as as termed it) he got happy. Then he would sing and pray, and halloa for an hour or two together, so that you might hear him a mile off. And he would pray for me and my wife and my children, and our whole family connection to the third generation; and sometimes when we would have visitors, Moses' prayers would interrupt the conversation and destroy the enjoyment of the whole company; the women would cry, and it would get me almost frantic; and even after I had retired, it would be sometimes nearly daylight before I could get to sleep; for it appeared to me that I could hear Moses pray for three hours after he had finished. I bore it as long as I could, and then forbid his praying so loud any more, and Moses promised obedience, but he soon transgressed; and my rule is never to whip, but when a negro proves incorrigible I sell him. This keeps them in better subjection, and is less trouble than whipping. And I pardoned Moses twice for disobedience in praying so loud, but the third time I knew I must sell him, or every negro on the farm would soon be perfectly regardless of all my orders.

B. You spoke of Moses' quarter; I suppose from that he has a family.

C. Yes, he has a woman and three children, or wife, I suppose he calls her now, for soon after he got religion he asked me if they might be married, and I presume they were.

B. What will you take for his wife and children?

C. [illegible] I will take $700; but I [illegible] $1400 [illegible] Mr. B. and Col. C. then went to [illegible] store, drew up the writings, and signed the sale; after which they returned to the vessel, and Mr. B. approached the negro, who sat with his face buried in his hands, seemingly in [illegible].

Well, Moses, I have bought you.

Moses made a very low bow, and every muscle of his face worked with emotion as he replied—

Is you massa? where is I gwine to, Georgy?

No, said Mr. B., I am a merchant here in this city; and yonder is my store, and I want you to attend on the store; and I have purchased your wife and children too, that you may not be separated.

M. Bless God for dat; and massa kin I go a meeting some times?

B. Yes, Moses, you can go to church three times on Sabbath and every night in the week, and you can pray as often as you choose, and as loud as you choose, and as long as you choose, and get as happy as you choose; and every time you pray, whether it be at home or in church, I want you to pray for me, my wife, and all my children, and single-handed, too; for if you are a good man your prayers will do us no harm, and if you wish you may pray for everybody of the name of B. in the state of Maryland. It will not injure them.

While Mr. B. was dealing out these privileges to Moses, the negro's eyes danced in their sockets, and his heart danced outright for gladness, exposing two rows of as clean ivories as any African can boast; and his heart's response was, bress God, bress God all the time, and bress you too massa; Moses neber tinks bout he gwine to have all dese commendations; dis make me tink boat Joseph in de Egypt. And after Moses had poured a few blessings on Col. C. and bidding him a warm adieu and requesting him to give his love and farewell to his mistress, the children, and all the servants, he followed B. to the store, to enter upon the functions of his new office.

The return of the steamer brought to Moses his wife and children.

Early the next spring, as Mr. B. was standing at the store door, he saw a man step upon the wharf from the deck of a vessel and walk hurriedly toward the store. He soon recognized him as Col. C. They exchanged salutations, and to the Colonel's inquiry after Moses, Mr. C. replied that he was up stairs measuring grain, and invited him to walk up and see him. Soon B.'s attention was arrested by a confused noise above. He listened and heard an unusual shuffling of feet, some one sobbing violently, and some one talking hurriedly, and when he reflected on Col. C.'s singular movements and the peculiar expression of his countenance, he became alarmed and determined to go up and see what was transpiring.

When he reached the head of the stairs he was startled by seeing Moses in the middle of the floor, down upon one knee, with his arm around the Colonel's waist and talking most rapidly, while the Col. was weeping audibly. As soon as the Col. could sufficiently control his feelings, he told Mr. B. that he had never been able to free himself from the influence of Moses' prayers, and that during the past year, he, his wife and children, had been converted to God.

Moses responded; Bress God, massa C.; doe I way up hea, I neber forgit you in my prayers; I ollers pat de ole massa side de new one. Bress God, dis make Moses tink about Joseph in de Egypt agin.

The Col. then stated to Mr. B. that his object in coming to Baltimore was to buy Moses and his family back again. But Mr. B. assured him that was out of the question for he could not part with him; and he intended to manumit Moses and his wife at forty, and his children at thirty years of age.

Moses was not far wrong in referring to Joseph. For when Joseph was sold into Egypt, God overruled it to his good, and he obtained blessings that were far beyond his expectations; so with Moses. Joseph eventually proved the instrument of saving the lives of those who sold him. Moses proved the instrument in God's hands of saving the man who sold him.

Old Moses is still living and doing well. He has not long since obtained his freedom—at present he occupies a comfortable house of his own, and I suppose sings, and prays, and shouts to his heart's content.—Methodist Protestant.

An Effectual Cure for the Ear Ache.—Take a small piece of cotton batting, or cotton wool, making a depression in the centre with the end of a finger, and fill it with as much ground pepper as will rest on a five cent piece, gather it into a ball, and tie it up. Dip the ball into sweet oil, and insert it into the ear, covering the latter with cotton wool, and use a bandage or cap to retain it in place. Almost instant relief will be experienced, and the application is so gentle that an infant will not be injured by it, but will experience relief as well as adults.—Cor. Boston Journal.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year......$2.00
For a single copy 6 months......1.00
For a single copy 3 months......[illegible]
Five copies to one address for 6 months...[illegible]
Ten copies to one address for 6 months...[illegible]
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months...[illegible]
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months...[illegible]

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cts. [illegible]

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood. Our proposition is, that we will send the paper when sent [illegible] should [illegible] tions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we will forward under obligation to [illegible]

Rates for Communications
Over all matters not intended for publication write [illegible]
[illegible]
All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the [illegible] always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State [illegible]

Selected for the Crisis.

Christian Usefulness.

The low-tuft grass is not a stately tree,
  Nor yet a lovely and all-fragrant rose;
It yields no nectar to the grateful bee,
  Nor fashions, for their transit o'er the sea,
    The hearts of oak revered by friends and foes.

But think of it as lightly as you will,
  Passing it over in your careless tread,
It has its own peculiar place to fill;
And, humble as its work appeareth, still
  Nor oak nor rose could do that work instead.

So, youthful Christian, through life's transient day,
  There is a special work marked out for you;
It may be of the lowliest kind; it may
Be such as shall the loftiest powers display,
  But none beside yourself your work can do.

Then bend in meekness at your Saviour's throne,
  And seek to learn the purpose of his grace;
Ask him who has so oft your duty shown,
To point you out the work that is your own,
  And tell you where to find your proper place.

"What wilt thou have me do?" With single eye
  To your Redeemer's glory, work for him;
Illumined every moment from on high,
Strive in each action God to glorify,
  Nor let one thought of self life's radiance dim.

Work, work, nor covet an ignoble rest;
  Allow no sloth thy spirit to beguile,
Those love the Saviour most who serve him best;
And he who blesses others, shall be blessed
  With the full sunshine of his Saviour's smile.

Gleanings from Letters.

Edwin Miller, West Martinsburgh, N. Y., sends $2, and writes—

We had the pleasure to hear Bro. S. S. Brewer preach last Sunday, at our place, as he was here with his wife and Bro. C. B. Turner. They arrived here on Saturday, and left us Sunday night; went five miles and preached Sunday evening. Monday morning Bro. Turner baptized four happy souls, and then we bade them good bye again. They went twelve miles and held a meeting in Jefferson Co. on Monday evening, and from there to Mannsville. Bro. Brewer was to give a course of lectures in the Baptist church by request of said church. We expect he will come and settle here with us, as there is a great field open, and people want to hear the gospel once more in Lewis and Jefferson Counties.

Eld. A. N. Seymour writes—

Dear Brother, I send you another new subscriber, Sr. M. J. Maginnis, Fentonville, Genesee Co., Mich. She encloses one dollar, for the Crisis. She will probably be one of your permanent subscribers. Dear Bro., continue giving us meat in due season, and let one thought be most fervently impressed on every soul—holiness of heart—spotlessness of character, in view of the Saviour's coming. Theory, it matters not how perfect and glorious, will never save us unless all of our thoughts, conversation, spirit and desires are regulated by the standard of truth and righteousness. May God help us to be a very holy people, ready for the opening of the day of God.

Eld. I. K. Lombard, East Stoneham, Me., writes—

I wish you would request through the Crisis that some Brother or Sister (if any has it) would send to the Crisis the hymn, or all they may have of it, of which the two following stanzas form a part:—

"Mary came weeping,
Mary came weeping,
Mary came weeping
Just at the break of day.
He arose! he arose! Ah! yes,
He arose and went to heaven in a cloud.

What's the matter, Mary?
What's the matter, Mary?
What's the matter, Mary?
They have taken away my Lord.
He arose! he arose! Ah! yes,
He arose and went to heaven in a cloud.

L. Roberts, Grand Blanc, Mich., writes—

Enclosed please find one dollar, for which you will give me credit on my subscription for the Crisis. I would be glad to send you five times the amount, but it is all that I can get at present. Times here are very hard. It seems almost impossible to get money at the present time to pay the necessary expenses of our families; but when we get a dollar, we feel like sending it to you, from the fact that we value the paper so highly. It is, indeed, the next thing to our daily bread.

Sister P. Green, Berlin Falls, writes—

Enclosed you will find one dollar, in payment for the Crisis. I would be very glad if I could send more; but cannot at this time. Please continue to send the paper, and I will send more soon. I hope means will be provided for the support of the Crisis. How could I get along without it! Its weekly visits are truly a comfort and support to me; it is like food to the hungry and water to the thirsty soul. Be faithful, and may God bless and save you at last, is my prayer.

Mrs. L. Bills, Bangor, Me., sends $1, and writes—

I hardly know how to afford to send, but as long as I have my bread, I think I must have the Crisis, for it is a great comfort to me in these perilous times, as I cannot attend the meetings every Sabbath. Dear Bro., I feel glad that we are almost home. Our toils will soon be over; soon the rightful heir to David's throne will take possession of the earth and reign King of kings forever.

Andrew O. Jenkins, Springfield, Mass. [illegible]

A. M. S. Bennett, Taftsville, Vt., writes—

This has been deferred on account of sickness and death in the family. I feel we are amid the perils of the last days, and because iniquity abounds, the love of many waxes cold. My prayer is that the Lord may sustain you in your arduous labors, that you may be able to give the household meat in due season.

Gilman West, Oxford, N. H., writes—

Enclosed you will find one dollar for the continuance of the Crisis. There is no paper printed that we know of that we prize so highly as we do the Crisis. We hope the Lord will bless the paper, and those who print it till he comes. It advocates what we believe. We love it, and hope to get more money soon to send you.

James Wiswell, Hydeville, Vt., writes—

I should feel lost without the Crisis, for it advocates the doctrines that I love—the soon personal coming of Christ and the resurrection from the dead to immortality in the kingdom of God. Well might the apostle call it a "blessed hope;" it cheers me as I pass along through this wilderness world.

G. W. Hurd, Ionia, Ill., sends $6 for several subscribers, and writes—

Times are very hard, and it is almost impossible to get hold of any money that is good for any thing. May the Lord strengthen your hands, and enable you to give, through the Crisis, a portion to our Father's family that shall be "meat in season."

George R. Baker, East Woodstock, Ct., writes—

Enclosed you will find one dollar for the continuance of my paper. I shall continue to be a subscriber for the Crisis as long as I can command the means to pay for it. I prize the Crisis above all other papers, and my wife says she cannot keep house without it.

Mary Hodgdon, North Barnstead, sends $2 and writes—

The Crisis was a great comfort to my husband, and is to me. I love the truths it advocates because they are taught in the Bible. I want the paper continued, and what is due I will send when I know what it is.

Phebe Rockwood, Belgrade, Me., sends $3 and writes—

I hope the paper will be sustained. I have taken it, I think, some over two years. As we live where there is not much preaching on the coming of our Master, it is to me a welcome visitor. I will do all I can to sustain it.

Sarah A. Elmore, South Windsor, Ct., writes—

My earnest prayer is that our Father would grant you all needed wisdom and grace, to guide you aright amid your "abundant labors" as his servant. May his blessing attend you and yours.

Seth G. Kimball, Burlington, Vt., writes—

I cannot do without the Crisis, for it is all the preaching that I have on the second coming of Christ.

P. W. Higgins, Wellfleet, writes—

I have taken the Crisis for a short time and like it much. I therefore enclose one dollar for its continuance.

For the Crisis.

Maine Conference Report.

(Concluded.)

The importance of missionary labor was then discoursed upon by several, calling out many appropriate remarks; after which it was voted unanimously to continue our efforts in this direction. The committee recommended the propriety of engaging Eld. O. R. Fassett as an Evangelist for the coming year. Conference voted to do so, and opened subscription papers, when one hundred and eighteen dollars was subscribed towards supporting the mission. This looks very encouraging as a beginning, while we remember that the greater part of our brethren who should be interested in the mission were not there, and will doubtless subscribe liberally. So we may sustain two missionaries, or more. Bro. Fassett accepts this call, and will immediately enter upon the work. He will need a horse and carriage, as a saving of expenses can be made in getting about. We will here ask, if any brother has a team which he would like to devote to such a cause, and will donate its use, or let it, or sell it at a reasonable rate? If so, please communicate with us in regard to it.

On closing the subscriptions, reports of churches and localities were listened to for about an hour. The reports were generally very cheering and encouraging; the churches seem to be awake, and the brethren generally wide awake in these times of declension. A good number have been converted and baptized, and many others discipled to the blessed hope. The doors are wide open in all directions for the gospel of the kingdom to be preached. We desired a few hours more time, so that all could report, but we were obliged to enter upon other items of business. The Secretary then read the following

DECLARATION.

Whereas, in the providence of God, we have been called out of darkness and doubt in regard to the future life and hope of the saints, and led to see the [illegible] hearts of the faithful watchers, with sure tokens of the speedy and glorious personal advent of Christ our King from heaven,—we wish here to re-affirm our unlimited confidence in the truth of the proclamation that has been, and is still being made, that Christ is immediately to appear, to close the gospel age, and establish the everlasting kingdom of God. We wish also to say, that, while the times are so marked with events which give us unmistakable evidence of being immediately connected with the final overthrow of all earthly governments, as declared in the Scriptures; and while the evidence is conclusive that the prophetic periods which extend to the resurrection of the saints and the glorious restitution, must run out in a very few years, it is a matter of much surprise and regret to us that our Advent papers do not give a more distinct and "certain sound" to awaken the sleepers, and to more definitely and earnestly prosecute the "specific work" for which they were originated. We would therefore herein exhort the conductors of, and contributors to said papers, to the importance of turning their attention more fully to the signs of this time, and the evidences of the very speedy termination of the Gentile times, that the flock who patronize them, and call for information, may learn the time of night.

Secondly. We wish to admonish our christian brethren everywhere of the danger they are in who overlook the fact that christians are under Christ, and not under Moses, unless they are fallen from grace. Therefore they must obey Christ if they would live, who has commanded them not to fight, and who has called them out from the world, so they are not of it, and should not fight for it. Popery, Mahomedanism, and other apostate religious classes fight, as do the world, and the world hear them.

Again. We consider it dangerous in the extreme for those who look for God to dash in pieces the kingdoms and nations of the earth, (Ps. 2, Jer. 25, Ezek. 3, Rev. 16th and 19th chapters,) to prepare the way for the kingdom of his Son, to engage in warring with carnal weapons, to try to uphold them in virtually reiterating the cry made by the Jews, "We have no king but Cæsar," and thus reject the reign of Christ to uphold the seceders from God.

This was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

Voted, to accept the decision of the council, now impending, in the case of one of its members, and request that it be delivered to the Secretary for record. A vote of thanks was tendered to the brethren and friends of Yarmouth and vicinity for their hospitality and kindness in entertaining this Conference.

Voted, to adjourn, when this Conference closes, to the call of the President and Secretary in A. D. 1862.

Voted, that the Secretary prepare a report of this Conference, and forward it to the "Advent Herald" and the "World's Crisis" for publication.

At 2 o,clock, P. M., Eld. J. A. Libbey preached from Jer. 9: 23, 24, drawing a clear line between worldly glorying and glorying in a knowledge of the true God, which brings eternal life. It was a sweet and affecting discourse, after which Eld. Peter Libbey made some appropriate remarks. We then repaired to the river side, when Bro. York baptized three faithful disciples, who have determined to follow the Lord. Evening, at 7 o'clock, Eld. D. M. Hanscomb preached from Rom. 1. 16, showing what the gospel has done for those who believed it, and urging the importance of believing it.

Sunday morning, at 5 o'clock, met for prayer, and continued one hour and a half in what a Sister denominated "an extra session." This was a precious season—one of the best we had. At 8 o'clock, the preachers met for council, and had a pleasant interview. At 9 o'clock, met for prayer and conference, which was a profitable season; time was fully occupied by the joyful saints, who were ready to declare what comfort they enjoyed in the service of God, and the hope they cherished. Two and sometimes three would rise at the same time. This service continued until half-past 10 o'clock. At this point, Bro. C. H. Leverton was ordained for the work of the ministry. He is a young man of promise, who comes to us well recommended, and we commend him to the brethren generally. Eld. L. L. Howard then preached a lengthy and convincing discourse from Matt. 24: 30, on the signs of Christ's soon coming. We then repaired to the water side again, and Eld. York baptized two happy Sisters, who had concluded that sprinkling would not take the place of baptism. At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. O. R. Fassett preached from John 16: 33, an important practical discourse on Peace in Christ, after which about ninety happy disciples partook of the Lord's Supper. This was one of the best seasons we ever enjoyed, and I trust that many of us were forcibly reminded of the promise of Christ to partake with us in the coming kingdom.

Before the evening service, a brother who had been reluctant to do all his duty, and who felt his neglect when seeing the [illegible] baptized, [illegible] and Bro. Howard baptized him. [illegible] on the closing or finishing of the mystery of God. It was a labored and good discourse, but a large number of the brethren had left for home; the others were weary with the services of the day, which commenced a 5 o'clock, A. M., and occupied most of the day.

Several of our preachers were not able to be present. Eld. Sevey wrote that his health was too poor to come; but there were more present than at any previous Conference. Those in attendance were I. Smith, O. R. Fassett, R. R. York, N. Smith, I. C. Wellcome, L. L. Howard, E. M. Haggett, D. M. Hanscomb, J. A. Libbey, Peter Libbey, J. Partridge, H. D. Read, I. K. Lombard, L. Rhoades, I. Wight, of Maine; and J. V. Himes, F. H. Berick, L. Boutell, C. H. Leverton, of Mass.

Our Conference closed, and the brethren and sisters returned to their fields of influence and labor, joyous in hope, and much strengthened for renewed labor in God's vineyard. This was the largest gathering of brethren we have ever had at a yearly Conference. It was also the most harmonious, united and active Conference we have yet had. All seemed to have a mind to work, and work together. The most perfect union and love was manifested by all who attended. Many were obliged to leave on Friday and Saturday, but a large number staid to the close. All were treated with the greatest hospitality, and made welcome by the friends in the place. May the Lord make this meeting a blessing to very many. O. R. Fassett, President.

I. C. Wellcome, Secretary.

Richmond, Me., Sept. 18, 1861.

For the Crisis.

Song for the Children.

The Bible is a holy book,
  It lightens earth's dark gloom;
It drives away the blackest clouds
  That gather round the tomb.

It tells us of the sinner's Friend,
  Who suffered for our sin;
It points us to a peaceful home
  The faithful soul may win.

O, little children, Jesus came
  To bless you with his grace,
Then come and give your hearts to him—
  Come, seek your Father's face.

He's coming soon to earth again,
  To give his people rest;
Come, little ones, and love the Lord,
  And you shall then be blest.

Come to the paradise of God,
  Come sing redemption's story;
Come dwell with Jesus and his saints,
  Come rest for aye in glory.

Yarmouth, Me. Maria.

For the Crisis.

The State of Christendom.

Bro. Wendell:—The following is an extract from Dr. Wayland's new Tract, entitled "An Appeal to the Disciples of Christ of every denomination in reference to the approaching Day of Prayer." It is an interesting and graphic description of the present state of the professed christian world; and coming as it does from one of the most popular and influential clergymen of the present time, is a valuable witness to the fact that we are living in the time when men have "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," and consequently are in the last days. God grant that we, as Second Adventists, who profess to be looking for Christ's speedy return, may not be found in the same condition as the masses around us, but rather let the "present truth" have its purifying and sanctifying effect upon our hearts, so that we may be enabled to "deny all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly and righteously in this present evil world," on account of "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ."

M. H. Piper.

Boston, Sept. 30th, 1861.

"The disciples of Jesus are intended to be the light of the world. Their moral conduct must show to other men, by contrast, the superiority of a heavenly to an earthly life. They are the exemplification of the nature and the power of the principles of the religion of Jesus. All this is very evident, and it is also evident that unless the character of the church be such as, by its practical exemplification of Christ's precepts, to condemn the world, it is a church only in name, and the light of the world is so far extinguished.

But what is the fact? By what, except outward forms, is the church in many cases to be distinguished from the world? Are there not in many of our churches some whose well-known character is a disgrace to their profession? Are not the places of amusement so frequented by professors of religion as to leave the impression that amusement is with them an end of living? Go to the assemblies, where now do congregate the utterly frivolous and gay, and there you will find the lowly, self-denying Jesus largely represented by his professed disciples. Observe the customs of business, the maxims of trade, the modes of accumulation, the carelessness about truth, and the eagerness to overreach, and who of the disciples of Christ are heard entering their protests against all or any of this iniquity? It is well if they are not borne along with the current, and do not adopt all these maxims and practices as their own.

Let us go into our houses of worship, and what do we see and hear? In buildings of immense expense, adorned with every superfluity of luxury, with a style of music which the world recognizes as its own, fashion [illegible]

[illegible] of religion was derived solely from the New Testament, suppose that these persons were disciples of Christ, or that this was intended for the worship of Jesus of Nazareth? Or if God became incarnate to redeem men from everlasting death, and if men have been set apart for the sole purpose of calling sinners to repentance, would any one suppose that the pulpit was occupied by a messenger whom God had sent to warn dying men of their danger, and lead them to him by whom alone they can be saved from eternal woe?

If all this is so, there is surely occasion for a day of humiliation. If we are chastised for our disobedience to God, there is reason why we should repent of our sin and turn to him from whom we have revolted."

For the Crisis.

Back Numbers of the World's Crisis.

Who wants them? This is a paper I never destroy, and have accumulated a year's issue; and any one who can benefit themselves or others with them, sending me their address, shall have three copies per week sent them gratis until the supply is exhausted. The truths, and sermons, and maxims, and counsels they contain, lose nothing by age, and may be profitable to those who have never seen them; and would it not be well for those who take the Crisis, and do not file them, to hunt up some one who cannot afford to pay for it, and send it to them? In the language of the poet:—

The conflict is raging—'t will be fearful and long,
Then gird on the armor and be marching along.

And, as we go scatter the light far and wide. Wake up, brethren and sisters. No time now for slumber. D. N. Smith.

Boston., Sept., 1861.

Selections.

Lost in the Catacombs.

A bold adventurer once undertook to explore the catacombs of Rome, those gloomy caverns of darkness and death into which the most daring enter with misgivings. In order to render his return perfectly safe, he fastened a thread at the entrance, and taking a torch in one hand, and this thread in the other, he set out alone on his explorations. Being led on by the objects of curiosity and interest that met him at every step, before he is aware of it, he is far in these deep caverns; while his mind is so taken up with the strange scene that surrounds him, that he forgets all else, when suddenly his foot slips, he stumbles, the torch falls from his hand, the string slips from his fingers. Now total darkness surrounds him, and in vain he feels for the lost thread. What can he do? If he attempts to make himself heard, his voice will not reach half way to the entrance; if he attempts to retrace his steps, there are a thousand ways to lead him off, and but one that will lead him out; every step may be taking him further away, while at any moment he may plunge into some deep chasm. It is said, that he was so overcome by the hopelessness of his condition, that he fell to the ground insensible.

After some time he comes to himself, when, to his great joy he feels something in his hand: it is the lost string he had grasped in his agonies. Hopefully he bounds up, and, slowly and cautiously threads his way, following wherever his little guide may lead. At length a faint light is seen in the distance.; his guide has not misled him. Joyfully he presses onward, with quicker step and firmer tread as the light increases, until he is soon greeted by the "laughing sunbeams" of a bright day.

Kind reader, does not our pathway of life lead through "catacombs" of death, over which sin has thrown a darker pall than that which covers the catacombs of Rome? "What am I? whence? and whither go?" are questions that every thinking soul has propounded to itself. Reason can give me no answer; it dimly points out an eternity behind, an eternity before; but it can tell me nothing about that eternity, or what will be my condition there should I reach it. It is true there is a voice within that whispers "immortality;" but it whispers only to condemn. But all thanks to God, he has not left us without light on such important questions, but has given us a torch by whose light we may safely make our way through the tombs and darkness of earth to a brighter world. In his hand he also holds a thread which has followed us through all the shifting scenes of life; his Holy Spirit would ever draw us back to him. When first our childish feet tread the paths of vice, we felt it gently draw us heavenward, as if to say, "sinner, return, why will you die?" Have any of us been so taken up with the pleasures or cares of this world, with the many objects of apparent interest that meet us at every step in life, that we, too, have stumbled and dropped our torch in this dark world of sin? Has our Bible been neglected? Can we find no time to read and study it? no time to attend the house of worship?

Then darker by far, is our way, and a thousand times more dangerous every step we take, than would have been those of the torchless man in the catacombs. Are we losing our interest in matters of religion? Does the Spirit seldom warn us? Can we sin with less compunction of conscience than formerly? Oh, let us beware! these are fearful indications; that thread will finally run out; it may follow us to the end of life, it may not: "My Spirit will not always strive." If that Spirit leave us, and we have lost ourselves in God's Word, then there are no other guides that can lead us out of the darkness of sin into eternal day. Reader, if we travel without these, we must soon plunge into the darkness of eternal night. Sin has dug many deep chasms between earth and heaven, across which we can never make our way without these guides. Then let us turn and follow them while we may; they will not mislead us, but soon the light will dawn on a new-born soul, and we may be led to rejoice that we have escaped eternal death.

☞ How frequently do persons [illegible]

Old Moses.

Mr. B. was a merchant in Baltimore, and did a very heavy business, especially in grain. One morning as he was passing over the vessel that lay at the wharf with their several commodities for sale, he stepped upon the deck of one, at the stern of which he saw a negro man sitting, whose dejected countenance gave sure indication of distress; and he accosted him with—

Hey! my man, what is the matter with you this morning?

The old negro lifted up his eyes, and looking at Mr. B. replied—

Ah, massa, I'se in great trouble.

B. What about?

Negro. Case I'se fetch up here to be sold.

B. What for? what have you been doing? have you been stealing? or did you run away? or what?

Negro. No, no, massa, none o'dat, its bekase I didn't mine de anders.

B. What kind of orders?

Negro. Well, massa stranger, I tell you. Mass William werry strict man, and werry nice man too, and ebry man on de place got to him, and I break tew de rule, but I didn't tend to break de rule; I forgot myself, an I got too high.

B. It is for getting drunk, then, is it?

Negro. O no, not that nother.

B. You are the strangest negro that I have seen for a week. I can get no satisfaction from you. If you would not like to be pitched overboard you had better tell me what you did.

Negro. Please, massa, don't frow de poor flicted nigga in de wata.

B. Then tell me what you are to be sold for.

Negro. For praying, sah.

B. For praying! that's a strange tale indeed. Will your master not permit you to pray?

Negro. O yes, sah, he let me pray easy, but I hollows too loud.

B. And why do you halloo so in your prayer?

Negro. Kase de Sperit comes on me, an I gits happy fore I knows it; den I gone; kant trol myself den; den I knows nothing about Massa's rule; den I hollow if old Satan himself come wid all de rules of de question.

B. And do you suppose your master will really sell you for that?

Negro. Oh yes, no help for me now; all de men in de world couldn't help me now, kase when massa William say one thing he no do anoder.

B. What is your name?

Negro. Moses, sah.

B. What is your master's name?

Moses. Massa's name is Col. William C.——

B. Where does he live?

M. Down on the Esin Shoah.

B. Is he a good master, does he treat you well?

M. Oh yes, massa William good; no better massa in de world

B. Stand up and let me look at you. And Moses stood up and presented a robust frame, and as Mr. B. stripped up his sleeve, his arm gave evidence of unusual muscular strength.

B. Where is your master?

M. Yonder, he is jist coming to the warf.

As Mr. B. started far the shore he heard Moses give a heavy sigh, followed by a deep groan. Mr. B. reached the wharf just as Col. C. did. He introduced himself and said—I understand you wish to sell that negro man on board yonder boat.

Col. C. replied that he did.

B. What do you ask for him?

C. I expect to get $700.

B. How old is he?

C. About thirty years.

B. Is he healthy?

C. Very, he never had any sickness in his life, except one or two spells of the ague.

B. Is he hearty?

C. Yes sir; he will eat as much as a man ought, and it will do him as much good.

B. Is he a good hand?

C. Yes sir, he is the best man on my place. He has been my foreman for the last ten years, and a more trusty negro I never knew.

B. Why do you wish to sell him?

C. Because he disobeyed my orders. As I said, he is my foreman, and that he might be available at any moment I might want him, I built his quarters within a hundred yards of my own house, and I have never rung the bell at any time at night or in the morning, that his horn did not answer in five minutes after. But two years ago he got religion, and commenced what he calls family prayer—that is prayers in his quarters every night and morning; when he began his prayer it was impossible to tell when he would stop, especially if (as as termed it) he got happy. Then he would sing and pray, and halloa for an hour or two together, so that you might hear him a mile off. And he would pray for me and my wife and my children, and our whole family connection to the third generation; and sometimes when we would have visitors, Moses' prayers would interrupt the conversation and destroy the enjoyment of the whole company; the women would cry, and it would get me almost frantic; and even after I had retired, it would be sometimes nearly daylight before I could get to sleep; for it appeared to me that I could hear Moses pray for three hours after he had finished. I bore it as long as I could, and then forbid his praying so loud any more, and Moses promised obedience, but he soon transgressed; and my rule is never to whip, but when a negro proves incorrigible I sell him. This keeps them in better subjection, and is less trouble than whipping. And I pardoned Moses twice for disobedience in praying so loud, but the third time I knew I must sell him, or every negro on the farm would soon be perfectly regardless of all my orders.

B. You spoke of Moses' quarter; I suppose that he has a family.

C. Yes, he has a woman and three children; [illegible] if they might be married, and I promised they were.

B. What will you take for her and her children?

C. If you take $700, but I must [illegible] $1400. [illegible]

Mr. B. and Col. C. then went to B.'s store, drew up the writing and closed the sale; after which they returned to the vessel, and Mr. B. approaching the negro, who sat with his eyes fixed upon the deck, seemingly wrapped in meditation of the most awful forebodings, said—

Well, Moses, I have bought you.

Moses made a very low bow, and every muscle of his face worked with emotion as he replied—

Is you massa? where is I gwine to, Georgy?

No, said Mr. B., I am a merchant here in this city; and yonder is my store, and I want you to attend on the store; and I have purchased your wife and children too, that you may not be separated.

M. Bless God for dat; and massa kin I go a meeting some times?

B. Yes, Moses, you can go to church three times on Sabbath and every night in the week, and you can pray as often as choose, and as loud as you choose, and as long as you choose, and get as happy as you choose; and every time you pray, whether it be at home or in church, I want you to pray for me, my wife, and all my children, and single-handed, too; for if you are a good man your prayers will do us no harm, and if you wish you may pray for everybody of the name of B. in the state of Maryland. It will not injure them.

While Mr. B. was dealing out these privileges to Moses, the negro's eyes danced in their sockets, and his heart danced outright for gladness, exposing two rows of as clean ivories as any African can boast; and his heart's response was, bress God, bress God all the time, and bress you too massa; Moses neber tinks bout he gwine to have all dese commendations; dis make me tink bout Joseph in de Egypt. And after Moses had poured a few blessings on Col. C. and bidding him a warm adieu and requesting him to give his love and farewell to his mistress, the children, and all the servants, he followed B. to the store, to enter upon the functions of his new office.

The return of the steamer brought to Moses his wife and children.

Early the next spring, as Mr. B. was standing at the store door, he saw a man step upon the wharf from the deck of a vessel and walk hurriedly toward the store. He soon recognized him as Col. C. They exchanged salutations, and to the Colonel's inquiry after Moses, Mr. C. replied that he was up stairs measuring grain, and invited him to walk up and see him. Soon B.'s attention was arrested by a confused noise above. He listened and heard an unusual shuffling of feet, some one sobbing violently, and some one talking hurriedly, and when he reflected on Col. C.'s singular movements and the peculiar expression of his countenance, he became alarmed and determined to go up and see what was transpiring.

When he reached the head of the stairs he was startled by seeing Moses in the middle of the floor, down upon one knee, with his arm around the Colonel's waist and talking most rapidly, while the Col. was weeping audibly. As soon as the Col. could sufficiently control his feelings, he told Mr. B. that he had never been able to free himself from the influence of Moses' prayers, and that during the past year, he, his wife and children, had been converted to God.

Moses responded; Bress God, massa C.; doe I way up hea, I neber forgit you in my prayers; I ollers put de ole massa side de new one. Bress God, dis make Moses tink about Joseph in de Egypt agin.

The Col. then stated to Mr. B. that his object in coming to Baltimore was to buy Moses and his family back again. But Mr. B. assured him that was out of the question for he could not part with him; and he intended to manumit Moses and his wife at forty, and his children at thirty years of age.

Moses was not far wrong in referring to Joseph. For when Joseph was sold into Egypt, God overruled it to his good, and he obtained blessings that were far beyond his expectations; so with Moses. Joseph eventually proved the instrument of saving the lives of those who sold him. Moses proved the instrument in God's hands of saving the man who sold him.

Old Moses is still living and doing well. He has not long since obtained his freedom—at present he occupies a comfortable house of his own, and I suppose sings, and prays, and shouts to his heart's content.—Methodist Protestant.

An Effectual Cure for the Ear Ache.—Take a small piece of cotton batting, or cotton wool, making a depression in the centre with the end of a finger, and fill it with as much ground pepper as will rest on a five cent piece, gather it into a ball, and tie it up. Dip the ball into sweet oil, and insert it into the ear, covering the latter with cotton wool, and use a bandage or cap to retain it in place. Almost instant relief will be experienced, and the application is so gentle that an infant will not be injured by it, but will experience relief as well as adults.—Cor. Boston Journal.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year.......$2.00
For a single copy 6 months.......1.00
For a single copy 3 months.......50
Five copies to one address for 6 months...4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months...8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months...15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months...21.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have friends, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication! [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 316. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1861. | VOL. XIV. NO. 5.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.
MILES GRANT, Assistant Editor.

J. S. WHITE, F. H. BERICK, } EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
MILES GRANT, J. S. WHITE, | WALTER PRATT, H. V. DAVIS,
J. HEMENWAY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

Be Patient.

Cease! thou wayward heart of mine,
Cease to murmur or repine!
Though thy pathway's fraught with care,
Knowest thou not the haven's near?
Canst thou not brave the storm awhile,
To gain at last thy Saviour's smile?

What though thy trials are severe?
What though the night is dark and drear?
There's always one bright star in sight,
To guide thee till the morning light;
Then ne'er complain, but patient still,
Submit thee to thy Father's will.

Think of the bright, eternal day,
That soon will chase this gloom away;
God's saints will then bright glory share
With angels, free from grief or care:
Think of the sufferings Jesus bore—
O murmur and repine no more.

MRS. W. P. WENTWORTH.

La Fayette, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Thoughts on the Times.

IN TWO ARTICLES.—NO. 1.

Being in possession of only one talent, (in common with all) and as I do not wish my talent to be buried up in a napkin, or grave cloth, subject to no resurrection, hence I send you the following thoughts on the times. If there ever was a time, since the light of heaven first dawned upon creation, more important than another in its momentous results, that time or period is now. And such impressions are fast becoming proverbial too in these last days; even within the past few months I find it so. Both political and religious papers are viewing the signs of the times, and describing them in the same way; if not in the light as Adventists, they are unanimous of a world's crisis at hand.

The New York Observer, after enumerating the signs of the times, says: "There are those who see in the signs of the times—the dark and portentous signs that appear in our own and other lands—the most convincing proofs that the day of the Lord is at hand. The great tribulation has come. Let us be ready. Watch and pray." We have indeed arrived at that time, called by the world a time from which there could be no history beyond—this time being called by the Scriptures of truth "the time of the end." What the church knows now by faith, will soon be known by the world by sight. They will have some idea of it when they see the commencing of hostilities, as mentioned in the latter part of Rev. 14th chapter, where armies have been manœuvreing for the past six months. Blood is represented to flow a certain distance, viz., one thousand six hundred furlongs. The Hon. Rufus Choate. and some others thought this prophecy was fulfilled in the memorable events of 1848–9, then afterwards at Sebastopol, but on examination we will find it confined to a particular locality in Italy. Eight furlongs to the mile makes the 1,600 furlongs, just 200 Italian miles, the exact distance from the river Poe to Rome, or St. Peter's patrimony, the river Poe dividing the States of the church from the other Italian States, her enemies. The Pope understands the matter as well as we, for in a circular to his Archbishops he said: "They (the Italians) have invaded our provinces like a conflagration; there is wrath gone out from the Lord; his plague is begun."

By reading the account of the last plagues in Rev. 15th chapter, we find one of the plagues is on the seat of the beast, and that the wrath and coming of the Lord is under the last plague. In the 17th chap. of Rev. we find Rome destroyed by those States of hers. The Pope understands it all quite plain; for when, some months ago, two French officers offered his Holiness their swords to defend him to the last, he replied, "Put up your swords, I have no need of them now." Why? He gives us his reason in these remarkable words: "Because God has decreed my downfall." Now where did the Pope find this out, except in the Scriptures of truth? Yes, he knows the hand writing on the wall, for God has most assuredly numbered his kingdom, and will soon finish it by his coming. "Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin," has been written on the brow of the whore. From the revolt of King Henry VIII. it has been falling, falling, and will soon be found no more at all. The Pope, in finishishing his discourse to the officers, said: "All I wish is a humble cottage built me, so that I can show forth to the world humility." How lamb-like he now appears, when he cannot help himself. There was a time, however, in his history when he could both speak and act with more than dragonic power. For instance, when one of the German Emperors (Segismond, I think,) was obliged to stand three days and nights, barefoot, in the cold, snowy and stormy days of dead winter, before the Pope would condescend to allow him entrance, in order to put his foot upon his neck. But how changed is the scene now. How scattered is the once proud fame and glory of Rome. 'Tis now like a world in its chaotic state—a sceptre of the mighty past. But Babylon is falling never to rise again. That was a time when Popery could place her feet on the necks of Emperors like cars of Juggernaut, but now the veriest slave that walks the streets of Rome (if it were not for French troops) could trample on the brow of Nio.

The 18th chapter of Rev. opens out with the fate of Rome. An angel or messenger from heaven, signifying his mission to be heavenly, declares Babylon fallen. Such is the glorious power and light thrown on the Scriptures by this event, that the whole earth is lightened with its glory—the whole world will understand it. Some may say, if the event is generally known, why is it requisite to have a messenger to inform us of the fact? God has always, in divers times and places, revealed his purposes to his servants, that through them the church and the world might know the things that are next to come on the world. For the Bible is a chart from the first advent, when Christ came into the world as the humble, despised and neglected Nazarene, to the time when he shall come the second time, as King of kings, Lord of lords, and "Monarch of all he surveys." The Bible is a chart from Paradise lost, by the first Adam (through the tempter, who declared "that man should not surely die; nay, instead of dying, you shall become as Gods;" thus giving the first text on natural immortality, and the foundation of heathen mythology,) to the time when Paradise shall be regained by Christ the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, when the tempter's head will be effectively crushed. There will not be then any guardian angel, with flaming sword, debarring us from the tree of life, for there we may all eat of the tree of life, being children of the resurrection. It is by God's revelation to man that the saints know when their redemption is at hand, next to come. The object of the angel is not only to declare to the world the fulfillment of the prophecy, but to give a warning for the future in connection with it, as it reads in the 4th verse, etc. How long this last warning may continue can only be conjectured. It is evidently of short duration, for the next event in the "world's crisis" is the coming of Salvation; and when God omnipotent reigneth, at about this time the foolish virgins may seek for oil from the wise virgins. This will be in reality the watching time. Let us therefore take heed and watch unto prayer, holding fast the sure word, so that no man may take our crowns.

It may be remarked again, that God will do nothing without first revealing his secrets, so that the people of God may know wherein lies their safety, and that the sinner may know that their retribution is at hand. This was so with respect to the cities of the plain, with the antediluvians in the time of Noah, and that too within a definite time. Definite time has, in reality, never been a question either in or out of the church, because all events have been definite in their time and character. The purpose of God was also made known to the Jews previous to the destruction of Jerusalem, in A. D. 70. But how has it been received by the world? It has verily been rejected. They will not have this man Christ to rule over them. They were so absorbed in the foibles of earth, that they had no faith in coming events.

That we are living at a culminating point in prophecy, was sufficiently proved at the Wilbraham Camp Meeting, by Brn. Grant, Himes, Morgan, Berick, Brewer, and others. Nay, we have only to open our eyes and ears, and see the jots and tittles of prophecy fulfilled to the very letter every day. We have indeed arrived at a time of which there appears to be a fullness, and a bound so that they cannot pass. This is a self-evident fact, according to the tenor of all Scripture, but especially the prophetical part. Every thing seems to make the present truth stand out in bold relief on the vista of time. The present truth is that the Lord Jesus is soon coming in a personal manner, to change the living saints, to raise the dead saints, those who have slept in Jesus—to give the crown of life, eternal life, (the crown of glory) to those only who, by a patient continuance in well doing, have sought for the same, when they will receive their kingdom, which lies under the whole heaven, Christ being their king. To the other class it will be for their destruction, for the wages of sin is death. Rom. 6: 23. And it reads in Ezekiel, "For the soul that sinneth it shall die." For they that have sown to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption. It is only those who have sown to the Spirit, that shall of the Spirit reap everlasting life, when their mortality shall be changed to immortality at the resurrection. 1 Cor. 15th chap.

The doctrine of a second coming of Christ is fast becoming a common doctrine, not in a Scriptural sense, however. The second coming of Christ to the Spiritualists is in the "coming of man;" to the popular church a manifestation of the Holy Spirit. But when has the Holy Spirit left the world? Did Christ not tell them that they should have the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, even to the end of the world? When the Holy Spirit leaves the world, then farewell "the solemn temples, the gorgeous palaces," for the world and all that it contains will be destroyed—"like the baseless fabric of a vision, leaving not a wreck behind." JOHN TAYLOR.

New Sharon, Franklin Co., Me.

For the Crisis.

My Experience—No 12.

(Concluded.)

Under the withering influence of the cold and indifferent feelings manifested towards me by those once my warmest friends, I had absented myself from their meetings for some time. Near the close of the year, I felt a strong impression as if something had said, "Go work in my vineyard." I inquired how, and where? "In the prayer meeting." How can I, when they treat me so coldly and seem to have but little or no confidence in my piety, thinking me deluded and fanatical, etc.? "What is that to thee? follow thou me." What can I do? Shall I lay aside my views of truth, to agree with them? "No; keep those, but go work; why stand ye here idle?" After some reflection I resolved to go, submitting all to the Lord to direct. He gave me much freedom in prayer and exhortation, which was apparently received. After a few such privileges, winter set in, depriving me of the same.

When the spring opened, I attended the Sabbath meeting, in one of which I felt a strong impression to testify for Jesus, so strong that I hardly dared to refuse; but considering my position—the trial unsettled—I feared some would take advantage of the past and speak evil of the cause. How I wished the way had been clear. I suffered extremely in my feelings. After awhile the pastor called, and in the course of conversation allusion was made to my impressions and trials, when he very coolly remarked that probably my testimony would not be received till I returned to my former position in the church! Such were my feelings that I made no reply. Shortly after, in a discourse one Sabbath, he remarked that any persons absenting themselves from the church, and standing aloof from the church, were in his opinion no better than a Roman Catholic. With such like remarks often falling so heavily upon me, I hardly knew sometimes what to do, or which way to go. But a strong arm upheld me, while a good hand marked my pathway and guided my footsteps.

The summer passed away, in which I saw and experienced much of the goodness and mercy of God, especially in the conversion of one of our children. The pastor was present. We wept and prayed together at the family altar, and one, (being called upon) prayed, whom I had not heard for four long years. How solemn, sublime and sacred were those hours! All unpleasant things of the past seemed lost and forgotten in the sacredness of the moment. Angels hovered over the scene with delight. Jesus smiled, while we claimed the promise, believed, and received the blessing. I now enjoyed an overflowing fullness, entirely absorbed in the love and will of God. With delight will I go anywhere, do anything for thee, my precious Saviour, was the language of my heart. "Will you go and bear public testimony for me now?" For a moment I hesitated, but such a deep sense of the goodness of God opened to my view, as subdued all my will, and I said, "Yes, Lord, I'll go." Instantly the melting influence of the Spirit of God filled my whole soul, divesting me of everything but God, while I seemed lost in a vision of love.

In the congregation where I usually attended worship was an elderly lady, partially deranged, who invariably took liberty, whether it was given yea or nay, to talk, and to whom the minister and a part of the congregation were opposed, and with whom (in this employment) I had not heretofore been willing to have my name associated; but now it was all taken away; I had no will of my own in the matter. If by doing the will of God my name is cast out as evil, so let it be; if it be enrolled in the Lamb's book of life, it is enough. Through the week I felt an unusual flow of love divine, together with the assistance of the Holy Spirit in the duties and labors before me, especially family devotion, in which two of our children and one other young lady now joined by prayer. All was now consecrated to God; my interest was deep, and a spirit of prayer pervaded my whole soul, especially for the salvation of sinners.

Sabbath came, and found me in the house of God, resolved to obey the teachings of the Spirit. I felt a word of exhortation—a message for the poor sinner; but no liberty, as usual, was given, and the lady before referred to taking liberty, was sung down by the choir. I returned home with a burdened heart, yet still resolved to obey the Lord the first opportunity. The next Sabbath was still the same; the sermon hurried through, and the same person attempting to speak was silenced again by the choir—they being encouraged by smiles of approbation from leading members of the church. My heart was now too full for utterance. My body well nigh sunk under the weight and burden of my mind. All the week following I mourned and wept, still resolved to obey the Lord, hoping and praying that this contention might cease, and the opportunity be presented to discharge my duty. But the next Sabbath came, and with it brought the same state of affairs, and worse, if possible; no liberty given, nor a moment allowed. It seemed that I should lose my breath; and such were my feelings, such the burden and distress resting upon me, that I had not strength to arise from my seat till most of the congregation had left the house. Thus three successive Sabbaths did I go and return with an increasing burden upon my soul, and never before was I sensible of such suffering. For hours I could neither weep nor pray—only exclaim, as I walked the room, "O Lord, O Lord," adding at last, "Why is it so? Have I disobeyed thee?" I now gave it up as useless. How could I longer endure such sufferings, with the prospect so dark and discouraging before me? And to this day the event is shrouded in mystery. I cannot describe the sufferings endured for months. I could not weep, as usual; bondage, darkness and mystery enveloped me in their bewildering folds, the remembrance of which leaves a painful impression upon my mind.

I continued to go down, sinking lower and lower, and becoming like one in a famishing, dying condition, disheartened and discouraged, till a cordial or remedy was obtained by reading those "Letters illustrative of Christian Experience," written by M. D. W., and published in the Crisis some time since. These, under the blessing of God, brought light and hope. I now began to believe there was hope in my case—that it was possible for me, with others, to arise again, live, labor and do something somewhere for God and his cause.

During this time of trial and distress, the church had appointed a committee to visit me, with others, as delinquent members, to whom I gave a short account of my trials—their treatment and neglect—the light I had received—reasons for changing my views, knowing at the same time that it would subject me to their disapprobation, yet could not well resist such plain and reasonable truths; did not choose sufferings and trials, but if they come in consequence of choosing and walking in the right path, I could welcome and cheerfully endure them; that I no longer desired or considered myself a member of their church, requesting them to dismiss or exclude me, just as they thought best. I now felt greatly relieved, and especially when I learned that they had voted to consider me where I considered myself.

During the summer season my strength, hope and courage had increased, till I began to feel a strong inclination to be doing something for the Lord; and, thinking it possible the church might be willing that I, in common with others, might attend their prayer meeting, I ventured to go. After attending two or three, I felt an impression to take a part in the exercises, which I did by testifying to the goodness of God to me, but which was received with manifest coldness. This did not intimidate or trouble me much. I felt resolved still to go, and do what appeared to be duty—that they should not crowd or hinder me. With these feelings I went again. The minister appeared more than usually elated with joy, responding freely, while others improved; but when I arose, he closed his heart and lips, setting himself hard against me, not even uttering a sound when I sat down. The effect was visible in the meeting. I tried hard to keep above its influence, but soon began to sink down in my feelings, and a sense of the past and present sufferings and trials, occasioned by the combined influence of certain individuals, to whom I had shown only good will and respect, now appeared too much to be endured longer in silence. As I passed out, at the close of the meeting, no one cared to notice me. I now began to feel a dislike towards them, and, ere I had reached home, this feeling had increased and changed to envy, and this to hatred. Had one of those individuals been present, I should probably have given utterance to those feelings; but being alone, I passed on in silence.

On reaching home, somehow I dare not speak or give utterance to a single sound, through fear that some of those words or thoughts which were rankling in my tortured bosom, might escape. Soon the last one of the family retired, leaving me alone. I now began to seriously consider upon the event, and felt guilty and condemned before the Lord. I tried to find an excuse, but none would answer. I found myself unsafe, in danger, and dare not retire in this condition. I felt no inclination or spirit of prayer. I felt wicked, but knew there was no escape but by prayer—coming to God just as I was—that it would not avail to wait till I had got rid of this spirit; and prayer at this time, under this influence, seemed an impossibility; but there was no alternative, and I, with all my wickedness, resolved to try. I retired to the closet, and falling down, began to call upon the Lord; but all was closed up—cold, dark, and dismal. I repeated all the words of prayer, entreaty and pleading that I could command, but they only seemed like idle tales. I arose, thinking it useless to try to pray; it was only mockery. I tried to confess, to forgive, to think that I might be altogether in the wrong, but to no purpose. Something seemed to say, "the day of grace is over with you." It may be, thought I, after a moment's pause; but I will never leave this place till I know, nor till I am rescued and delivered, if there is mercy; and falling down upon my knees again, I besought the Lord more earnestly than ever for instruction and deliverance. Tears now began to flow in view of my danger—not tears of penitence for my sin, for as yet I had not discovered it. After a long time, thus pleading and feeling that it was possible that I was on the point of being lost, and none but Christ could save, I began to submit it all to him, when a voice seemed to say, "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts higher than your thoughts." I now began to break down before the Lord, and cry mightily unto him to show me my condition just as it was—what I had been doing, and help me to understand and obey. Presently the light shone upon my heart, while Jesus seemed to say, You have not been willing to suffer for my sake—to be despised, cast out, and trodden under foot, and bear it patiently. That which you have endured has been with murmuring. You must follow in my footsteps, and suffer with me if ye would also reign with me. Once I came unto my own, and they received me not, and once had not where to lay my head. You desire the good will and fellowship of all, but he that is not willing to deny himself, and take his cross and follow me, is not worthy of me. These words sunk deep in my heart; my eyes were opened, and the fountain of my soul was broken up. My heart melted under the power of God and the influence of the Spirit, and it seemed that I could have wept my life away. "O, my Saviour, my Redeemer," I cried, "forgive, forgive. O, how have I dishonored thee, and indulged in sin. How have I murmured, and thought it hard to be thus despised; but O, forgive me this time—forgive." For a long time I wept and sighed before the Lord, esteeming it a rich repast. Again I commenced pleading with God to show me all, and take everything from my heart that hindered the work of God from progressing there to perfection. Soon the question arose, "Can you forgive and pray for those who have thus dealt with you?" I hesitated a moment, to examine it well, and, being in full view of the garden and the cross, with the suffering dying Saviour thereon, I cried, "Yes, Father, yes, and plead with thee to forgive them, too. O forgive them, I pray thee, forgive."

Here I forbear; my tongue nor pen can never describe the scene. Here, before I left the place, which was near three hours, I learned and understood the import of that peculiar and important text, Matt. 5: 44, and felt the sweet, melting peace of God flowing through my soul like a gentle river; and from that time till now, which has been near two years, instead of a complaint or murmur arising, I have felt a rejoicing to be counted worthy to suffer for Christ's sake, if indeed I have, and with unwavering confidence believe that he is my sun and shield, and no good thing will be withheld from me if I walk uprightly. God has given me somehow a victory and power over this people, so that I now move amongst them without feeling an opposing influence, seeking and striving only, I trust, to do His will.

Here, as I close, let me say, if this imperfect account of my christian experience shall be the means of influencing and guiding one pilgrim nearer to Christ, it shall well repay. I submit it, praying God to still keep and guide me, with others, clear through to the Kingdom. Yours still in hope. D. N. K.

ERRATUM.—In the last No. of this series, near the commencement, for "national," notional. D. N. K.

"The Earnest Expectation."

In the language of the New Testament and in current religious usage, Christians are regarded as citizens of a divine kingdom of which their Lord is the head. Accordingly they seek its present advancement in this world, and have their most glorious prospect in its final triumph at his second coming. Their citizenship lies not merely in obligations to his service and necessary subjection to his sway, which may as well be affirmed of all mankind, and of infernal powers; but in loyalty to his person and reign, participation in his principles, fidelity to his measures, and confidence in his resources. Hence it enters into their desire and plan, as into his own, to extend his dominion and multiply its subjects in this world, to deepen and diffuse the blessings enjoyed under it, to make their friends and neighbors and all the families of mankind partakers of their own privileges and hopes. Theirs is not the ambition of Roman citizens, or of any modern aristocracy, to aggrandize their own exclusive caste while enlarging the territories and multiplying the vassals of their government. They would make their fellowship as wide as its conquests. Yet, while such is their desire, their earnest expectation "waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." As with the faithful subjects of any monarchy, their most glorious prospect is in the ultimate triumph of their Sovereign, not merely in gathering a vast number of willing and favored subjects, but in subduing all his incorrigible foes. This result they must look for, according to his announcement, in his second coming. The promised consummation of his kingdom among mankind is beyond the growth of his religion, or the spread of its influence: it is his personal presence and triumph. Hence it must be looked for in connection with the resurrection, and "the times of restitution of all things." It will be the inauguration of his reign in the "new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." Thus the apostle Paul, after saying, "Our conversation [or our citizenship] is in heaven," adds, "from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."

Now many philanthropists have gone aside from this apostolic and scriptural idea in their conception of the results anticipated by Christianity. They have expected civil governments to be rectified and perfected, great moral reforms to be accomplished, and mankind to be advanced to a high social, intellectual, and moral condition, through existing agencies, leaving nothing further to be done or gained. Many Christians, too, seem to be content with expecting the world to be pervaded by the principles of Christianity, making little or no account of Christ's coming, and the resurrection and the new earth. Their "golden age" for the world is made such, at best, by the prevalence of moral and religious truth. They speak as if the kingdom of Christ were a mere figure for the moral influence of his religion, and not as literal an account as can be given of a state or commonwealth having Christ at its head, whose utmost prosperity must therefore be in his person and presence. And too often they speak of themselves individually as if the consummation of their prospects were in the rest and blessedness that immediately follow death, rather than in "the resurrection of the just," when "the meek shall inherit the earth." Adhering more closely to the Scriptures, they will remember that Christ is truly and properly a king, and they are his loyal and confiding subjects; that having come to this earth, a revolted province of his dominions, he will one day return to vindicate his servants and to punish his enemies; that he is now "expecting till his enemies be made his footstool," but will then complete his work for the righteous living and dead, and reign with them in the new earth, even in the New Jerusalem. Along with the promise so often cited, "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession," there runs the threatening, "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." To that time, both of reward and "vengeance," when "every eye shall see him," the prophets and apostles looked forward with exultation, beyond all improvements and reformations in society; beyond even the predicted proclamation of the Gospel to all nations; beyond even the rest of falling asleep in Jesus. Amidst al their trials and successes, they looked and longed for the final coming of that divine kingdom, of which they were citizens—not in the amelioration of existing institutions—not even in the prevalence of Christianity over idolatry and unbelief, but in the final coming of their King,—"looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God,"—in the meantime confessing "that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth," and desiring "a better country, that is an heavenly." Let their chief hope be ours. We know not how better to set forth the expectation that befits Christians amidst whatever troubles and uncertaintie may surround them in the present life, than by turning to the apostle Paul when he would most cheer the Thessalonians under their "persecutions and tribulations," as in the first chapter of his second epistle, to which we solicit the attention of our readers. Sure we are, if only from the examples in the New Testament, that nothing can better qualify the people of God for "the sufferings" and the duties "of this present time," than "to wait for his Son from heaven."—Independent.

For the Crisis.

"It is I; Be not Afraid."

The above words came with comfort to my mind this morning, as I was feeling sad and afflicted, and almost in despair, and I thought how many of God's dear children were passing through similar trials—those of disappointments, cares and bereavements. This world is indeed a vale of tears. The stormy gales of trouble blow from every quarter. Bitter disappointments, perplexing cares, pinching poverty, painful disease, prostrated strength and heart-breaking bereavements, tearing from us those with whom our very life was bound together, leaving a blank nothing earthly can fill. I know from experience that there is nothing which can so allay the grief of afflicted believers as hearing Jesus say "It is I." O to recognize Christ more vividly in all our troubles! If he has bereaved me, and earth appears a blank in the absence of those so dear, though I cannot but mourn, shall I murmur? Would we be children and not be chastened—overcome and not contend—be gold and not be tried—be christians and not suffer? He has said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but in me ye shall have peace." Let us trust him and he will deliver. What could he say more for our comfort than he has? Hear him from the blessed book. "O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest and not comforted. I hid my face from thee for a moment, but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed, but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee. Fear not, for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name. Thou art mine; when thou passest through the waters I will be with thee, and through the rivers they shall not overflow thee; For I am the Lord thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy Saviour." He is faithful who hath promised; he cannot deny himself. Heaven and earth shall pass away, but his words shall not pass away; and he has said of all his people, I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. Let us believe these promises, and we shall be comforted. I fully believe that in a little while they will all be realized by the faithful children of God. Our Lord will come and establish his glorious kingdom, and then O how sweet the [illegible] given us. No more sin, no more sorrow, no more bitter partings. The dear father and tender mother, the faithful companion, the sweet child, all will meet never to part again.

Brethren and sisters, let us be stimulated by the blessed promises of God to keep his commandments, and walk humbly before him, that when he comes we may be able to say, "Lo, this is our God; we have done his will, and waited for him, and he will save us." H. A. D[illegible].

Newburyport, Mass.

☞ Receive [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Who are the Rest of the Dead?

"But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection."—Rev. 20: 5.

I inquire, to what thousand years does the above language refer? Evidently, the thousand years of the third verse, which is the period of the dragon's bondage. It is apparent, from a careful reading of the first seven verses of this chapter, that there are two distinct periods of time brought to view, which are distinguished by the definite article the, and the indefinite article a. I therefore take the position that the "the thousand years," and the "a thousand years," as referred to in the 2–7th verses, are different periods,—one being the time of the dragon's bondage, and the other the time of Christ's reign with his saints on the earth. The thousand years of the third verse points to the one thousand years of the second verse, as a definite portion of time during which the dragon was to be bound; while the thousand years of the fourth verse refers to a period of time not before spoken of, but mentioned again in the sixth verse, as the time of blessedness, when the saints should reign with Christ on earth. Thus the careful reader will observe that the "the thousand years," and the "a thousand years" are not identical; and also, that the "a thousand years" must succeed the "the thousand years," from the order of events as narrated by the revelator.

Notice the order of the vision. John first saw the dragon bound—not with a literal iron chain, but by treaty, as one power binds another. He saw this treaty sealed (stamped) with the seal of the predominating power, by which treaty (or binding,) the dragon was forced to give up "his seat, and power, and great authority" to the beast. Rev. 13: 2–11. Secondly, he saw thrones, and they sat upon them. These were earthly thrones, and the ten kings that sat upon them were Roman kings, or emperors, who gave (also) their strength and power unto the beast. These had power to judge and to execute judgments; hence John said "power was given unto them." "And (i. e., in connection with the thrones and them that sat on them,) I saw the souls (or persons) that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived (i. e., had a resurrection) and reigned (prevailed) with Christ a thousand years."

QUESTION. When did John see these souls beheaded, and where were they when beheaded? Rev. 6: 9–10 tells us it was when the Lamb opened the fifth seal. Says John, "I saw under the altar, the souls that were beheaded." Under what altar did he see this beheading? Mark, it was under the opening of the fifth seal. Then what kingdom, or power, predominated when it was opened? I think all agree that it was the Papal power. Now observe carefully; the dragon was bound before the thrones appeared, and the thrones appeared before the beheading, and the fifth seal was opened before John saw the souls beheaded. This proves the binding of the dragon to have taken place prior to the great slaughter of God's people under that power, called by Daniel and Christ the abomination of desolation, which was to stand in the Holy Place. But John says the souls that were beheaded lived and reigned with Christ a (not the) thousand years; but does not in that place tell us particularly when they lived, but said they lived, i. e., they had a resurrection and reigned with Christ.

QUESTION. When will they live and reign? Answer.—When all the rest of them that sleep in Jesus shall rise and reign with them.

Those that were beheaded died, and are still dead; but they do not constitute all the dead in Christ. There is a rest, another class of dead saints who will not live again until the thousand years shall have expired, and then will follow the first resurrection. Hence it is that John says, "But the rest of the dead," (implying the two classes of dead ones,) "lived not again," implying that both had once lived, but were now dead "until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection."

The question may here arise, do not the words "first resurrection" imply a second? Admitting this to be a fair inference, it proves nothing—it establishes no essential point of doctrine. Claim, if you please, that that this inference proves two resurrections, it does not prove that a thousand years will intervene between them. We do not deny the possibility of two resurrections; the resurrection of the just is not the resurrection of the unjust; and if a moment, the twinkling of an eye (see 1st Cor. 15: 51, 52,) is sufficient time to raise the righteous living, then the remainder of the hour would be time enough to raise the wicked dead, that they might all see Jesus coming in the clouds of heaven, as it is written, and thus do no violence to the plain, simple word of God. Though we are aware of the position some of our brethren take against the resurrection of the wicked, we cannot turn away from the law and the testimony, when it is so plain that the wayfaring man need not err therein.

The teaching of the Bible then is, that the rest of the dead who lived not again, are those who have fallen asleep in Jesus from the beginning of creation down to the time (at least) of the beheading of souls under the (Roman) altar, and not the wicked dead, as is the common belief. And also that the first resurrection, as spoken of in the sixth verse of 20th chap., succeeds the thousand years of Satan's bondage, instead of preceding it. A careful reading of the fifth verse settles this point beyond successful controversy. And again, that the saints that sleep in Jesus will be raised, when he appears the second time, is a certainty established by the language of Paul.—1 Cor. 15: 51, 52.

Then, my brethren, let us look for the Day of the Lord—the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men, "in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, the elements melt with fervent heat, the earth also; and the works that are therein shall be burned up," according to the order of events as given by the apostles. Therefore, when you see Jerusalem restored to her former privileges, and protected by the authorities of the Gentile nations, her treading down is at an end. Hence the "times of the Gentiles" is (about) fulfillled. The protection now extended to the Jews as a people is a strong indication that they are no longer to be trodden down of the Gentiles. Hence we look for Christ in his second advent soon, to take to himsels his great power and reign. The character of his reign is clearly developed in the simplest language of the Bible. We need not attempt to modify it in the least; he will rule the nations with a rod of iron. Ps. 2: 9. He will execute the judgments written; he will "take vengeance on them that know not God, (whether Jew or Gentile) and obey not the Gospel." 2 Thess. 1: 7–10.

E. R. SOUTHWICK.

Granville, Ohio.

ERRATUM.—In my former article quite an error appears. In No. 24, 2d column from the right, 9th line from the top, in answer to the question: "What kingdom exists, and who reigns during this thousand years?" should have been answered, "Theory says," and not "Daniel and John say."

E. R. S.

For the Crisis.

Questions Answered.

1. "Does the word tribulation in 2 Thess. 1: 6, relate to torment in a life beyond the present? 2. Does the true import of 2 Thess. 1: 6 demand that those among the wicked dead who troubled the Thessalonian church shall live again?"

SALOME.

It appears to me that the "tribulation" in this passage belongs to those who trouble the church in all time. The word "you" not only includes that part of the church who then lived, but the whole church,—you, the church, one and all. As this tribulation is to come on the wicked consequent upon the character they form while troubling the church, it seems evident that they must live again after they have died, or else they must receive tribulation as their recompense before they die. But the connection, as well as Romans 2: 9, shows that the tribulation is at a future and definite time—that is, at or in the day of judgment.

Verse 7–8. "And to you who are troubled, rest with us." That is, God will recompense rest to you and to us. This is the rest that remains to the people of God. It is to be given to you and to us "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel." "When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." Verse 10.

Those who will be found disobeying the gospel when the Lord comes, will "be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." Verse 9. Those who will be thus punished when the Lord comes, will there and then be judged for their sins in not obeying the gospel. This judgment will be final, and so these persons will have no resurrection. They, being alive when the Lord comes, will have finished their probation, and now must be dealt with according to their deeds. The natural death which they would have died, had not the Lord come, will be superseded by the death that will be inflicted on them as the result of their character. Hence they will be judged at the coming of Christ, without first dying and then being raised up to be judged. This class will die but once, and that will be final. Their case will be decided personally and understandingly, while they are alive, and then the decision is executed, which is everlasting destruction. They are not to have two everlasting destructions, hence they will not be raised up to be so destroyed again. There is an exception to the rule of the resurrection of the wicked. Some of them will not have a resurrection. The progress to the first death will be arrested to give place to that which will be equivalent to the second death. So it will be with the righteous; some of them will not die at all. When the Lord comes, those who will be alive will not die. The Lord will stop the course of mortality, and will do for them what will be equivalent to a resurrection to life—that is, he will change them as he did Enoch and Elijah, so that they will not die. So, as some of the righteous will no die once, some of the wicked will die but once.

J. S. WHITE.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 16, 1861.

The Lord's Coming as a Motive Power.

"It is surprising to me that your people cannot profit by past disappointments, but must again make the near approach of Christ's advent the motive to christian effort and faithfulness. But so it is. There are a class of minds that can live only by excitement. Allowing that that important event is near, there are a thousand casualities by which you and I and a thousand others may pass probation before it takes place. And are there not, I pray you, other motives and other considerations to urge us to faithfulness and watchfulness as well as that one glorious event, yet future, "when Christ who is our life shall appear"? "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day;" and why will you strive to raise an excitement on a mathematical calculation, in which there may be a thousand failures before you reach a definite result?

Why not labor to get people to see to it that their hearts and lives are right, and labor faithfully for the salvation of sinners, instead of all turning prophets and undertaking to proclaim the coming advent with all the confidence that you would the result of any problem in common arithmetic? I wish I had an article I saw in some New York paper alluding to the vagaries of the Adventists in New York. If people can only be kept in active religious service by such motives, I fear they will be found wanting when weighed in the balance. I will close, hoping you will profit by these hints. Understand, I cordially embrace the doctrine of Christ's second coming. But the constant effort of your people to fix the time is arrogant and presumptious."

W.

We feel grateful to "W." for the freedom with which he has given utterance to his views concerning the relation of the doctrine of the Advent near to fidelity in the Christian life; and just so far as his well intended "hints" are timely, and his rebuke deserved, we hope our readers will be ready to "profit by" them. The writer of the above note is a Minister of the Gospel, and, though he is not identified with the "people" who believe that the deliverance of the groaning creation is nigh at hand, we are greatly rejoiced to find him speaking of the return of "Christ who is our life" as a "glorious event," and at his declaration—"I cordially embrace the doctrine of Christ's second coming." Cordiality in this direction, though very refreshing to one who loves the "blessed hope," is an exceedingly rare manifestation, and we welcome its sincere expression from any and every quarter. To our own mind it is a deeply interesting thought that, before the actual revelation of the Son of Man, the true people of God will all see "eye to eye" on this glorious theme, and that the speedy coming of Jesus will, ere the parted heavens shall disclose him in majesty and glory, be the one grand expectation of the entire Church, so that "it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Isaiah 25: 9. With our present light, we do not see how this prophecy is to have its accomplishment if, when the Saviour appears, his real followers are in any other than a waiting position. "And take heed to yourselves," says Jesus, "lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you UNAWARES. For AS A SNARE shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." Luke 21: 34, 35. With this solemn admonition before us, the charge of "arrogance" and "presumption" seems not to be fairly invited by the "constant effort" of a large class of Christians to know all that is revealed concerning "the time." "Your redemption draweth nigh," are words which express one truth; but in immediate connection with them stands the precept: "So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, KNOW YE that the kingdom of God is NIGH AT HAND." If our friend "W." does "cordially embrace the doctrine of Christ's second coming," can he see no warrant in the language of our Lord, just cited, for being profoundly interested in knowing "the time" of the event? We submit the suggestion for his candid consideration, and proceed to offer further remarks upon his "hints."

1. The Advent people have profited by "past disappointments." On account of these, many among them have learned the necessity of having their hearts directed more perfectly "into the love of God, and into the PATIENT waiting for Christ" (2 Thess. 3: 5)—not, be it observed, to cease "waiting," but to wait "patiently." They have learned more fully than, perhaps, they could have learned otherwise, the import of the Apostle's words—"ye have need of PATIENCE, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise." Heb. 10: 36. Others have learned that they were unduly confident as to the correctness of their researches into the data which throw light upon "the time" of the second advent; and while they must continue to regard "the time" with the deepest interest, we are constrained to believe that it is only his limited acquaintance with the advent "people" which prevents our friend from seeing a vast improvement in the tone of their writings and preaching on the subject of "definite time." He must not, however, expect our co-operation in any efforts which look to creating indifference concerning "the time" of the "coming of the day of God." Alas! that this indifference should be as wide-spread as it is. We are not unmindful of the truth that "of that DAY and HOUR knoweth no man,"—our remarks having reference to the event as "nigh at hand." May the good Lord arouse a careless world and a slumbering church.

2. If any "people" are "again" making "the near approach of Christ's advent the motive to christian effort and faithfulness," they are only doing what they should never have ceased to do. In the ablest work extant on the "Life and Epistles of St. Paul," we have the remark that "their overwhelming sense of the nearness of the second advent" was a "distinguishing characteristic of the first christians of Thessalonica." We suspect that those Thessalonian Christians, were they now alive, could hardly be restrained, by the charge of "arrogance" and "presumption," from giving their earnest attention to "the time." Let "W." once admit that there is ever to be a time when the Church is to lift up her head and look up because redemption is "nigh" in a sense that it was not "nigh" eighteen hundred years ago, and he will not find it hard, we think, to excuse those in the present day who, believing that we are verging upon the close of the Gospel dispensation, seek to know all that may be known from the word of truth touching the definite period of the Saviour's return.

Did we know precisely what "W." means by "excitement," we should have an opinion as to whether christians ought to "live by" it or not. In its proper sense, "excitement" is no where so appropriate as in the service of God. But waiving this, we remark that "the just shall live by FAITH." How does this truth bear upon the matter in hand—the Lord's coming? Let Paul inform us: "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith." If we may not "live by excitement," let us "live by faith," but in either case let us not be unmindful of the fact that in a "little while" Jesus "will come, and will not tarry." See Heb. 10th chap.

5. "W." asks us whether there are not "other motives and other considerations to urge us to faithfulness and watchfulness as well as that one glorious event." Our answer is no—no—NO. There is nothing to compare with it, or that can lawfully usurp its place as a motive. Says Dr. ADAM CLARKE concerning "the doctrine of the resurrection"—"The apostles were continually insisting upon it, and exciting the followers of God to diligence, obedience and cheerfulness through IT." Of course the same objection lies against the resurrection as a "motive" that can properly be urged against the Lord's coming. Dr. Lillie, of the Presbyterian church, in his Lectures on Thessalonians, affirms of the church at Thessalonica that "they felt it to be at once their duty, their interest, and their delight, to be ever waiting for" Christ's coming,' "and preparing for it." He further remarks: "My brethren, I speak not hastily when I affirm that the doctrine of the atonement is not capable of easier and more triumphant demonstration than is the fact, that this, and nothing else, was the common, the universal, faith and experience of apostolic Christendom." These are weighty words. Elsewhere in the volume the Doctor records the following important testimony: "Meanwhile, I must not withhold the expression of my conviction, that one reason, and the main one, of the Church's marked and general declension in love and power is this very darkening of the primitive hope of her Lord's return." A more recent testimony, involving though it does not affirm this conclusion, is that given by one of the editors of the Independent, who says, in an article found on our first page this week,—"nothing can better qualify the people of God for 'the sufferings' and the duties 'of this present time,' than 'to wait for his Son from heaven.'"

But we imagine W.'s reply to all this to be—our "probation" may close before Christ comes; therefore, urge that "consideration" as a ground of "faithfulness and watchfulness." This suggestion would have force if "death" were "the gate to endless joy," as W.'s theology represents it to be; but since it is a state of unconsciousness, it furnishes no motive to a holy life. True, "the dead in Christ" are a favored class, but this arises wholly from the blessed fact that "when Christ who is (their) life shall APPEAR, THEN shall (they) also appear with him in glory." So it comes to pass, after all, that the coming of Jesus and the resurrection of the dead are the right motives to urge upon the attention of mankind. "Too often," remarks the writer in the Independent, Christians "speak of themselves individually as if the consummation of their prospects were in the rest and blessedness that immediately follow death, rather than in 'the resurrection of the just,' when 'the meek shall inherit the earth.'" We value this testimony as being in the right direction, but remark that "the resurrection of the just" derives its entire importance from the fact, alike ignored by the theology of the Independent and repugnant to it, that the rest which immediately follows death is in the grave, where there can be not even a partial consummation of the believer's "prospects," for the scriptural reason that "the dead praise not the LORD, neither any that go down into silence." Ps. 115: 17. That "many Christians" are "making little or no account of Christ's coming," as affirmed by the Independent, is only a legitimate reaction from the prevailing belief thus epitomized by the poet—"There is no DEATH—what seems so is TRANSITION."

5. We would remind W. that there is a wide difference between "all turning prophets" and all taking heed unto the "sure word of prophecy, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place." We "do well," Peter informs us, to attend to the latter point; and if, in discharging this obligation, we discover that "the night is far spent," and "the day is at hand," we shall not be without a sufficient motive "to awake out of sleep" and to "cast off the works of darkness and put on the armor of light." (Romans 13th.) We have Paul's authority for believing that the great work of "denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, and living soberly, righteously and godly in this present world," is best stimulated by a perpetual "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." Titus 2: 13. This attitude of loving trust and faith is not unlikely to be accounted by a scoffing world as belonging to the "vagaries" of fools, but if it shall be reckoned as highest wisdom on our part by Him that sitteth in the heavens, the redeemed Church will throughout eternity have cause to rejoice that, to the last assurance of the Holy Writ, "Surely I come QUICKLY," she ever rendered the glad response, "EVEN SO, COME, LORD JESUS."

EXPLANATION.—In our article, "Mathematics and Theology," Sept. 18th, in correcting the calculations found in "Retribution," we assumed that those calculations were made upon the basis that a year contains 17,532 half hours, and we assumed the same starting point—our object being to show that the author had erred in the use of what we presumed were the data from which his computations were made. We make this statement now to correct the impression some might entertain, either that we were ignorant of the fact that there are not quite 17,532 half hours in a year, or that, knowing the precise facts, we made blundering computations from them. The exact truth, we believe, is that a year contains 17,531 half-hours, 18 minutes, and 47 7-10 seconds.

We have had a friendly conversation with Bro. Hastings touching the notice taken of his new book in our issue of the 18th ult. We cheerfully state the points upon which Bro. H. feels himself wronged by our article. Want of time and space obliges us to be very brief.

1. In our article we wrote as follows:—

> We incline, however, to the opinion that if he does not promptly recall some things which his book contains, many of our readers, if not his own, will think him to some extent "indifferent" to "the TRUTH," since there is not a shadow of foundation for the remark which we are now criticizing. Bro. H.'s view of the final and eternal extinction of the wicked will not permit him, as a shelter from rebuke on this point, to assert that the denial of a post resurrection "judgment on the unjust" involves their entire escape from 'retribution." He very well knows that this is not the fact.

We now withdraw the above statements, for the reason that Bro. Hastings has plainly affirmed to us his belief that unless the wicked dead live again they will wholly escape "retribution" for their sins!

2. Bro. Hastings disclaims any intention of charging "willful untruth" upon Bro. Storrs in his remark—"that persons may not always tell the truth about figures is quite evident." This shows that we did "mistake the animus of" his "statement," and we are glad to know that our impression was incorrect.

3. Bro. Hastings says he has no recollection of seeing the mathematical mistake of Bro. Storrs in the Examiner for Oct. 1, 1855, where it first appeared. Could we have supposed this possible, when we wrote our article, there would have been less occasion for our inquiry, "Why did not Bro. Hastings himself cause the error to be corrected where it appeared, long before it was embalmed in a 'sterreotype' plate?"

4. Bro. Hastings says that he did not think, and that he does not now think, that the "gray hairs" of Bro. Storrs should be his "ONLY shield" from "contempt." We, therefore, admit that our inference from his language was erroneous. We care not to moot the question whether the language employed in "Retribution" fairly suggested our inference: Bro. H.'s statement convinces us that we did not understand him correctly.

Note from Eld. J. Howell.

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—My health is still improving, for which I give the Lord thanks, and through the blessing of God I hope to gain my strength. Love to yourself and all the friends. Please say through the Crisis that my P. O. address is Harvard, McHenry Co., Ill.

Edwin Burnham's Labors.

Bro. Thos. W. Smith, Philadelphia, Oct. 1st, writes:—

"The cause is growing here. Eld. E. Burnham has succeeded in organizing a church at National Hall, with every prospect of success. The sectarian clergy don't like it."

☞ The obituary of Mrs. Durfee will appear next week.

From Bro. Joseph Myers.

BRO. WENDELL:—We should be glad to have some good Advent minister locate in these parts, either in Pownal, Adams, or Hoosic, as I think he could be well sustained.

Pownal, Vt., Oct. 12th, '61.

☞ The precious admonitions contained in the following excellent article from Bro. Grew are "meat in due season" to us, and we hope they will excite in many hearts the desire and effort to be more Christ-like in all things.

"Nearer to thee, my God, Nearer to thee."

The best evidence of our being made "meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light," is an increasing desire to be partakers of our Father's holiness, and to enjoy nearer and more constant communion of spirit with him. Thus beats the life-pulse of the heaven-born soul, which pants after the living God "as the hart panteth after the water brook." This blessed fruit of the Spirit of our Father, is the seal and pledge that we shall soon enter through the gates into the city, where the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the everlasting light and glory.

No knowledge, dear reader, no faith, or zeal, or hope, or form of godliness, will find acceptance before the Searcher of hearts, as a substitute for "holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Alas! how is the religion of the Cross belied by the dead formality of thousands of its professors? How many wolves are led by the Adversary to perdition in sheep's clothing! The true christian is prone to forget amid varied temptations, his high duty and privilege to seek increasing conformity in heart and life to his Father in heaven, and sweeter communion of spirit with him. Thus a loss is sustained, which nothing earthly can remunerate.

The holy warfare, brethren, is not urged by us with that decision of purpose, that intensity of holy desire, which our high vocation demands. In this respect we come short of the glory of God, both in respect to its manifestation in an ungodly world, and its enjoyment in our own souls. The past is gone forever. O that the future may witness our deeper sense of obligation to redeeming love, by a "closer walk with God," and more practical conformity to Him who went about doing good. One scriptural definition of our holy religion demands a more serious and constant regard. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." James 1: 27.

Jesus lived to love. To "love, not in word (only) but in deed and in truth." "God is Love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God and God in him." "Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him. I will set him on high, because he hath known my name." Ps. 91: 14. "A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another." "This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." John 15: 12. How has he loved us? What self-denial, what forbearance and long-suffering towards his erring disciples! Where are his imitators? Dear Father, revive in our cold hearts the spirit of this blessed love!

H. G.

Philadelphia, Oct. 11, 1861.

☞ The following is the "conclusion" of Bro. WILLIAM SHEPHERD's little work, "The Bread of Life," on sale at this office:—

A Call to the Impenitent.

Come, then, ye who are yet strangers to this divine life; ye who have not yet been made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have not yet tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come. Come, ye who may be yet far off from God and from Christ, by impenitence and wicked works, "taste and see that the Lord is good," and know, from happy experience, that "blessed is the man that trusteth in him." Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money: Come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk, without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Hearken diligently unto me, and eat that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Incline your ear and come unto me, hear and your soul shall live: and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. Seek ye the Lord while he may be found —Psa. 32: 6, Prov. 1: 23–33. Call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." Come, then, hasten to Christ the living bread, that cometh down from heaven, and eat, and live. Come, before access to him is cut off forever.—Luke 13: 25.

Ho! every one that thirsts, draw nigh;
'Tis God invites the fallen race.
Mercy and free salvation buy—
Buy wine and milk and gospel grace.

The happy gates of gospel grace
Stand open night and day;
Come then to Christ and seek supplies
And drive your wants away.

For soon they will be closed, soon the harvest will be past and the summer ended; soon thy probationary state will have terminated, the judgment set, the books be opened, thy destiny sealed forever. The last sands of time are fast running out. The great day of the Lord is hastening on, and soon will be ushered in. The loud-pealing thunders of the trump of God will soon awaken a wicked world and sleeping church from its false security and sinful slumber, to a sensible consciousness of its true and deplorable condition. Soon the universal shaking shall suddenly rend the temple of the present civil and ecclesiastical economy in twain—Matt. 24: 29, 30, Heb. 12: 26–28, revealing in personal manifestations the Son of man coming in power and great glory with all his bright angelic myriads. O, awful, terrific, yet glorious and happy day to "all who love his appearing." O hasten then, be wise, delay not, tarry not in all the plain, until you obtain the bread of life.—Deut. 30: 15, Gen. 19: 17. So then, when Jesus, the Life Giver, who is our life shall appear, you may appear also with him in glory. "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come. And let him that is athirst come: and whosoever will let him take the water of life freely," with the "LIVING BREAD WHICH COMETH DOWN FROM HEAVEN." And lo! He that solemnly affirmeth "I AM THE BREAD OF LIFE," and testifieth these things, "SAITH, SURELY I COME QUICKLY." And in view of all this glory—this splendor and ineffable blessedness—which will be introduced at his sublime Epiphany. May our hearts, animated with the Spirit of the true Church, respond with the holy John—"AMEN, EVEN SO, COME LORD JESUS."

And now may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all who revere and love the truth as it is in Jesus. Even so. Amen.

For the Crisis.

A REQUEST.—My brother, Judah Cooper, of Suffield, wishes to say through the Crisis to his many acquaintances—brethren and sisters who may read its columns, that he has been sick for the last seven months, and is now confined to his bed, which has deprived him of many privileges formerly enjoyed with them; especially the Wilbraham camp meeting and kindred gatherings much enjoyed in past years. He solicits an interest in their prayers, that if it can be for the glory of God and his good, he might be raised to health and former privileges; but if otherwise, that without a cloud he might fall "asleep in Jesus," and awake at his call in the morn of his resurrection, to share a glorious consummation of the hope of life only through Christ, by him long cherished. He also wishes to express a grateful remembrance of the kind regards of many of his brethren and sisters.

S. COOPER.

Windsor, Ct., Oct. 7, 1861.

Gleanings from Letters.

Sister D. N. Kidder, of Bristol, N. H., whose "Experience" is concluded in this number, writes:—

Enclosed you will find two dollars for the Crisis, which to me is better than gold; for did I use any of the article upon my person, I would sooner part with the last grain than think of doing without the light emitted from its pages.

Lydia L. Sandborn, East Newport, Me., writes:

I feel lost without the Crisis, and intend to take it as long as I live.

Sister C. E. Cole, Marshall, Mich., writes:—

I intend to pay for the World's Crisis as long as time continues. It is all the preaching I have, and is therefore rendered doubly dear.

Wm. Welch, Van Buren, N. Y., writes:—

I send you one dollar enclosed for the Crisis. We have no preaching here but the Crisis; therefore I cannot consent to do without it.

Sister E. A. Lake, Mechanicsville, Iowa, writes:

Enclosed you will find one dollar for the Crisis. If it was not such hard times here in the West, I would send a year's subscription, for the Crisis I must have. I value it more than my meat and drink. May God sustain you, dear brother, in all your trials and temptations, and at last bring you to rest in his peaceable kingdom.

Sister C. Holt, Lowell, Mass., writes—

Hard times make it necessary for me to say to you that I cannot pay for the Crisis any longer. I therefore wish it stopped, as the time is nearly expired for which I subscribed for it. I am thrown out of employment by the stopping of the factories here, but shall take it again as soon as circumstances will permit. It is truly to me a very great loss, for I do prize it very highly as a valuable, soul-cheering paper; but know it cannot live without some means to support it. Although a stranger to you, my brother, yet I pray that the blessing of God may indeed rest upon you, and encourage and strengthen you in your great and noble work.

Amasa Lucas, Canton Mills, Me., writes:

We are under the necessity of stopping our paper on account of the hard times, but we regret it very much. We shall miss its weekly visits.

Sister C. Taber, Rochester, Mass., writes:

I enclose one dollar for the Crisis. I wish it to be continued as long as time lasts, for I should scarcely know what to do without it, as I seldom have a chance to hear an Advent sermon preached. I have heard Bro. Brewer several times, and feel very grateful to him for what little light I have received concerning the truth.

For the Crisis.

The Time.

BRO. WENDELL:—As Bro. Berick tells us in the last number of the Crisis that, notwithstanding all the disappointments, "the wise shall understand" the time, I wish to make a statement, and propose one or two questions for him or Bro. Grant, and all others interested in the subject, which seem to me exceedingly interesting and important. We are told in Dan. 9th chapter, in connection with the seventy weeks,—"Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the prince shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: the street shall be built again, and the wall even in troubles times. And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off," etc. We were led to believe, and, as I think, with the best of reason, that this restoring and building Jerusalem was done under Nehemiah, who, we are told, went up and commenced it in the 20th year of Artaxerxes. But the passing of the time, as we reckoned it, has left us in doubt and comparative darkness in respect to the matter. But I find that Josephus tells us, in his XI. B., 5th chap. 7th sec. (see also the 8th) that it was in the 25th year of Xerxes' reign, when Nehemiah went up to Jerusalem for the purpose stated, and that the work was finished in the 9th month of the 28th year. Now if Elder Miller's reckoning from Ezra's time in the 7th year was correct, to have brought the end in 1843–4, eighteen years added, viz., from the 7th to the 25th, would bring it in 1861–2. And now I wish to ask Bro. B., and all others who have facilities, and are acquainted with history and chronology, what reason there is, since the passing of time seems to unsettle the account for the 20th year, why we may not conclude that Josephus is correct, and that therefore we have THE TIME, and that the Lord is at the door. Come, brethren, trim your lamps, and let the household have the light—the "meat in due season."

Yours in hope, Z. WHITNEY.

Bridgeport, Sept. 1.

For the Crisis.

Michigan Correspondence.

BRO. WENDELL:—Long have I been contemplating to write a few lines for the Crisis, but, like one of old, have been waiting for a more convenient season. By the grace of God I will procrastinate no longer, but will try and tell some of the Lord's doings for us here. About the first of January last, Bro. and Sr. Mansfield came here and commenced a series of meetings, the result of which has been most gratifying. These meetings were continued about two weeks; the community seemed to be deeply interested, and the impressions were so good that in the spring they returned, and five willing converts followed Jesus in baptism, and subsequently five more have been buried with Christ. A church has been raised up here of twenty-two members, and we hope living ones who delight in the truth.

As usual, we have had to contend against the influence of the servant who says, "My Lord delayeth his coming"; and we have had to endure many things coming from the Orthodox churches, that must meet them in the day of judgment. Their houses have been too good for us to occupy in praising Him who is our Life-giver, but none too good for money-changers, etc. So, in Bro. and Sr. Mansfield's last visit here, we had to go into a grove. We have occupied the Universalist House, but that now is not at our command. We shall try and build a house here which shall be dedicated to the worship of God and the benefit of a fallen race. We are poor, but we will try and go forth in the strength of Israel's God, and I trust we shall be able to do valiant things. God's people have always been the poor of earth, but I thank his name that they are heirs of eternal life, and when they come in possession, they will be no longer poor. Praise God for our hope.

If any of our preaching brethren should be travelling this way, and are willing to call, they can find a welcome, and we trust will make an acquaintance that may result in good. If there should be any such, they may call on the subscriber, where they will find a home, such as it is.

A. V. BABCOCK.

Jonesville, Hillsdale Co., Mich.

Correspondence.

From Sister C. Barnes.

BRO. WENDELL:—While I believe in a soon coming Saviour, which I hope and trust to do until he come, (unless I die before he come; if I do, will die believing,) I want to know all the signs appertaining to his coming, while these perilous times hasten onward to that great and glorious day. I want to know what the Watchmen say of the night. For surely, darkness covers the earth, darkness and sorrow. I feel deep sorrow at the state the world is in, all astir, all in great commotion. Did I not know we are living on the verge of time, oh, I do not know but my heart would fail me quite. Not because of myself do I suffer, but for others, who do not know what things are coming on the earth. I pray God to keep his people from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth. Blest promise! "Behold I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. May he help us to "hold fast that which we have until he come." Pray for us.

We have not, Bro. Wendell, forgotten your short visit to us, and are glad we have seen your face. If the Editor of our paper were an entire stranger to us, we think we should feel less interest to know what he may have to tell us each week than now; although we can almost feel ourselves acquainted with people we have never seen, by reading what they have written. We would like to hear your voice again, teaching us out of God's word. Hope the Lord will be pleased to send some one after his own heart to tell the people here their whereabouts in this world's history. You are the last preacher (of like faith) that has preached here.

Brookfield, Ct., Oct. 8, 1861.

From Bro. Silas P. Whitney.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—Being a pilgrim and a stranger on the earth, bound for a city which is out of sight, whose builder and maker is God, I thought it well to write unto you. I make no pretensions to wisdom, neither any to greatness, but am one of God's little ones, fighting the good fight of faith, and striving to lay hold on eternal life, if by any means I may attain unto the resurrection of the dead. I love the cause of God and his blessed truth, and although I stand alone in this place, a contender for the faith which was once delivered to the saints, I trust in God that I shall be able to come off more than conqueror through Him that has loved me and given himself to redeem me. Let us thank God and take courage, my dear brethren; although alone, we are not alone, for says Jesus, "I am with you always, even unto the end." Praise God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ for the blessed hope of the gospel. I am willing to count all things as loss for the blessedness of the knowledge of the Son of God. Yea, I feel that to know him, is life eternal. Pray for me, brethren, that my faith fail not, that no root of bitterness spring up and I be defiled thereby, for I wish to be kept by the power of God unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. And that the love of God, the fellowship and communion of the Holy Ghost, may be with all the Israel of God, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

Cohoes, Albany Co., N. Y., Oct. 9.

Obituary Notices.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Merinell, Me., of diphtheria, FREDERICK W., a twin son of Thomas C. and Louisa Frost, aged six years and seven months.

Thus the enemy Death has made for the first time an inroad in this family, and little Freddie has been torn from their embrace; yet the parents believe that Jesus died and rose again; that he has got the keys of hell and of death; and that he will unlock that house that now holds their child. Then he will say, "O death where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory!" To the parents, brothers and sisters I would say, prepare to meet little Freddie on the other shore, where sickness and death are felt and feared no more. The mourning friends were comforted from these words—"For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall see God."

Also, in Amherst, Me., of diphtheria, GEORGE H. and CHARLES., sons of Lemuel and Betsey Keliba George, fell victims to the enemy death—George Sept. 22d, 1861, and Charley the next day, Sept. 23d. George was in his sixth year and little Charley was eighteen months and three days old.

These little sleepers were laid side by side in one coffin. Thus the cruel monster has entered this little family and torn from their embrace three lovely children, that sleep beneath the cold sod. But while the hearts of the parents feel sad and their dwelling looks gloomy, they believe that in a little time Charley, George and Sarah will come forth, clothed with immortality. I would say a few kind words to the bereaved friends. Have faith in God and his word, and look away from this dark, cold and sin-cursed earth to the one that is to come. Then you can say with the poet—

"God was their Father, Christ their Saviour;
Their hopes were bright, they are now at rest,
And though they died, they'll live forever,
And with the ransomed host be blest.

Cheer up, dear christian pilgrims,
For thy children are not lost;
Jesus died and rose triumphant—
Their lives his precious blood did cost.

When he ascended to his Father,
The keys of death and hell he took;
When he comes back he'll wake the sleepers,
Thus 'tis written in his book."

The mourning friends were comforted from these words by the writer—"Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

L. WETHERBEE.

Died, at Cambria, Hillsdale Co., Mich., Sept. 15th, Bro. SAMUEL ORR, for a long time a member of the Reading Church.

He was engaged some ten days previous in breaking a colt, in which operation the colt kicked him in the bowels, and seemed but little hurt at first, but began to grow worse for some seven or eight days, when he became composed and rational, and conversed of the future; and deliberately arranged the disposal of his large farm, and realised the benefit of his hope in the resurrection through Jesus. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

[illegible]

Died, in Sandwich, N. H., Sept. 12th, 1861, FREDDIE N., youngest child of Stephen and Olive Dinsmore, aged two years, ten months and twenty-four days.

In this death, parents have been called suddenly to mourn the loss of a loved one; but while death has taken him away, they expect the Life Giver will bring him back again from the land of the enemy, and in the restitution share with Rachel's children and all the little ones in the kingdom of God; but now with aching hearts they can say—

"Farewell to thee, Freddie—
Thou hast gone from us now,
And the cold stamp of death
Has been placed on thy brow."

And can also say—

"A rose has fallen, and withered lies
Beneath the cold, cold ground;
But it will rise and bloom again
When the last trump shall sound."

May supporting grace and saving power be given to the afflicted parents, so that they may be enabled to share the kingdom with the dear one.

J. G. SMITH.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

The foreign news of the past week will be regarded with some interest by our readers. The cotton question continued still the all-absorbing question with the English press and people. Mr. Laing, Financial Secretary of India, had addressed the Manchester Cotton Association and Chamber of Commerce on the affairs of that country in general, and on its cotton-producing capabilities in particular. In his opinion an advance of capital to the cotton-growers of Hindostan is indispensable to their successful cultivation of that commodity. Meantime "coming events cast their shadows before." All the talk about the supplies to be derived from India, Australia, Africa and the Isles of the Sea cannot allay the apprehensions of the spinners. Several mills in the neighborhood of Rochdale, Blackburn, etc. are already working short time, and one very large establishment, which employed near 800 hands, has closed altogether, the unfortunate operatives being warned to seek work elsewhere, as there was no probability of the mills resuming business under existing circumstances. Yet strange to say, in despite of these ominous occurrences in England, some half-dozen cargoes of cotton have been recently shipped from Liverpool for America! The British merchants and miners connected with Mexico had presented an address to Earl Russell, enumerating their wrongs, and entreating the intervention of the British Government on their behalf. From an editorial in the Globe, Lord Palmerston's organ, and from our latest Cuban intelligence, touching intervention in Mexico, we conclude that this appeal of the Londoners will not be in vain. The Western Powers and Spain have already in fact determined to take the law into their own hands as regards Mexico.

The offer of a commission in the United States army to Garibaldi, had given rise to an immense amount of foolish writing on the part of the European press and Americans in Europe. Because our government has offered the Italian hero a command in our army, the Thunderer will forsooth have it that the President intends to supersede Gen. Scott, in order to make room for the Recluse of Caprera at the head of our forces! The French Government has issued another declaration expressive of its determination to respect the blockade, and observe an honest neutrality. This declaration is in the shape of a letter from M. Rouher, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, to the merchants and ship-owners of France. The Kings of Denmark and Holland were to visit Napoleon at Compeigne at the same time as the King of Prussia. The Turkish war against the Montenegrins was becoming important. Omar Pasha was concentrating the Ottoman forces at Freoigne, in order to an attack on the insurgents, while the Vlarmar of Montenegro had called out all the contingents of his provinces, and was apparently resolved to await the onset of his antagonist. The fanatic who attempted the assassination of the Queen of Greece was a young student, named Davios. He has been arrested.

DOMESTIC.

Impending Events at Washington.

It is said that history never repeats itself, and we hope not, on one locality at least. If Bull Run is to become the scene of another engagement, as now seems probable, we believe it will be as different in result as in many of the conditions of the struggle. It is true, the rebel force is located about the same as before, and if any material changes are made in their defensive works, they are probably rather in the nature of additions than of alterations. On our side, however, the very ground is changed. Now, wherever our columns have advanced, intrenchments have been thrown up, till the whole semi-circular area of our occupation in front of Washington is notched with concentric lines of defenses. This is very different from the route over which McDowell hurried his undisciplined army, taking up four days in the march, and thus notifying the enemy of all his movements—although the return, for want of any good "holding ground," as the sailors would say, was accomplished at a terrific rate of speed. But now our army moves like a ratchet on its wheel, slowly and by starts; but every step is so much gained, and there is no going backward, short of crushing the whole machinery.

The process of renewing the fight will also be with different tactical objects, and under different conditions. We shall aim to turn the enemy's flank as before, but McDowell's plan was necessarily confined to the enemy's left, because he was desirous of cutting off Johnston's approach from Winchester. But now the enemy's left, under Smith, is probably as much a part of the main force as Banks' division is of ours. But if Banks should cross over the river with a view to sunder the enemy's line, that would be only one movement, and might be combined with a flanking advance on the enemy's right from the neighborhood of Alexandria. We know that Gen. Franklin is throwing up intrenchments and cutting down trees in that vicinity, at a rate which implies future transactions of no little importance.

Thus it will be seen that the Bull Run battle of July 21st cannot be repeated. The enemy may sit in the same place, waiting for attack, but the attack will be so different as to change the defense and the result. Gen. McClellan's assailing movements are not restricted to one direction, but are left open to choice and the dictates of the emergency. His plan of attack will not be divulged in advance, and his situation is such that his preliminary movements will not foreshadow his designs. The blow will go before the word. His system of intrenchments is so vast and complete that his reserves will be available, and a panic will be out of the question. In the worst event, he would merely fall back and maintain the ground now occupied. But he will not do that. His army is at least numerically equal to the foe, it is better organganized, and it is far better provided with heavy artillery and every species of equipment. It is the best volunteer army that the modern world has seen, and it is finely officered. It goes in to win. The spirit of the enemy is not what it was. They have discovered that the Northern men will fight. They have had to give up the idea of aggressive action. They are tortured with the apprehension of assaults in their rear and on the exposed flanks of their Southern Confederacy; and we predict that before or by the time the second battle of Bull run occurs, this apprehension will prove a terrible reality.—Boston Journal of Saturday.

A FRENCH MILITARY IMPROVEMENT.—The Paris correspondent of the London Morning Herald makes the following rather wonderful statements:

"The military preparations of the French Government are going on with great activity. Experiments are just now going on at Vincennes with a view to use common rifled howitzers as mortars, by fixing them as a very sharp angle, which enabled small shells to be thrown some 6000 metres. But these experiments excite but little attention in comparison with a new invention which has been tried with perfect success, and by which a foot soldier, in heavy marching order, is enabled to walk on the water without sinking. It consists of a pair of indiarubber boots and trousers, all of one piece, which are filled with air a little below the waist, and heavily weighted at the feet. With these trousers on, a detachment has frequently crossed the lake of Vincennes, where the water is about fifteen feet deep, firing their muskets, and loading as they went. The men sink about two feet, the water barely reaching the top of their thighs, and appear not to have any difficulty in keeping their balance, and moving alone. The experiment is to be repeated in the presence of the Emperor, and there is not the slightest doubt of its being adopted for the army. The consequence of the adoption of this system need hardly be pointed out. Fancy on a calm day at sea how easy it would be to land three or four thousand men, who would forthwith walk ashore and secure a landing for the rest of the force. For the crossing of rivers the advantage of this system is still more obvious, and the delays caused by the necessity for constructing bridges or discovering fords would be done away with. I may add, as it is not improbable that a plan for making soldiers amphibious may meet with some incredulity, that I can vouch for the accuracy of the particulars given above, which have reached me from a military friend who himself witnessed what what I have attempted to describe. I can readily believe, however, that you will require ample corroboration."

THE FINANCES OF THE WAR.—The Hon. James Dixon, in an eloquent and patriotic speech, delivered at the Union meeting in Hartford, dwelt with marked force upon the ability of the country to sustain the expenses of the war, and upon the security which the national loan offered as an investment. On this point he said:

"Look at England. You say our expenpenses are large; and so they are. Some estimate them at one million of dollars a day. But what were the expenses of England during her war with Napoleon? From 1803 to 1816, with less than eighteen millions of inhabitants, her expenses were one million three hundred thousand dollars a day for a period of thirteen years. For one hundred days previous to the battle of Waterloo, her expenses were five millions of dollars a day. Of this vast sum a large proportion was expended on the continent of Europe—while our entire expenditure is at home. If for thirteen years England could expend one million three hundred thousand dollars a day abroad, cannot we do it for one or two years, if necessary—every dollar meanwhile remaining at home. Interest, therefore, no less than patriotism, require us to subscribe for the loan."

POLAR EXPEDITIONS.—It may not be generally known that a Swedish expedition to Spitzbergen sailed during the month of June last, with the intention of endeavoring to reach the Pole by following Parry's track, to the westward of Greenland. If unsuccessful, it was their purpose to return and journey the following season. Mr. Hall sailed from New London on board of a whaler eighteen months ago, with the avowed intention of making search for additional relics, or for some surviving members of Franklin's expedition. His undertaking will possess novel interest, particularly from the fact that Mr. Hall will be unaccompanied by any European, as he intends to accustom himself to the Esquimaux mode of life, and employ them and journey with them only. Mr. Hall undertook this journey solely under a religious conviction of duty, and sacrificed everything to accomplish this great desire of his life.—New York Times.

ONE OF THE CITIES OF JAPAN.—Chinese papers of July 13th contain an interesting account of an expedition through a portion of Japan by the British minister and Netherlands consul general. The most interesting feature of the journey was their visit to the town of Osaka and its port of Heogo. Osaka is the London and Paris of Japan, the seat of trade and luxury, an enormous town intersected throughout with large canals, lined with magnificent warehouses, and spanned with innumerable bridges. Business and pleasure thrive there and flourish, and everything seems to be progressing.

☞ A North Carolina correspondent of the Tribune says that in Beaufort county, in a place called Long Acre, the Union men, to the number of 300, have refused to recognize the Southern Confederacy in any manner whatever, and that they were all armed and able to protect themselves.

☞ The Tribune's dispatch says that the mother of Jackson, who murdered Ellsworth, has been arrested for keeping a rendezvous for the rebel spies near Prospect Hill.

Married.

In Whitefield, Oct. 6th, by Eld. S. K. Partridge, JOSHUA T. HEMENWAY to SARAH M. CUNNINGHAM, both of Jefferson, Me.

Notices, &c.

Notice.

At the Camp Meeting, held at Dover, N. Y., Sept. 14th, it was proposed that a Conference be organized, composing the eastern part of New York and the western part of Mass. and Conn; and Elders Geo. L. Teeple and B St. John were appointed a committee to call a meeting for such purpose. Therefore we invite all interested in such a meeting to meet in Conference at Pawling, N. Y., Thursday, Nov. 14th, 1861, and hold over the following Sunday. Come, brethren, be on hand Thursday, filled with the Spirit of God. The cause of God demands our attention in this matter.

GEO. L. TEEPLE, B. ST. JOHN, } Committee.

Conference.

The Lord willing, there will be a Conference at North Hermon, commencing Friday, Oct. 25th, at one o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. Bro. Billings, Brown and Jones are expected. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of the Lord, to labor for the salvation of sinners, the return of the wanderer, and a consecration of the church, that when the Bridegroom comes, we may meet him with gladness. In behalf of the brethren, D. E. IRELAND.

Notice.

There will be a meeting at Bro. Nelson Hart's house in West Avon, Lovely Street, one mile north of Unionville Depot, to commence Wednesday, Oct. 23d, and hold over Sunday. We extend a hearty and welcome invitation to all the brethren and sisters to come and worship God with us. We expect the Lord will send his own preachers to be with us to preach the word. Ample provision is made for man and beast.

NELSON HART.

Notice.

A protracted meeting will be held at Lincolnville, Me., at Young Town, Thursday evening, Nov. 7th, and continue over the Sabbath. Preachers who have the word we hope will attend. Strangers up the river will inquire for George L. McKenney, Edmon Blood and Ephraim Calderwood. Those from the West inquire for Moses Young, or John Porter. For the brethren,

N. F. NASON.

Notice.

The Second Advent Church, formerly meeting in the Hall at the corner of Grand and Elizabeth Streets, New York, will for the future meet for worship at the Botanic Hall, East Broadway, near the corner of Market Street. Preachers visiting New York can call on Elder Wm. Roworth, 354 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Hastings' Publications.

All Books and Tracts of H. L. Hastings are kept on hand and for sale at this office. A List, with prices, will be given soon.

Notice.

GEO. STORRS, of New York, owing to the extreme pressure of present circumstances, offers the herein after named works at fifty per cent. discount to any person, or persons, sending him TEN DOLLARS or upwards, if applied for soon. The works are—

Six Sermons, revised and enlarged edition: bound, 50 cts.; in paper covers, 30 cts.

The Watch Tower: or, Man in Death, in paper covers. . . . . 20 cents.

Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again—in paper covers. . . . . 20 cts.

Life only in Christ: a bound volume, including each of the above works, and a discourse on the Atonement $1.00

The Discussion with Prof. Mattison—in paper covers. . . . . 30 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition—bound, 75 cts.; paper covers, 40 cents.

Man's Destiny: A Review of Prof. Post—in paper covers. . . . . 30 cts.

Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney: Part II.—in paper covers . . . . 30 cts.

Our Israelitish Origin—paper covers. . . . . 50 cts.

Man's Nature and Destiny: A Sermon, by Geo. Storrs—paper covers . . . . 5 cts.

Bible Examiner for 1860, bound. $1.50

Of this last work there are but some thirty copies left.

All remittances and orders, sent by mail, must be addressed—GEO. STORRS, Box 4658, New York. Sent by private hands, they may be left with Geo. W. Young, (up stairs) 35 Ann Street, (corner of Nassau.)

ESPECIAL BOOK NOTICE.

English Bibles.

We have just received a well assorted selection of genuine English Bibles, the prices of which we affix below. Having paid cash for them, we get them at the lowest prices, and therefore can afford to sell them for cash at the lowest retail rates. There is a heavy duty levied upon all printed matter coming from the English side of the line; but, all things taken into account, we offer them lower than sold elsewhere, as follows:—

Pearl, (reference betwixt the verses) roan binding, $1.25; postage 14 cts.
Pearl, do. do. colored calf, $1.50; postage 15 cts.
Pearl, do. do. morocco, $1.62; postage 15 cts.
Nonpareil, do. do. roan, $1.50; postage 21 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.25; postage 21 cts.
Minion, do. do. roan, $1.75; postage 24 cts.
Do. do. do. morocco, $2.50; postage 26 cts.

Please send in your orders, which shall be promptly attended to.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollar's worth; for twelve dollars, four dollar's worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

R. WENDELL, per order of Publishing Committee.

Post Office Addresses.

The P. O. address of H. G. McCulloch is Amboy, Lee Co., Ill.

Geo. L. Teeple's P. O. address is Morris, Litchfield, Co., Conn.

Eld. John Howell's P. O. address is Harvard, McHenry Co., Illinois.

D. T. Taylor's P. O. address is Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Eld. Joseph T. Curry's P. O. address is Springfield, Mass.

O. R. Fassett's P. O. address is Yarmouth, Me.

W. Sheldon's P. O. address is now changed from Springville, Wis., to Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. Samuel Heath will preach in the Advent Chapel, Hudson Street, Sabbath Oct. 20th, and also Oct. 27th.

London Ridge. . . . . Sunday, Oct. 27th
West Alton Friday, Nov. 8th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. and continue over the Sabbath.

Will brethren remember this meeting, and all that can, take hold and labor, that we may see the work of the Lord again revived in West Alton "while it is called to-day"? T. M. PREBLE.

Waterbury, Vt. . . . . Sabbath, Oct. 20th
Cabot, Vt. . . . . Evenings of Oct. 22d and 23d Champlain, N. Y. . . . . Oct. 25th and 26th and over the Sabbath. J. V. HIMES.

Bangor. . . . . Oct. 24th and continue over the following Sabbath.

Bro. O. R. Fassett can take steamer "Daniel Webster" at Portland, Me., Wednesday evening, and arrive at Bangor Thursday morning.

Ellenwood's Corner, Me. . . . . Oct. 28th
North Searsport, Me. . . . . Oct. 29th and 30th
Lincolnville Centre, or Young Town, as brethren think best . . . . Oct. 31st and continue over the Sabbath.
Rockport, Me. . . . . Nov. 4th and continue Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, where Dr. H. B. Eaton may appoint.
South Hope, Me. . . . . Nov. 7th
and continue over the Sabbath.

If the above named appointments interfere with any other, or are not satisfactory, will the brethren please inform me? THOMAS SMITH.

Bro. Stephen Munn will preach in Bristol Oct. 20th
H. L. BRADLEY.

Winsted, Ct. . . . . Oct. 28th
Pleasant Valley . . . . Oct. 29th
Wrightville . . . . Oct. 30th
Litchfield Station. . . . . Oct. 31st
Camps Mills . . . . Nov. 1st
Plymouth Hollow . . . . Nov. 3d
Cheshire Street . . . . Nov. 7th
Bristol. . . . . Nov. 10th
Roxbury . . . . Nov. 11th
where Bro. L. R. Teeple may appoint.
WM. A. FENN.

Fremont. . . . . Nov. 21st and 22d
where Bro. Elial Benson may appoint.
North Abington . . . . Nov. 23d and 24th where Bro. Joseph Dammon may appoint.
Scituate. . . . . Nov. h
where Bro. Cottle may appoint.
WM. M. INGHAM.

Concord, N. H. . . . . Oct. 27th.
Northfield, Mass . . . . Oct. 30th and 31st
Griswoldville. . . . . Nov. 3d
Savoy . . . . Nov. 5th and 6th
Plainfield Pond . . . . Nov. 7th
Goshen . . . . Sunday, Nov. 10th
C. GOODRICH.

Plymouth Hollow, Ct. . . . . Oct. 20th
Pine Swamp . . . . Oct. 25th, 26th and 27th
Commence a meeting at Wrightville, Conn., Nov. 1st and hold over the following Sunday.
Bakerville, at Bro. Harris'. . . . . Nov. 8th
Sandisfield, Mass. . . . . Nov. 10th
Be at the Conference at Pawlings, N. Y., Nov. 14th to 17th.
Pine Tree School House, North Salem, N. Y., Sunday, Nov. 24th. GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Wrightville, Ct. . . . . Oct. 20th
Plymouth Hollow, Ct. . . . . Oct. 27th
Prospect, Ct. . . . . Nov 3d.
Pine Swamp, Ct. . . . . Nov. 10th
South Dover, N. Y., at Bro. Olivit's, or where he may appoint. . . . . Nov. 12th and 13th.
T. S. CANFIELD.

Holderness, (Tabernacle. . . . . Oct. 20th.
Moultonborough Centre. . . . . Nov. 3d.
Albany, (Bell School House) . . . . Nov. 27th
T. W. PIPER.

Clinton, Mass . . . . Sunday, Oct. 20th
GEO. A. STREETER.

Belmont (where the brethren may appoint) . . . Oct. 20th.
Camden . . . . Oct. 21st.
Hope. . . . . Oct. 22d.
Will some Bro. from Hope meet me at Belmont or Camden? L. WETHERBEE.

Clinton. . . . . Sunday, Oct. 20th.
Erving. . . . . Wednesday evening, Oct. 23d
and stay as long as duty may require.
S. W. BISHOP.

Wrightville. . . . . Oct. 20th.
Plymouth Hollow. . . . . Oct. 27th.
South Farms. . . . . Nov. 3d.
J. K. BELLOWS.

Portland, Me. . . . . Sunday, Oct. 20th
L. BOUTELL.

Portsmouth, N. H. . . . . Sunday, Oct. 20th.
J. COUCH.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Zenas Whitney: Your $5 was received. $1 was applied to your subscription; $1 we will use in sending the Crisis 6 months to two poor persons in Albany—one an aged widowed sister and the other a colored maiden sister; $1.50 we will hand to Bro. Hastings, directing him to send you a copy of "Reasons for My Hope" and "Forever with the Lord," and to keep the balance for the "Tract distribution"; and the remaining $1.50 we will give to "one of the most worthy and needy ministers of Christ's gospel to help him forward in his work where (we) think it will do the most good," as soon as we are satisfied who that "one" ought to be. Press of business alone has prevented earlier attention to this matter; please excuse delay.

Cash Receipts.

Jas. Lord 321, 48 cts; R Taylor 316, $1.16; A W Taylor 317, 84 cts; Alfred Hubbard 312, $3.00; Ed. Wolcott for Portsmouth Bro. $15.00.

W C Hall 315, Fred. Chalenor for poor, Wm. Nutting 327, D H Fink 325, Stephen Fink 327, Mrs. Hoyt 338, Miss Eaty 338,—50 cts. each.

Mrs. K V Temple 316, B Perham 330, Judith Cooper 335, S D Daniels 332, Ezer. Barnes 338, J T Cornell 340, J C Buck 338, Wm. Colbath Jr., 340, Lewis Mills 338, A. H. Liswell 331, C K Bigelow 312, B E Wetherbee 353, B Manning 341, H Melon 260, E R Southwick 348, John Brown, Jr., 341, Ol. Raymond 331, David Norton 338, Wm. Kay 338, S P Whitney 338, Nelson Hart 340, Wm. Colbath 340,—$1.00 each.

Nath. Lewis 356, Fred. Chalenor 373, D Thayer 340, H T Miller 400, H O Hutson 336, A R Brooks 318, T P Perkins 332, Lyman Welch 338, Jas. Myers 335, Ez. Jewett 318,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

Jas. Lord 52 cts, J H Harding 84 cts, D H Fink $1.00, H H Arnold 67 cts, R Taylor 12 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to prepay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 1 cent. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price, single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 3 cents. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 3 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 80 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] By J. Blain. Price [illegible] 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me. J. S. [illegible], No. 3 [illegible] street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I. [illegible]

[illegible] $1.00 per hundred. [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Lines on the Death of a Sister.

The loved one sleeps in silent gloom,
She's left us in life's earliest bloom;
The lovely flowers of summer wave
In rich profusion o'er her grave.

She's left this vale of tears and woes,
Of transient friends, oppressive foes,
To join the number of the dead
Who sleep triumphant in their Head.

But soon she'll reach the realm of rest,
And roam the plains of the pure and blest,
And strike the harp and swell the song,
With all the glorious blood-washed throng.

When Spring comes forth with its flowers fair,
Its broad, green plains and balmy air,
I feel that her form was, like them, sweet—
I linger, admire, and disconsolate weep.

But I'll dry my tears, for the trump will sound
And bring the loved from out the ground;
Then she'll come forth to a glorious birth,
And stand on the new and sparkling earth.

M. R. PHETTEPLACE.

For the Crisis.

"Mine Opinion;" Yet "not mine;" but the Testimony of God.

It is the habit and fashion of this time to say, like one of Job's "miserable comforters," that "I will show mine opinion." However, my conclusion is, after much thought and examination as to this point, that no one ever did or can argue out divine truth. The attempt is always abortive. For illustration, take the first form of truth given by God to a fallen world, Gen. 3. It embraces ideas and words as "high above" Adam "as heaven is high above the earth." Isa. 55. There was naught in the whole range of creaturehood to suggest "redemption by blood"—much less by the priesthood altars and sacrifice of Christ as the means. Thus the Gospel age—the Gentile calling and the glory of the bride, the church—in association with Messiah's kingdom, was heaven high and aloof from all the faithful at the time of Jesus' birth and life. Neither John the Baptist, nor any of the disciples or apostles, ever dreamed of these things till after the day of Pentecost and Peter's vision of the great sheet, setting forth the call of God to the Gentiles by the gospel. Thus with Moses and the Messiah; their commission and their execution was divine!—divine in origin and character, and course—leaving no room for "poor and blind and miserable" mortality to come forward with a "mine opinion." These things premised, let me testify for God, and be his echo as to

"MICHAEL THE ARCHANGEL."

It is usual, in arguing out an answer to the question, Who is Michael? to make him our Lord and Saviour, Jesus the Messiah. But just note how one word of God annihilates all this argument—this much of "mine opinion" in matters pertaining to divine things.

I. "The Michael, THE Arch-angel" is the ruling angel; as the Arch-priest is the ruling or High Priest (Arch-Jereus.) Heb. 9: 7.

II. This Michael was associated with Gabriel in Dan. 10, and doubtless also in Dan. 8. He is joined with Gabriel, and they together are called by the Apostle Peter "the angels." 1 Pet. 1: 11–13. "Unto which (the) angels desire to look."

III. Thus we have a twofold and manifold testimony that Michael is an angel, or "the angel"—at least he is angelic in nature and office.

IV. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels. He took not on him the nature of angels, (he took not on angels' nature, or station, or office,) but the seed of Abraham—in all things made like to his brethren (men redeemed.) "He took part" of our nature—"flesh and blood." Thus he was "the Son of man," "born of woman, under the law." But having been "begotten" by the Most High, he was "the Son of God." God was truly "his Father," as Jesus was "begotten" by him. Heb. 2: 9–17; Luke 1 and 2.

Note. It would offend against all intelligence (save that of the confounded and doubled up and great apostacy) to assign the begetting of "Michael the Arch-angel" to the process and time of Jesus' conception and birth, or resurrection.

No part of the wondrous story of Jesus, in type, in his having been "begotten" of God and born of the Virgin Mary, can apply to "the Arch-angel." Was "Michael the Arch-angel," who appeared with Gabriel, Dan. 10, ages in advance of the first advent of Jesus, then "begotten," conceived, born, and after that said to be "growing in wisdom and stature, waxing strong in spirit!" Surely not, in any sense.

V. To crown all this testimony, God says, "when he bringeth again (second advent) his first begotten into the world, let all the angels worship him!" Here "Michael the Arch-angel," with all his host, seems to be included among "all the angels of God." This isolates him from the angels—all the angels.

"Angels praise the Lamb that's slain,
But we can add a higher strain;
Not only say he suffered thus!
But that he suffered all for us!!"

Therefore, I let the word of God stand as to "Michael the Arch-ANGEL," and also as to "Jesus the Son of man." Then redeemed humanity—the christian church—may occupy its special place as "the many sons brought to glory," or "THE BRIDE, the Lamb's wife," while "angels, principalities and powers are subject" to him.

If there are absurdities still on this plain subject, they lie in our minds and hearts, and perverted habits of "wresting the Scriptures," for all the nations have been drunken with the wine of the harlot's "golden cup." We ourselves all have it till we get quit of it by simple faith in God's word.

CHRIST A "PECULIAR PERSON."

To avoid the simple story of Christ in promise as "the seed of the woman—the seed of Abraham—the Son of David"—some resort to one shift and some to another; but note God's truth. The first man Adam was made in the image of God! That image having been lost by his death—his going back to dust—"the second man" restores this image. The saints are (to be) created anew in "the image of Him that created them." Thus the one only image of God is maintained.

Now why call Christ a "peculiar person?" Why isolate him from all to be "made like him?" I reply that I may err, but the only real reason that I can see is, to seem to be able to argue out some "mine opinion" on this mighty, overwhelming theme! But no—let us take the jug by the handle—get the right clue to man's first creation, and his re-creation in Christ, "after the image" of the Creator, and then all is plain. Then "the way is straight." Then "the end" appears "from the beginning," and all is harmony. But if "the Christ" was Michael, or some other angelic or super-angelic being from eternity, then all who shall be "conformed to the image of the Son, and bear the image of the heavenly," need a like or corresponding double nature! Then we have surely the primal element of transmigration of souls and "the whole dunghill of Roman decretals." "The image of God," lost in Adam by sin and death, is restored in Christ and his saints, to be "like him."

THE ANGEL to whom John bowed in adoration, Rev. 19 and 22, has been thought from some—"mine opinion"—to have been ——I need not specify what, not having room; but "the word of the Lord" reveals him an angel. This angel was a "fellow servant of the prophet, like Gabriel," or Michael. Dan. 8: 12–19; 10: 10, 21. He was also "a fellow servant of the apostles and saints of the gospel age." Luke 1 and 2; Acts 10; Rev. 1: 1; 17: 1–7; 19: 10; 22: 8–9. Here this angel is one of the seven angels—the one "who showed (the apostle) these things."

Is it not best to bow to God's testimony? Why add to and take from this, and make this angel a Swedenborgian, mystic, or imaginary disembodied saint—one of the old prophets, or Jesus in some strange way as "Michael the Arch-angel!" God's word commends itself by its simplicity, its propriety. "The angel" is angelic—not man, nor Messiah!

J. B. C.

For the Crisis.

"Secrets of God."

"The secret things belong unto the Lord our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law."—Deut. 29: 29.

The great school of Bible students seems to be divided into three classes. 1. Those who are not afraid to investigate all the revelation God has given of his purposes, and of his will concerning man, believing that "those things which are revealed belong to us and to our children forever," that we may know and perform the will of God. 2. Those who ignore a great portion of revealed truth, raising over it the cry of "Secrets of God," as if divine revelation were shrouded in a vail of impenetrable mystery, which, an attempt to rend, would be to presumptuously step on ground infinitely too holy for mortal tread; for which reason they content themselves to live in almost total ignorance of the great plan of salvation, and of God's will concerning themselves. 3. Those who imagine that God has revealed all the minutia of his purposes, so, that, by searching, they can find answers to all questions which may arise in their minds relative to the works of God; not considering that wisdom dictates that man should stop learning where inspiration stops preaching.

In revealing to man the grand and sublime events which should transpire in the course of this world's history, God has, in but very few instances, given a revelation in regard to the circumstances under which those events should be brought about. For instance, God caused the fact to be predicted that the Messiah should be born in the town of Bethlehem. But the peculiar circumstances connected with that event were kept secret. Hence no one could have described them previous to their development. The circumstances which controlled the event of God's calling his Son out of Egypt were not revealed, and hence were among the secret things which belong to God; and had men attempted to have guessed out those circumstances, they might have guessed, but would assuredly have guessed wrong. The same is also true in regard to the prophetic events yet to transpire. The pen of inspiration has portrayed, in outline, the events for which we are now looking, so that we may understand what those events in themselves are; but the peculiar circumstances which shall control and regulate the development of those events are not described on the prophetic charts; and hence are among "the secret things" which "belong unto the Lord our God." And when men undertake to reveal the circumstances under which those prophecies will be fulfilled, they utter predictions only to see them fail. They overstep the limits of revelation, and it may well be said of them, "They are prying into the secret purposes of God. The circumstances which they attempt to describe are to be revealed only by development. Better then, to wait, patiently, relying upon the Holy Spirit for instruction, and as events transpire He will teach us what feature of the prophetic mould they fill, when we may safely say, as did one of old, "This is that which was spoken by the prophet."

All the revelation which God has given to man, belongs to man. It was given him for his instruction and profit, that by it he might become wise unto salvation; but he has no right to undertake to become wise above what is written. In investigating revelation man should keep himself within the limits of revelation. In connection with this subject, I propose a few remarks respecting some of the many questions which have been asked from time to time concerning the works and purposes of God.

1. "Who was the angel that talked with John on the Isle of Patmos?" If the name of that angel is given, it may be ascertained who he was; otherwise all attempts to identify him will prove unavailing. If it is important that the church should know who that angel was, his name is given; for the Author of the book of Revelation has concealed nothing which is necessary for his church to know. But the fact that revelation does not inform us who that angel was, plainly declares that such knowledge is not necessary for us. Some suppose that angel was Gabriel. This may be true; but it is mere supposition—destitute of any proof whatever. The fact that the angel Gabriel appeared to Daniel, and afterwards to Zecharias, and to the virgin Mary, is no evidence that he appeared to John on the Isle of Patmos. Neither do the expressions, "And he sent and signified by his angel"; "I Jesus have sent mine angel," imply, as some suppose, that Christ had but one angel at his command, and that that angel was Gabriel. If so, the same form of expression, i. e., "And the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel," proves that God the Father has but one angel at His command. Should an individual, having several servants in his employ, send one of them to perform a certain work, it would be strictly proper for him to say, "I sent my servant to do thus and so." If, after Christ arose from the dead and ascended to heaven, the angels, all of them were made subject to him, he had more than one angel under him, either of whom he might have sent with his revelation to the apostle.

2. "Does a fellow servant imply anything more than a messenger—a mortal being?" etc. It is evident that Christ received his revelation after he ascended to heaven; hence it is evident that he sent it from heaven to John; in which case he must have employed, as his messenger, an immortal being, as mortal beings do not inhabit heaven.

3. "Does it not imply by keeping the sayings of this book, that this angel is one who is subject to the rule or government of the dispensation under which we live?" The angels are all subject to the government of God, and, as his government is confined to this dispensation, during its existence, John's informant is, of course, "subject to the government of the dispensation under which we live."

4. The question, "Who is Michael?" has often been asked during the past few years, and has as often been answered, "Michael is Christ." But this I apprehend to be an erroneous answer. Jude affirms Michael to be the archangel. But Christ is no where, in Scripture, called an angel. The name of God, the highest title in the universe, is applied to Christ; but to neither of the angels. The apostle Paul, in contrasting the rank of Christ with that of the angels, says:—"Being made so much better than the angels, as he has by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? . . . And again, when he bringeth in the first begotten (first born) into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him. . . . But to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool?"

"To which of the angels?" Evidently to neither of them were the things spoken to which the apostle here alludes, as prophetically spoken of Christ—"Michael the archangel" not excepted. Hence Michael is not Christ. Again, all the angels of God, Michael not excepted, are commanded to worship Christ. Therefore, Michael cannot be Christ. The angels are all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to the heirs of salvation; but none of this work is assigned to Christ. He is our great High Priest—has occupied his Father's throne since he ascended to heaven—has never left his seat since that time, and will never leave it till he comes in the clouds of heaven to judge the world; and hence, Michael cannot be Christ. Michael is the archangel. This is all we know of him, as to who he is.

R. ROBBINS.

☞ Flowers are the alphabet of angels, wherewith they write on hills and plains mysterious truths.

☞ To be preserved in health, is as great a mercy as to be raised up from sickness; yet men are seldom thankful for it.

For the Crisis.

The Lake of Fire.

"This is the second death, (namely) this lake of fire."—Syriac version.

The lake of fire being the second death, supposes that there must have been a first death. What was the first death? The second death is the last and final executive judgment upon the wicked, ungodly world at the last day. As this is the SECOND general JUDGMENT upon the world, and is called the second death, it is easy to see that the first death was the first executive judgment upon the world, viz., 2 Pet. 3: 5–7. "For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water: whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water PERISHED. But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."

The ungodly of the "world that then was" perished by water. The ungodly of this world who are living at the time will perish—"shall be punished with everlasting destruction" by fire. The first death then was by water—the second will be by fire—both final and everlasting. No intimation that the wicked dead will come to life, to die a second death The wicked at the flood PERISHED—that was the end of them. The wicked who live to the final judgment will PERISH. No everlasting misery—no dying twice. The second death is the lake of fire. Not that any body is to die twice. If that were true, then death, hell and the devil are to have two deaths, for they are to be "cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death."

Hartford, Aug. 14, 1861. W. S. O.

For the Crisis.

Be Sober.

1 Pet. 1: 13. Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end, for the grace that is to be brought unto you, at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

1 Pet. 5: 8. Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary, the devil, walketh about seeking whom he may devour.

Titus 2. 11: 12. The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men, teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world.

Be sober, with watchfulness. 1 Thess. 5: 6. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others, but let us watch and be sober, and watch unto prayer.

Classes particularly exhorted to sobriety.

1. Ministers of Christ must be sober. 1 Tim. 3: 23.

2. Likewise their wives must be sober, 11th verse.

3. Aged men. Titus 2: 2—"That the aged men be sober."

4. The young men are exhorted to be sober-minded, 6th verse.

5. The young women are called to this duty, 4th verse.

Finally, all the saints are admonished of the importance of strict attention to the characteristics of our great pattern—Christ; and also in view of our high and holy profession. 1 Thess. 5: 6–8

But let us who are of the day be sober. The great motive—the end of all things is at hand. The Judgment is rushing on us with the speed of lightning. If found in a state of mirth, levity, drunkenness, and surfeiting, we must be cast as a cursed thing out of the earth. O God, save us and all thy people from this sin, and from every evil work until that day. J. M.

New Glasgow, C. E.

For the Crisis.

Interesting Admission.

BRO. WENDELL:—It is encouraging to the lovers of truth, in this late hour of the world's history, to see it beginning to emerge out of the fog banks of superstition in which it has been immersed for well nigh two thousand years. But "the dayspring from on high hath visited us; to give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death; and to guide our feet in the way of peace."

The following extract from a letter written by the Rev. C. Stovel, (England,) and adopted by the annual session of the Baptist Union, and addressed to the pastors, officers, and members of the Baptist churches in the United States of America, will no doubt be interesting to the readers of the Crisis, as many of them have formerly been Baptists, as well as myself, and will be glad to see truth springing forth in that direction:—

"What may be the end of those events which are taking place at the present, or looming out of the future, appear connected with some vast result, we cannot see. Europe trembles before the possibilities of coming time; Asia is agonized with events which the wisest are unable to explain; Africa is not explored for nothing; and America cannot escape some further change. All these moving elements are subject to our Lord, and the lines of these diverse movements meet only in his predicted universal reign. Whether that prevalence of his reign be consummated through the operation of principles generated and sustained by his grace, or whether the result awaits his personal appearance, we pause not to discuss. Preparation for the event is everything. He girds his sword upon his thigh, because of truth, meekness and righteousness. His robe was dyed in blood because of zeal for those who had no deliverer but himself. His anointing is received from his Father, that he may heal the broken-hearted and set the captives free. His reign on earth, however it may differ from our limited conjectures, is realized in no sentimental imagination. It is a practical reality, substantial as the eternal throne. We even now listen to the Creation as it groaneth in travail under the dominion of vanity. His reign shall bring upon it the glorious liberty of the sons of God."

What stronger language could we use, who believe in the personal coming and reign of our Lord Jesus Christ upon this earth, who will change it from its present sinful, polluted state, into that glorious, sinless state that it was in before sinful man ever trod its soil? I answer, we could use none.

Though the writer at one time seems to be in doubt, yet he says:—"It is no sentimental imagination, but a practical reality, substantial as the eternal throne." Brethren, it is our imperative duty to encourage such sentiments as the above, and pray to Almighty God, that he would condescend to lift the veil of superstition that has hitherto beclouded the intellects of millions of the human race, and enable them to behold "the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ." E. EVANS.

Walsingham, C. W.

Selected for the Crisis.

Sighing for Redemption.

Lord of mercy! ever willing,
Ever willing as thou art
And hast been to hear the prayer
Of the humble, contrite heart—
O look down! look down upon us,
Groaning creatures made of clay;
Here we suffer, here we travail,
Longing for redemption's day.

Earth her soul-ensnaring pleasures
O'er our pilgrim's path hath spread;
While delusive folly's banner
Gaily flutters overhead.
God of our salvation, hearken,
Hear, O hear our fervent prayer;
For thy sacred name and glory,
Save us from the tempting snare.

Man with fables vain and logic
False as earth and hell can frame,
Laughs to scorn the sacred promise,
Christ shall come and come to reign.
On thy holy word relying,
Though no resting place we see,
Grant us grace and faith unfailing
Still to watch and wait for thee.

Pain and sorrow daily round us,
Close their galling fetters weave;
Many a sore and searching trial
Doth our mortal bosoms grieve;
Fear and doubt, with cloudy sadness,
Round about our paths extend,
And relentless death is snatching
Some beloved or kindred friend.

O, thou God of tender mercy,
Ever kind, compassionate,
Let not faith, through faltering, fail us,
May we still with patience wait.
What though every link be riven,
Earthly hope and earthly stay;
Christ our refuge, Christ our anchor,
Keep us till Redemption's Day.

Newburyport. H. D.

Selections.

Sketch of George Muller.

Rev. Dr. Sawtell has written a letter to the Editor of the Life of Trust, containing some information concerning that remarkable man, George Muller. Our readers will be interested in the following extracts:

MR. MULLER'S PERSONAL APPEARANCE.

He is tall, rather slender, stands six feet in his boots, and of a remarkably fine figure, with a grave German face, and dark brownish eyes that kindle into a pleasing benevolent expression in conversation. His dress is the very same in cut and color that he wore in the German University (his coat a long-tail frock,) all in black except the snow-white neck-tie, fastened with a common plain pin in front, the ends hid beneath a waiscoat buttoned up so high as to hide everything but the cravat; making his whole general appearance, whether in the pulpit or in the street, a perfect model of neatness and order. His hair is rather coarse, and black as jet.

HIS SCHOLARSHIP.

He is master of six languages—Latin, Greek, Hebrew, German, French, and English—and reads and understands the Dutch, and two or three Oriental languages, but does not profess to be master of them. His attainments in Biblical literature are the most thorough, and I may say the most extraordinary.

HIS LIBRARY.

It consists of a Hebrew Bible, three Greek Testaments, a Greek Concordance and Lexicon, and with some half dozen different versions of the Holy Scriptures, and copies of the best translations into those several languages of which he is master. These constitute his entire library.

HIS HABITS AND MANNER OF STUDY AND PREACHING.

He rises early, enters his closet, shuts the door, opens his Bible, offers a short prayer, especially to invoke the guidance of God's Spirit upon the reading and meditation of his holy word, then reads and meditates verse by verse, chapter by chapter, till his whole soul becomes impressed with God's presence and impregnated with God's teaching; then he bows himself, and like Sampson, holding the middle pillars he wrestles with God, till, like Israel, he prevails. His habit of reading the Scriptures is to go straight and regularly through them, both the Old and New Testaments at the same time: that is, to read in the Old one part of the day and in the New the other. He has strong objections to that skip and jump method that some practice in reading the Bible, or the habit of opening at random. When asked how often he had gone through the Bible in this way, his answer was, "I cannot tell, but probably more than a hundred times." His preaching is altogether expository, reading a whole chapter, or part of one, or parts of two chapters, according to the connection, and then drawing out of the passage such rich treasures, so many things new and old, that I felt it to be worth crossing the Atlantic to hear them. For three Sabbaths I sat under his teachings, and heard him twice each day. Though he invited me to preach for him, I declined, for the very reason that I could not afford to lose the precious opportunity of hearing him. The happy results of this method of preaching are seen in the number of men and women connected with his churches who have become mighty in the Scriptures, and are better qualified to expound them, and to guide inquiring souls to Christ, than many a young minister who has spent his three years in a theological seminary. Let no one imagine that this kind of preaching becomes dry and heavy. Never have I listened to more burning words and touching eloquence than occasionally bursts from this man of God, and especially when he turns to the young, and with the tenderness and pathos of a loving father, pleads with them "to seek now the Lord while he may found, and call upon him while he is near."

SELLING JEWELRY SENT IN FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE ORPHANS—IS IT SINFUL?

His answer to me was in substance the following: "If I believed it to be sinful, I would smash it all up, though it took ten thousand pounds per annum from the orphans' support. I have searched the Scriptures and made it a subject of prayer. I do not find a command in the Bible against it. I find enough to guide myself in its use; so with my dear wife and daughter. We think a meek, quiet and humble spirit the best of all ornaments, and the only ornament a christian needs. But if we lay down a rule and adopt it as a principle to regulate others, consistency would require us not to stop at mere jewelry; other rich and costly articles of dress, etc., must be discarded: and who is wise enough to draw the right line, unless God has spoken explicity on the subject? No; these things must be regulated from within. The conscience must be kept quickened, and the love of Christ must constrain one in the regulation of these things." Mr. Muller's consistent, prayerful, and godly life, connected with his wonderful study and knowledge of the Bible, gives weight to his opinion on matters of this kind.

GENERAL READING.

"I have no time," said he, "for that." From his assistants (to whom I am indebted for many facts of a personal nature, which Mr. Muller himself would never have disclosed,) I learned that the way he kept himself at all posted up, with regard to stirring events of the day, was by conversation at the table with his associates, teachers, matrons, etc., who were expected to have a little more time for general reading. His morning hours, after his closet duties are over, are spent in his family, opening his letters, packages, etc., marking with the pencil and separating them into such divisions or classes that his three clerks or assistants can understand their respective duties. He reaches the Orphan Houses between ten and eleven o'clock; there he remains till six or seven in the evening, attending to and overseeing a great variety of things. The amount of labor he performs is amazing, and the almost endless variety would render insane, one would think, most other men. Yet he is never ruffled, never looks anxious or out of temper—always calm and placid, and in a prayerful frame of mind, casting all his cares upon the Lord, who careth for him. I doubt whether I shall see his like again this side of heaven. If I am not a better man in future, possessing more of the Spirit of Christ, more faith, more of the spirit of prayer, and of holy living, for having spent three weeks at his feet, surely my case is a very sad one indeed.

What is in the Bed-room?

If two persons are to occupy a bed-room during a night, let them step upon weighing scales as they retire, and then again in the morning, and they will find their actual weight is at least a pound less in the morning. Frequently there will be a loss of two or more pounds, and the average loss throughout the year will be more than a pound. That is, during the night there is a loss of a pound of matter which has gone off from their bodies, partly from the lungs, and partly through the pores of the skin. This is diffused through the air in part, and in part absorbed by the bed-clothes. If a single ounce of wood or cotton be burned in a room, it will so completely saturate the air with smoke that no one can hardly breathe, though there can only be one ounce of foreign matter in the air. If an ounce of cotton be burned every half hour during the night, the air will be kept continually saturated with smoke unless there be an open door or window for it to escape. Now the sixteen ounces of smoke thus formed is far less poisonous than the sixteen ounces of exhalations from the lungs and bodies of the two persons who have lost a pound in weight during the eight hours of sleeping, for while the dry smoke is mainly taken into the lungs, the damp odors from the body are absorbed both into the lungs and into the pores of the whole body.

Need more be said to show the importance of having bed-rooms well ventilated, and of thoroughly airing the sheets, coverlids and mattresses, in the morning, before packing them up in the form of a neatly made bed?

"Playing in the Dirt."—Bathing.

"Oh let them play in the dirt, it's wholesome," we heard a mother say, when informed that her children were making mud pies by the road side. Play is wholesome, particularly in the open air, but filth is not; yet many persons have strangely imbibed the notion that unwashed, neglected children thrive best. They say, "look at the hardiness of the little street vagabonds that throng our cities, and compare their toughness with the pale faces and puny limbs of the mothers' darlings that are never permitted to enjoy themselves for fear of soiling their clothing." But they take no account of the thousands of "nobodys' children" that every year die of diseases contracted or aggravated by want of cleanliness. Those who survive, do so because of natural strength of constitution which carries them safely through danger. As stated above, out-door exposure is indispensable to high health, and it is want of this, not clean clothing, which injures the "mothers' darlings."

A coating of dust upon the skin interferes with its proper function. If this covering of the body be examined with a magnifier of high power, there will be discovered myriads of little orifices called pores which are outlets for a large part of the waste matter or dead particles of the body. If this poisonous matter be kept in the system, it will overload and derange other organs, and if it occur to any great extent, will cause active disease. A person varnished over completely, so as to stop all the pores, would die after a time.

Few things tend to the promotion of sound health more than frequent ablution of the whole person. If laborers would take a morning bath twice or three times a week, and thus keep the skin well cleansed, they would be amply repaid in the comfort and vigor which the process would impart.

Family Worship.

Why not have family prayers early, before your children retire, or become drowsy or sleepy? Never pack your little ones off to bed before reading God's word, singing his praise, and bowing the knee; never. Let your children, your servants, your boarders, all, see, feel, and know you honor God, and walk before him in newness of life. Call around the domestic altar your offspring, your domestics, every member of your household, morning and evening. Govern your own house in the fear of God, rule it, keep the holy fire burning. Children, by all means, should be taught early, to feel that family devotion is a solemn, important, indispensable thing, momentously so; and if possible, on no occasion should they be absent. Where family worship is conducted regularly, truly, orderly, solemnly, and spiritually; the happy, salutary effects are seen and felt in every department.

Even the soul's salvation is often dated from heaven's gate. But where family altars are broken down, or the duty of morning and evening devotion is performed irregularly, loosely, or formally—there you see looseness, disorder, family discords, confusion, and every evil work. Satan creeps in! "A little leaven leaveneth the whole heap."

Hold on, Boys.

Hold on to your tongue when you are just ready to swear, lie, or speak harshly, or to say an improper word.

Hold on to your hand when you are about to strike, pinch, scratch, steal, or do any improper act.

Hold on to your foot when you are on the point of kicking, or running away from study, or pursuing the path of error, shame, or crime.

Hold on to your temper when you are angry, excited or imposed upon, or others are about you.

Hold on to your heart when evil associates seek your company, and invite you to join in their games of mirth and revelry.

Hold on to your good name at all times, for it is more valuable to you than gold, high places, or fashionable attire.

"If all the sins which men have done,
In thought or will, in word or deed,
Since worlds were made or time begun,
Were laid on one poor sinner's head,
The stream of Jesus' precious blood
Could wash away the dreadful load."

Influence of Family Worship.

The daily, regular, and solemn reading of God's holy word, by a parent before his children, is one of the most powerful agencies of a christian life. We are prone to undervalue this cause. It it is a constant dropping, but it wears its mark into the rock. A family thus trained cannot be ignorant of the Word. The whole Scriptures come repeatedly before the mind. The most heedless child must observe and retain some portion of the sacred oracles: the forgetful must treasure up some passage of life. No one part of juvenile education is more important. Between families thus instructed, and those where the Bible is not read, the contrast is striking. To deny such a source of influence to the youthful mind is an injustice, at the thought of which a professor of christianity may well tremble.

CONFESSION.—Confession opens the flood-gates of mercy—increases our confidence in God, and confidence in us is increased in the minds of others. Confession is a blessing in every way. No matter how great our departures from God, our deviations from the path of duty—of strict rectitude,—if we humble ourselves—confess our sins, privately and publicly, with a whole heart, the flood of mercy is extended, the cleansing fountain is opened wider. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

☞ Anger is the most impotent passion that influences the mind of man; it effects nothing it undertakes, and hurts the man who is possessed by it more than the object against which it is directed.

☞ As there is nothing superior to a knowledge of the truth, so nothing is lower in the scale of intellect than to be attached to error and mistake it for truth.

☞ When a cunning man seems humble and submissive, he is often the most dangerous. Look out for the crouching tiger.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year [illegible]
For a single copy 6 months [illegible]
For a single copy 3 months [illegible]
Five copies to one address for 6 months [illegible]
Ten copies to one address for 6 months [illegible]
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months [illegible]
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months [illegible]

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for [illegible] cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have money, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send a little in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.
Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.
Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.
All persons desiring to receive the Crisis, or any of the Publications on sale at this office, should always state distinctly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and direct their communications to RUFUS WENDELL, BOSTON, MASS.
The postage on the Crisis [illegible]
☞ [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 317. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1861. VOL. XIV. NO. 6.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

RUFUS WENDELL, Editor.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truths; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

For the Crisis.

"Come, Saviour, take us Home."

BY GEORGE W. GREEN.

A lonely, weary pilgrim band,
Oppress'd my sorrows deep we roam;
And as we look to that blest land,
We pray, "Come, Saviour, take us home."
CHORUS.
Happy day, happy day,
When Christ the Lord again shall come,
To take his weary children home,
Forevermore in bliss to roam;
Happy day, happy day,
When Jesus takes his children home.

In this dark vale of sin and tears,
On every hand afflictions come;
But, marching on through doubts and fears,
We pray, "Come, Saviour, take us home."

As yet death reigns—for friends we mourn—
Affliction's waves around us foam;
And lonely, weary, sad and worn,
We pray, "Come, Saviour, take us home."

We long, dear Lord, for thy return—
Believe that thou wilt quickly come;
And, as our hearts for that day yearn,
We pray, "Come, Saviour, take us home."

Forever then shall we be free,
No more in sorrow shall we roam;
But dwell, dear Lord, for aye with thee,
When thou shalt come and take us home.

Memphis, Ind.

Lecture by Dr. Lillie.

1 THESS. 1: 8-10.—"For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak any thing. For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; And to wait for His Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."

The writer had said that the new converts at Thessalonica were become patterns of the Christian character to all their brethren in Macedonia and Achaia; and in confirmation of this statement he adds the words that have just been read.

"For from you sounded out"—or hath been sounded forth; not once for all, in the impulsive fervor of a first love, but by a steady and continuous proclamation not yet exhausted—"the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia," the regions already mentioned, "but also in every place," throughout the empire, or throughout Christendom, your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that," go where we will, "we" find ourselves anticipated, and on that subject "have no need to speak anything."

The slight irregularity, which you perhaps notice in the construction of this eighth verse, has been explained, or got rid of, in various ways; sometimes by a mere change in the punctuation, thus:—"From you hath been sounded forth the word of the Lord. Not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith toward God is spread abroad;" or thus; "From you hath been sounded forth the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place. Your faith toward God is spread abroad." But, on the whole, I prefer to take the sentence as it stands in our English Bible. The apostle was not apt to be troubled with a mere grammatical scrupulosity; and so, in the present instance, having begun with a phrase—"from you hath been sounded forth the word of the Lord"—that seemed to imply on the part of the Thessalonians more of evangelical influence, if not missionary activity, than could properly be asserted of them in reference to countries beyond their own Greek provinces, he may very well be supposed under this feeling to have exchanged it in the next clause for a weaker form of expression—"your faith is spread abroad," or literally, "hath gone forth." And then the whole might be paraphrased thus: "From you hath been sounded forth the word of the Lord, and not only is that true, as I have just intimated, in relation to Macedonia and Achaia, but everywhere, throughout all the household of faith, the fact and the circumstances and the thoroughness of your conversion are familiarly known."

Let us here observe, before going farther, the fine exemplification furnished in the case of Thessalonica, of what may be called the Divine policy in the first planting of the Christian Church. You must have noticed that the book of the Acts of the Apostles is in no sense a history, minute or general, either of the Apostles or of their official labor; but rather an account of the rapid occupation, in Christ's name and the gospel's, of the great centres of influence, whether religious or political, commercial or social, from Jerusalem to Rome. Now of those centres one of the most important, as we have already seen, was Thessalonica. No sooner, therefore, was a company of disciples gathered there under the hand of Paul, and taught by grace to adorn their profession by a holy, loving, patient life, than the news ran east and west along the Egnatian Way, and southward over the Ægean sea to the ends of the Mediterranean; calling forth, wherever it reached, the mutual congratulations, the devout thanksgivings, and joyful emulation, of all the scattered children of God. And not only so, but doubtless the words of Christ also received a striking fulfillment: "Ye are the salt of the earth. . . . Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Or, availing ourselves of the figure suggested by the text itself, we might say, that the peals of the gospel trumpet, ringing out so loud and clear at the head of the Thermaic Gulf, resounded thence far and wide into the realms of darkness.

It also well deserves mention, that this christian eminence of Thessalonica was maintained by her through many subsequent generations. Her "heroic age," we are told, "was the third century. It was the bulwark of Constantinople in the shock of the barbarians; and it held up the torch of the truth to the successive tribes who overspread the country between the Danube and the Ægean. . . . Thus, in the medieval chroniclers, it has deserved the name of the "Orthodox City."

No wonder, then, brethren, on the one hand, that our Apostle felt himself every where prompted to speak of this new miracle of the Divine truth and grace; or, on the other hand, that every where he found the fame of it to have already preceded him, so that he "needed not to speak anything."

"For," says he, "they themselves show of us"—declare concerning us—"what manner of entering in"—what sort of entrance—"we had unto you." It is, we find, on the tongues of all men, how great a door and effectual was opened unto us, and with what a zealous promptitude, and daring, and patience, and with what energies of the Holy Spirit, we were enabled to make good our entrance. And then they are equally well informed of all that followed; "how ye turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."

In these words we have a simple and very instructive description of primitive, apostolical Christianity. Let us carefully consider it.

The whole description, you perceive, may be said to consist of just two strokes. The Thessalonians turned to God from idols; and they waited for God's Son from heaven.

I. From time immemorial the great majority of the members of this church with their forefathers had been idolaters, "walking as other Gentiles walked, in the vanity of their mind, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that was in them, because of the blindness of their heart," "having no hope, and without God in the world." And all this while they were "joined to idols." Idols filled the land. Their own streets and houses were full of them—"idols of silver and gold, the work of men's hands"—dead gods, that were no God, and could not save—false gods, that "had mouths, but they spake not: eyes had they, but they saw not: they had ears, but they heard not: noses had they, but they smelled not: they had hands, but they handled not: feet had they, but they walked not: neither spake they through their throat"—the amazing delusion and snare of our fallen race—that most monstrous of lies, which yet all kindreds of men, savage or civilized, are alike prone to believe, when once they have forsaken the truth of "the incorruptible God."

To "turn from the idols," therefore, was really to burst asunder one of the strongest ties, hereditary and patriotic, civil and domestic, that hold human society together. But, in the preaching of the everlasting gospel, the spell of a far mightier—an irresistible—attraction had fallen on them. It was as if the meridian sun had blazed forth on the darkness and tapers of midnight. With horror at their own past blindness and wickedness, and with indignant scorn of what till then they had most dreaded, they "turned from the idols"—from the whole base multitude of them—"to God,"—the one God, whom Paul preached as the "God that made the world and all things therein," and as the "Lord of heaven and earth"—the "living" God, "having life in Himself," and "giving to all life, and breath, and all things"—the "true" God, very God, all that the great name imports, alone able to fulfill every function of Deity, and faithful to His every word and promise. They "turned" to Him, and that with no sidelong glance—no timid or crafty thought of compromising between His paramount, exclusive claims and their own present ease and safety—but with the entire force, the full, direct gaze, of their emancipated nature;—"turned," indeed, as they thought of the past, with shame and confusion of face, with lowly confessions and many tears; but with none the less of filial confidence and hope, and with all the more earnest purpose of, and endeavor after, new obedience.

Thessalonica is known to have been no exception to the rule of moral degradation, that has always and everywhere illustrated the fantastic creeds and superstitions of the heathen. And now, in coming under the dominion of a purer faith, the feeling of many hearts must have been that expressed in another Epistle: "The time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries." They turned to God, saying: "O Lord our God, other lords besides Thee have had dominion over us: but by Thee only will we make mention of Thy name."

For you will note the design and intent of this turning, as here recorded: "ye turned to God from the idols," not merely as having found a more rational and respectable creed, and as wishing now to be known by it—nor in any vain spirit of philosophical disquisition and disputation about the heavenly light—and least of all with any airs of contemptuous superiority over your poor, blinded countrymen;—"ye turned to God from the idols to serve the living and true God"—to serve Him in all His ordinances and commandments blameless, and especially in furthering His work of mercy in our ruined world—to serve Him in the face of all opposing influences—with every faculty of soul, and body, and estate—in life, and in death.

This, then, is the first of the two grand features that characterized the Thessalonian, and every other apostolic church. Her members were visibly, avowedly, the servants of the living and true God.

And what, brethren, was the other sign and evidence of their conversion?

II. "And to wait for His Son from heaven," or rather, from the heavens; just as the writer to the Hebrews speaks of Him again and again as the "great High Priest that is passed into the heavens"—yea, "made higher than the heavens."

Now in the Church of God it is not a more certain thing, that "He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that He might fill all things," than it is, that He that ascended is the same also that shall yet again descend in power and great glory to the scene of His former sufferings. So Paul had taught the Thessalonians, and so they believed, and the Holy Catholic Church evermore repeats the testimony in all her creeds and confessions, in all lands, and throughout all time.

But more than this is asserted of the Thessalonians. Not only did they believe that the Son of God would come again from the heavens; they also "waited" for Him; language which does unquestionably imply that, for aught they knew to the contrary, the advent might occur during their own lifetime. It was not a subject, therefore, that might be safely dismissed to the quiet seclusion and oblivion of an unread, however carefully guarded, parchment, as something with which, though it would no doubt come true in the end, they for their part had no immediate, personal, practical concern. On the contrary, there was not an article in their creed, that excited livelier emotions of joyful interest—not one that awakened and sustained such vigilance and intentness of expectation.

And yet eighteen centuries have since run their weary course, and still the heaven receives the Lord. Were not these converts, then, deceived in their expectation? And was not their "waiting" a very fruitless expenditure of desire and patience?

My answer is this:—In so far as they, or any of them, held it as a matter of faith, or even of opinion, that the Lord would certainly return in that age, to that extent, of course, they were mistaken. But if they simply believed that His coming was, in general terms, a thing near at hand, and if, not knowing precisely how near it was, they felt it to be at once their duty, their interest, and their delight, to be ever "waiting for" it and preparing for it, then they were not mistaken, but just did what their inspired teachers and the Lord himself required of them. My brethren, I speak not hastily when I affirm, that the doctrine of the atonement is not capable of easier and more triumphant demonstration than is the fact, that this, and nothing else, was the common, the universal, faith and experience of apostolic Christendom.

Observe that there was nothing in this attitude of the model church of Macedonia, that Paul thought it necessary to reprove or correct. So far from that, he mentions it as the legitimate and immediate fruit of conversion—as something that the brethren were everywhere talking of with joy, and to the honor of Thessalonica. On the other hand, had the Thessalonians, when they "turned to God from the idols," not been seen at the same time to fasten their eager and expectant gaze on Him who stands at the right hand of God, and so to be "waiting for God's Son from the heavens," there was not a church in Christendom that would not have mourned over what it must have regarded as a strange and unaccountable defect in their Christian character. Wherever the grace of God then appeared, it taught men, as one grand motive to all sober, and righteous, and godly living, to "look for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ";—yea, to look for it as near—as a thing to be loved, and hastened, and waited for at all seasons, whether of sorrow or of joy.

The proof of these statements, as I think, covers the surface of the New Testament, and pervades its entire spirit and texture. As a very small sample merely, take the following texts with not a word of comment: Rom. 13: 11, 12, "Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand." 1 Cor. 1: 7, "So that ye come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Phil. 4: 5, "The Lord is at hand." Heb. 10: 25, 37, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching. . . . . For yet a little while, and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry." James 5: 8, "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh." 1 Pet. 4: 7, "The end of all things is at hand." 1 John 2: 18, "Little children, it is the last time." In fact, "they that look for Christ," "they that love His appearing," are New Testament definitions of Christians.

I shall only add here, that all this is in strict accordance with the teaching, the most solemn warnings and injunctions, of our blessed Lord himself: "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. . . . Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh. . . . And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch." Such, dear brethren, were His words, while He was yet with us. And, oh, it is the same voice that, from His place of ministry in the heavenly sanctuary, still speaks to the heart of His widowed and mourning Church: "Surely I come quickly." At Thessalonica that voice was heard: and the instant, ardent response of all the disciples was: "Amen. Come Lord Jesus."

The rest of the 10th verse well exemplifies the Apostle's habit of dwelling, wherever he has a chance, on the name, and history, and work of his Master. It also furnishes abundant explanation and justification of the Thessalonians' "waiting for the Son of God from the heavens."

"Whom He," that is, God, "raised from the dead," when even to their estate of humiliation He had for your sakes descended. You trust in—you wait for—no dead Saviour; but One who, by His resurrection from the dead, was powerfully declared to be indeed the Son of God;—"even Jesus," that name so dear to you and to me, and for such good reason dear—"Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come," or more literally, who delivereth us—or simply, our Deliverer—"from the coming wrath." The deliverance of believers, though not accomplished, is already in sure and steady progress. Virtually, indeed, it was secured for us on the cross. But it is confirmed to our consciousness by daily, fresh supplies of grace—by the inward witness and operations of the Spirit—and by the assured hope of glory.

The verses we have thus reviewed are very full of the most important practical instruction.

1. Let the bright example of Thessalonica stimulate us as a young church of Christ to undertake great things for our Lord, and, first of all, by our holy life to "adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things."

2. Secondly, from the joy of all the other churches over Thessalonica, you may learn the lesson of a quick and lively sympathy with the various members, however remote, of the body of Christ. But,

3. In the third place, my professing brethren, has this profession of yours been truly a "turning to God from idols to serve the living and true God?" Or has it in any case been a bare, empty, miserable assumption of the form of godliness, as an opiate to your conscience while persistently denying the power? Or, at any rate, did you not reserve, and have you ever since been carrying hidden in your bosom, some one little favorite idol of your own?

4. In the fourth place, ask yourselves how it comes that of not one church, I suppose, in Kingston, and scarcely of one in all the land, could it with any tolerable degree of plausibility even be reported, that she is "waiting for the Son of God from the heavens." Perhaps I could give you some explanation of what must be allowed to be a most remarkable fact. But for the present I prefer to present it as a problem for your own solution. Meanwhile, I must not withhold the expression of my conviction, that one reason, and the main one, of the Church's marked and general declension in love and power is this very darkening of the primitive hope of her Lord's return. She is waiting for very many things, dear brethren, but not for Christ;—for the multiplication of railroads and telegraphs, and Tracts and Bibles, and churches, and ministers, and missionaries; for the opening of all lands to these and other means and instrumentalities of a Christian civilization; and for the descent from heaven, to render these agencies universally effectual, of Christ's Spirit; but not, mark you, for Christ Himself. In a word, she is waiting for the Millennium; but still it must be a Millennium without Christ—a Millennium of merely spiritual influence, not of Christ's own personal presence and power to restore all things—to make all things new. And yet says Calvin: "Whosoever would persevere in the course of a holy life, let him apply his whole mind to the hope of Christ's coming." And in all Calvin's writings I know not of a truer or wiser word than that.

5. In the fifth place, let us not forget, even amid the noise of national and international jubilee, that God has his own unsettled controversy with this world, and that for the ungodly nations, for degenerate Christendom, for unfruitful professors, for all who amid gospel privileges and opportunities still "know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ," there is "wrath" in store; yea, that this wrath is "coming" even now—is even now on the road—the Divine justice being never for a moment weary or asleep, but, at however slow a pace, and by whatever secret and circuitous paths, advancing continually, with no single step backward, nearer and still nearer to its prey. And

6. Finally, remember, dear hearers, that He for whom we are to wait is the "same Jesus" who now, by His death and resurrection from the dead, delivers His people both from sin and from wrath. Only, therefore, as we share in the present deliverance by dying with Christ, and rising again with Him "after the power of an endless life," can we safely indulge the hope of sharing in the blessedness and glory of the final reunion of His friends.—Lillie on Thessalonians.

For the Crisis.

The Second Death.

In our former article we intimated our belief that the expression "second death" is figurative. The fact that it appears in the Apocalypse alone goes to confirm that belief. As the phrase was in use among the Jews, we will notice their ideas. We extract from Prof. Hudson's "Debt and Grace" several examples which show how they understood it.

"We learn from this place (Num. 14: 37) that they died the second death."

"They shall die the second death, and shall not live in the world to come."

"They shall die the second death, so as not to enter into the world to come."

"Every idolater, who says that there is another God besides me, I will slay with the second death, from which no man can come to life again."

Hudson also gives the "statement of Julius Africanus (A. D. 221) that 'Adam being one hundred and thirty years old begat Seth; and living thereafter eight hundred years he died, to wit, the SECOND DEATH.'"

Hudson says that the Jews "understood by this death, exclusion from life." He quotes Hammond's remark on the phrase. "It seems to be taken from the Jews, who use it proverbially for final, utter, irreversible destruction. * * It seems to denote such a death from which there is no release."

And yet Adam "DIED" this death. The sinners spoken of, Num. 14: 37, "DIED" this death. And those who die this death "shall not enter the world to come." Methinks if they live one minute after the establishment of Christ's kingdom they will have entered the world to come. How much more if they live a thousand years after? Jesus said, "Except a man be begotten from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

The difference of circumstance between the righteous and the wicked alone warrants the observance of a distinction with regard to their death. The righteous do not die as the wicked die. Jesus expressly recognizes this fact. In His great Life Discourse (John 6) He says, "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die." Did He mean by this last assertion, that the believer would not die in any sense? Certainly not. Did He mean that those who believed would not die a natural death? Certainly not. He meant that they should not die as the fathers in the wilderness did. Dr. Clarke says on this passage "It was an opinion of the Jews themselves, that their fathers who perished in the wilderness should never have a resurrection." And on verse 39: "The Jews believed that the wicked should have no resurrection; and that the principle that led to the resurrection of the body in the righteous, was the indwelling Spirit of God." Can any candid person fail to observe the force of this argument? Jesus, talking to the Jews of a class of persons, who they did not believe would have any future life, says, "Your fathers * * ARE DEAD." But if you eat of this bread you shall "NOT DIE."

Again, 53d verse. "Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." Did He mean that they were not alive as they stood before Him? Certainly not. He meant, they had no future life in them. They had no life-principle within them by which they could be quickened from the dead. His succeeding remarks strengthen this view. "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life;" hath the life-principle, "the Spirit that quickeneth"; and the next words nail the conclusion; "and I will raise him up at the last day." "He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him. As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me. This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and ARE DEAD: he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever." Says Paul, Rom. 8: 10, 11: "If Christ be in you, the body (the animal nature) is dead (your present life is mortal and will soon be gone past recovery) because of sin; (Christ has "condemned sin in the flesh.") But the Spirit is life because of righteousness. But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by (or because of—see margin) His Spirit that dwelleth in you." "For if ye live after the flesh ye shall die: (as the fathers did. 'He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption.') But if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body ye shall live." "I will raise him up at the last day." "He that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

Is it any wonder, then, that Jesus says, (John 8: 51) "Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying he shall never see death." Those whom God will raise from the dead are not accounted as dead, "For He is not a God of the dead, but of the living." Hence when He calls Himself "the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," those very expressions prove that they are not accounted as dead, inasmuch as He "will raise them up at the last day." And this was the great argument of Jesus against the Sadducees. Observe, Jesus only upheld the resurrection of the righteous in that argument. (See Luke 20.) Hence, the righteous, in the New Testament, are said to be "asleep in Christ;" ("in Christ shall all be made alive;") but the wicked "as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed" are said to "utterly perish IN THEIR OWN CORRUPTION." The righteous are "sown in corruption," to be "raised in incorruption;" but the wicked "utterly perish" in corruption. They "of the flesh reap corruption." That is all they can get from the flesh. Life is obtained from the Spirit. "It is the spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing."

Understanding the phrase "second death" to imply a death to utter destruction, (in which we are fully borne out by the Jewish examples already referred to,) we see the propriety of applying it to the case of those who die out of Christ. To conclude in the words of another,* "The phrase is fairly interpreted, to say that a death with a resurrection is the first death: a death without a resurrection is the second death: not a dying twice. But as one dies with a certainty to live again, and the other without hope of life again, so one may fitly be called the first, and the other the second death. Not because the subject dies twice; but because there is such a difference between the death of the two classes that the first does not die in the sense that the other does. Thus there are two deaths in fact—one for the righteous, and another for the wicked. * * The wicked are utterly destroyed by their death; while the righteous, by theirs, only 'sleep in Jesus' to wake again at his voice, when he shall return from heaven." JOSEPH T. CURRY.

* George Storrs' "Life from the Dead," p. [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Searching the Scriptures.

"Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me."

These are the words of Christ as he spake them to the Jews. The importance of searching the Scriptures, to find out what they said about Christ, was set home to my heart after hearing Bro. Ladd preach from the text, "What think ye of Christ?" Every time I have searched with a prayerful and believing heart, the testimony has looked clearer. Here is some of the testimony that I have found. Isa. 22: 22, to the end of the chapter,—"And the key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder; so he shall open, and none shall shut; and he shall shut, and none shall open. And I will fasten him as a nail in a sure place; and he shall be for a glorious throne to his father's house. And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, the offspring and the issue, all vessels of small quantity, from the vessels of cups, even to all the vessels of flagons. In that day, saith the Lord of Hosts, shall the nail that is fastened in a sure place be removed, and be cut down, and fall; and the burden that was upon it shall be cut off: for the Lord hath spoken it." Rev. 3: 7, "These things, saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth." Mal. 3: 1—"And the Lord, whom ye (Jews) seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the (New) covenant." Mark 11: 3—"And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him." 9th verse—"And they that went before, and they that followed, cried saying, Hosanna: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." 10th verse—"Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord." 11th verse—"And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple." Matt. 21: 12—"And Jesus went into the temple of God, and cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves." 13th verse—"And said unto them, It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves."

I bless the name of the Lord that he has given me a heart to believe and understand his word. I am glad our Lord Jesus Christ did come into the world and declared this text: "But I say unto you, that in this place is one greater than the temple." And the apostle Paul says, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? For the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." Heb. 10th chap.—"Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second. By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all. But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins, forever sat down on the right hand of God; from henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool. For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified; whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us, through the vail, that is to say, his flesh. He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses; of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace." SUSAN [illegible].

Thorndike, Mass.

☞ Never was temper so reserved but it has its moments of unbending—moments when the full heart unlocks its secret fountains, and tells of emotions [illegible] and thoughts hitherto concealed by the guarded brow and practised lip.

☞ Grief knits two hearts in closer bonds than joy ever can; and common sufferings are far stronger links than common joys.

For the Crisis.

Fourth Annual Meeting

OF THE IOWA, MINN., AND WISCONSIN CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

Our fourth annual Conference was held at Strawberry Point, Iowa, commencing Sept. 26th, 1861. Elder W. Sheldon was elected President, and Elder Peter S. W. Deyo Clerk. W. Sheldon was selected to furnish a brief report of the doings of the Conference for publication.

Owing to the brief notice of the meeting, and the rainy weather which preceded it, a number of ministers and delegates were hindered from being present; nevertheless, through the ministers, delegates, and letters sent to the Conference, we gained correct information concerning the state of the cause in our new western field. During the past year, we have nearly doubled in number. About one hundred souls have been baptized by our ministers during the past year. Generally our churches are in a healthy condition, living harmoniously, and keeping up their prayer meetings, without which a church cannot prosper. An instance or two, however, of a different nature came up, in which prayer meetings had been omitted. The churches alluded to, however, plead as an excuse their scattered condition—members of the same church living miles apart. The most of the churches have preaching only monthly, and others have no regular preaching, and are anxious to secure the labors of a competent godly watchman. They do not want a mere theory preacher, nor could they support an extravagant man. But an efficient workman, with the cause of God at heart, who is willing to endure the hardships of a new country life for Christ's sake, would be supported by them. We want a score of such men. With such men the cause will thrive.

Our churches are yet in their infancy, ranging in number from nine to sixty members; but with holy pastors and evangelists who care for the "flock of God," we hope to see them flourish while waiting for the King of Glory. Our Conference, too, is young, being composed of only 22 ministers, and some less than 400 lay members. But our prospects are bright. During the present session one minister and five churches were received into the Conference, with a total membership of 127. One of said churches have a meeting-house paid for, in a flourishing village.

REPORT OF MINISTERS—CONDENSED.

Eld. W. Sheldon had been active. Had travelled for the year past (with an occasional interregnum) the distance of 280 miles per month; had preached much of the time, on an average, 7 to 8 sermons per week; had seen souls brought into the fold of Christ, christians brought into our unpopular faith; had baptized a goodly number; had held several quarterly meetings, and five grove meetings, organized churches, etc.

Elder Peter S. W. Deyo had preached 130 sermons during the past year, with a good degree of success; had organized one church in Iowa; had travelled a large distance in making tours among the churches; had baptized a goodly number; had not received a large compensation for his labors, but felt determined to live up to the advice that a minister gave him when he started for Iowa,—"Stand to the rack, fodder or no fodder."

Elder G. W. Barnes had labored successfully in different parts of Wisconsin during the past year; had baptized several souls; had attended several grove meetings with Bro. Sheldon, in Sauk and Columbia counties, Wis.; is in his glory when he can be "stirring up a muss" among the "immortal soul folks"; carries ammunition enough to put them to flight, or make them hold their peace.

Eld. S. D. Deyo was advanced in years, was pretty well broken down, and consequently had nothing to boast of; had done but little compared to what others in the vigor of manhood could do, yet had preached some where there was an ear to hear; was glad to hear of the success which had attended the labors of others.

Elder A. Hubbell had preached once a month, near home, and had made transient visits to other places; but, owing to his age, he was able to do but little compared to what he could once do; yet he was in no wise relaxed in his energies in the cause of Christ. His white locks bespeak the speedy termination of his labors. In his old age he has discovered a beauty in the doctrine of no eternal life out of Christ.

Elder Wm. Sweet reported himself by letter, which was read to the Conference, but is too lengthy to insert here. The cause is gaining ground in his region.

Elder G. W. Turner had preached nearly every Sunday for the past year, and what he could on week day evenings; his labors had been blessed; had baptized several souls; had attended several grove meetings with Bro. Sheldon; had labored with his hands four or five days per week, but has now made arrangements to preach nearly all of the time for the coming year.

Elder Peter Mitson had not preached very constantly for the past year; lives in a new country, surrounded by Catholics; has to travel some distance from home to get a hearing. Wishes to sell out, and get into a different locality.

Elder S. K. Gibson is in poor health, but is preaching some in different places as doors open to him. Is firm in the faith, and has the interest of the cause at heart.

Elder H. H. Janes is preaching with a degree of success; has received several into the church.

Several churches and ministers represented themselves by letters, which we have not space to insert.

By a unanimous vote, the following ministers were elected Evangelists for the ensuing year; viz:—Eld. W. Sheldon, Merrimack, Wis.; Eld. P. S. W. Deyo, Strawberry Point, Iowa; Eld. W Sweet, Utica, Minnesota.

Voted, that it shall be considered a part of the duty of the Evangelists to visit every church in their respective districts, and do all in their power to procure the labors of proper ministers for destitute purposes.

Voted, that it shall be considered the duty of every minister, or church, connected with the Conference, to either attend our annual meetings, or send us a letter.

Voted, that it be left to the Evangelists to select the place, and appoint the time for the next annual meeting.

Voted, that we tender to the Baptist society, in this place, our warmest thanks for their generosity in offering to us their meeting-house to hold our Conference in.

Voted, that a Committee of three be appointed to arrange the preaching during the meeting. Elders S. D. and P. S. W. Deyo, and Dea. J. Deyo were appointed.

MEETINGS OF WORSHIP.

Thursday evening. Eld. G. W. Turner preached from 1 John 3: 2.—"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be." A good sermon. Remarks made by Brn. Barnes and Sheldon.

Friday, 1 P. M. Prayer meeting. At 2 P. M., preaching by Bro. Wm. S. Shears. An earnest sermon. Evening, prayer by Eld. Peter Hough. Preaching by Eld. W. Sheldon on the Judgment. Good attention. Hope it may do good.

Saturday morning, 10 1-2 A. M. Preaching by Prof. C. F. Hudson, from Hosea 11: 8.—"My repentings are kindled together." An instructive discourse. We were happy to meet Prof. Hudson at our Conference. At 2 P. M., Eld. G. W. Turner preached a good sermon from 1 Cor. 2: 2.—"I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified." Evening, preaching by Eld. Sheldon, from Phil. 3: 11,—"If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." An attempt was made to show the indispensable necessity of the resurrection.

Sunday morning. At nine o'clock we met to enjoy a love feast. Some cheering testimonies were given in by the scattered friends of Jesus. At 10 1-2 o'clock, Eld. Sheldon preached to an attentive congregation from Rev. 22: 9,—"Worship God." A practical sermon. At 2 P. M., Prof. Hudson preached from John 3: 36,—"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Some good ideas were presented in a sound way. Bro. Hudson proved the impossibility of living forever out of Christ.

Evening, Eld. Sheldon preached from Matt. 25: 34,—"Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, 'Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." A large congregation and solemn attention. After the sermon, we surrounded the table in apostolic style, to commemorate the sufferings and death of our soon coming King. A solemn time.

The contemplated "DISCUSSION" did not come off, as our Universalist friends did not succeed in obtaining the services of their reputed champion.

WM. SHELDON, President.
PETER S. W. DEYO, Clerk.

☞ Harbinger please copy.

For the Crisis.

Church Order.

For some time past I have thought of throwing out a few thoughts upon gospel order in our churches, but owing to a lack of time to devote to this work, I cannot yet do so. I do not mean creed order, but New Testament order—the order of the great Head of the church. I have seen its happy results in the West, and I have also witnessed the spiritual pestilence which the opposite element has produced. In a recent number of the Harbinger, Dr. Field makes the following remarks:—

"We have a great many factious spirits amongst us, whose mission seems to be to divide and scatter the flock. They appear to glory in the wreck and ruin of all order, system and government. Hobbies and ultraisms are the food on which they live; and they imagine that every body else has the same morbid appetite as themselves. Armed with an immense stock of self-conceit, they go through the land, preaching non-fellowship and destruction to all who will not assent to their opinions. A well organized church in their judgment is but little better than a den of thieves. Order and government are whited sepulchres, full of rottenness and dead men's bones. The whole structure must be pulled down, and not one stone left upon another, that the new idea of some wreckless disorganizer may be allowed to enter. These wandering stars, live, move, and have their being, in the disordered elements of the moral atmosphere. They shine best in the darkness and confusion of anarchy; like raging waves of the sea, they cannot be restrained or brought into subjection to the law and order of the church of God."

I cannot now portray the sad results of disorder upon the one hand, or the beneficial workings of Church order upon the other hand, but hope that those who have the gospel faith will not ignore gospel order. W. SHELDON.

Merrimack, Wis.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 23, 1861.

The Worcester Meeting.

An extended account of the second annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association from us is unnecessary, as the official report of the proceedings is to be published in the Crisis of the week after next. We will, however, make a note of a few items for which our readers will not care to wait a fortnight.

1. The meeting, which was held in Warren Hall, commenced, as appointed, at 2 P. M. on Tuesday, and closed at 4 1-2 P. M. on Thursday, the 18th. In the absence of the President of the Association, Bro. P. B. Morgan, who was detained at home by illness, Bro. D. T. Taylor presided throughout the session. If his recovered health endures the severe test to which it was subjected last week by thirty-one preachers and twentyfive delegates, our faith in the "water cure treatment," and in "Our Home" as the embodiment of its principles, must be small indeed were we still disposed to say—"show us a sign"! Bro. H. F. Carpenter, the admirably-qualified Secretary of the Association, was at his post and discharged his laborious duties with untiring fidelity.

2. On Tuesday evening Bro. Grant preached, in the Thomas St. Chapel, from the words—"If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." On Wednesday evening, Bro. Hastings preached from the text: "But as God is true, our word toward you was not yea and nay."

3. On Wednesday evening, pursuant to a determination formed more than two months previously, we tendered to the Association our resignation as Editor of the World's Crisis and Business Agent of The Christian Publication Society, desiring the same to take effect on the first day of November, proximo. In doing this, we also took occasion to name Bro. F. H. Berick as the one whom we should be glad to see chosen to the editorial charge of the paper. Our resignation was accepted.

4. On Thursday Brethren Miles Grant and P. B. Morgan were respectively elected Editor and Associate Editor of the Crisis. They are to possess equal authority in the management of the paper, and will enter upon their duties with the first issue in November. Until they direct otherwise, we request that all letters for the office shall be directed to—"The World's Crisis, Boston, Mass." We wish only our private correspondence addressed to us individually. The patrons of the Crisis will save us trouble by observing and complying with this suggestion.

5. On motion of Bro. J. S. White the Association voted to change the name of this paper from "The World's Crisis" to "THE WORLD'S CRISIS AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER." This change of the head is to date with the incoming administration.

6. The members of the Convention were entertained with great kindness by the Church in Worcester; the hospitality of the latter will long be remembered by those who enjoyed it. The writer was the guest of Bro. Makepeace and Bro. E. G. Higgins, and would say that the two places are equally good—except that at Bro. H's there are five bright children to make their dwelling attractive, while at Bro. M's there are none! It was Bro. H's eldest son who said at campmeeting that he would walk every day from Worcester to Wilbraham to attend such meetings as we held there with the children! We trust his love for what is good and right will grow with his growth and strengthen with his strength. If we would encourage children to be good, let them see in us examples of moral excellence, and let them be made to feel that we sincerely love them. Their plastic minds are susceptible to every impression—be it ours to see that the influence we exert upon them shall promote their happiness here and their eternal welfare in the world to come.

Lillie on Thessalonians.

"Lectures on The Epistles of Paul to the Thessalonians. By John Lillie, D. D., Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Kingston, N. Y. New York: Robert Carter and Brothers, No. 580 Broadway. 1860."

We have never perused a work of Bible exposition which has interested us more deeply than this excellent volume of Dr. Lillie, and we know of none which we think intelligent believers in the doctrine of the advent would more richly enjoy. For the sake of the large amount of precious truth it presents touching the "blessed hope," we cordially commend it to our readers. The work contains 585 pages, and embraces twenty-eight Lectures on the First Epistle and eleven on the Second. We give this week the fourth Lecture on the First Epistle, but have omitted the marginal references and foot notes. We greatly mistake if the sample of the work which we publish does not create in many minds a desire to read the entire volume. Occasionally, throughout the work, the author's Calvinism finds expression in terms which none will misunderstand, but the spirit of the Lectures (which were first delivered to the author's own congregation) is admirable, while they are written in a concise, clear and chaste style. To us they have been a feast. As we write this, we open at random to the concluding portion of Lecture X, devoted to the exposition of 1 Thess. 2: 17-20, and we know our readers will thank us for a somewhat extended extract. Dr. Lillie says:

"2. These verses, moreover, and the many parallel ones in other Epistles, furnish a beautiful exemplification of the wants and instincts of the social nature of man—of man redeemed and regenerated. How much stress does the apostle every where lay on seeing the face of those he loved! There is a language of the eye, which cannot be written—a solace and satisfaction in the mere presence and contact of our friends, which no frequency and fervor of correspondence can supply. Indeed, the truth of this fact is plainly involved in those words of inspiration: 'He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?'

Now, what is true of Christian brethren, with all the imperfections adhering to the best of them in the present estate, where the face is so often wet with tears, and distorted by pain, and furrowed by care, and darkened by unholy passion and the shadow of death—is it not reasonable to think that it must hold true likewise in the relations of all Christians to their Lord, the Man Christ Jesus? Accordingly, the entire spirit of the New Testament shows, that it does hold true in this instance, and that in the highest form and degree. It is the wonderful work of Divine grace in the soul, that, 'having not seen Christ, it loves him; that, though now it sees Him not, yet believing in Him, it rejoices with joy unspeakable and full of glory'—of glory in its reflections, prelibations, first dawnings. But glory in the splendor of its meridian—direct, unshaded, full-orbed glory—what is it but to see Christ 'as He is,' and so 'ever be with the Lord?'

Hence the passionate search of the forsaken Bride for Him whom her soul loveth. Hence her restlessness amid all present scenes, where even the best and dearest of her consolations, 'the first fruits of the Spirit,' so far from stilling the groanings of her desire, tend only to inflame her continual supplications for His return, of whose great love for her they are the pledges and the memorials. 'How long, O Lord?' 'Even so, come, Lord Jesus!'—there are assuredly no prayers more natural to the Christian heart, none that better become Christian lips, than these. Nor can I cease to regard it as by far the most dismal sign in the whole present aspect of things, that that cry, once so mighty and unanimous in Christendom, is now all but stifled in the communion of the baptized. Very many, it is true, on all sides we hear talking about Christianity. Very many even are prophesying in Christ's name, and in His name are putting forth efforts, nearly as impotent as they are vainglorious, to cast out devils. But where is the patient waiting for Christ himself? Where the sighing and mourning of the widowed Church? Where the wistful looking out at the windows, and chiding the delay of His chariot wheels? Busy as many Christian men and women are in their multifarious schemes for reforming society and converting the world, it is no comfort at all to them to hear of the possible arrest of all human projects by the sudden appearing of the Lord. In what sense, then, can they be said to 'love' that appearing, as not only itself a distinct object, but the paramount object, of Christian hope? For only then shall the Church again look on the face of Jesus—rest in His bosom—and enter into His joy.

At all events, there can be no doubt whatever, that all Paul's expectations of joy from whatever quarter continually tended toward, and centered in, the day of Christ's coming. What an enhancement, for example, of his joy in the salvation of these very converts, did he anticipate from embracing them in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ, as he led them forward to the throne, saying: 'Behold, I and the children which God hath given me.' How much more effulgent the crown of his reward, that he receives it from the hand of the Chief Shepherd, who gave His own life for these little ones, and who now proclaims even that love, which led him for their sakes into the wilderness and to the cross, satisfied and well pleased with His faithful servant and co-worker!

Dear brethren, shall this be, in any humble measure, my joy—my crown of glorying—in that day? Surely, surely, this is the question of by far the most solemn, overwhelming import to my own soul, and daily would I feel how poor and stale, how barren and unfruitful, are all other triumphs, compared with that. Brethren, pray for me! And 'God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you.'"

"I believe, and therefore have I spoken."

We are gratified to learn, from a private letter received from a female friend residing in Canada, that the "Church of England clergyman" named in our last paper has begun to preach his views on Life through Christ. Our correspondent, among other things, says:—

"As might be expected, these views, so openly and frankly expressed, are exciting remark and attention in the village; indeed, the main subject of interest and discussion is the Destiny of the Wicked. Some of the veterans of his congregation are apprehensive that trouble may arise out of the position their pastor has assumed, and have even called and attempted to persuade him of the fact. But he is by no means the man to keep silence from any motive of policy, and will be far more likely to convert his congregation (who are very loyal to him) than they will be either to silence him or convince him that he is in error. Opposition, if he meets it, will certainly increase his zeal. Our Methodist minister, Rev. B——, is now reading the sermons and pamphlets, and, on the whole, they are likely to work quite a ferment in a little while."

☞ A brother in Conn. wishes to know what is Prof. Bush's translation of Dan. 12: 2. Will some one who can inform him through the Crisis?

A New Tract.

We have received from Bro. William Shepherd a tract of 12 pages, which we have not had time to examine. We presume a good idea of its contents and character may be gathered from the title page, which we give in full. It is as follows:

"A Tract for the Times. The Second Coming of Christ. The Resurrection of the Righteous Dead. Change of the Living. Binding of 'The Strong Man armed,' or Satan. Utter demolition of the present economy, both civil and ecclesiastical. Destruction of the Wicked. Kingdom of God inaugurated on the fall of all Earthly Empires. The Fall of Babylon. Coronation of Messiah. Return of the Jews,—Restoration of Jerusalem,—Jerusalem the Capital of the Theocracy. Reign of Messiah and his glorified saints upon the earth for a thousand years. Close of the Millenium—last Judgment. Final Consummation,—Paradise restored. God 'all in all.' 'He that testifieth these things, Saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so come, Lord Jesus.'—Rev. 22: 20. Published by William Shepherd, Minister of the Gospel, Newark, N. J. 1861."

The author writes as follows:

DEAR BRO. WENDELL:—I send you by this mail a copy of a new work now in press, which will be ready in a few days. Do you not think that it will be a good tract for general distribution, and that under the divine blessing it may be the means of doing much good? You will find that it contains near three hundred texts, or rather references, under their appropriate headings. Will you not please give it a brief notice in the Crisis as early as possible? Perhaps by giving the title page verbatim, which you see is quite striking, it might call the attention of many of the friends and brethren to it, who would at once send for some. By giving this attention as desired, you will confer a favor upon your brother in Christ, looking forward to those glorious scenes therein mentioned with no small degree of interest. Grace be with you, Amen.

WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

For the Crisis.

"Retribution."

I have read this book with the deepest interest; and though it may, like every human production, have its little faults, I have no hesitation in saying that I consider it a plain, comprehensive, and summary exhibit of just what the Scriptures of divine truth distinctly declare concerning the "Doom of the Ungodly." It has not, by any means, exhausted the subject, but it does seem that it has presented enough to be entirely satisfactory to any one who is willing to receive the plain declarations of God's word rather than what frail, erring human nature may imagine ought to be true. Indeed, I strongly suspect that all attempts to reply to the book will be confined, in the main, to criticisms upon errors in figures or manner of expression, or to an endeavor to hide the subject behind some person or some other subject, or to call off attention from the subject by holding up the author in an unfavorable light. However this may be, no attempt to evade the direct and positive testimony of the Bible to the fact of a resurrection of the dead, just and unjust, a resurrection to life (zoee) and a resurrection to condemnation, can be justifiable.

Why should not those who profess to take the word of God as their "only rule of faith and practice"; who profess to believe that "God says what he means, and means what he says," receive implicitly and submissively His declarations concerning the resurrection? So concerning the divinity and pre-existence of our Saviour, the Age (aion) to come, the Holy Spirit, the personality of the Devil, etc.? "The Gospel tells us what is true, rather than what poor, ignorant, sinful mortals may think pleasant, amusing and agreeable." And it does seem to me that "the method of interpreting Scripture" which "explains away" these, "unsettles all faith in the Bible, and saps the foundation of Christianity." Let me urge all who desire, and all who do not fear to investigate the subject of the resurrection of all, to get and read Bro. Hastings' latest work, "Retribution." F. A. DIKEMAN.

Rutland, Vt.

☞ The passions may be humored till they become our master, as the horse may be pampered till he gets the better of his rider; but early discipline will prevent mutiny, and keep the helm in the hands of reason.

☞ Envy shooteth at others and wounds herself.

For the Crisis.

Notes by the Way.

BY [illegible].

DEARLY BELOVED IN CHRIST:—Our last annual feast in old Wilbraham's consecrated grove was to me the most sweet and precious I ever enjoyed there. I had anticipated a feast; and, as my vision scanned the blessed spot in the distance on the morn of Sunday, August 25th, my heart was too little and too big with emotions that no words I am capable of writing could in the least express. The reminiscences of many gatherings of by-gone years touched a chord that caused a vibration to its very centre and core,—names, faces, meetings, greetings, sermons, sweet songs! O the halcyon moment, so soon to be mantled in sorrow! Many of the loved, the dear ones, have pressed for the last time its soil with their pilgrim feet. Their harps are unstrung. The monster death has snapped the chords asunder. We saw not their sparkling eye and smiling faces. Their prayers are treasured in the golden vials full of odors. They have shed their last tear, and sweet, sweet is their sleep in Jesus.

As I drew near to this attractive spot, I met a goodly number wending their way thither. On entering the grove, the voice of melody broke on my ear. The Thorndike tent was pitched, and I found not only a little company in it, but they had brought religion and the enjoyment of it with them. Truly we had a feast that morning. I found Elder Miles in his glory. Soon preaching from the stand was announced, and a very respectable congregation listened to two very interesting sermons from Bro. Grant. Here, too, at the commencement, I met Elders H. and W. Pratt, who have borne for many years their testimony on the great and last solemn message—behold he cometh! The enfeebled state of W.'s health saddened my heart. That voice, so wont to chime in the sweet songs of our Zion, was not heard ringing its sweet, clear melody on our ears, as in former years, neither did it sound from the battlements of the walls, as one short year since. May God in mercy spare thee, dear standard bearer and brother in Christ, until changed in a moment, in a twinkling of an eye, and thy frail mortality put on immortality. Amen. May purse and scrip never fail thee, thou dear brother in Christ.

After one short week's privileges of religious enjoyment and feasting on manna in the grove, on the morn of Sept. 2d day began to dawn. Soon there was a stir among the dwellers in tents. One after another, both tents and pilgrims, began to disappear, and naked tent poles alone were standing amid aching hearts and streaming eyes. The last note of warning had been sounded. The trump was still. The watchmen were leaving. An invocation burst from my full heart! O God, when thou shalt take thy saints to thyself, leave me not amid the ruins of the last day! On leaving the now lonesome spot, I turned to take a last look and say farewell. One more rally at Collins' depot, a few songs of praise, and, just as the last words of the beautiful parting hymn of

"When shall we meet again—
Meet ne'er to sever?"

rung out in full chorus and died away in the distance, the shrill clarion announced the approach of Nahum's chariot; and, as we were expecting and waiting in readiness, we took our seat in the cars, and were soon set down in safety at Palmer depot; rested one day, and then left for this place, Mansville, Jefferson Co., N. Y.

On the morn of Sept. 3d we left for Albany. Arrived in safety, and, according to appointment, remained and preached to an interesting congregation in Rechabite Hall, on the evidences of the kingdom near. It was good to be there. Praise the Lord. Amen. Sept. 5th we resumed our journey, and, after an unnecessary detention at Rome of four hours, we took our seats in the Watertown car. After various stoppages in taking up and setting down passengers in a distance of forty-two miles, we arrived in safety at Mansville, where we found brethren in readiness with a team, and were soon at the pilgrim home of Bro. A. Miles, right glad to find a home to rest our worn and wearied bodies.

We have visited several places, and find in them an open door and many adversaries. But there is a manifest anxiety to hear the blessed truths of the gospel. As I rode through the country to Martinsburgh, it reminded me very forcibly of Michigan in 1840; the hundreds of broad acres, thickly dotted over with tall stumps, still bearing hundreds, perhaps thousands of acres of wheat and oats, unharvested, of a very heavy growth—rather a novelty to me, at least so late in September. This is also a great dairy region. I visited several cheese rooms, and found the long tables burthened with immense quantities. The cry of hard times is heard all through here. The gory scourge of war has driven distress and gloom into the hearts and families of all classes. Sister M. M., in a late number of the Crisis, desired a spot, if it could be found on this earth, where the sound of a drum or the din of war could not be heard. Alas! I fear it will be sought in vain. The three great recruiting agents have gone forth unto the kings of the earth "and the whole world." Even at Wilbraham, on Sunday, large posters were nailed to the trees for recruits, and soldiers in military dress, gog and magog like, were compassing the camp of the saints round about. Even out here, isolated as this place seems to be, back in the woods, in school-houses in some instances, we have dear young men as hearers equipped for the war, tearing away from the embrace of friends, rushing into this great soon to be world's controversy, to become food for the cannon. O God, preserve thy people now. Amen.

Pursuant to a notice for a discussion to commence on Monday, Sept. 9th, in the Baptist meeting-house, between Eld. M. Hull and Eld. C. B. Turner, on the Sabbath question, we attended. But, owing to a misunderstanding in the arrangement of the question to be debated, it was not discussed; Eld. H. supposing it was the law of the ten commandments, he taking the ground it was yet binding, especially the fourth commandment; Bro. T. taking the ground that "the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law," and that law is set forth in Heb. 8: 6, etc. Bro. T. wished the question to be discussed stated as follows: Resolved, that the Sabbath of the fourth commandment is binding on this dispensation. He would take the negative and Bro. H. the affirmative. Or, Resolved, that the Sabbath of the fourth commandment is not binding,—Bro. T. taking the affirmative and Bro. H. the negative. Neither were accepted by Eld. Hull the first evening. Eld. H. proposed, I think, three propositions to Eld. Turner, which he rejected. Elder Turner then commenced giving his view to a deeply interested and large congregation. The next evening Bro. Hull agreed to accept the proposition of Bro. Turner, offered the first evening. But it was refused on the part of Bro. Turner, as he had given part of his view on the subject the previous evening. Consequently he finished his argument on the new covenant, in my humble opinion in a clear and convincing manner, to an attentive and deeply interested congregation.

Well, dear readers of the Crisis, I am looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Deliverance is doubtless very near. The condition of things in general compares favorably with the description given by our Lord when he said, "Then know it is near." Even so O come quickly We pant angelic joys to prove. Amen.

Mansville, Jefferson Co., N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Child of many Prayers.

I would suggest a few thoughts to those readers of the Crisis who can claim this favored appellation. There are two classes to whom this rich legacy belongs; those who have chosen their "Father's God,"—"that good part that shall not be taken away from them,"—and those that have hitherto "cared for none of these things," or trusted that parental piety would ensure their salvation; fatal delusion of the adversary's, for how many a God-fearing parent (like Eli and David) have been called to mourn over children cut off in their sins. Often this result may be traced to unfaithful early training; but where this is not the case, God, "whose ways are not as our ways," may hide from our view the cause wherefore our prayers are unanswered. For the encouragement of praying parents I will insert an anecdote, that may be familiar to some of our readers.

"A pious father had the grief of seeing all his children living afar from God. He prayed earnestly for their conversion, but there was no answer. His own life drew near its close. He prayed that his death might be the means of accomplishing what his life had failed to do. His children were all present, but instead of the peace which, for their sakes, he so desired, darkness and conflict were his lot in his dying hour. That darkness was the means of awakening all his children to a sense of their own danger. 'If our pious father,' say they, 'dies thus, what will become of us?' Some of them now sleep in Jesus, others still live in God's service. How triumphant the final answer!"

Can you, dear brother or sister, recall sacred memories of a departed mother, whose fervent and daily intercessions ascended to the "Hearer of Prayer" on your behalf? She may have gone to her rest when no fruit was apparent to encourage her faith, yet blessed are they who have not seen, but believed. Is the blessing of parental prayer still continued to you? Count it as one of your most precious privileges, for which you must give account at the bar of God. Let not "praying breath for us be spent in vain."

I would add a word of encouragement to any who are inclined to "come over on the Lord's side" from the ranks of the world, and "cast in their lot with God's people." Many have been chosen from this class to posts of distinguished honor and usefulness in Christ's vineyard. Witness a Matthew, Paul, Newton, Bunyan and Muller. "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good; for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel." AMY.

Davenport, Iowa.

☞ A promise is a just debt which should always be paid, for honor and honesty are its security.

Gleanings from Letters.

Sister Abbie B. Angell, Burrillville, R. I., writes:

I enclose one dollar to pay for the Crisis for the next six months. I would say that I love the Crisis the best of any paper. I believe it contains the truths of the Bible. I feel for one that I should not want to do without the paper; hope it will be continued until the Lord comes; it is the only Advent preaching we have around here; there are some here that like to read it. I feel that I am the least of all God's children, and desire your prayers that I may be found with the little flock that shall have the kingdom.

Bro. Geo. U. Lewis, Bethel, Vt., sends $4 for himself and a new subscriber and writes:

I believe it is about a year since I first subscribed for the Crisis; thus far we have received every copy. We prize it very highly—in fact we should hardly know how to do without it. For myself, I had rather sit down and peruse its pages than to attend the popular meetings of the present day. I have been gratified to see the articles on the non-living of the wicked dead. If 1 Cor 15: 22 teaches that the wicked as well as the righteous will be made alive in Christ, and, as we are sometimes told, that what was lost in Adam will be made up in Christ, I am not long headed enough to see why the wicked will not be restored to the tree of Life, this being lost through Adam. I would very much like to see Bro. H. L. Hastings' new book, "Retribution," but am not able to purchase it, and cannot in conscience ask a brother who has sacrificed so much for the cause to give me one.

Bro. Alex. Thompson, Douglas, N. B., writes:

Why do not some of you Advent preachers come on to this province? I wrote to Elder Burnham the first of the summer, wishing him to come this way, but have not heard from him since. I do love the truths that the Crisis advocates, although some of my friends in this place charge me with infidelity because I advocate those sentiments taught by the adventists. If any of the brethren will come on to this place, I will pay part of the expense. Please consult with the brethren and let me know.

Bro. E. Royce, Polo, Ill., writes:

I herewith enclose you four dollars—one for myself, and the other three for three new subscribers, the papers to be directed as above. I hope they will be paying and permanent ones. I consider the Crisis of intrinsic value in these last days as a fair exponent of Bible truth, and hope it will, as it certainly should, be well sustained.

Bro. Alex. Boothby, Buxton, Me., writes:

I render my hearty thanks to you for the benefits I have received through the Crisis. Although blind and afflicted, I do love the truth concerning the kingdom. As my wife is now also blind, (caused by the neuralgia on the brain,) we have to depend on our children. If you please to grant us the favor any longer, direct to Buxton Centre, where I can hear it read by my daughter who has become a believer in the kingdom soon to come. Hope soon to meet you in Christ's kingdom. Remember us in your prayers.

For the Crisis.

Goodness.

Jesus said there was none good but one, not even excepting himself, much less mankind. In comparing man with God, it is easily seen that God alone is good. Though the Lord may have said once that man was very good, yet enough has transpired since those words were uttered, to efface and extinguish it all. Though man may still exhibit lingering marks of goodness, yet those lingering traces are but the relics of former greatness, showing what he once was, rather than what he is now. But, notwithstanding the change that has come over man in consequence of sin, the Lord, who is good, has provided for man's restoration, that he also may be good, even as he is good, and thereby be made God-like. But notice,

1. The reason why God has thus provided for man is, because he, being good, is naturally prompted by his goodness with a desire to see all his creatures good, and hence is moved, as it is written, in love, to do all he can to restore man to love, even at the sacrifice of his only begotten Son. But notice,

2. That this provision which God has made takes into account man's freedom,—that he is a being of choice, and has the liberty of choosing for himself; therefore God in his goodness does not coerce, but simply invites man to be good, that he may avoid reaping the fruit of evil. But notice,

3. Man, being filled with hatred, and in open rebellion against God, it becomes necessary for him to be voluntarily led by the goodness of God, as manifested in the gift of his Son to repentance, or to a compliance with the provision made, that he may thereby be converted or made good. But notice,

4. God in his goodness having done all in his power, in harmony with honor and right, to provide a way by which man could be restored to goodness and love, then it follows if man neglects or refuses to accept of the provision made, he forfeits all claim to goodness thereafter, and if he reaps the reward of sin he can claim nothing better. But notice,

5. As there is none good save one, which is God, it necessarily follows that man naturally is not possessed of goodness. Moreover, if he ever becomes good, it must be by virtue of becoming more or less like God, or, in other words, having the goodness or love of God shed abroad in the heart, making it his only and greatest desire to serve God, and his only and greatest fear to offend God.

6. God, in providing for the restoration of man from evil to good, invites all to conform to his character according to the requisitions made in the revelation that he has given; therefore, all that do not comply with those requisitions cannot purely claim to be the children of God; but those that do comply with those commands, have given manifest proof before God and to the world that they have turned from the evil to the good, and are accepted of God.

7. Hence it follows that genuine goodness, as exhibited in christian character, and what the Lord only accepts as goodness, consists in renouncing the hatred and rebellion of sin, turning to the Almighty, and walking in obedience to all of his commandments, as found written in his holy word. If ye love me, says Jesus, ye will keep my commandments. The goodness of God will naturally inspire in man a disposition to do good, or, in other words, to reciprocate the love and goodness of his Maker by obeying his word. Anything that perfectly meets our approbation, and completely subserves our interests, we call good, simply because it administers to our good. Likewise man, by sustaining perfect loyalty to the government of God, secures the approbation of his Maker, and is accepted as good.

Let us all strive to live for the sole purpose of glorifying God, that we may finally meet with all the good of earth. O, who does not love the society of the good!—that society made up of none but immortal beings of God, angels, and redeemed man—a society that shall unite in one the glory of heaven and earth. As the poet hath said, "We long to be there." In my next, I will speak of the fruit of goodness, or goodness as manifested in christian character.

Geo. Moyer.

Kingsbury, Ind.

Correspondence.

From Bro. B. Perham.

Bro. Wendell:—I find, or begin to think, I am in arrears for the Crisis, and I will try and see if I can be a little ahead; for I want to do all I am able (with a poor feeble wife) to help circulate a paper that contains such noble truths in relation to the coming and kingdom of Him who is the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely, and also that repudiates the horrid doctrine of immortal soul-ism, and endless misery; and sets forth the soul-cheering truths of the resurrection of the saints to immortality and eternal life; and also sets forth the resurrection of the wicked to be judged, and receive their final punishment, which is to be everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power; (which does not mean everlasting preservation in consuming fire).

But how is it, dear brother, that there are yet so many, whom we esteem as our Advent brethren, that hold to the old heathen dogma of an immortal soul that lives as a separate entity when the body is dead? Can they not see, or understand, that Christ's mission on earth was to bring life and immortality to light through the gospel, which is the same as to offer life and immortality through the gospel; and also the same as Paul, (the greatest Commentator on the Bible that ever lived, excepting Christ,) refers to when he exhorts us to seek for glory, honor, and immortality; and says we shall have eternal life! Can it be that any of our dear brethren will try so hard to carry truth in one hand, and an old heathen dogma in the other, and be looking for the coming of Christ to give them life and immortality at the same time! It is my humble prayer to the good Lord, that he would convince them of their error, and lead them in the right way. Yours waiting for the kingdom.

From Bro. John T. Ongley.

Dear Bro. Wendell:—Notwithstanding the loss of our dear Bro. Porter, in the Root settlement, Crawford Co., Pa., and the dividing hoof of sectarianism that has been trying to divide the little flock in that place for the last two or three months, yet the truth is on the gain. Last Sunday we planted three willing souls into the likeness of the Master's death in that place. I also find some that are interested in the truth in other places where I travel. I hope we have the prayers of the church scattered abroad. Yours in hope.

John T. Ongley, Evangelist.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

Dictatorship of Venezuela. Advices have been received from the Venezuelan Republic to the 21st September. General Antonio A. Paez has been chosen temporary dictator by the united voices of the people, and public celebrations held in honor of the event. A new ministry has been appointed. Every one of the cities of Venezuela had accepted the dictatorship of Gen. Paez, and hostilities were suspended.

Obituary Notices.

Died, on Tuesday morning, September 17th, 1861, in the village of Hinesburgh, Vt., Mrs. Susan Annette Durfee,—daughter of John and Annis Ray and widow of Moses Durfee, deceased,—aged thirty-eight years three months and twenty-eight days. She was the second of a family of thirteen children, of whom four sisters and six brothers survive, with her recently widowed mother, to mourn her departure. She was married July 21, 1849; her husband died April 24th, 1852.

In the death of Sister Durfee the Church of God has lost one of her brightest ornaments. As it was my privilege to know her well, I speak advisedly when I say that, for purity of character and well-directed, untiring and self sacrificing zeal in the service of the Redeemer, her life afforded such an illustration of the power of Divine grace as it has rarely been my lot to witness. The facts of her devoted life which would confirm this tribute to her excellence, I may not here dwell upon, though to do so might quicken the faith and arouse the energies of many a weak one in the flock of Christ. Sister D. was a woman of much prayer and strong faith in God, and her aim was to know her Heavenly Father's will and do it. She possessed intellectual powers which fitted her for any society. Added to these were a marked decision of character and a rare capacity for executing her plans, whatever may have been the department of duty to which they related. She lived in the fear of the Lord, and having a single eye, she sought heavenly guidance in all her ways. With her the proviso, "if the Lord will," was never without meaning. She loved the society of those who loved Jesus, and evinced her profoundest sympathy with such disciples as knew most about "the deep things of God," however humble their position in life may have been. Her works went with her faith, and I was reminded of this fact when I heard the remark—"the poor will miss her."

Sister Durfee loved the doctrines of the coming of Christ and Life through him, and during the severe illness which terminated her mortal existence, she rejoiced "with joy unspeakable and full of glory" in hope of eternal rest in the Kingdom of God. About six weeks before her death, being herself fully persuaded that her recovery was impossible, she expressed a desire that I should attend her funeral. This I was permitted to do, and the occasion was improved by a discourse from a text selected by our departed sister, being these words of the Apostle—"If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8: 11. The sermon was prefaced by the remarks which follow:—

I should do violence to the feelings cherished by our beloved sister while she was yet with us, were I to spend any of the time allotted to these services in a eulogy upon her character. She needs nothing of this kind from me, nor do you, my dear friends, need it who have witnessed her life and knew her so well. You will bear me witness that she was a good woman—one who feared God and worked righteousness; one whose life was consecrated to the love and service of Him whose blood was the price of her redemption. She was a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, and in his service she learned to "endure hardness as a good soldier." The closing days of her pilgrimage were in harmony with her pure and blameless life. Knowing in whom she had believed, she confidingly trusted in his ability to keep that which she had committed unto him against that day. She fought a good fight, she finished her course, she kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give her at that day, and not to her only but unto all them also that love his appearing. She rests from her labors and her works follow her. She sleeps in Jesus, and when Christ who is her life shall appear, then shall she—having been redeemed from the power of corruption and the grave—appear with him in glory; be a partaker of his fullness of joy and dwell with him and his redeemed bride forevermore. Her memory is precious, and though dead she yet speaketh. May the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ grant that the voice of her life and the voice of her triumphant death may not speak in vain to the inhabitants of this community, for whose salvation she never ceased to pray.

Rufus Wendell.

Bro. Wm. H. Porter, Deacon to the church of God, in the Root Settlement, Athens, Crawford Co., Pa., was instantly killed on the 13th of August, while engaged in getting a boat over a shute in the creek.

Bro. Porter was in the thirty-fourth year of his age, and leaves a wife and three small children in this cold, heartless world, to mourn his untimely loss. The church in that place feel the loss and deeply sympathise with the family. The writer endeavored to encourage the bereaved ones, from the language of the Saviour to Martha, John 11: 23,—"Thy brother shall rise again." A large and interesting congregation was present, and we are satisfied that the truth took effect on those that heard. May the God of all grace sustain the bereaved ones in their affliction, is my prayer.

John T. Ongley.

Fell asleep in Jesus, to rest till the last trump sounds, in Westport, Oct. 7th, of scarlet rash, Mary Isadore Tripp, daughter of Wilber D. L. and Louisa A. Tripp, aged one year and seven months.

Thus have the fond parents been bereft, after watching over the loved one for three weeks. May this affliction be sanctified to the parents and friends, and they be led to fall in love with Jesus, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Funeral at the Christian M. H. the 9th. I endeavored to comfort the mourning friends from Jer. 31: 15-17.

Wm. M. Ingham.

Died, in Ellsworth, Me., Oct. 4th, Annie Stephens, the beloved wife of Dr. A. D. Crabtree, of Hartford, Ct., aged twenty-six.

By the ruthless hand of the destroyer the dearest ties have been severed, and many a heart filled with sorrow that one so gentle and lovely should be cut down in the midst of life's duties and laid away, leaving a vacancy none else can fill. With humble faith and trust in Jesus she turned from all she held dear on earth, and with perfect calmness and in peace, reclining in the arms of her companion, she fell asleep to await a resurrection to life at the coming of the Life-Giver. Two motherless children are left, for whom, with our afflicted Brother, we bespeak the prayers of the faithful.

L. J. Beach.

FOREIGN NEWS.

(Arrival of the Etna off Cape Race.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

The London Times editorially thanks Secretary Seward for the just exercise of his judgment relative to the memorials against its special correspondent, Dr. Russell, although it says his reply shows a strong undercurrent of spite. It repudiates the charges against Mr. Russell and believes the good sense of Americans will lead them to see the folly of interfering with him.

Mr. Russell's latest letter is written from Baltimore, and is devoted to a consideration of the position of Maryland.

Mr. Lindsay, a member of Parliament, in a public lecture again strongly urges the expediency of England and France endeavoring to effect a peaceful separation in the United States.

The Great Eastern had reached Milford for repairs. It is rumored that Napoleon has made overtures for its purchase, but the rumor is discredited.

The Galway Company had held a formal meeting, at which hopeful prospects for the future were held out.

The Belgian and American Steamship Company is dissolved.

FRANCE.

The King of Prussia arrived on a visit to Napoleon at Compeigne on the 6th, and left on the 8th. The proceedings were cordial, but nothing of a political character transpired.

Prince Napoleon is reported to have forwarded to the Emperor an important State paper on America.

The King of Holland was expected in France on the 12th, and will remain a week.

It is stated that orders have been issued to prepare a French squadron for America.

The high price of bread continued, and claimed attention. The government has issued an assurance that the price will not be advanced.

ITALY.

Victor Emmanuel has been reviewing the troops at Bologna.

Garibaldi had left Caprera. His destination was unknown.

Ratazzi will enter the Cabinet.

HUNGARY.

The situation of affairs remain unchanged.

The Assembly of Committal of Grau had been dissolved.

PRUSSIA.

The American Minister at Berlin was negotiating with Hanover for a ratification of the conditions for the abolition of State dues.

SPAIN.

The Spanish Government has consented to deliver up the Neapolitan archives.

POLAND.

During the insurrection at Cruladz the Russian eagle was torn from the public buildings, and the Polish eagle substituted. The Mayor of the town was killed.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Inaction at Washington.

The uncomfortable feeling to which one of our Washington correspondents gives expression, is, we find, beginning to break out in various sections of the loyal community. We deeply regret it—but we should infinitely more regret to be brought to the conviction that there is a just foundation for the feeling. We strive to resist every tendency in that direction, by calling up the various considerations which may still compel Gen. McClellan to delay his advance. We dwell upon the stupendous interests at stake in the coming contest, until we are willing that he should take weeks, months—all the time he pleases—to secure himself against all the hazards of defeat. It is the victory we want, and the time to insure it goes for nothing.

But the battle has got to be fought, the risks have got to be run, after all. Delay may have its advantages, but its dangers are proverbial. We waited for the fall—it is here and half gone. We waited for cold weather—and though it has been providentially deferred, we already feel its inconveniences, and may be seriously hampered by it at any moment. Six months have flown since the fall of Sumpter, and to the eye of human observation the work of suppressing this vast rebellion is still all before us. Great preparations, we are told, are going on—but is it not time for something besides preparation? Can preparation even go on much longer in Washington with the Potomac closed, and the main supplies of our great army at the mercy of a single rail, running through a community not yet wholly loyal?

It pains us to write a word in this vein, and we would not do it for the world if we thought it could cause the least impulse to rash action in the minds of our military authorities. But our sense of the peril springing from inadequate action and energy at this juncture is extreme. We should be untrue to our sense of duty if we did not say that more vigor and resolute action than is now visible at Washington, would be eagerly, joyfully welcomed by our loyal countrymen. If we have been misinformed, if we have not properly appreciated the manifestly gigantic obstacles which our military leaders have had to contend against—why, then ours is the misfortune or the fault, and we will not quarrel about the term. Our duty will have been discharged according to our best lights—and that is certainly all we ask of others.

From Arkansas. Accounts from Arkansas state that Hardee recently shipped part of his troops from Pitman's Ferry to Kentucky, down the White River. The remainder were to follow, leaving only three or four companies.

Arkansas has about thirteen regiments of twelve months' men in the Confederate service. All the pay the troops have received has been in Arkansas war bonds, and a good deal of murmuring was heard among the soldiers, owing to the worthlessness of this currency, some writing home that they could not even purchase a chicken with a hatfull of the bonds. Three regiments for three years' service were called upon to rendezvous at Batesville and Clarksville. The call had been out a month, and not a man had enlisted.

Since the troubles commenced it was estimated that over 300 persons had been hung or shot in the State for the manifestation of Union sentiment. In Independence county alone five persons have been hung and shot. The merchants were the most ultra secessionists, one of the secret springs of action among this class being the heavy indebtedness owing to Eastern creditors. Some men of Northern origin were the most rabid.

ITEMS.

☞ The Beverly Citizen states that there is a negro in that town who says: "Poaty good reason why I don't go to war; might shoot some o' my 'lations 'mong the Southern slaveholders!" Rather suggestive as coming from a colored individual.

☞ In Nankin, China, it is said, every idol has been destroyed, and the temples with one exception, rased to the ground. The only temple spared has been converted into a Christian house of prayer. The Buddhist monasteries have been dismantled, and the priests sent to secular life.

☞ It is stated that quite a revival of religion is in progress in the island of St. Domingo, under the preaching of the Wesleyans. It is characterized by manifestations similar to those of the recent revival in Jamaica.

☞ The eldest daughter of Queen Victoria is not happy with her Prussian Prince husband, but very unhappy. Her recent visit to England had reference to her troubles it is said.

☞ The registration of births and sexes in various countries has led to the establishment of the proposition that in every country there is an excess of males over females born, and that in general the proportion is twenty-one boys to twenty girls. The quality, however, makes up for the deficiency of the female quantity.

Married.

On the 13th of Oct., in Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., by Eld. J. T. Ongley, Bro. Wm. M. Darrow of Union, Erie Co., Pa., to Sr. Caroline E. Gilmore of Blooming Valley, Pa.

Notices, &c.

Conference Meeting.

The Lord will, we shall commence a meeting at Mt. Pleasant, Brown Co., Illinois, on the evening of the 2d of Nov., and continue over the 10th, as Bro. S. C. Raymon may appoint. We hope to see a general gathering of our brethren at this meeting. Will Bro. and Sr. Henry try to meet with us there? Mt. Pleasant is five miles west of Mt. Sterling.

D. R. & M. S. Mansfield.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a Conference in Holden, Me., commencing Oct. 31st, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. Brethren J. Billings and G. W. Brown will be present. Other preaching brethren are expected to attend. Provision will be made for all who come from abroad. There is quite an interest in Holden.

In behalf of the Brethren,

Geo. M. Wood.

Conference.

There will be a Conference at Northfield Farms, commencing Nov. 7th, and continue over the Sabbath. The brethren and sisters generally are invited to attend. Come in the name of the Lord, and get blessed, that we may be able to stand in this evil time. Bro. George Champlin will be present to preach the word. For the brethren.

D. M. Beach.

Conference.

There will be a General Conference in Corinna, Maine, commencing Nov. 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren, John Billings, G. W. Brown and others, will be present to preach the word of life.

Samuel Polley.

Notice.

I have arranged to assist the brethren in Lawrence in a protracted meeting, to commence Wednesday evening, Nov. 13th, and hold as duty may dictate.

G. W. Burnham.

Notice.

At the Camp Meeting, held at Dover, N. Y., Sept. 14th, it was proposed that a Conference be organized, composing the eastern part of New York and the western part of Mass. and Conn.; and Elders Geo. L. Teeple and B. St. John were appointed a committee to call a meeting for such purpose. Therefore we invite all interested in such a meeting to meet in Conference at Pawling, N. Y., Thursday, Nov. 14th, 1861, and hold over the following Sunday. Come, brethren, be on hand Thursday, filled with the Spirit of God. The cause of God demands our attention in this matter.

Geo. L. Teeple, B. St. John, } Committee.

Hastings' Publications.

All Books and Tracts of H. L. Hastings are kept on hand and for sale at this office. A List, with prices, will be given soon.

Notice.

Geo. Storrs, of New York, owing to the extreme pressure of present circumstances, offers the herein after named works at fifty per cent. discount to any person, or persons, sending him ten dollars or upwards, if applied for soon. The works are—

Six Sermons, revised and enlarged edition: bound, 50 cts.; in paper covers, 30 cts.

The Watch Tower: or, Man in Death, in paper covers........20 cents.

Life from the Dead: or, the Righteous only will live again—in paper covers........20 cts.

Life only in Christ: a bound volume, including each of the above works, and a discourse on the Atonement........$1.00

The Discussion with Prof. Mattison—in paper covers........30 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition—bound, 75 cts.; paper covers, 40 cents.

Man's Destiny: A Review of Prof. Post—in paper covers........30 cts.

Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney: Part II.—in paper covers........30 cts.

Our Israelitish Origin—paper covers........50 cts.

Man's Nature and Destiny: A Sermon, by Geo. Storrs—paper covers........5 cts.

Bible Examiner for 1860, bound........$1.50

Of this last work there are but some thirty copies left.

All remittances and orders, sent by mail, must be addressed—Geo. Storrs, Box 4658, New York. Sent by private hands, they may be left with Geo. W. Young, (up stairs) 35 Ann Street, (corner of Nassau.)

Cash Receipts.

D T Campbell, old account, 239, $1.50; Jos. Mott 317, 20 cts; E Dexter, 5 copies, 338, $4.50; B F Carpenter 315 $2.25; T Hardy, Jr., for Salem Brn., 312, $11.25; W E Faulker 329, 50 cts.

Moses Cross 331, C H Barrett 338, D H Willey 340, F Devinney 312, Mrs L Mathers 312, N Wheeler 332, D H Warren 312, Parker Dow 338, Saml Marsh 316, C Flint 338, Elk. Oaks 324, M J Achorn 278, Jos. Gregory 478, J Nichols 338, A P Chaney 275, A S Meacham 305, S P Carr 319, C Stevens 338, H Phelps 335, J C Whiting 342, Alf. Churchell 340, Harry Wilcox 343, H A Way 338, O Ormsbee 330, F L Smith 327, A B Angell 343, Mrs E Royce 331, E C Daley 342, R L Adams 342, W D Mason 342, B T Church 338, G S Gordon 338, J B Davis 343, Mrs E Morrill 343, S Polley 342, Chs. Bunnell 338, Lorn. Lord 364, C E Robinson 312, B C Bancroft 325, B Greaves 343, Mrs M D Allen 342, H S Hawkins 343, C C Crossman 315,—$1.00 each.

C W Potter 338, T Harrington 333, A Waterman 364, Capt E O'Brien p. pd., 362, J M Withington 340, B E Dannett 338, Jos. Durgin 292, J H Morgan 312, Chs. Brown 338, G U Lewis 374, Jonah Washburn 368, A T Bunnell 314, Saml. Blaisdell 338, E Flanders Jr. 327, J G Browning 368, Alx. Thompson p. pd., 372, Mrs E Marsh 378,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

E Oaks 5 cts., Eld T Smith $3.00, B T Church 80 cts., Alex. Thompson $1.00.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Pittsville, Ct., Friday and Saturday evenings, Oct. 25th and 26th, and over the following Sabbath.

MILES GRANT.

New Lime, Ohio, one mile east of the centre, evening, Oct. 25th.

Freedom, Portage Co., Ohio, near Bro. Tuttles, evening, Oct. 26th.

Ravenna, Portage Co., Ohio, where Bro. L. W. Enos may appoint, Oct. 27th.

Aurora, near Bro. R. C. Lord's, evening, Oct. 28th

Mantua Station........evening, Oct. 29th

Middlebury, Summit Co., Ohio, commencing evening of 31st and continue every evening of the week and Sunday.

Auburn Corners, Ohio, as Sister Marble may appoint, evening, Nov. 5th.

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Holden........evening, Oct. 26th and over Sunday. Will Bro. Thomas meet me on Front Street, at Worcester, Oct. 26th?

Vernon, Vt........Oct. 31st and over the Sabbath.

GEORGE CHAMPLIN.

APPOINTMENTS FOR DANIELSONVILLE.

H. Munger........Sunday, Oct. 27th

H. Pratt........Sundays, Nov. 3d and 10th

Brethren from abroad are invited to attend.

H. F. CARPENTER.

☞ Neither of the four Sabbaths in Nov. engaged.

H. MUNGER.

Hawkins Hall, 79 Main St., Charlestown, Thursday eve., Oct. 29th, 7 1-2 o'clock.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Ascot, Canada East........Sunday, Oct. 27th

Stansted, Amy School-House........Sunday, Nov. 3d

J. G. SMITH.
J. PERHAM.

Warehouse Point, Conn........Sunday, Oct. 27th

GEO. A. STREETER.

Starks, Me........Sunday, Nov. 3d

D. A. JONES.

Vernon, Vt........Oct. 27th

Goshen, Mass........Oct. 30th

Chester Factories........Oct. 31st and Nov. 1st

East Otis........Nov. 2d and 3d

Sandisfield........Nov. 10th

Cold Spring........Nov. 17th

GEO. A. OTIS.

Putnam, Ct........Friday evening, Oct. 25th

Providence, R. I........Sunday, Oct. 27th

River Point........evenings, Oct. 29th, 30th and 31st

Warwick Plains Church........Friday evening, Nov. 1st

Danielsonville........Sundays, Nov. 3d and 10th and intervening evenings.

H. PRATT.

Kennebunkport........Sunday, Oct. 27th

Portland........Nov. 3d

My post office address for the present is Yarmouth, Me.

CHAS. H. LEVERTON.

Eld. Samuel Heath will preach in the Advent Chapel, Hudson Street, Sabbath Oct. 20th, and also Oct. 27th.

London Ridge........Sunday, Oct. 27th

West Alton Friday, Nov. 8th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. and continue over the Sabbath.

Will brethren remember this meeting, and all that can, take hold and labor, that we may see the work of the Lord again revived in West Alton "while it is called to-day"?

T. M. PREBLE.

Champlain, N. Y........Oct. 26th and over the Sabbath.

J. V. HIMES.

Ellenwood's Corner, Me........Oct. 28th

North Searsport, Me........Oct. 29th and 30th

Lincolnville Centre, or Young Town, as brethren think best........Oct. 31st and continue over the Sabbath.

Rockport, Me........Nov. 4th and continue Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, where Dr. H. B. Eaton may appoint.

South Hope, Me........Nov. 7th and continue over the Sabbath.

If the above named appointments interfere with any other, or are not satisfactory, will the brethren please inform me?

THOMAS SMITH.

Winsted, Ct........Oct. 28th

Pleasant Valley........Oct. 29th

Wrightville........Oct. 30th

Litchfield Station........Oct. 31st

Camps Mills........Nov. 1st

Plymouth Hollow........Nov. 3d

Cheshire Street........Nov. 7th

Bristol........Nov. 10th

Roxbury........Nov. 11th

where Bro. L. R. Teeple may appoint.

WM. A. FENN.

Scituate........Oct. 27th

where Bro. Cottle may appoint.

WM. M. INGHAM.

Concord, N. H........Oct. 27th.

Northfield, Mass........Oct. 30th and 31st

Griswoldville........Nov. 3d

Savoy........Nov. 5th and 6th

Plainfield Pond........Nov. 7th

Goshen........Sunday, Nov. 10th

C. GOODRICH.

Pine Swamp........Oct. 25th, 26th and 27th

Commence a meeting at Wrightville, Conn., Nov. 1st and hold over the following Sunday.

Bakerville, at Bro. Harris'........Nov. 8th

Sandisfield, Mass........Nov. 10th

Be at the Conference at Pawlings, N. Y., Nov. 14th to 17th.

Pine Tree School House, North Salem, N. Y., Sunday, Nov. 24th.

GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Plymouth Hollow, Ct........Oct. 27th

Prospect, Ct........Nov. 3d.

Pine Swamp, Ct........Nov. 10th.

South Dover, N. Y., at Bro. Olivit's, or where he may appoint........Nov. 12th and 13th.

T. S. CANFIELD.

Moultonborough Centre........Nov. 3d.

Albany, (Bell School House)........Nov. 27th.

T. W. PIPER.

Plymouth Hollow........Oct. 27th.

South Farms........Nov. 3d.

J. K. BELLOWS.

Business Matters.

Campmeeting Deficiency.

The Treasurer acknowledges the following additional receipts:—

P. C. Rodman........$1.00.

W. M. Ingham........1.00.

D. D. Chaffee........2.00.

D. T. Taylor........1.00.

To Correspondents.

B. F. Carpenter: You are correct.

Eld. H. Grew: The tracts were received and forwarded.

G. W. Young: $12.86.

Eld. John Howell's P. O. address is Harvard, McHenry Co., Illinois.

D. T. Taylor's P. O. address is Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 12 cts. each; postage 3 cents. 1-4th off per dozen.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4th off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 8 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 36 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. 136 pages. In paper, 25 cts; in cloth, 44 cts. With the three following tracts, 60 cts.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

Reviewers Reviewed. Brief Replies to various Criticisms and other Arguments. 36 pp. 10 cts.

☞ The above five works are published by Rudd & Carleton, 130 Grand Street, New York.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 230 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By L. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, by himself. Second edition, with portrait and appendix. Price 60 cts; postage 10 cts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Two Adams, by T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. Price, single, 5 cents. Postage 1 cent. $3.00 per 100.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

The Ten Virgins; or Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. Price, single, 3 cts. Postage 1 cent. $2.00 per 100.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $4.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts.; postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Bacon, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:

The Harp, by Elder Himes, one dozen [illegible]; Sabbath Debate; Bible Hall; Grant Controversy; [illegible]

Foster's Letter and Tracts on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

For the Crisis.

Twilight.

Loved twilight, thy blest hour I greet,
I'll hie me to my favorite seat,
And with thee find communion sweet,
My friend.

I call thee friend, for oft hast thou
Proved such; Reflection's peaceful brow
Is thine; be ever dear as now,
My friend.

Banished awhile the cares of day,
Let me my inmost soul survey;
Search me, my God—to thee I pray,
My friend.

With all my heart I trust in thee,
Thy power can make the tempter flee,
Stronger than death thy love to me,
My friend.

Earth's friends, how soon they fade away;
Like twilight's shade—a fleeting ray—
The Eternal Friend, be THOU by stay,
My friend.

No more return the friends I love,
For they have sought a home above;
I long for pinions like a dove,
To soar.

My mother's voice I hear no more,
"He who has taken will restore,"
Faith and submission I implore,
My friend.

They "sleep in Jesus" till that day
When heaven and earth shall pass away,—
"Come quickly, Lord, nor long delay.

AMY.

For the Crisis.

Thoughts on the Times.

IN TWO ARTICLES.—NO. 2.

The Swedenborgian's view of the coming of Christ consists in a more diffusive establishment of the New Church. The politician's view of this last crisis is a last battle between despotism and liberty, resulting in more political privileges, or in an elective franchise, more liberal than the present. The Socialist views this last crisis as terminating in a more equal distribution of things among mankind,—not so much inequality as at present exists; while the popular church believes that the crisis will end in the conversion of the world, in shape of a millennium just at hand. I heard a Congregational minister preach on the time when this would take place. (It was during the impending battle at Sebastopol in the Crimea.) He said that the conversion of the world would take place at the close of the battle of Sebastopol; how it would be done he could not tell; but God would do it in a moment; a nation would be born in a day.

There is another class—a little flock who believe that Christ is coming in a personal manner to give them a kingdom. The word is, "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you a kingdom." Luke 12:32. They also believe that this is the judgment age—the time of the Resurrection; not in the light of which Kossuth speaks or views it,—"A resurrection of the nations to their several nationalities." But who or what can decide this question? Evidently only God in his inspired word, our text-book of life. For both it, history, and the signs of the times fully prove that we are living in the grand and awful time that the prophets and apostles longed to see—viz., the realization of the christian's only hope.

There are several scriptures which appear to synchronize with each other at this time. The first is in Rev. 11:18. "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and to give reward," etc. Says one of our most popular christian papers, a short time ago, "We cannot point out any place in the map of the world that is not either at war, or preparing for war." Says the London Christian World of Nov. 30, 1860, "We are on the eve of a crisis unparallelled in the history of the world." Says another paper, published in London, (England,) "Where are we? On the verge of a war and revolution which threaten to be the most terrible that the world has ever known." Such opinions could be multiplied by hundreds, all going to prove the same thing. In the 18th verse, two prominent events are brought to view, namely, the judgment and resurrection, with the time of reward mentioned in Matt. 22:34,—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom," etc. It must be understood that this is at the third woe or seventh trumpet, the second woe or sixth trumpet being in the past. The seventh trumpet or third woe cometh quickly.

All writers or thinkers are agreed that the third woe or seventh trumpet is next to come or sound. They only differ in the nature of the events that close those periods. Wesley was of the opinion that the end of all things was at the close of the mentioned periods, in his hymn, 574, on page 496, old hymn book, on describing judgment,

"He comes—he comes—the Judge severe;
The seventh trumpet speaks him near."

In the 10th chapter of Rev., 7th verse, we have more light on what is stated in the 18th verse of 11th of Rev. "In the days of the voice of the seventh angel, (with the seventh trumpet) when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets." Paul explains what this mystery is in 1st Cor. 15th chapter. It consists in the raising of the dead, and changing them from mortality to immortality. This brings again the resurrection to view, as mentioned in Rev. 11:18. [illegible] "At the sounding of the last trumpet." [illegible] Rev. 20:7, and Rev. 11:15. As there are only seven trumpets mentioned in the book of Rev., and Paul says that it is at the last trumpet when the change takes place, (six being in the past,) of course the next is the seventh to sound.

Again, in our Lord's prophecy in Luke 21:25, there is an event agreeing in time with Rev. 11:18, viz., "Distress of nations with perplexity"; 26th verse, "Men's hearts failing them," etc. A writer on the present aspect of affairs says, almost in the very language of the Scriptures, "The present condition of European affairs is that of the greatest perplexity and uncertainty." Says the "Catholic Register," speaking of the times, "What is this movement of which France is the type, that has so long been tormenting the world?" Says another writer, "When Napoleon moves only the tongue, all the threads (telegraph wires) from London to Constantinople, from Madrid to St. Petersburg, tremble like a leaf shaken in the wind." Speaking of Napoleon, says a Paris correspondent, "The glory of his reign will be the humiliation of England. Here is this singular being standing out on the front of the world's stage and deciding the fate of mankind." Says another, "The Emperor of the French has become the observed of all observers, the object of wonder. All Europe is trembling before this wonderful man." May not he truly be the power referred to in Rev. 13:3, "All the world wondered after the beast." 13th verse,—"He doeth great wonders." Rev. 17:8,—"They that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life." The world wonders at the present events that are transpiring in the world. The people of God do not wonder, for they are expecting just such things on the earth. It is not a distress of one nation, but of all nations; hence it will be easily seen why it is that our (American) nation is in such a warlike state. For the Scriptures state that "all nations must drink of the cup."

This distress of nations, etc., brings the resurrection again to view, as in Luke 28:21,—"Look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." Paul explains this redemption to be the redemption of the body from the power of the grave, when the righteous will sing, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" And here I would refer to Dan. 12:1, 2, 3, as it has a direct reference, without doubt, to Luke 21:25, "Distress of nations"; agreeing with Rev. 11:18. "And the nations were angry." "And there shall be a time of trouble among the nations, such as never was up to that time." The word trouble in Dan. 12:1, is worth more than a passing notice. The Hebrew rendering is Tsor, (of trouble,) meaning "distress," the identical rendering of the Greek "distress," in Luke 21:25. It must appear clear to every candid mind, that Luke 21:25, Rev. 11:18, and Dan. 12:1–3, must all have reference to one and the same point of time, as they read thus: "Distress of nations with perplexity"; "With redemption nigh"; "The nations were angry"; "Time of the dead to be judged and rewarded"; "Time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation"; "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, to shine as the firmament and as the stars forever." It will be observed that the above passages bring to view the resurrection, judgment, and kingdom. This corresponds also with 2 Tim. 4:1,—"In the coming of Jesus Christ to judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." "Seeing then that all these things" are soon to come to pass, "what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness." 2 Pet. 3:11.

JOHN TAYLOR.

New Sharon, Franklin Co., Me.

For the Crisis.

"Fear Him."

